PICKERING—The subject of this notice—Sister SARAH ANN PICKERING—was born November 7, 1829. Her maiden name was Hargrove. She was married to W. L. Pickering, January 19, 1851, who preceded her to the better world several years, leaving her with seven children—six girls and a boy—to combat the cold charities of the world. A member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and knowing God in the pardon of her sins, she raised her children to follow the Lord. She loved God and the church, and was honored and respected by all who knew her. A devoted wife and affectionate mother, it is not surprising when the summons came on July 26, 1890, it found her ready. Surrounded by her children and a few friends, exhorting them to meet her on the eternal shore, she died in the triumphs of the Christian's faith, with a bright assurance of an abundant entrance into the city of God, where she awaits loved ones left behind.

Security.

It is a great thing to have a bank account, to check out when you like. If you keep adding to it to balance the drain, all right; if not, you can see what will happen. It is precisely the same with your physical vigor. Suppose you have overdrawn, what then? "Collapse," you will say—not necessarily so. Observe:

Drs. Starkey & Palen:—"When I am worn out with work I use an inhalation of your Compound Oxygen Treatment, and find renewed strength and elasticity of spirits at once." ELLA R. TENNENT, Ed. "Tennent's Home Magazine," Marietta, Ga., Mar. 25, '87.

Drs. Starkey & Palen:—"When suffering from throat trouble a few years ago, I used your Compound Oxygen Treatment with good and lasting results." M. L. MORROW, Chester, Pa., Feb. 13, 1889. Drs Starkey & Palen:—"I used your Compound Oxygen Treatment and feel justified from benefits received to recommend it highly. I would especially recommend it to those suffering from debility, lung and throat trouble." REV. JOHN B. GREGORY, Pastor M. E. Church, Birmingham, Alabama, March 6 1889.

Drs. Starkey & Palen:—"I used your Compound Oxygen Treatment for an abscess of the lungs—it made me entirely well again." J. R. PENICK, Pembroke, Ky., June 25, 1889. Drs. Starkey & Palen:—"Your Compound Oxygen Treatment has done much for me. My lungs are sound now." MRS. ELLA HARRINGTON, Nevada, Mo., July 28, 1889.

Drs. Starkey & Palen:—"From actual experience I can say that I regard your Compound Oxygen Treatment as a most marvelous remedy for the lungs and throat." MRS. H. M. JACONWAY, McComb City, Miss., or Dardanelle, Ark.

If you have found any encouragement in the above instances, send for our book. In it you will find page after page full of testimonials and assurance. We send it free of CHARGE. Address DRS. STARKEY & PALEN, No. 1529 Arch St., Philadelphia, Pa., or 120 Sutter St., San Francisco, Cal.

NOW the God of peace, that brought again from the dead our Lord Jesus, that great shepherd of the sheep, through the blood of the everlasting covenant, make you perfect in every good work, to do his will, working in you that which is well-pleasing in his sight, through Jesus Christ; to whom be glory for ever and ever. Amen.—Hebrews xiii, 20, 21.

GRANT'S FURNITURE STORE

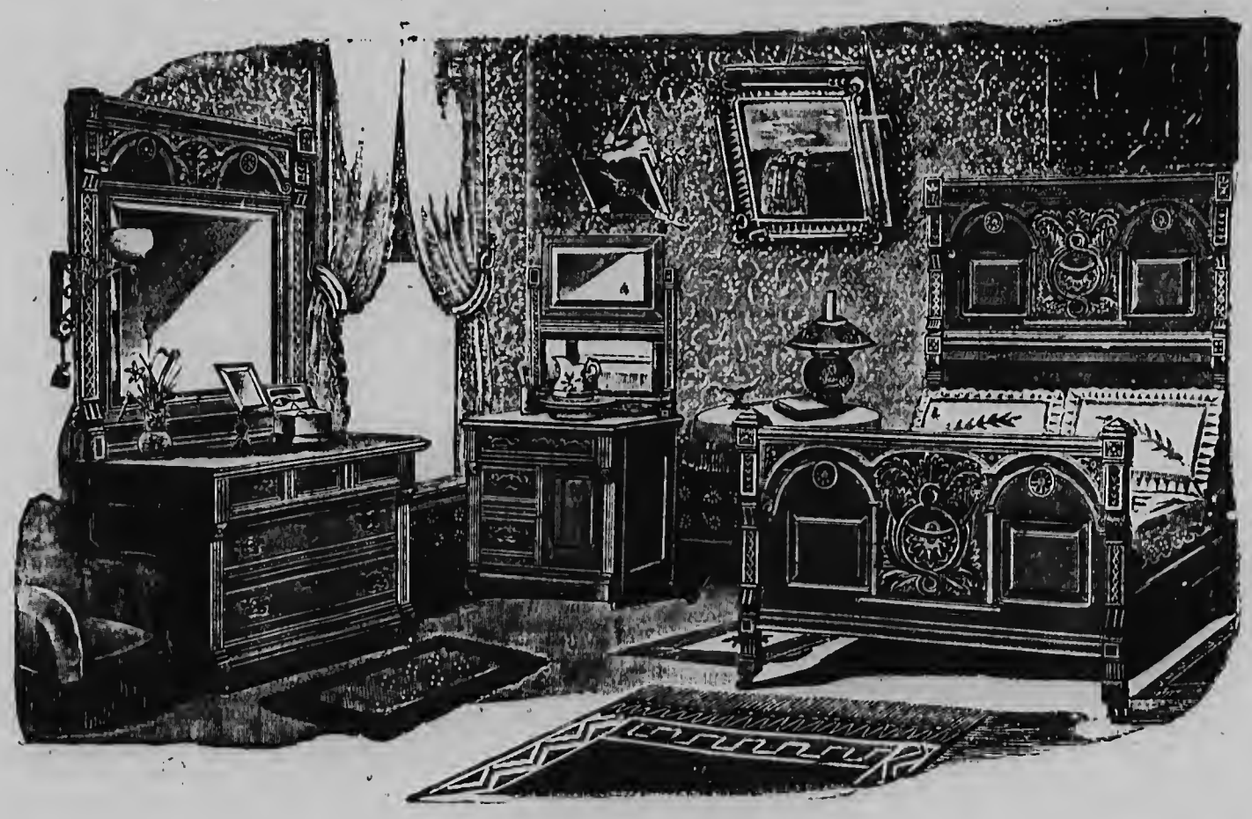
NEW STORE, AT 114 Camp St. NEW ORLEANS. NEXT DOOR TO ADVOCATE OFFICE.

BEAUTIFUL PARLOR GOODS.

I have one entire floor devoted to the display of these goods alone, and have over sixty different varieties to select from. Complete Suits anywhere from $35 to $650, and odd pieces—such as Sofas, Divans, Easy Chairs, Patent Rockers, Window and Reception Chairs—at as low prices in proportion as the Complete Suits. I have these goods in Cherry, Mahogany and Walnut, and can give you your choice of any of the following coverings: Crushed, Embossed, Plain and Silk Plushes, Hair Cloth, Mohair, Raw and Spun Silks, Satins, English Tapestries, French Valours, Petit Point, Broecatelle or Damasks. I make a specialty of these goods, have many of the patterns made specially for my own trade, and can offer a greater variety at lower prices than any other house in the South.

NEW STOCK

in all departments, and every grade of goods, from the cheapest to the most expensive, in endless variety. I have all the latest and most fashionable designs, and, as I have only purchased from factories whose goods I have been selling for the past six years, can and do guarantee every piece of Furniture that leaves my establishment.



LOW PRICES

are the order of the day, and I propose to sell strictly reliable goods at a lower price than has ever before been quoted in the South. My store has long been known as "The Cheapest Furniture House in New Orleans," and this season I intend to add to the reputation it has gained in this respect. I only ask a chance to save you money.

HANDSOME BEDROOM SUITS.

A very extensive assortment of these goods in every style; and whether you wish to pay $40 for a Complete Suit of twelve pieces, or from that price anywhere up to $1,000, I can sell you what you require. I have these goods in Black Walnut, Natural and Dark Cherry, and Natural and Dark Mahogany, or in imitation of any of these woods, and can furnish the very latest, neatest and most artistic designs.

I have also a large and carefully selected stock of Hall, Library, Dining-room and Kitchen Furniture; Reed, Rattan and Wicker Chairs, Rockers, Lounges and Cribs; Brackets, What-nots, Easels, Music Stands and Fancy Top Tables; Carpets, Carpet Strips, Matting, Shades, Curtains, Curtain Poles, and everything necessary to furnish a house completely throughout.

LARGE SALES.

I have a large city trade, and am shipping goods extensively to every Southern State. My country trade has increased very rapidly during the past year, and the facilities which my new store affords me for carrying a larger and better stock will enable me to still further extend it, and to give complete satisfaction to my customers.

CHAS. F. EVANS, P. E.

For wounds and inflammations, Johnson's Anodyne Liniment is healing and soothing.

Stimulants.

The following beautiful lines were written by the lamented George D. Prentice, founder and editor of the Louisville Courier-Journal, over thirty years ago, and first appeared in that paper:

There is a time when the pulse lies low in the bosom, and beats low in the veins; when the spirit sleeps the sleep which apparently knows no waking—sleeps in its home of clay, and the windows are shut, the doors hung with the crape of invisible melancholy—when we wish the golden sunshine pitchy darkness, and wish to fancy clouds where no clouds be. This is a state of sickness when physic may be thrown to the dogs, for we want none of it. What shall raise the spirit? What shall make the heart beat music again, and the pulse throb through all the myriad-thronged halls in the house of life? What shall make the sun kiss the eastern hills again for us with all his old awakening glances, and the night overflow with moonlight, love and flowers? Love itself is the greatest stimulant—the most intoxicating of all, and performs all these, and is a miracle still, and it is not at the drug store, whatever they say. The counterfeit is in the market, but the winged god is no money-changer, we assure you.

Men have had many things, but still they ask for stimulant.

Men try to bury the floating dead of their own souls in the wine cup, but the corpse rises. We see their faces in the bubbles. The intoxication of drink sets the world whirling again, and the pulses to playing music, and the thoughts galloping, but the clock runs down sooner, and an unnatural stimulant only leaves the house it filled with the wildest revelry, more silent, more sad and more deserted.

There is only one stimulant that never intoxicates—duty. Duty puts a clear sky over every man into which the skylark of happiness always goes singing.

Temperance Notes.

Sir A. McGregor, the administrator of New Guinea, has taken a decided stand on the drink question. He has enacted that anyone found giving intoxicating liquors to a native shall be liable to a penalty of £20.

Dr. Bull, of New York, discovers that in the hospitals of that city sixty-five per cent. of the pneumonia patients die who receive alcoholic treatment, while in the London temperance hospital, where no alcohol is used, only five per cent. die.

Mrs. Haughton, superintendent of work among ranchmen for the Texas W. C. T. U., is working to have each man donate a calf to be sold for the W. C. T. U. fund, and expects to secure not less than three hundred for that purpose during the present year.

"Oh ermine judge, whose duty to society is, now, to doom the ragged criminals to punishment and death, hadst thou never, man, a duty to discharge in barring up the hundred open gates that wooed him to the felon's dock, and throwing but ajar the portals to a decent life?"—Dickens.

The editor of the New York Independent has interviewed, by letter, seventy railroad superintendents, who testify, almost without exception, that total abstinence is required of all employees. In most cases the prohibition applies "either while on or off duty." Smoking is also prohibited among the men while on duty by some of the companies.

The World's Woman's Christian Temperance Union now numbers thirty-three auxiliaries, in as many different countries and provinces; the latest organization being in Bermuda, where a society was formed last February. The Salvation Army, organized nine years earlier, has branches in thirty-five different countries and provinces. This comparison is not drawn to the disparagement of the Salvation Army. The W. C. T. U., being organized later, has had the advantage of better facilities for disseminating its principles and transporting its workers.

Notice.

All contributions and communications intended for the Transit and Building Fund Society of Bishop William Taylor's Self-Supporting Missions, should be sent to Richard Grant, treasurer, 181 Hudson St., New York.

A decree has been issued by the government of Brazil which authorizes an unlimited issue of currency on a gold basis on the national banks.

BUT if we walk in the light, as he is in the light, we have fellowship one with another, and the blood of Jesus Christ his Son cleanseth us from all sin.—I. John 1, 7.

The International railroad scheme looks as though it will soon be a reality. The President will shortly appoint a delegate to attend the convention to be held at Washington, and telegraphic dispatches state that representives from nearly all of the South American countries will be in attendance.

Columbia, S. C., was shocked by an earthquake six distinct times on one day last week.

The entire mail editions of newspapers, published in various sections of this county, have been confiscated by the postoffice authorities for violation of the Anti-Lottery law. Instructions are now being prepared by the assistant attorney general for the postoffice, providing for the enforcement of the new law.

An enterprise involving the colonization and commercial development of a good sized province has been maturing under the name of the American-Honduras Company, with headquarters at Chicago. It will plant colonies, build roads, dig harbors, erect lighthouses, lay marine cables and establish schools, all under its own supervision without aid from any government. The grant has a coast line of 80 or 100 miles, extending from Cape Cameron nearly to the boundary of Nicaragua. From south to north it measures about sixty miles.

In a collision between two railroad trains in Oregon, last week, twenty persons were killed.

The Constitutional Convention, in session at Jackson, Miss., eliminated, by a vote of 45 to 37, the office of lieutenant-governor.

A furious conflagration occurred in a Chicago packing house on September 28. Thirty-two tanks of lard exploded during the progress of the fire, feeding the flames, upon which water had little effect. Almost seven thousand frozen hogs in the cooling-room were burned. It is estimated that $690,000 worth of property was destroyed.

The directors of the Grenada Fair and Live Stock Association met on September 28, and received very gratifying reports from all the committees. Everything indicates that the second annual fair, to be held October 21 to 25, will be the biggest and most successful ever held in the State.

A Board of Trade has been organized in Greenville, Miss. The business men generally are interested, and almost every man in business there has become a member.

Representative Burrows, of Michigan, in the House, on September 29, and Senator Gibson, of Louisiana, in the Senate, introduced for reference a bill appropriating $9,000,000 to repair and build the levees of the Mississippi river from the head of the passes to Cairo. Not more than $3,000,000 shall be expended during any one year, and the work shall be constructed and protected in co-operation with the riparian States and local authorities.

President Harrison has promised a labor committee that when Congress adjourned he would give consideration to the eight-hour law and would insist upon its strict enforcement on the government buildings. He expressed himself as earnestly desirous of furthering the interests of the workingmen.

Hon. H. Dudley Coleman has been nominated for Congress by the Republican Congressional Convention of the second district.

FOREIGN.

It is said that serious frauds have been discovered in the Russian army near the Caspian Sea. Several regiments had received no pay for six months, and it appears that the officers had stolen the money.

There was an encounter between the police and the Nationalists, on September 25, at Tipperary, in which a number of persons were badly wounded. The encounter grew out of the trial of the Irish Nationalists. A number of Dublin Nationalists went to Tipperary to attend the trial of the offending members of Parliament. After the usual display of contempt for the police, the Nationalist sympathizers were liberally clubbed.

Chancellor Von Caprivi had a conference with Count Kalnoky, and assented to his scheme to lessen the cost of living to the masses by higher import duties on the monied classes, the proposition involving the opening of the German market to American pork. The general impression is that Minister Phelps' overtures for a settlement, if renewed, backed by some easy concessions on German exports to the United States, will find a ready response from Chancellor Von Caprivi.

Another attempt has been made upon the life of the Czar. This time the conspirators conspired to wreck a train by which it was believed the Czar intended to travel from St. Petersburg to Warsaw. An obstruction was placed upon the track in the shape of five sleepers, which were tightly wedged in between the rails. The train, which was supposed to be carrying the Czar, crashed into the barricade of sleepers and was thrown from the track.

All the flour mill proprietors in Lisbon have combined to close their mills in order to try to compel the government to allow them to import as much wheat as they like and to repeal the recent law forbidding them to import more than one-half of the wheat ground.

The French government is preparing an extensive expedition against Dahomy, with the object of compelling the king to submit to French authority.

It is said the English government has purchased a large building at Port Said, and is transforming it into a barracks and fortress, which will soon be occupied by British troops. This means English possession of both ends of the Suez Canal.

While the young King of Servia, accompanied by his father, ex-King Milan, was returning from a drive, a cartridge was exploded beneath his carriage. The authorities contend that the explosion was purely accidental. As far as can be learned no one was injured.

MALARIA

OVERCOME BY

DR. KING'S

Royal Germetuer.

NEW ORLEANS, Sept. 2, 1890.

I have been for several years constantly subject to malarial fevers. The best medical treatment has failed to remove from my system the malarial poison that produced them. I have had to use an average of forty grains of quinine per week for years. The fevers would invariably return in a few days, if it was discontinued. The quinine was doing great harm to my nervous system, but I had to keep it up as my only hope. Recently I commenced using Dr. King's Royal Germetuer. It has done me more good than all the medicine I have ever taken. I have not had a fever since commencing its use, nor found it necessary to take a dose of quinine. It has toned my nerves, built up my strength and given me a buoyancy and healthfulness of feeling that I have not known for years. My experience justifies me in saying that this wonderful remedy is all that is claimed for it, if not more.

POMPEII—ITS TEMPLES—PUBLIC BUILDINGS—DWELLINGS—THE STREET OF TOMBS—THE MEDITATIVE STATUE—THE HOUSE OF DIOMEDE—THE ASCENT OF MOUNT VESUVIUS.

Of course, I visited Pompeii. Let us get our local bearings. Mt. Vesuvius is ten miles east of Naples, and Pompeii is five miles southeast of Mt. Vesuvius. They are all nearly in a line, and all three are on or near the Bay of Naples. Taking an early morning train, I ran along the shore of the bay, reaching the Pompeii station in less than an hour.

One hundred yards from the station is the Sea Gate of the city of Pompeii. It was through this gate that thousands rushed in the direction of the Bay of Naples, which is, perhaps, not over a half-mile away. I pause a moment at the gate to say that Pompeii, at the time of its destruction, was no mean city in size, wealth, and importance. Its population at the time was about thirty thousand. It had a large trade by sea, was surrounded by a most fertile country, and was the abode of wealthy people, and even visited by royalty. It had been almost destroyed in A. D. 63 by an earthquake, but had recovered from this disaster, and the city was more richly and beautifully built than ever; when in the year 79 it was overwhelmed by an eruption of Mt. Vesuvius. There was first a fall of hot, suffocating ashes to the depth of three feet, and then a prolonged pouring of rapilli, or red-hot pumice-stones, on the doomed place to the depth of seven feet; then more ashes, and then more stones, until the city was covered. Two thousand people were destroyed.

The city of Pompeii is one mile long and a half-mile wide. It was surrounded by a considerable wall, and had about eight gates. Not quite half of the city has been as yet exhumed. What we see of it shows a town most compactly built, having a large population, and abounding in wealth and luxury.

At the entrance of the Sea Gate is one of the ancient buildings now turned into a museum. Many curious things pertaining to the buried city are here exhibited. In glass cases are the figures of a number of men and women whose bodies were discovered in various places in Pompeii, and preserved by a method familiar to your readers. With one exception, their petrified positions and attitudes show horror of mind and agony of body. The one exception is that apparently of a middle-aged man. The features and lines of the face are very plain, and show unmistakable calmness. His head rests on his left arm, and he seems to have accepted his fate, and laid down to die. The body of a dog is a picture of physical agony. His legs upward and bent; his head twisted under his body, as if biting at the fire that was consuming him. His skeleton was found tied to the door of a man named Orpheus. How the howls of that confined dog pierced the ash-laden atmosphere, and added another sound of mournfulness and terror to the already overburdened and horror-stricken night. Just beyond is the body of a young woman who has fallen upon her face, apparently to hide from her eyes the dreadful sights of the hour.

Pursuing my walk up one of the streets, I came to the southwest corner of the town upon the workmen engaged in excavating the place. It was there I saw distinctly the different stratas of destruction that fell on the town as they appeared in the banks upon which the spades of the laborers were at work.

There are a number of public buildings that were not only large, but elegant and beautiful. The Basilica, or Temple of Justice, has a breadth and massiveness, even in its ruins, that deeply impresses the beholder. The Forum is worthy of the name. The size of the marble columns, the paved court, the life-sized statuary (now deposited in the museum at Naples), show what this place and other similar public places were, and what of architectural excellence and artistic taste these people were possessed, while the inhabitants of Great Britain were wearing the skins of beasts, dwelling in huts, and worshiping in a rude way in the center of twelve upright stones.

The public baths are similar to those of to-day. Hot and cold water-pipes, marble bath-tubs, marble fountains, steaming-room, sitting-room, and wine shops and restaurants just opposite the narrow street. You find wine shops at almost every corner. They are easily recognized by a front stone counter, in which still stand large jars and receptacles for the wine. Ashes, to the depth of five or six inches, now lie in the bottom instead of the lees of the liquor.

The Temples of Venus, Jupiter, Mercury, are all impressive by their size and remains of former beauty. The Temple of Isis is here with the rest. On its altar was found a sacrifice just laid, when the sound of doom put an end to the service.

The houses of wealthy men abound. I saw no homes of the poor. As I went through a number of these reputed abodes of the rich and noble, and saw the remains of marble fountains, the Mosaic pavements, the walls richly colored or covered with paintings, the marble pillars and the small, but beautiful, rooms opening on the inner court, in whose center an ornamented fountain played, I saw there was no mistake about the tradition; and when afterwards, in the museum at Naples, I saw the pictures and statuary and articles of various kinds that came out of these homes, there was not left the shadow of a doubt in my mind about the luxury that once filled these homes, and that made this city remarkable. There are some things I saw in Pompeii that I can not speak of; only there are unmistakable signs that declare that the place was as generally corrupt as it was beautiful and luxurious. Long before I left the city I saw why the fire of Vesuvius had fallen on that particular part of the plain. There are some sins upon which God always rains fire. The offense of Pompeii was seen in more than one sin. Even at this distance of time four or five of the most wrath-provoking are perfectly manifest.

It is a mistake to suppose that the houses were of one story. The numerous staircases all over the city show, at least, two stories, while the house of Diomede as clearly reveals a third floor. These upper stories were, doubtless, constructed of wood, and perished under a conflagration created by the red-hot pumice-stones.

The Amphitheater that Bulwer speaks of is empty and desolate; but solemn, majestic, and imposing.

The Gate of Herculaneum, as it is called, opens on what is called the Street of Tombs, that stretches beyond the city walls several hundred yards. All had to be exhumed. Just outside the gate is the doorway in which the Roman sentinel was found dead at his post. It was the doorway of a tomb.

Looking down the avenue of tombs, I beheld a sight which affected me strangely and sadly. Fully two hundred yards away, almost at the end of the street, a marble statue is leaning against one of the tombs on the right hand, and looking toward the gate where I stood. The right hand of the statue was placed lightly on one hand upraised to the face. The position was one of waiting and meditation. The eyes were fixed upon us where we stood. It looked as if it was expecting us, and was waiting to welcome, or to invite us to a final resting-place in one of the tombs. The utter loneliness of the street, coupled with the desolation of the city, greatly heightened the effect of the strange spectacle.

Near the end of this street is the famous house of Diomede. The cellar is the strong point of interest with the tourist at this place. I was much surprised at its shape and extent. It is fully ten or twelve feet in width, and equally as high. It runs west fifty yards, then makes an elbow, and runs south fifty yards, and then, with another sharp turn, runs east the same distance. It is located under the flower garden, and connects with the house at two points by a gradual rise in the floor. This was the wine-cellar of Diomede, and the jars are still seen in ruinous condition, or with their imprint against the walls. The cellar is pierced with a number of small square apertures for the reception of air. Through these the ashes and suffocating fumes entered in destroying power upon those who had fled here for refuge. In this cellar the skeletons or bodies of fifty-eight people were found. The impression of the figures of some, with their clothes wrapped about their heads to keep out the hot ashes and air, is plainly seen on the wall against which they leaned. A man with a ring on his hand, and holding a key, was found near the door. Close to him was his slave, bearing a box of jewels. But the servant and key and precious stones availed nothing at such a time. There is an hour when men and money can do nothing for us. That hour is when God "looks on the hills, and they tremble; when he touches the mountains, and they smoke;" when he arises in his omnipotence to judge terribly the earth.

Mt. Vesuvius is five miles from Pompeii. Taking a guide and two horses, I had a wild gallop over the plain and fields toward the smoking volcano. What a gallop it was, through dusty lanes, and wide-spreading vineyards, and queer-looking villages with high stone walls, over whose top peered and clambered the boughs of all kinds of fruit trees! The half-naked children rushed out at our coming, crying for money in shrill tones, while more than one old peasant woman dropped distaff and spindle, and gazed after us as we went clattering by. We had no time to tarry, for it takes several hours to climb Vesuvius, and it was now in the afternoon. As we swept on, vineyards followed upon vineyards. As we began to ascend the mountains, they actually became more luxuriant. The black ashes and cinders seems to be the soil in which the vine can best flourish. The wine, I understand, is very strong. The fire of the mountain, I suppose, has got into the grape. You climb more than one-third of the height of the volcano before the grape-bearing vine ceases to follow you. Further along we began to encounter the lava beds. Remarkable when we first saw them, they became more wonderful in appearance the higher we ascended. Conceive of a vast level field, across which runs a strip of plowed land, say fifty or an hundred yards wide. But this plowed strip has been thrown up by plows that can cast a furrow fifteen or twenty feet high, and leave clods as big as a hogshead. Think of an ebony river churned by a cyclone into wildest confusion, and then its black, convulsed waves suddenly turned to stone. I saw every conceivable fantastic and horrible form in these lava rivers that poured down the sides of Vesuvius, and were arrested midway. Implements of war, human forms twisted in agony, and serpents folded and knotted together.

Two-thirds and more of the distance up the guide came to a halt in a wild, rocky spot at the foot of the cone proper. He remarked that the rest of the way must be pursued on foot, as it was too steep for the horses. At this juncture four men presented themselves, and offered to carry me up in a chair. Their price staggered me, and I said, "No;" I would climb the rest of the way. Faithfully did I try, sinking in the ashes several inches with each step. High up above me loomed the mountain, and desperately did I surge for an hundred yards to gain the top unaided. To my surprise, the four men toiled along by my side. It actually appeared that they believed I could not make the ascent. In fact, that was just what they believed and knew. They had seen hundreds do as I did that afternoon. It was all of no avail; I had to give up, with breath and strength gone, and the head of the volcano still high in air. At once they placed me in a chair, to which two handspikes were nailed, and I was lifted up thus, throne-like, on the shoulders of four stalwart men. And then how we climbed. And what an experience it was to be going on the shoulders of four men up the steep side of a roof four thousand feet high, whose eaves overhung Italy and the Mediterranean Sea, and the chimney at the top on fire!

At last we reached the summit, and stood in twenty feet of the smoke that boils up from the crater. Around the crater there are two lips, each one fully thirty feet high. The outer one is twenty feet off from the danger spot; the inner one overhangs the fire, and has rattling upon it a constant shower of stones thrown up from beneath. Every minute or so there is a deep explosion in the crater, and a shower of black rocks are hurled two or three hundred yards in the air, and come rattling down, some in the gulf, many on the inner lip of the crater, and some on the outer lip where we stood. I had the not very blissful experience, in company with the guides, of dodging and retiring precipitately several times from these stones.

What a view bursts on the charmed vision from this lofty place! What reflections crowd on the mind while you linger at the top, or descend the steep sides of the cone, and the gentle slope of the mountain proper! The city and Bay of Naples are westward, and just beneath you. The Mediterranean is outspread in its calm blue beauty, a dozen populous towns are at the base of the volcano; houses and vineyards clamber up its sides, as though it was perfectly harmless. A vast plain, dotted with houses and towns, amid which I notice the ruins of Pompeii, and covered with orchards and vineyards, circles around three sides of Vesuvius, and stretches away in the distance till shut in by a lofty range of mountains that makes a fitting frame for so large and lovely a picture. At the foot of this fire-breathing monster is the town of Terra Del Greco, fair and flourishing, and yet it has been destroyed seven times by this volcano at whose feet it now contidingly nestles. How strange it is that men will believe in and cling to the thing that destroys them!

I gave a farewell look and descended. This has always been a wonderful spot. Capua, where Hannibal's army were changed to the nature of women, is close by. I look at the soft beauty of the landscape, the fertility of the plain, the slumber of the ocean, and the swoon in the air. I remember the fire of the grape, and the warmth of the sunbeam, and I began to understand the meaning of the word Capua as Hannibal saw it; and I also think I see some of the circumstantial causes that developed finally into the overwhelming ruin of Pompeii.

B. CARRADINE.

A Glance at the Sky.

Just at this season the heavens present a peculiarly magnificent appearance on a clear night, due to the fact that the three planets, Venus, Mars and Jupiter, are all above the horizon after sunset, and appear in almost a direct line from west to east. For several weeks they seemed about equal distances apart: Mars being in the center, Venus to the west and Jupiter to the east. Antares, a fixed star of the first magnitude, is between Mars and Venus, almost in a line with the three planets, and similar to Mars in having a decided red color.

Venus, the brightest of all the system, began to be evening star early in February, and reached its greatest elongation, or highest apparent position in the western sky, about September 23; so that this planet now appears nearer the sun every evening, and will about December 3 be on the horizon at sunset. It will, however, of course, be invisible some days earlier, when its angle with the sun is small, the maximum brightness being attained about the middle of October.

This planet was known to the Greeks as Phosphorus (light-bringing) while morning star, and Hesperus (evening) while evening star. In February, Venus was 160,000,000 miles from us; but when on December 3 she is at inferior conjunction—i. e., on a line between the earth and sun—her distance from us will be only 26,000,000 miles. No other heavenly body ever comes so near the earth except the moon, and occasionally a comet. This planet has of late been frequently taken for the "Star of Bethlehem," which it is not. In 1610 Galileo discovered that Venus exhibited phases similar to those exhibited by our moon.

A telescope of even moderate magnifying power will reveal these phases with striking distinctness, especially about thirty-six days before and after inferior conjunction, when the appearance is similar to that of the moon about five days old. Occasionally Venus passes directly between the earth and the sun, which passage is called "transit." She is then visible as a black spot on the sun's disc. When the transit track passes near the center of the disc the duration of the passage is nearly eight hours. The last transit of Venus was on December 6, 1882, and the next one will occur June 8, 2004, so there will be no transit this year, nor for one hundred and thirteen and a half years to come.

CENTENARY COLLEGE, Sept. 29, 1890.

Church Extension Dots.

BY J. M. BEARD, D. D.

"Let us rise up and build."

How shall we garner in the sheaves without storehouses?

Upon a recent trip to central Louisiana, via the Texas and Pacific railroad, the writer passed in full view of seven beautiful churches which owe their erection to the Church Extension Society.

Along the Mississippi and Red rivers, and all the great commercial thoroughfares of the State of Louisiana, gleam monuments to the Church Extension Fund in lofty and spacious temples to the praises of God. It is the settled policy of the Board to endow plants where the tides of population and trade flow with the greatest energy.

If any Louisianian has donated a sum as great as one hundred dollars to the Church Extension Fund, his name did not accompany his gift.

"The stream that hurries by your fixed shore Returns no more."

A preacher out West, who was addressing a crowded house with a greater or less degree of liberty, was considerably diverted by a tow-headed auditor who made several unsuccessful attempts to escape from his eloquence through a hole in the wall. He got even by offering to bet him a dollar that he couldn't accomplish the feat. This incident is from the repertory of Rev. Frank Wilkes, who lived and labored before the era of church extension.

The Church Extension Society realizes one thousand per cent. on its investments—i. e., it gives one hundred dollars to petitioners who will build a church to cost one thousand dollars.

The splendid service of Mrs. S. A. Klug and her lieutenant, Miss Kate Riggs, in organizing a Parsonage Extension Society in every church in New Orleans during this year, must not be forgotten.

Help your preacher to take the church extension collection by offering your contribution in advance.

There are few things more ubiquitous than the dollar we give to church extension. While one-half of it nestles down on Louisiana soil, the other half takes wings and does not reach terra firma until it scales the Rockies.

The Methodist Episcopal Church, South, builds upon an average one church for every day in the year.

He who gives money to church extension invests immediately in stock that will bear interest everlastingly.

The promise given the collector today will materialize in bricks and shingles before the end of the year.

The greatest distinction of the star-spangled banner will have been realized when it waves over a nation of churches.

Take care of the churches, and the church institutions, great and small, will take care of themselves.

When the Lord has put the seal of his blessing upon a movement, who will enter a nondescript protest?

The Church Extension Society, at the approaching session of the Annual Conference, will have more applications for dollars to help build churches than it will have dimes to confer.

The church in Louisiana paid forty-nine per cent. of its meager assessment for the Church Extension Fund last year.

He who causes two churches to grow where one grew before should be held in great esteem for his work's sake.

A consensus of episcopal opinion favors the notion that there is more profit in gifts to the Church Extension Society than to any other object of church benevolence.

If you want your money invested in church property where it will reach the most people and do the most good, trust the wisdom of the Church Extension Board.

Twenty-one churches in Louisiana gave nothing to church extension last year. For shame!

The Louisiana Conference received more dollars from the Church Extension Society for building churches within its boundaries last year than it paid into its treasury. Who is to praise or blame for this?

God's curse is upon that religious community who have blessed themselves with a costly temple to worship in and have scorned the plaint of their poor neighbors for pine boards.

We beseech our brother ministers to redeem their ministerial vows by taking a collection for church extension in every church, and we beseech our brethren of the whole church "to come up to the help of the Lord against the mighty."

No one who has heard Bishop Galloway lecture on Mexico can fail to presently comprehend that there is a great heathen empire on our immediate southern border.

It has been the good fortune of the writer to attend two church dedications, on the line of the Texas and Pacific railroad, at which Bishop Galloway officiated in sermon and lecture. At both he did grandly; but especially did he transcend the literature of compliment in the night sermon at Alexandria. May he live to perform scores of similar services for his near neighbors in Louisiana!

Speaking of Bishop Galloway, he is prompt to resent the insinuation, doubtless emanating from outside exclusive circles, that he is the Bishop of Mississippi. It is a small man that State boundaries can contain in the year of grace 1890.

Millsaps College Notes.

On the third Sunday in September Magnolia increased her contributions to the college endowment fund by a collection amounting to over two hundred dollars.

Indications of the general observance of Millsaps College Day are to be seen on every side. Let two hundred and fifty pulpits in Mississippi ring with the sacred theme of Christian education on next Sunday, and let intelligent interest and generous zeal find expression in benefactions to Millsaps College.

Let the nearly one thousand Methodist Sunday-schools in Mississippi put themselves on record as being in practical sympathy with the cause of sanctified wisdom, and let every child make a contribution to the endowment fund of Millsaps College.

Let every preacher realize the importance of the crisis in our church life which we have reached, and present this claim and emphasize this theme in every pulpit on his charge. Let notes and cash be secured from every member and friend of the Methodist Church in Mississippi.

Let prayer and self-denial for this great cause mark our lives during this month, and be crystallized into deeds that, under the blessings of God, will live in influence forever.

Let pastors and Sunday-school superintendents report at once to the agent the amount in cash and notes contributed by each church and Sunday-school separately, that proper publication can be made and proper credit given in the ADVOCATE.

This occasion will give opportunity for an expression of interest and zeal. Let it be generous.

Many persons have not yet had an opportunity to give. Let the opportunity be given now.

Make old Mississippi ring with the theme from the Alabama line to the "Father of Waters," and from Tennessee to the orange-bearing shores of the Gulf. Let the cause be laid upon the hearts of our people.

THE BLIGHT OF WORLDLINESS.

BY MRS. MATILDA C. EDWARDS.

The Church and the World walked far apart,
On the changing shore of time;
The World was singing a giddy song,
And the Church a hymn sublime.
"Come, give me your hand," cried the merry World.
"And walk with me this way;"
But the good Church hid her snowy hands
And solemnly answered, "Nay,
I will not give you my hand at all,
And I will not walk with you;
Your way is the way to endless death.
Your words are all untrue."

"Nay, walk with me but a little space,"
Said the World, with a kindly air;
"The road I walk is a pleasant road,
And the sun shines always there.
Your path is thorny and rough and rude,
And mine is broad and plain;
My road is paved with flowers and dews,
And yours with tears and pain;
The sky above me is always blue,
No want, no toil, I know;
The sky above you is always dark.
You lot is a lot of woe.
My path, you see, is a broad, fair one,
And my gate is high and wide;
There is room enough for you and for me
To travel side by side."

Half shyly the Church approached the World
And gave him her hand of snow;
Saying in accents low,
"Your dress is too simple to suit my taste;
I will give you pearls to wear,
Rich velvets and silks for your graceful form,
And diamonds to deck your hair."

The Church looked down at her plain white robes,
And then at the dazzling World,
And blushed as she saw his handsome lip
With a smile contemptuous curled.
"I will change my dress for a costlier one,"
Said the Church, with a smile of grace;
Then her pure white garments drifted away,
And the World gave in their place,
Beautiful satins and shining silks,
And rose and gems and pearls;
And over her forehead her bright hair fell,
Crisped in a thousand curls.

"Your house is too plain," said the proud old World,
"I'll build you one like mine;
Carpets of brussels and curtains of lace,
And furniture ever so fine."
So he built her a costly and beautiful house,
Splendid it was to behold;
Her sons and her beautiful daughters dwelt there,
Gleaming in purple and gold,
And fairs and shows in her halls were held,
And the World and his children were there,
And laughter and music and feasts were heard
In the place that was meant for prayer.
She had cushioned pews for the rich and great,
To sit in their pomp and pride;
While the poor folks, clad in their shabby suits,
Sat meekly down outside.

The Angel of Mercy flew over the church
And whispered, "I know thy sin;"
Then the Church looked back with a sigh, and longed
To gather her children in.
But some were off at the midnight ball,
And some were off at the play;
And some were drinking in gay saloons,
So she quietly went her way.
Then the sly World gallantly said to her,
"Your children mean no harm,
Merely indulging in innocent sports,"
So she leaned on his proffered arm,
And smiled and chatted and gathered flowers
As she walked along with the World;
While millions and millions of deathless souls
To the horrible gulf were hurled.

"Your preachers are all too old and plain,"
Said the gay World, with a sneer,
"They frighten my children with dreadful tales
Which I like not for them to hear;
They talk of brimstone, and fire, and pain,
And the horrors of endless night;
They talk of a place which should not be
Mentioned to ears polite.
I will send you some of another stamp,
Brilliant and gay and fast,
Who will tell them that people may live as they list,
And go to heaven at last.
The Father is merciful, great, and good,
Tender and true and kind;
Do you think he would take one child to heaven
And leave the rest behind?"
So he filled her house with gay divines,
Gifted and great and learned,
And the plain old men that preached the cross
Were out of her pulpits turned.

"You give too much to the poor," said the World,
"Far more than you ought to do.
If the poor need shelter and food and clothes,
Why need it trouble you?
Go take your money and buy rich robes,
And horses and carriages fine,
And pearls and jewels and dainty food,
And the rarest and costliest wine.
My children they dote on all such things,
And if you their love would win,
You must do as they do, and walk in the ways
That they are walking in."

Then the Church held tightly the strings of her purse,
And gracefully lowered her head,
And simpered, "I've given too much away;
I'll do, sir, as you have said."
So the poor were turned from her door in scorn,
And she heard not the orphan's cry,
And she drew her beautiful robes aside
As the widows went weeping by,
And the sons of the World and the sons of the Church
Walked closely hand and heart;
And only the Master, who knoweth all,
Could tell the two apart.

Then the Church sat down at her ease and said,
"I am rich and in goods increased;
I have need of nothing, and naught to do
But to laugh and dance and feast,"
And the sly World heard her, and laughed in his sleeve,
And mockingly said aside,
"The Church is fallen, the beautiful Church,
And her shame is her boast and pride."

The angel drew nearer to the mercy-seat,
And whispered in sighs her name,
And the saints their anthems of rapture hushed,
And covered their heads with shame.
And a voice came down through the hush of heaven
From him who sat on the throne:
"I know thy works, and how thou hast said,
'I am rich,' and thou hast not known
That thou art naked and poor and blind,
And wretched before my face.
Therefore from my presence I cast thee out,
And blot thy name from its place."

—Labor of Love.

Experiences of a Novitiate.

Novelties are always possessed of a peculiar charm, especially in the eyes of the person that experiences them. In all the walks of life, novices have to pass through certain "first principles." It has long been a belief of the writer's that the impressions of a tyro in the itineraney must far transcend, in the matter of lasting effect, those of any other class of beginners. The experience of the past few months bids fair to prove the profound truth of the intuitions of former years.

The circumstances attendant upon a young preacher's work are peculiar in the extreme. From the moment of his arrival in any community till his departure therefrom he is subjected to the closest scrutiny. Not that there is anything in his mere person to excite extraordinary interest, but, according to an immemorial custom, for whose existence no one can give a satisfactory reason, he is, by the members of the community, constituted an object of that interest whose fountain-source is curiosity, and is made a subject of that conversation which derives its existence from a love of gossip. By some kind friends the young man is petted; by others, no less so, he is pitied. His advent in the neighborhood brings into prominent activity the latent faculties of Mrs. Grundy's brain; and how those talents, almost destroyed by long desuetude, are suddenly granted a new lease of life by the constant use to which they are now subjected! What a sublime example of entire self-forgetfulness as she leaves all else and devotes her thought and words to the discussion of the "whys," "wherefores," "whos" and "whens" of the helpless fledgeling!

So much for his "society" relation. But there are other phases of this young preacher's life to be noticed. Consider his attitude from the pulpit. Of course, the whole membership comes out to hear his "first effort;" and what an effort it is! His feelings on that occasion can not be described; to be appreciated they must be experienced. As for the congregation, their agony is as indescribable as the pulpiter's. After the ordeal has been passed through, then come the congratulations, which, truth to tell, are given in all sincerity. The air of the old veteran, as he grasps the hand of his young leader, may be literally translated in these words: "I took the precaution not to expect much, and hence am not disappointed; you did well, pretty well."

Then there is the social aspect to be presented. Right here are two horns of a dilemma known only to the vocation of the minister. To choose the middle course requires more wisdom and experience than the licentiate ordinarily has at his command. If he evinces finely developed talent for social entertainment, he is apt to be classed as a gossip, and immediately some one begins to draw very telling comparisons between the different appearances presented by the seat and knees of his pantaloons. But if, on the other hand, seeking to avoid this judgment, he denies himself the intercourse of both young and old alike, he again fails most signally to fill up the measure of ministerial acceptability as held out by his parishioners. His bed is too short; his coverings still too narrow. Undoubtedly the wisdom of Solomon belongs to him that can readily adjust himself to the alternately expanding and contracting rule applied by the various characters composing his flock.

So much for generalities; now for a few particulars in the writer's own experience. It was my good fortune to start out as a "junior." This, of itself, was, to my mind, a most decided advantage; but my privilege was still farther enhanced by falling in the hands of the "senior" that I did. He was a man that had once been a boy himself. This is not surprising; but here is the wonder—he had not forgotten the fact. Moreover, he had been a boy preacher, and, endowed as he was with a good memory, he could, by making use of the same, put himself in his assistant's place, and fully sympathize with him in his share of the work. And how that sympathy was appreciated! His words of admonition came in a manner that showed that their origin was to be found in a lively interest in my behalf. Truly, I fell heir to a goodly inheritance in the shape of counsel drawn from his long experience in the work.

I had my "home" at the parsonage—the first parsonage life of which I have any recollection; but the memory of my stay there shall ever remain fresh. Its situation on the border of a beautiful grove, its complete seclusion from all the strife and turmoil of the world, and, far above everything else, the helpful associations of its inmates, all unite to form a tender spot in my heart for the "parsonage." But, as a circuit rider, I had other "homes"—in fact, all the houses of the charge were open to the preacher. I confess that on leaving my father's house I had some misgivings; but these were all dispelled by the hospitality of the good people to whom I went, and I saw then the Savior's promise to Peter fully verified. Thank God for the numerous Christian homes where the preacher is always welcome, and nothing is thought too good for the Lord's servant!

As to preaching, I did a good deal; such as it was. In this regard, I was the recipient of much sympathy on the part of some of the "old members." They would tell me of the "good old preachers" and the "big meetings" that they used to attend. Retrospection in this, as in other instances, necessarily engendered comparisons, and I was not slow to see the objective point of their reminiscences. All of this was beneficial to myself, since thereby were afforded both a number of examples and several incentives to patterning after them.

On the whole, as far as the gaining of experience, and the consequent benefit to myself goes, my "first work" was a decided success. Farther than this I can not speak with certainty. Let the great day declare it.

A Curious Question.

MR. EDITOR: I desire, through the ADVOCATE, to ask you, and any of the brethren of our church, if you think it is wrong to teach children the Lord's Prayer, especially to say, "Our Father who art in heaven," before they are converted? The reason I ask this question is, not because my mind is disturbed on the subject in the least, but I heard an eminent evangelist of one of our sister churches make the statement in a sermon that it was wrong, and exhort the people to be careful how they taught the prayer to their children. As the ADVOCATE is the instructor of the people, I hope that some one will take the time to write a terse article, stating the ground for or against. If it is wrong, a large number of Christian fathers and mothers have been wrongly taught, and, in turn, have given their children the same erroneous instruction.

M. L. BURTON.

(It won't begin to do to believe or accept everything that a traveling evangelist says. That man's position in regard to the Lord's Prayer is not only absurd, but wicked.—ED.)

An Extra Missionary.

Dr. John's editorial, "Fifty Missionaries for China," in the August number of the Missionary Reporter, has impressed me deeply. I do not see anything (but inertia, and this should be overcome) to hinder the 128 pastoral charges of the Mississippi Conference, with their 140 pastors and 36,000 church members, from sending and sustaining, at least, one or two extra missionaries in the field. Why can not every preacher obligate himself to pay $5 and to raise $5 on his charge for this purpose, and the object would be accomplished. The 128 pastoral charges at $10 each would amount to $1,280.

Now, my brethren, I am not writing to kill time, but am ready to head the list with the $10 spoken of, and will ask the editor to publish the names as they are sent, and we will have the amount ready by Conference. Don't all speak at once, but let everyone come to or above these figures, and we will all be proud of the results.

If each Conference will comply with the above, we will have over fifty missionaries for China.

W. M. STEVENS.

VICKSBURG, MISS.

A Mississippi Missionary.

Amen! I wish to record my hearty "amen" to the timely utterances of Bro. B. F. Lewis on "A Missionary Supported by the Mississippi Conference" (ministry). Though I am not a member of that Conference, yet I am of that craft, of the North Mississippi Conference. So I write to commend his utterances, and thereby hope to stir the hearts of my brethren in the ministry of the North Mississippi Conference, by way of remembrance of the obligation we are under, not only to preach the "Word," but to give of our means, though scanty they sometimes be, to assist in sending the "Bread of Life," into the regions beyond. Bro. Lewis has sounded the right note for the ministry. It is a work easy to be done, a plan easily to be followed if we would only yield to the influences of the Holy Spirit as he brings to us the consciousness of our duty toward the heathen. I fear very much that one serious hindrance to the onward march of the Redeemer's kingdom is that the ministry has not been fully aroused to their duty in dealing with this important question. It is impossible for the conscience of the church to be quickened into practical demonstration of life unless the ministry leads off, both in precept and example. Now, then, to demonstrate our faith in missions, we must do it by our works. "Faith without works is dead." Brethren of the North Mississippi Conference, let us show our faith in and our love for missions by organizing ourselves into a "Missionary Brotherhood," the purpose of which to be to support a missionary in some of our mission fields. We have on the effective list 137 members of our Conference. Now ten dollars, being a part of one-tenth of our salaries, from each member, would give us $1,376, enough to support a married man in the advance guard of our church. "But I haven't got it to spare." Well, one-tenth of what you have received belongs of right to the Lord, and you have no right to spend it for your own private use. "But I have only received $100 for my year's work of preaching." Well $10 of it belongs to the Lord; so lay it aside for him, and he will so order or arrange that the $90, which is yours, will buy as much as the $100. But I have said enough. What say you brethren to this plan? I will be the first to put down my name for the North Mississippi Conference Missionary Brotherhood, and ten dollars annually for life to help hasten the glorious coronation of the Lord's Christ as Savior of the heathen.

H. L. VAUGHN.

POPE STATION, MISS.

Mississippi Missionary.

MR. EDITOR: Bro. B. F. Lewis' article, "A Missionary Supported by the Mississippi Conference," stirred the "missionary spirit" within me. He asked the question, "Brethren, what say you to this?" The first thing I said was, Amen! But as Amens will not send the blessed gospel to China, I, for one Sunday-school superintendent, will promise ten dollars for that purpose; and if our Sunday-school will not give it, I will pay it myself.

Our Sunday-school is at Zachary. We have a plank arbor, but have ordered lumber for a church.

I hope you will open a subscription for Sunday-schools and one for preachers, and add my prayers for success.

From the Work.

SUMMIT, MISS.

After six weeks' prostration with the "grippe" (and not yet entirely well of it); then down with a cutaneous trouble, with fever and severe muscular pains, which have lasted me about eight weeks, I am thankful that I am now getting through with it. My eldest daughter has been very sick for eight or ten weeks; part of the time we had almost despaired of her recovery. She is now sitting up a little at a time. Wife had a severe attack of pleurisy and fever. The parsonage has been almost a hospital for some time; but we hope we are seeing a little daylight now.

With all this I am thankful that we had a gracious revival meeting, which closed a day or two ago. Had five accessions. Although I was not physically able to do much myself, I am thankful for valuable help rendered by Bros. F. M. Keen, of our Conference; H. L. Kirkland, of Livingston, Ala.; W. T. Woodward, and the brethren of the local ranks. Was very sorry we had to close the meeting when we did. We telegraphed to several other ministers to come to our help, but they were engaged. I was too feeble to do the work necessary, and my members said I must not undertake it, fearing a relapse.

I must not forgot to mention the pounding the parsonage received just before our meeting began, given by many of my members and others, which was very much appreciated by the inmates of the pastor's home.

G. BANCROFT.

NEW ALBANY CIRCUIT, NORTH MISSISSIPPI.

I wish to make known to all who are interested in the good work, what the Lord has done for us on the New Albany circuit. We have held six meetings, and had precious seasons of rejoicing in each. Christians have been wonderfully stirred and encouraged, and many have reconsecrated themselves to the Lord and his service. Some promised to erect family altars for their good and the good of their families. We have had thirty-nine conversions and thirty-four accessions, and more to follow. We are indebted to the following brethren for earnest and efficient services rendered in these meetings: Revs. M. H. Honnoll, R. C. Morehead, D. W. Babb, W. A. Manley, and W. M. Young; also W. A. Robertson, local preacher. Our presiding elder, W. S. Lagrone, was with us a part of the time, and won the hearts of the people by his earnest and pointed preaching.

We would mention the fact that Rev. Mr. Millen, of the Associate Reformed Presbyterian Church, preached one sermon for us, with which all were delighted.

This is my third year with this people, whom I have learned to love, and among whom the preacher has many warm friends, who have encouraged him very much amid the toils that have fallen to his lot. So when I shall leave this work, whether this year or next, I shall feel that I am leaving a good people. May the Lord bless the people in the future! G. H. JACOBS.

LAGRANGE CIRCUIT, NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

I have just closed my fourth protracted meeting. Have had a gracious revival at Lagrange, which commenced August 24 and continued until August 31. Received twenty into the church; nineteen on profession of faith. Was assisted by Bro. Lester, who did some noble work.

On September 14 I commenced a meeting at Louis Chapel. Had a gracious revival in the church and thirty-six accessions—all of whom were converted at the altar.

Moved the meeting, on September 21, to Matheston, two miles north on the Georgia Pacific railroad. The crowd and interest both increased. The meeting continued until September 28. Accessions, thirty-nine at this place; in all, seventy-five. I baptized seven infants and fifty-seven adults. This was the greatest meeting of my life. The brightest converts I ever saw, and all went to work. The convorts were from nine to fifty-nine years.

Up to this writing I have received 105 into the church, and the good work is moving on. Bros. Lester and Barlingtine helped part of the time, in which they did great good. Pray for us. W. R. RAINEY.

WOODVILLE DISTRICT.

First. We are anxious to collect the amount of money necessary to purchase our proposed district parsonage. We have collected and deposited about five hundred dollars. Besides, we have subscription for some two hundred more. During the summer months, as money was scarce, we did not urge this claim. But now, on the fourth round, we expect to take up collections for this purpose. We hope that persons friendly to this enterprise, who can not go to the quarterly meeting, will send some money by the officials, to be put in the district parsonage collection. Brethren, let us put forth a little more effort, and secure the much-needed house.

Second. We hope to see a full turnout of all officials at the fourth Quarterly Conference, and also have good reports. We made a good start in the district in the first of the year, and have held the vantage-ground well; and now we hope to wind up well—the best in the history of the district. We expect there will be five new churches—possibly seven—ready for dedication between this and the Annual Conference. C. MCDONALD.

MT. CARMEL CHARGE, MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

We have held meetings at our four regular appointments—Mt. Zion, Santee, Bethel, and Mt. Moriah; and also at Blountville, an afternoon appointment, with hopeful results. We had twenty-two accessions, prayer meetings established, family altars erected, Sunday-schools stimulated, and the church strengthened and built up.

We held our meeting at Mt. Zion in the new church, which is not yet completed. It is said to be the best framed and weather-boarded building in all this country.

Bros. A. B. Nicholson, Mark H. Moore; I. W. Cooper, our presiding elder; and J. N. Evans, in the regular work; and J. W. Brown and G. J. Mortimer, from the local ranks, rendered us faithful services. The Lord be praised for the good work!

N. B. YOUNG, Pastor.

LIVINGSTON CIRCUIT, MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

We have just closed a meeting on Maurepas Island. We continued the meeting seven days and nights. The Holy Spirit was in every service. Men who never would pray in public have erected family altars. Sinners wept and trembled, and said, "What must I do to be saved?" I saw a hundred people at the altar; some weeping, some praying, and others shouting. People who were sinners of the deepest dye went away happy Christians. Fourteen years of prayer was answered in the conversion of one man. Old difficulties were settled; old debts paid, or satisfaction given. Twelve accessions to the church; six children baptized. Thanks to Bro. J. S. Hodges and S. for valuable help rendered. Praise the Lord!

All books received will be acknowledged in this column. A fuller notice will depend upon the interests of our readers.

BOOKS.

ANOTHER COMFORTER, OR PERSON AND MISSION OF THE HOLY SPIRIT. By Wm. Bain McDonald, D. D. McDonald, Gill and Co., Boston. Price, fifty cents.

This little book treats the subject under the form of question and answer, and is "written for the common more than for the critical reader." As far as we are able to judge, it is thoroughly Wesleyan, and discusses the Personality, Divinity, Witness, Guidance, Indwelling and Fruits of the Spirit.

THE PROMISED KING, OR THE STORY OF THE CHILDREN'S SAVIOR. By Annie R. Butler. J. B. Lippincott Company, Philadelphia. George F. Wharton, 5 Carondelet St., New Orleans. Price, $1.

This is a life of Christ written for the children. The wonderful story is told in simple words. The style is clear. The Son of man appears in all his gentleness and majesty, and we doubt not many a child will be charmed by this story into an acceptance of Jesus for its personal Savior and King.

ECCLESIASTICAL POLITICS IN THE METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH. Patriotic Publishing Company, Chicago. Price fifty cents.

The articles which make up this book first appeared in Zion's Herald, where they attracted universal attention. We doubt not their publication in the present form will secure thousands of readers who had no opportunity to see them in the Herald.

THE METHODIST STEWARD. By Rev. J. J. Billingsley. Cranston and Stowe, Cincinnati. Price, seventy-five cents.

The author has collected into book form articles that appeared in several of the church papers some years ago. He discusses the whole subject of the stewardship quite lengthily. Like all books of this kind, only a few of those intended to be reached by it will ever read it, and, of course, its influence will not be very extensive.

THE MISSISSIPPI AND OTHER SONGS. By George P. Smoote, Buffalo, New York: Charles Wells Moulton. Price, $1.

There are some beautiful touches of poetry in this little book. Songs of the Mississippi, An Old Arkansas Homestead, Lucy Woodruff, are among the best pieces.

SOUTHERN WAR SONGS. Collected and arranged by W. L. Fagan, of Alabama. Published by M. T. Richardson, 84 Reade St., New York. Fine cloth, gilt top. Price, $3 50.

This is the best collection of Confederate war songs we have seen, and is beautifully illustrated and gotten up in the finest style of the bookmaker's art.

PERIODICALS.

—The AMERICAN LAW REGISTER, D. B. Canfield Company, Philadelphia. Price, $5.

—THE GLOBE is a new review of world literature, society and religion, art and politics, conducted by W. H. Thorn. Price, $3. The Globe, Philadelphia.

—THE ARENA, for October, has a full table of contributions with notes on Living Problems. There are several interesting papers in this number. Arena Publishing Company, Boston. Price, $5.

—The October CHAUTAUQUAN is an exceptionally good number. The variety and importance of subjects treated is very large. The several departments are all full of interesting matter. This number begins Vol. XII. Theodore L. Flood, Meadville, Pa. Price, $2.

—ST. NICHOLAS, for October, contains its usual quantity of good literature for the young folks, given forth by Mary E. Bradley, Walter Camp, Laura E. Richards, Palmer Cox, Edith Thomas and other writers famous with its readers. The illustrations are superb. Century Company, New York. Price, $3.

—The MISSIONARY REVIEW OF THE WORLD, for October, opens with a scathing article on Cardinal Lavigerie and his Anti-Slavery Crusade by Rev. J. C. Braeq. Dr. Ellinwood follows with a graphic sketch of a Foreign Missionary of Old Testament Times. Prof. Hulbert, of Seoul, gives a fascinating and thrillingly interesting story of the introduction of Christianity into Korea by Roman Catholic missionaries, many of whom suffered martyrdom for the faith. Undenominational Mission Work is a timely and able presentation of that subject, by Rev. James F. Riggs. The Prayer for Laborers, by Dr. Pierson, will touch many a heart and ought to evoke much earnest prayer. Dr. Laurie presents cogent reasons to show that the Results of Modern Missions will be permanent. That veteran African missionary, Lewis Grout, contributes a valuable article on Mahdism and Missions in the Soudan. In addition to all this there is no little correspondence, many striking editorials; also nine pages of General Missionary Intelligence and the latest news from all lands. It is a fresh and grand number, and proves that the cause of missions is alive and progressing the world over. It is an inspiration to those who are watching and praying for the coming of the kingdom. Published by Funk & Wagnalls, 18 and 20 Astor Place, New York. $2 per year; in clubs of ten, $1 50. Specimen numbers, 20 cents.

Sunday-School Lesson.

LESSON III.—October 19.

THE SPIRIT OF TRUE SERVICE.

Luke xxii, 24-37.

GOLDEN TEXT.—Let this mind be in you, which was also in Christ Jesus.—Phil. ii, 5.

TIME AND PLACE.—Same as last lesson.

24. There was also a strife—This was when they first took their seats at the table. Who was the greatest? Was it Peter, to whom had been promised the keys of the kingdom; or John, who reclined on the Master's bosom; or Andrew, who had been first called? Even the disciples who were in the second group of the twelve might have cherished the hope that those who had been rebuked for their ambition or their want of faith had left places vacant to which they might now hopefully aspire.

25. The kings of the Gentiles—No words of reproof could more strongly point the contrast between the true and the false views of the Messiah's kingdom. The popular Jewish expectations, shared by the disciples, were really heathen in their character, substituting might for right, and ambition for the true greatness of service. Exercise lordship—Rulers are a necessity in all human society. But every true ruler, whether in Church or State, is a true and faithful servant, both of God and of the people he rules. Are called benefactors—Euergetai—a name often inscribed on coins. How worthless and hollow the title was the disciples knew from the instances of Ptolemy Energetes and other Syrian tyrants. There is apparently an emphasis on "are called" as contrasted with "let him become," in the next verse. The world gave the title of "benefactor" to those who were great in power only. In Christ's kingdom true greatness was to be attained by benefiting others in the humblest services.

26. Let him be—Rather, let him become—let him show himself to be in reality.

27. I am among you as he that serveth—The true Energetes is the humbler brother, not the subtle tyrant.

28. Ye are they which have continued with me in my temptations—We trace a kind of loving tenderness in this recognition of faithfulness following upon the words of rebuke.

29. Not enough can we here, in the ante-chamber of the Passion, admire the sublime, entirely unique self-consciousness of our Lord. While he certainly knows that he is at the very point of being reckoned with the transgressors, he yet claims for his disciples no less rank than that which earthly potentates and kings possess.

30. Sit on thrones—Our Lord here perhaps designedly omitted the word twelve. Matt. xix, 28; Rev. iii, 21. The repetition of the promise at the moment when apparent failure was close at hand is significant as carrying the words into a higher region of symbolic meaning. Not on any thrones of earth were those disciples to sit, any more than the Master was to sit on the throne of his father David in an earthly Jerusalem. Twelve tribes—The type of the church of God. This passage fully shows that the apostles were twelve in special reference to the twelve tribes.

31. Or, Simon, Simon, behold Satan obtained you (plural) that he might sift you as wheat; but I (emphatic) prayed for thee (singular) that thy faith fail not, and thou, when thou hast turned (that is, to God) confirm brethren. While thou and the others are contending for supremacy, Satan is endeavoring to destroy you all: but I have prayed for thee, as being the most in danger. Sift you—There is a latent encouragement in the very word chosen. They were "to be sifted as wheat." The good grain was there. They were not altogether as the chaff. Satan, too, has his winnowing-fan, that he may get his chaff. Judas has been already winnowed away from the apostolic band, and now Satan demands Peter.

32. But I—But for whom had the Lord prayed? This time especially for Peter! The prayer was answered, and the words that follow assume the answer as certain. In one sense "faith" did "fail" when the disciple denied his Lord; but repentance came after it, and a new power was gained through that weakness to make others strong. We may notice here, that our Lord speaks of the total failure of even an apostle's faith as possible. When thou art converted, strengthen thy brethren—The very word for "strengthen" sank into his heart, and is repeated in his epistle. "Converted" has not here its technical meaning: but "when thou hast turned again."

33. Lord, I am ready to go with thee.—There is something like a latent tone of indignation as well as devotion. The disciple half resented the thought that a special prayer should be necessary for him. Here, again, the Greek order of the words is more emphatic than the English, "With thee am I ready."

34. I tell thee, Peter—The only occasion on which Jesus is recorded to have used to him the name he gave. It is used to remind him of his strength as well as his weakness. Thou shalt thrice deny—The agreement of all four evangelists places the fact of the prediction beyond a shadow of doubt, and the prevision which it implies is obviously more than a general insight into the stability of the disciple's character, and involves a power superhuman.

35. In this paragraph our Lord shows his apostles how his departure will leave them very much to their own resources. During his stay on earth his divine care had equipped and guarded them in the travel and the battle. But now they must set up on their own account, and provide their own resources.

36. But now—This was an intimation of their totally changed relation to the world. There was no spontaneous hospitality, no peaceful acceptance, no honored security to be looked for now. He that hath a purse, let him take it—The word for "purse" is the same as in chap. x, 4. The "scrip," or "wallet," had been named in Matt. x, 10. If the words had stopped short of the sword, we could have received their literal meaning without difficulty. They would have seemed to counsel the prudence which provides for want, instead of a simple trust, as before. In the providence of God, and so could have sanctioned all equitable forms of church organization and endowment. The mention of the "sword," however, introduces a new element of thought. Our Lord's words to Peter (Matt. xvi, 52) show that the disciples were not meant to use it in his defense. It is not likely that he would teach them to use it in their own, as they preached the gospel of the kingdom. True teachers felt afterward that the weapons of their warfare were not carnal. (II. Cor. x, 4) What follows supplies a probable explanation. The Master knew that two of the disciples (Peter and another) had brought swords with them, and with that acceptance of the thoughts of others which we have so often traced, he sadly, and yet, as it were, with the gentle sympathy with which a man speaks to those who are children in age or character, conveyed his warnings in the form which met their fears and hopes.

37. And he was reckoned among the transgressors—Literally, the lawless ones, or, breakers of the law. The distinct reference to the words of Isa. liii, 12, is remarkable as showing that the picture of the righteous sufferer in that chapter had all along been present, if we may so speak, to our Lord's thoughts as that which he had himself to realize. It was, as it were, a hint given to the disciples before the Passion that they might learn, when it came, that it was part of the divine purpose that the Christ should so suffer—not singled out for the honor of a martyr's death, but hurried as malefactor, with other malefactors, to the death of the rebel or the robber.

Solomon says: "If thou faint in the day of adversity, thy strength is small." The marginal rendering makes the latter part of the sentence read: "Thy strength is narrow." Some people appear to have a surplus of strength when the sun of prosperity is smiling upon them. How courageous they are then! What large projects they propose to engage in! And they really do display a good deal of a certain kind of strength in certain ways. If you had never seen them under any adverse condition, you would quickly believe that they were mighty strong people. But wait till the besom of adversity brushes them off their feet. See how flat and flimsy they lie! Hear their sobs of despair and their jeremiads of woe and worry. How "narrow" is their strength, then. But look at the Christian, who, when the winds of adversity sweep over him, stands grandly erect in the power of heroic manhood! Do you see any traces of "fainting" in him? No! His face is unblanched amid the commotions of financial reverses, or the disturbances of domestic relations. He has his sorrows. He is not insensible to the play of adverse currents as they sweep about his path-way. But he is not mastered by these things. He sees them, but not to fear them. His vision is fast fixed on God, and his heart is anchored to the strength of Eternal Omnipotence. Adversity not only does not leave him weak, but stronger than when it swept its swift gale over him. It has helped him to become an "oak of Bashan." He meets the next storm of adversity with greater composure and courage than he did the last one. The fibres of his being grow tougher and more compact. He makes more out of adversity than thousands of others do out of prosperity. It is a choice harvest time with him. It is his best opportunity to get golden nuggets of experience, which make capital for glory. He acquires the art of making adversity yield him eternal compensations. Let us drive on. Don't stop for the storm?—Zion's Herald.

Ripeness in Character.

One mark is beauty. Ripe fruit has its own perfect beauty. As the fruit ripens the sun tints it with surpassing loveliness, and the colors deepen till the beauty of the fruit is equal to the beauty of the blossom, and in some respects superior. There is in ripe Christians the beauty of realized sanctification, which the Word of God knows by the name of "beauty of holiness."

Another mark of ripe fruit is tenderness. The young, green fruit is hard and stone-like. The mature Christian is noted for tenderness of spirit.

Another mark of ripeness is sweetness. The unripe fruit is sour. As we grow in grace we are sure to grow in charity, sympathy and love. We shall, as we ripen in grace, have greater sweetness toward our fellow-Christians. Bitter-spirited Christians may know a great deal, but they are immature.

Those who are quick to censure may be very acute in judgment, but they are as yet immature in heart. I know we who are young beginners in grace think ourselves qualified to reform the whole Christian church. We drag her before us and condemn her straightway; but when our virtues become more mature I trust we shall not be more tolerant of evil, but we shall be more tolerant of infirmity, more hopeful for the people of God, and certainly less arrogant in our criticisms.

Another and a very sure mark of ripeness is a loose hold of earth. Ripe fruit easily parts from the bough.—The Rev. C. H. Spurgeon.

WORK NOW.—Young man, do not leave it to a future day, but do it now. Man of middle age, you have a vivid sense of the rapidity with which your years have gone; but they will go just as rapidly in the future as in the past. Man of old age, you have to make haste—you have no time to lose.

The ancient law said concerning the sale of an estate, "According to the number of years thou shalt diminish the price." The nearer they were to the jubilee year, the cheaper they were to sell the land. So, the nearer you come to the end of your days, you ought to hold earthly things more loosely, and prize heavenly things more highly. When your business is drawing to a close, you hasten to conclude your work, dispatching sometimes in an hour more than all that went the day before.

When Napoleon went on the field of Marengo, it was late in the afternoon, and he saw that the battle was really lost; but, looking at the western sun, he said, "There is just time to recover the day!" and giving out his orders with rapid and characteristic energy, he turned defeat into victory. So, although your sun is near to setting, there is time to recover the day. Avail yourself of the eventide, lest your life end in eternal failure.—Dr. W. M. Taylor.

MAKE A GOOD JOB OF ME.—In the War Cry there is a picture of a man kneeling at a table, and praying, "Lord, make a good job of me." The words are rough enough, but the meaning is in many respects admirable. The poor man feels that he is a failure, and that he needs new making. His feeling is that none but the Lord can accomplish the necessary renewal. His fear is lest he should not have the full work wrought upon him, and that his conversion should not be thorough and complete. He has no need to fear that the Lord would not operate effectively, for the great Worker never leaves his work half done. Still, the fear of being but partly sanctified shows his earnestness and his desire to be truly and fully converted from the error of his ways.

There are some professors who have need to offer a similar petition, for as yet they are no great credit to their religion. Lifeless, questionable religion is poor stuff. Oh, that the Lord would make a good job of some of our church members!—C. H. Spurgeon.

A WAY TO SETTLE SCANDAL.—Dr. M. D. Hodge tells of two Christian men who "fell out." One heard that the other was talking against him, and he went to him, and said: "Will you be kind enough to tell me my faults to my face, that I may profit by your Christian candor and try to get rid of them?" "Yes, sir," replied the other, "I will do it." They went aside, and the former said: "Before you commence telling what you think wrong in me, will you please bow down with me and pray over it, that my eyes may be opened to see my faults as you will tell them? You lead me in the prayer." It was done, and when the prayer was over the man who had sought the interview, said: "Now proceed with what you have to complain of in me." But the other replied: "After praying over it, it looks so little that it is not worth talking about. The truth is, I feel now that in going around talking against you I have been serving the devil myself, and have need that you pray for me, and forgive me the wrong I have done you."—Exchange.

The Clergy of America take kindly to Life Insurance, and have been its firmest champions. They fight for it and thoroughly believe in it. There are many splendid financiers in the Church; that they are intelligent and thoughtful for their future goes without saying. All denominations seek the protection of Life Insurance, and are careful to select the company offering the greatest security and the most advantageous terms to policy-holders.

The Episcopal Diocese, of New York, has an Insurance Fund for all of its members, and the Mutual Life, which is the largest and strongest company in the world, with over $122,000,000 assets, has been officially selected by that body to issue all the insurance to these worthy people.

A Southern Department of this Company has been opened in New Orleans under the management of Mr. T. H. Bowles, with offices in Louisiana National Bank Building.

IF ye then be risen with Christ, seek those things which are above, where Christ sitteth on the right hand of God.—Colossians iii 1.

PUBLIC SAFETY DEMANDS

That only honest and reliable medicines should be placed upon the market. It cannot, therefore, be stated too emphatically, nor repeated too often, that all who are in need of a genuine Blood-purifier should be sure and ask for

Ayer's

Sarsaparilla. Your life, or that of some one near and dear to you, may depend on the use of this well-approved remedy in preference to any other preparation of similar name. It is compounded of Honduras sarsaparilla (the variety most rich in curative properties), stillingia, mandrake, yellow dock, and the iodides. The process of manufacture is original, skilful, scrupulously clean, and such as to secure the very best medicinal qualities of each ingredient. This medicine is not boiled nor heated, and is, therefore, not a decoction; but it is a compound extract, obtained by a method exclusively our own, of the best and most powerful alteratives, tonics, and diuretics known to pharmacy. For the last forty years, Ayer's has been the standard blood-purifier of the world—no other approaching it in popular confidence or universal demand. Its formula is approved by the leading physicians and druggists. Being pure and highly concentrated, it is the most economical of any possible blood medicine. Every purchaser of Sarsaparilla should insist upon having this preparation and see that each bottle bears the well-known name of

J. C. Ayer & Co., Lowell, Mass.

In every quarter of the globe Ayer's Sarsaparilla is proved to be the best remedy for all diseases of the blood. Lowell druggists unite in testifying to the superior excellence of this medicine and to its great popularity in the city of its manufacture.

THURSDAY, OCTOBER 9, 1890.

The annual meeting of the Publishing Committee of this paper will be held in this office, October 29, 1890.

The numerous friends of the editor and his family will sympathize with them in the death of their daughter, Clara Belle. She died October 3, aged sixteen years and eight months. For nearly nine years she had suffered with epilepsy; but without a struggle, as one falling to sleep, the long and weary sufferer escaped to that blessed realm, "where the inhabitant never says, I am sick." We have hope in her death and comfort in our sorrow.

Abiding in Christ.

This is a phrase whose meaning discloses the closest relationship. Our Savior illustrates its meaning by the vine and its branches. Speaking to his disciples, he said: "I am the vine, ye are the branches." He said again: "Abide in me and I in you." In his prayer to the Father, he said: "I in them and thou in me." Paul's language on the same point is equally simple and clear. He said: "Christ in you;" "I knew a man in Christ;" "who were in Christ." Language can not convey a clearer idea of intimacy than these words convey. Take the illustration of the vine and its branches. The branch is joined to the vine in such a connection as makes the life of the vine the life of the branch. It is the same life for both, and it is preserved as long as the connection is preserved.

So with Christ and the Christian. The life of the Christian is not different from the life of Christ. It is the same life. Paul says: "I am crucified with Christ: nevertheless I live; yet not I, but Christ liveth in me: and the life which I now live in the flesh I live by the faith of the Son of God." This life of Christ in the Christian is sometimes spoken of in a metaphor. When John says: "His blood cleanseth from all sin," it means that the indwelling life of Christ cleanses from sin. So we see the highest expression of Christian life is conditioned upon maintaining the connection with Christ which insures the inflowing of his life into ours.

The fruit of the branch also depends upon the life which the branch receives from the vine. Sever the connection, and the life withers and the fruit will not appear. Christians bear fruit only as they abide in Christ and have his life permeating their spiritual natures. "As the branch can not bear fruit of itself except it abide in the vine; no more can ye except ye abide in me." "He that abideth in me and I in him bringeth forth much fruit." Here the condition of fruit-bearing, we are told, is dependent upon abiding in Christ. Christian living and Christian fruit-bearing come from the same source—the indwelling life of Christ. Nothing, then, can be so important to the Christian as abiding in Christ, and hence no experience should be more sedulously cherished and more vigilantly guarded than the experience of which Paul speaks when he says: "Nevertheless I live; yet not I, but Christ liveth in me."

How, then, is this important matter accomplished? A man gets "in Christ" and Christ gets "in him," when he exercises that act of perfect trust which receives Christ as a present Savior from sin. The Savior honors that act of trust by "shedding abroad the love of God in the heart by the Holy Ghost," by which act of grace the man is regenerated and brought into Christ, and at the same time Christ's life flows into him and quickens and purifies every part of his spiritual nature. "Now are ye clean through the Word which I have spoken unto you." From that time the clear duty is to "abide in Christ" in order to fruit-bearing. How this is done the Savior tells in very simple words: "If ye keep my commandments, ye shall abide in my love." Obedience, then, is the condition of abiding in Christ. And the Savior imposes here no condition that he himself has not assumed, for he adds, "Even as I have kept my Father's commandments and abide in his love." Christ and his disciple occupy the same attitude to the law. He subjected himself to the same condition of obedience that he imposes upon his disciples. So, then, the plain truth of the matter is, that abiding in Christ is maintained only by obeying his commandments. Every man's responsibility attaches right at this point, and he is held to it by a chain which nothing can break. However he may reason about theology and speculate about divine things and make loud professions of morality, such things can not relieve him of obedience to the law of God. When the "man in Christ" obeys his Lord his abiding is assured. No man who obeys will ever lose his religion. He can not backslide, for he fulfils the only condition of stability. Peter says: "If ye do these things, ye shall never fall." This obedience is the only test of love, according to the Savior's teaching. "He that keepeth my commandments is he that loveth me." "If a man love me, he will keep my words." And it is only in obedience that the true nature of faith is revealed. The depth of Abraham's faith was not disclosed until he had placed his son upon the altar and held the knife uplifted to slay him at the command of God. The heroism of faith can be revealed only by obedience.

The first lesson of the catechism is that our chief duty is "to glorify God." The Savior says: "Herein is my Father glorified, that ye bear much fruit." Then he says: "He that abideth in me and I in him, the same bringeth forth much fruit." Then he says: "If ye keep my commandments, ye shall abide in my love." Here is a chain of facts whose links can not be disconnected. We glorify God by bearing fruit; we bear fruit by abiding in Christ; we abide in Christ by keeping his commandments. So the latest teaching of the Savior is but a reiterated expansion of the teaching of the inspired man of old, who said: "Fear God and keep his commandments, for this is the whole duty of man;" and it is "the conclusion of the whole matter."

Christian reader, are you obeying in order that you may abide in Christ, so as to bear fruit to the glory of God?

Sympathy.

Our religion is a religion of sympathy. It is founded in sympathy. Its strongest bond is sympathy. God's sympathy for man in his ruin is the foundation of that love which hath wrought redemption out of that ruin. Man's sympathy for man is an expression of love akin to the divine love. One of the most beautiful precepts of the New Testament, and one which accords with the natural instincts of the soul, is: "Rejoice with them that do rejoice and weep with them that weep." The practice of this beautiful teaching is one of the most refreshing experiences of this sorrowful world. It exhibits a heart that understands and apppreciates the situation, and the circumstances that call it forth. Sympathetic people are sure of the love of others. Such people walk into the sacred chambers of the heart, and by their words and manner lift away its burdens and soften its sorrows and calm its tumult and ease its pain, and the grateful heart responds in silent, it may be, tearful, thankfulness for such touching and tender manifestations in its seasons of woe. The sacred Scriptures never bring Christ so near to the soul as when they describe him as "touched with a feeling of our infirmities." And so a man never gets nearer to his fellow-man than when he exhibits toward him a genuine sympathy. This is a key that will unlock any human heart.

During the last few days the editor and his family have had many exhibitions of this beautiful virtue from their friends. The warm handgrasp, the tender word, the sympathetic look, in this, our time of sorrow, all have been appreciated and have made us feel that, after all, heaven can not be very far away. These expressions of sympathy have lightened our sorrow and brightened our hope and given us new confidence in Christian friendship. And while we mourn for our dead, we thank God for friends like the blessed Savior—friends touched with a feeling akin to that of our own sad hearts.

Millsaps College Day.

By appointment of Bishop Galloway, next Sunday, October 12, is to be observed throughout Mississippi as Millsaps College Day. The pastors everywhere have been called upon to make the day prominent by preaching on the subject of Christian education, giving information to their audiences on the subject of Methodist colleges, repeating the history of the inception and progress and promise of Millsaps College, and then taking a collection for its endowment fund. The children have not been forgotten in this program; Sunday-school superintendents and teachers are expected to bring the subject prominently before their schools, and also to take a collection. This is a grand move, and the preachers can make it a grand success. The two hundred and sixty charges in the Mississippi Conferences have possibilities which such an occasion ought to bring right to the front. The responsibility is on the preachers, and Mississippi "expects every man to do his duty." We are looking for glorious results! Send us postal cards immediately as to the results.

What, How, When, Why Write?

BY J. B. A. AIRENS, D. D.

About a year ago Dr. E. E. Hoss, now editor of the Nashville Christian Advocate, remarked, in an epistle to the Arkansas Methodist, that most of the writing to our church papers was tantamount to love's labor lost. The subject treated, of but momentary importance; the news communicated, of but local interest; self-complacency paramount. "True," said I, with a sigh, and delayed not in taking an inventory of the product of my pen. The answer to the question of our superscription was the outcome of this procedure.

1. What write? Some writers have no thought, at least, none to express, unless it be loveless criticism of facts and sentiments set forth by others. No impellant to literary action except pugnacity. When one dog begins to bark, soon all the curs of the village are clamorous with their yelps. Have found St. Paul's injunction (Phil. iv, 8) a prolific source of profitable themes for discussion: "Whatsoever things are true, honest, just, pure, lovely, of good report; if there be any virtue, if there be any praise, think of these things." It requires no wisdom to detect errors, nor goodness, truculently to expose them. Have something to say, regardless of what others said. Only this: Religious newspapers are not so much designed for edification as for information.

2. How write? There are public speakers who change their voice as soon as they begin to address the people. Sombre, gloomily hollow, resound their remarks, as if clods of earth at burial are falling on the coffin-lid. Experienced hearers turn away from such odious affectation. As in speaking, so in writing; we should be natural. Perusing the writings of some, the observant reader is painfully impressed with the idea that the writers are moving on stilts. There is alarm of impending collapse. But, though naturalness is important, only the best of English ought to be good enough for our use. A man whose vocabulary is commonplace and threadbare can not be opulent in thought. While the employment of technicalities in ordinary parlance is an abomination, the use of the slum's vernacular is no less loathsome. Having something to say, say it impressively, say it as briefly as possible. The best writers are not those who elaborately express their thoughts, but who simply suggest them. Avoid windy, wordy wastes of prolix phraseology. Furnish your sugar in large lumps; the readers find pleasure in crushing the same.

3. When write? After partaking a good cup of coffee, after smoking a good cigar, when you feel right well, when afflicted with ennui, thus the question is practically answered very frequently. I hold that all literary men, and all preachers and teachers should be such, ought to habituate themselves daily to write not less than two hours. It is only by writing, that the matter read is intellectually assimilated and digested. If, then, in our writings there is a thought, or a chain of thought, original, transparent, suggestive, rewrite, condense and copy it. Lay product away a few days. Now peruse very critically, eliminate, improve, copy. If not deemed fit for the flames, mail it, accompanied by a polite note, to the editor.

4. Why write? It is only by writing that we acquire a style of our own. A friend justly deemed it a great compliment when told by an erudite brother, that it was useless for him (my friend) to hide himself by employing a nom de plume for signature to his communications. The style bore witness to the identity of the writer. Some writers, reading Watson, are Watsonian in their style; others, reading Shakespear, are Shakspearean. Writing only secures individual style. But the chief object in writing should be to do good. I know of an infallible rule by which to determine the adaptability of our literary efforts for publication. When communication complete, kneel down and pray fervently that God would bless your utterances for the benefit of your readers. If during this prayer you should have misgivings as to the suitableness of certain remarks, expunge said remarks without delay.

Privileges and duties are sometimes not properly distinguished from one another. In regard to growth in religion, this is often the case. To grow in grace is too often, and by too many Christians, looked upon as a privilege. We would not so speak. Growth in grace is not a question of privilege at all. It is one of the plainest of duties. The Christian is under obligation to grow, and he is responsible for not growing. The question is, "Will you grow, or will you take the responsibility of failing in duty?"

Letter from Little Rock.

A recent visit to Searcy, to take part in the opening exercises of Galloway Female College, impressed me with the value of a good school to a community. The elevating influences of this college and of Searcy Male College are to be seen on every side, and those who know the past history of the town, say that the changed condition of things may well excite comment and interest. Saloons have been banished, a drunken man on the streets is an unheard-of occurrence. Many new houses have been built, improvements are going up in every direction, real estate has doubled and trebled in value, the population has largely increased, and the increase has been from the most desirable class of people, and the town has an air of thrift and prosperity which commends it to every visitor. Undoubtedly a good school is a good thing. It sets the tune at the right pitch, and many other good things follow as a natural consequence. Any town may well afford to pay a hundred thousand dollars to have a good college located in it. Let him that runneth read, especially if it be a community bidding for Millsaps College.

As you have seen, Galloway College opened finely with a hundred boarders and about a hundred and fifty day pupils. President Babcock is the right man in the right place, and has an admirable corps of assistants. I know no institution in the South which has the promise of a more brilliant future.

Hendrix College is reported to have opened fairly well last week. The corner-stone of the new building is to be laid by Bishop Hendrix on the first proximo. Our male educational matters are somewhat complicated here in Arkansas, and there will probably be several candidates bidding this fall for Conference endorsement.

A few days of last week were very pleasantly spent at Hot Springs, the great sanitarium of the South. To be in Arkansas and never to have visited Hot Springs is like missing St Mark's at Venice. Well, beyond question, it is a wonderful place, and well worth a visit. There are seventy-one of these springs issuing forth from the western slope of the Hot Springs Mountain (a spur of the Ozark Mountain) at an elevation of from 700 to 800 feet above the level of the sea. Most of them are from 50 to 75 feet above the level of the valley, and a number of them are now covered over, the water being conducted into large air-tight tanks, from whence it is carried by iron pipes into the various bath-houses. As is known, the entire mountain from whence the springs issue is a United States reservation, and the whole is under the control of the government.

The temperature of the water ranges from 93 to 157 degrees Fahrenheit, and the aggregate discharge of all the springs is 335 gallons every minute, or 482,400 gallons every day. If these waters were all concentrated, they would supply 19,296 persons daily, allowing twenty-five gallons for each individual.

The waters are thoroughly impregnated with free carbonic acid and contain from eight to ten grains of mineral constituents to the gallon.

Various theories have been adduced as to the cause of the high temperature of the water, but none of them are very satisfactory. Prof. David D. Owen, late State Geologist, thinks it is undoubtedly due to the internal heat of the earth. He says in his report: "I do not mean to say that the waters come in actual contact with fire, but rather that the waters are completely permeated with highly-heated vapors and gases which emanate from sources deeper-seated than the water itself. The whole geological structure of the country and that of the Hot Springs Ridge in particular, from which the water issues, justifies the assumption."

The city of Hot Springs is a long, straggling town of eight or ten thousand inhabitants, built in a narrow valley, the houses trying to climb the sides of the mountain in all directions. It is a city of hotels and boarding-houses; there being no less than five hundred, it is said, where you can get all kinds of accommodations, from the palatial Eastman, at ten dollars per diem, to furnished apartments and restaurants, at a few dollars per week.

Southern Methodism is well represented in Hot Springs by three churches—Central Church being a handsome new edifice, well located, with a membership of about three hundred, of which the Rev. C. C. Godden is the popular and efficient pastor. Two smaller churches, one in the northern, and the other in the southern portion of the city, are prosperous and growing under the charge of the Rev. W. R. Harrison.

The camp meeting and revival season is on us here in Arkansas, and we hear good news from all parts of the State. The preachers are diligently at work, and will be prepared to bring up good reports at Conference. Bros. Moore and Steele have both been holding meetings with good results at their respective charges in this city—Winfield Memorial and Asbury Churches—and I expect to begin at First Church next week, where we have already had ninety-three additions this year at the regular services, and we hope for a large ingathering during these special services.

The many friends of Dr. Andrew Hunter will be glad to learn that he has almost entirely recovered from his late stroke of paralysis, and that he was able to preach twice recently. If Dr. Hunter is spared until the next General Conference, he will have been a member of every General Conference for fifty years; except, perhaps, one—a record which, so far as I know, is unprecedented in the history of the church.

The farmers are complaining bitterly that the continued rains are ruining the cotton; but farmers always will complain, and I expect it will all come out right.

M. B. CHAPMAN.

Notes.

Holston Methodist:

A preacher, now and then, complains of a lack of interest in his charge. How can it be otherwise when they do not read the church papers, and their pastor rather encouraged their ignorance by running down his own organ? Who is to blame?

The Methodist General Conference of Canada debated the motion to reduce the price of their paper, The Guardian, from $2 to $1 50 per annum. When it was shown that such a reduction would involve a loss of $6,000 annually, and that it would require 9,000 new subscribers to make good that loss, the Conference very properly voted down the motion.

Great occasions develop great men! Nobody ever dreamed that there were so many able constitutional lawyers at the head of the Louisiana press. But here they are, by the score, brought to the front by the passage of the Anti-Lottery Postal law. We always knew that Louisiana was prolific; but this law has, so to speak, lifted away the horizon of our vision, and the army of constitutional lawyers that have been born in a week on her soil dazzles the sight and dazes the thought. But "the Lottery advertisement was a small matter, anyhow."

Somehow mistakes will be made. When we get to be infallible, then we suppose they will, at least, be fewer. Last week we gave some extracts from "Fun and Finance," a little book by Rev. Newton Wray, of Lenox, Mass., and the printers made Miss. out of Mass. We suppose our Mississippi friends, especially those in the Convention, will object to it; but all we can do is to apologize, and be more careful in the future. At any rate, all pastors and people who believe in raising church money from worldly people by worldly methods, should read this little book.

Personal and Otherwise.

It seems strange to us that Louisiana editors have so much to say about the unconstitutionality of the Anti-Lottery Postal law, and editors outside of Louisiana have so little to say on that side!

The great papers in other sections don't seem to think that the "liberty of the press" is abridged by that law. If they do, they keep very silent on the subject. The fact is our papers have been deprived of Morris pap, and hungry children and pigs will squeal.

It is going the rounds of the press that it took the United States Senate just four minutes to pass the Anti-Lottery bill.

Will our readers and writers bear in mind that we agree to publish only thirty-five lines of the obituary of one person, free of charge. All over that, unless accompanied by the money, is at the mercy of the waste-basket.

In the Canadian Methodist General Conference a motion to extend the pastoral term to four years was lost by a vote of 104 to 131.

Rev. John Pipes and wife have returned from their Missouri sojourn and are now in Grand Cane, La. The health of both is reported good.

Rev. John H. Scruggs, our pastor at Shreveport, La., has been transferred to the Southwest Missouri Conference and stationed at Springfield, Mo.

Rev. George C. Rankin, of Holston Conference, has been transferred to Southwest Missouri Conference, and stationed at Centenary Church, Kansas City.

On account of ill-health Dr. McCoy has resigned the editorship of the Alabama Christian Advocate, and Dr. James M. Mason, of the Alabama Conference, elected in his place.

Postal Card Reports.

—Rev. J. C. Ellis writes from Campbellsville, Miss.: "My heart was made sad. I can not express the sadness of myself and others when I learned of the death of Bro. W. T. McCraw. Bro. McCraw was one of the best men in this neighborhood and a pillar of Bethel Church. Words can not express the loss of this man of God. I was in bed near all day yesterday, hardly able to do this writing. God has blessed us very much in all our meetings."

—Rev. T. S. West writes from Wesson, Miss.: "We concluded to have a little protracted meeting of our own. We asked the Lord to help us, and we had good help. Services were held at 7:30 P. M. in our church for one week—from Sunday to Sunday. During the time twenty-seven names were added to the roll. Our people seemed to enjoy the services much. One hundred and eighteen names enrolled this year, and thirty infants baptized."

—Rev. R. A. Sibley writes from Trenton, Miss.: "We have held all but one of our protracted meetings on Raleigh circuit, Mississippi Conference. Had good meetings all around; 40 additions, 35 or 40 conversions up to date; membership wonderfully quickened; many new family altars erected; new workers in the vineyard of the Lord; some young men now working in the church for the first time; some additional prayer meetings organized. 'Praise God, from whom all blessings flow.' Many thanks to ministerial and lay brethren for efficient services rendered."

—Rev. Wm. Hoover writes: "Meeting at Adams, Brookhaven circuit, began September 20 and closed September 26. Bro. Havers and Willie T. Woodward were with us. Eight accessions; baptized three adults and five children. The meeting increased in interest. Bro. Havers, an old minister, said he never witnessed such an overwhelming display of the power of God. The Baptist friends rendered efficient help by their presence; left their cotton fields white to 'come up to the help of the Lord.' These are the right sort of Christians. This is a live church; never behind in any work; pays all assessments without a word; neither Sunday-school or prayer meetings go into winter-quarters."

—Rev. Wiley Brown, East Baton Rouge, reports: "I closed a meeting of five days' duration, on September 3, at a school-house on middle ground, between East Baton Rouge and East Feliciana circuits, and where I had been preaching for some time past, which resulted in a glorious revival; twenty accessions and ten conversions. The Lord was with us in power from the first day. Bro. Whittington was with us the second day, and did honor to himself in services rendered, but had to leave. Bro. Norton, from East Baton Rouge circuit, came the third day, full of zeal for the Master, and remained with us, preaching practical, soul-stirring sermons to the close of the meeting. Bro. Haney (exhorter) and many lay brethren did valuable work. We have heard, since we came home, that Sister Roberson, one of the recent members, has died a triumphant death."

—Rev. W. M. Stevens, South Warren circuit, Mississippi Conference, writes: "We have held our protracted meetings with good results. Quite a number of accessions, and the church is left in a healthful and prosperous condition. I thank God for the success that has attended my labors this year, and am indebted to Dr. C. K. Marshall, Bros. N. B. Harmon, Jno. W. Crisler, R. J. Jones and Jno. A. Ellis, P. E., for valuable assistance. All assessments, I think, will be reported in full."

—Rev. J. Ritchey reports from Sardis, Miss.: "We have just closed the fourth quarterly meeting on Sardis station, North Mississippi Conference. We have repaired the church and parsonage during my pastorate at a cost of about six hundred dollars. Finances will be 'all full' at Conference. Spiritual interest good. My charge has subscribed between five and six hundred dollars to Millsaps College. The agitation of Christian education has been the cause of many being sent off to school. There are more than twelve gone from our town. Let the good work go on."

—Rev. R. M. Blocker, writing from Church Point, La., says: "Aided by the elder, Bro. Jno. A. Miller, and Bro. Blackshire and his wife and a few other good workers, we held a grand revival of wonderful power at this place. It closed to-day. Twenty-one accessions; about the same number of conversions; old difficulties settled; new family altars erected; the converts supplied with hymn books and Discipline, (also Bibles). Nearly all the converts pray in public and tell their experiences. The last pupil of Bro. Evans' Sunday-school converted, and several copies of the ADVOCATE engaged. Arrangements are being made to build a church. This is a missionary point."

—Rev. H. C. Morehead writes from Duck Hill, Miss.: "Having a circuit of four churches, I determined to begin my work for Millsaps College to-day. Bro. Newell, secretary of the Board of Trustees, kindly consented to assist in the services. He preached us a good sermon on Christian education, and then took the collection, amounting to $27 80. Well done for Duck Hill! This is the place where Bishop Galloway opened the canvass in the North Mississippi Conference, more than a year ago, and got more than $2,000 for this institution. How fitting that the same congregation should have the first opportunity, and embrace it so handsomely, to start Millsaps College Day."

—Rev. W. J. Porter writes as follows: "Our sixth protracted meeting for Farmerville circuit, Louisiana Conference, closed at Mount Nebo last Wednesday (September 24), with ten accessions, shouts of praise, and spiritual development. Bro. Staples, of the Vienna circuit, did most of the preaching, and partook of the spiritual feast. Our grandest success was at Pine Grove, four miles east of Farmerville, where, after five days' service, we closed with fifteen conversions, seventeen accessions, and a church organization of twenty members. Accessions on the circuit, twenty-seven, with ten other applicants to be received. For parsonage, in cash and subscription, five hundred dollars; ADVOCATE remembered, and two new subscribers herewith. Finances generally behind, but we hope by Conference to make a fair report."

Letter from Japan.

MR. EDITOR: Another year has passed, and our lives have been graciously preserved in the midst of much political trouble in the land, and surrounded by that much-dreaded disease, cholera, which is raging all over Japan, and carrying off by death thousands daily. In Osaka, twenty miles from Kobe, from two hundred to two hundred and fifty cases occur daily, and nearly half that number die each day. In Kobe and Hioga we have many cases daily among the natives; but up to this date none of the foreign residents have been attacked. The Lord has been merciful to us all. The members of our mission are all in good health and greatly encouraged in their work. The session of our annual meeting has just closed, Bishop Wilson presiding. The reports of the work the past year in all parts of the field were very encouraging, and we enter upon another year with renewed zeal and courage, for we believe the Lord is with us. The session of our annual meeting was one of the most pleasant I have ever experienced. The Conference was not formed, as the country is at present in a very disturbed state. The Bishop thought it best that we continue as a mission for a while longer. At the close of the session our hearts were made sad by the Bishop telling us that, in all probability, it would be the last time he would visit us. His presence in our midst has proved a blessing to us, and we shall all feel sad when he takes his final leave of us. We shall never forget his closing words to us, encouraging us to go forward as we had done, trusting in the Lord, who was more than all they who are against us, assuring us that multiplied thousands in the home-land were bearing us up daily before the throne of grace in earnest prayer to God.

While we remain a mission, I am still connected with the Mississippi Conference, and for this I feel thankful. I know that I have the prayers of all my brethren, and also the prayers of thousands whose trust is in the Lord. Pray for us, and may the blessing of God rest upon the work of his servants everywhere! is my earnest prayer.

Your brother in Christ,

J. W. LAMBUTH.

The King's Daughters

WRITTEN AND EDITED BY

MRS. MARGARET BOTTOME,

President of the Order.

A NEW DEPARTMENT IN

THE

LADIES' HOME JOURNAL

Entirely devoted to the best interests of the order of the "King's Daughters," and of striking interest to every "King's Daughter" in the land. It will be written and edited by Mrs. Margaret Bottome, the founder and President of the Order, who in this department, will give each month "talks" similar to those which she made famous last winter in the drawing-rooms of the best New York houses.

Is a department which is read every month by thousands of girls who buy the JOURNAL for this feature alone. Every point in a girl's life is here treated: what is best for her to wear; most becoming manners in society; behavior; all told in a chatty manner by one of the brightest writers in the land.

CONTENTS FOR THIS DEPARTMENT IN THE OCTOBER ISSUE:

HOW TO LEARN TO TALK WELL;
HOW TO BE PRETTY THIS FALL:
MANNERS WHEN AT CHURCH;
A MISTAKE YOU MAKE;
SAYING "GOOD MORNING;"
MY GIRLS' MOTHERS.

For One Dollar We will mail the Journal from now to January 1, 1892—that is, the balance of this year FREE, and a FULL YEAR from January 1st, 1891, to January 1st, 1892. Also, our handsome 40-page Premium Catalogue, illustrating a thousand articles, and including "Art Needlework Instructions," by Mrs. A. R. RAMSEY; also Kensington Art Designs, by JANE S. CLARK, of London.

N. B.—This offer must positively be mentioned when sending your subscription, or one year only will be given.

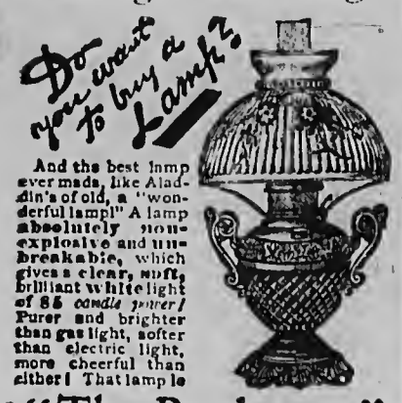
"Seeing is Believing."



And the best lamp ever made, like Aladdin's of old, a "wonderful lamp!" A lamp absolutely non-explosive and unbreakable, which gives a clear, soft, brilliant white light of 85 candle power! Purer and brighter than gas light, softer than electric light, more cheerful than either! That lamp is

"The Rochester."

"And with it there is no smoke, no smell, no broken chimneys, no flickering, no sweating, no climbing up of the flame, no "tantrums" nor annoyance of any kind, and it never needs trimming. Its founts (oil reservoirs) being tough rolled seamless brass, with central draft, it is absolutely unbreakable, and as safe as a tallow candle.

Only five years old, and over two million of these lamps in use. It must be a GOOD lamp to make such a telling success. Indeed it is, for lamps may come and lamps may go, but the "Rochester" shines on forever! We make over 8,000 artistic varieties,—Hanging and Table Lamps, Banquet, Study, Vase and Piano Lamps, every kind, in Bronze, Porcelain, Brass, Nickel and Black Wrought Iron.

Ask the lamp dealer for it. Look for the trade-mark stamp: "The Rochester." If he hasn't the genuine Rochester and the style you want, or if no lamp-store is near, send to us for free illustrated catalogue (and reduced price-list), and we will box and send you any lamp safely by express, right to your door.

Our Young People.

THE SONG OF THE WIND.

I've a great deal to do, a great deal to do!
Don't speak to me, children, I pray;
These little boys' hats must be blown off their heads,
And the little girls' bonnets away.

There are bushels of apples to gather to-day,
And O, there's no end to the nuts!
O'er many long roads I must travel away,
And many by-lanes and short cuts.

There are thousands of leaves lying lazily here
That needs must be whirled round and round!
A rickety house wants to see me, I know,
In the most distant part of the town.

There are signs to be creaked, and doors to be slammed,
Loose window-blinds, too, must be shaken!
When you know all the business I must do to-day,
You will see how much trouble I've taken.

I saw some ships leaving the harbor to-day,
So I'll e'en go and help them along,
And flap the white sails, and howl through the shrouds,
And join in the sailor-boys' song.

Then I'll mount to the clouds, and away they will sail
On their gorgeous wings through the bright sky;
I bow to no mandate save only to him
Who reigneth in glory on high.

—The Life Boat.

Talks to Boys and Girls.

BY MRS. CHAS. PELTON.

"THE NINES."

"The nines are so hard!" said Fred, running in from school the other day. "I missed on them. Is supper 'most ready? I'm so hungry. Say, mama, do you think you could help me learn them?"

"Yes, my dear, after the supper things are cleared away, I will help you; and supper is almost ready. Wash yourself, and set the chairs around the table. Are the girls close by?"

"Yes, there they are at the gate." And in came Daisy and Nellie and Ralph, too.

Bright young faces soon surrounded the well-spread board: and unspoiled appetites enjoyed the wholesome meal. "Mama's bread's the best in the world!" attests one eager voice, while others chat of the day's doings in school.

Soon, the meal over, the boys hasten to milk the cow, and bring in wood for the fire-place, while the girls with deft hands wash and wipe the dishes.

As I get out my mending basket, I say, "Daisy, we are going to have a black-board lesson to-night. Please get the chalk and write "The Nines" neatly on the black-board." (We have a black-board, one of the cloth kind that rolls up like a map, and it is very useful.)

"Oh, good, good!" cried Ralph and Nellie, "Mama's black-board lessons are always so interesting."

"But I don't know what she can find to tell us about 'the nines,'" said Fred.

"I mean to let you tell me some very interesting things," said I; "so put on your thinking caps, and be quiet."

By this time the black-board looked thus:

1x9= 9
2x9=18
3x9=27
4x9=36
5x9=45
6x9=54
7x9=63
8x9=72
9x9=81
10x9=90

"Now, all of you look at the board thoughtfully, and don't speak. Perhaps some of you will discover something curious. I will give you five minutes."

Before they were up I saw Fred had discovered something, and was aching to tell it, so when I gave the signal, he burst out with: "They count right straight down. Don't you see they do?" And he rose and showed Ralph, pointing to the tens column. "See, 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9!"

"And," said Daisy, "the units column counts backward." "So it does," exclaimed Fred. "See, 9, 8, 7, 6, 5, 4, 3, 2, 1," running his pointer down the line of figures. "I never noticed that before. I believe I sha'n't miss now. I always know 2x9=18, and 3x9 are 27, and 5x9=45, and 10x9=90, and some of the rest. Now, if a fellow doesn't know 4x9 all he has to do is to take 3x9 is 27, add 1 to the 2, and take 1 from the 7. There you have it, 36! Why is it, mother? What makes it count up and down so?"

"Well, you see, Fred, every time you add nine, you add 10-1, which is the same thing. You add one ten and subtract one unit."

"Oh, yes! So we do!" they chorused.

"And there is another curious fact that will help Fred more still. I wish I had known it when I was a girl. Don't you see the tens figure each time is one less than the number of times 9?" "So it is! Hurrah!" said the boys. "And also (here is more help still) don't you see the units figure plus the tens figure makes 9 every time?"

"Who can't say the 9's now?" cried Fred. "1 and 8 equals 9, 2 and 7 equals 9, 3 and 6 equals 9, 4 and 5 equals 9, 5 and 4 equals 9, 6 and 3 equals 9, 7 and 2 equals 9."

"Why didn't we see it all before? I'm going to tell all the boys at school in the morning."

"Must" and "Mustn't."

"A fellow can't have any fun," growled Tom. "It's just 'must' and 'mustn't' from morning till night. You must do this, you must learn that; or—you mustn't go there, you mustn't say that, and you mustn't do the other thing. At school, you're just tied right up to rules, and at home—well, a shake of mother's head means more than a dozen 'mustn'ts.' Seems a pity a boy can't have his own way half the time, and do something as he likes."

"Going to the city this morning, Tom?" asked Uncle Thed from the adjoining room.

"Why, of course," answered Tom, promptly.

"Going across the common?"

"Yes, sir; always do."

"I wish you'd notice those young trees they've been setting out the last year or two. There's something rather queer, it seems to me. Of course, the old trees will die sooner or later, and others will be needed, But—well, you just observe them rather carefully, so as to describe their appearance, etc."

"What about those trees, Tom?" asked Uncle Thed after tea, as they sat on the piazza.

"Why, they're all right; look a little cramped, to be sure, snipped short off on top, and tied up to poles, snug as you please, every identical twig of them; but that's as it should be, to make them ship-shape—don't you see? They can't grow crooked if they would. They'll make as handsome trees as ever you saw, one of these days. Haven't you noticed the trees in Mr. Benson's yard?—tall and scraggly and crooked, just because they were left to grow as they pleased. The city fathers now don't propose to run any risks"—

"But I wonder how the trees feel about the must and mustn't," remarked Uncle Thed, drily.

Exit Tom, wishing he had not said quite so much on the subject of trees—and boys.—Sunday Afternoon.

"IT ISN'T HARD AT ALL."—"I never can learn all that," sighed a little one. And it was really quite a long column. Just then her eyes rested upon an ant tugging along with a big burden. She forgot the lesson to look at the busy ant. What hard work it had to pull that dead beetle! It would pull and rest, pull and rest, but at last got home. The little lass took up her book and the spirit of the ant came to her. One pull at a time, one word at a time. She hung on to her lesson as the ant to its load. After a while she said: "I know it. It isn't hard at all."

NOW the God of peace, that brought again from the dead our Lord Jesus, that great shepherd of the sheep, through the blood of the everlasting covenant, make you perfect in every good work, to do his will, working in you that which is well-pleasing in his sight, through Jesus Christ; to whom be glory for ever and ever. Amen.—Hebrews xiii, 20, 21.

Household.

Economies.

An itinerant and his wife, who had, in the poverty that had characterized the itinerancy fifty years ago, brought up a large family, in their old age were in, to them, affluent circumstances. Instead of buying sugar and butter by the pound, muslin by the yard, and all supplies by the small quantity, they were able to buy by the large—a barrel of sugar, a tub of butter, a whole piece of muslin, and everything in like proportion. The good wife was astonished at the saving effected by this mode of purchase in comparison with that she had formerly practiced. She was emphatic in recommending to her poor sisters in the itinerancy to buy by the large. "Go without," she would say, "all you can and save up and buy by the large; it is the true economy. Because you have a barrel of sugar in the house you need not waste it or use it more freely than if you bought by the pound, and so of everything else. If you must go in debt, don't go in debt by the pound. You'll get deeper in than if you go in by the large."

An itinerant of our acquaintance, who always had small salaries, managed to save quite a sum for his old age by various economies. He always bought his year's supply of groceries at one time and of one wholesale dealer. He bought his clothing at wholesale prices. He bought his writing paper in large sheets, and had it cut with the least possible waste by a friend who was in the paper business. He bought his envelopes by the thousand. He had a horse and carriage and a garden. One of his friends, a thrifty farmer's wife, said he could get more off a piece of land than anyone she ever saw. But he fed his land well, and he thought out his sermons while cultivating his little crops of vegetables and fruit.

Small economies faithfully practiced save large sums of money. "A woman can throw out with a spoon more than a man can throw in with a shovel." Large fortunes are made by the littles. During the blizzard that overtook this city, the winter before last, the sale of compressed yeast at two cents a cake fell off in two days $120,000. Two-cent financial streams mount up to millions in value if they are only numerous enough.

If those in so-called narrow circumstances would cultivate the small economies, would save profits on small purchases by making large ones, would count the pennies and stop all the small wastes, they might get rich some day.—New York Christian Advocate.

An eminent English clergyman, in writing on "every-day religion," in a recent sermon, quotes Matthew Henry and comments on him as follows:

"'Eve's being made after Adam puts an honor upon that sex as the glory of man. If man is the head, she is the crown—the crown of the visible creation. The man was dust refined, but the woman dust double refined, one remove further from the earth. . . . She was not made out of his head to rule over him, nor out of his feet to be trampled on by him, but out of his side to be equal with him, under his arm to be protected, and near his heart to be beloved.' So wrote good Matthew Henry, whose wise and weighty comments upon the Scriptures custom can not stale. The charming parabolic form in which the writer of the book of Genesis recounted the story of woman's creation amply justifies the old commentator's claim for woman's unity with man. It is true that male and female are fundamentally different from each other in physical structure. From the first they are thus dissimilar; yet there is no inequality between them—the one is not superior to the other. God made humanity in the beginning in his own image, male and female. Humanity is not manhood, humanity is not womanhood; humanity is manhood and womanhood conjoined, standing together, inseparable the one from the other. The feminine nature is of God as well as the masculine. God is as clearly imaged by the qualities peculiar to the woman as he is by the qualities peculiar to the man."

Scientific.

Fire and Flame.

A very important distinction must be drawn between fire and flame; the latter is merely an incidental manifestation of the former. Burning charcoal simply glows and wastes away; there are no combustible gases formed, and the chemical reaction takes place only on the surface of the coals. With wood, oil, wax, tallow, etc., the heat produced by the oxidation sets free from the unconsumed portion a large quantity of hydrocarbon gases, which take fire and burn at a distance from the original burning body, exactly as the gas which we burn in our houses is driven off by heating the coal at the distant gas-works. If we burn a piece of magnesium, flame is apparently present, but it is only the incandescent particles of oxide as they fly off into the air at a white heat. A similar artificial flame may be made from charcoal itself by finely pulverizing it, throwing the dust into the air, and igniting it. Serious explosions have occurred by dust igniting in this manner, but such phenomena are not, strictly speaking, true flames, which are only produced by the combustion of gases.

A word should be said in reference to electric lights, which are simply masses of carbon heated to an excessively high temperature. There is no true fire or oxidation about them, but a transformation of electrical energy into heat and light. There is an oxidizing process at the foundation, however, and the heat of the oxidizing carbon in the furnaces under the steam boilers which furnish the power to drive the dynamo machines, is just as truly transferred through the wires to the distant electric lights, as the water from the pond or stream is transferred through the pipes to the dwellings of the city. In one case it is the transference of energy, in the other that of matter.

The knowledge of fire is a distinctive attribute of mankind. No ape, however intelligent, has been found but what regards it with terror, and no race of men—with, perhaps, one or two doubtful exceptions—but what enjoys its numerous benefits. It is hard to say how it was first brought to the knowledge of mankind. The Greeks considered it a direct gift from the gods; but, disregarding that belief, the lightning-stroke, the volcano, an accidental spark from the striking of a stone falling upon dried leaves, or even, as has been suggested, by a drop of gum exuding from a tree acting as a natural burning-glass—any or all of these causes may have introduced this useful but dangerous servant to mankind. Once discovered, the knowledge seems to have been carefully preserved, and the art of producing fire has advanced through the fire-sticks and drills of the savage, to the flint and steel and friction matches of later times, until in this modern age of electricity a touch of the finger is sufficient to produce an electric spark, which will instantly ignite the fires and gas-lights of the largest building, or, if desired, those of an entire city.—Popular Science News.

Electric Wires.

It is always best to avoid danger, if possible; therefore, there is one rule which ought to be taught in every school in the United States, and that is, Never lift a wire off the ground. This rule may prove more valuable than the rule of three.

A telegraph wire, no matter how many messages may be passing over it, is perfectly harmless, but an electric wire is always deadly. When you see a wire hanging from a pole or a house, or in any position, it may be a telegraph wire or an electric wire, so the safest plan is to let it lie. It may not be dangerous, but it is like a loaded gun—it may kill you.

If an electric wire lies across your path, and it becomes absolutely necessary to remove it, bear these points in mind: So long as the wire is on the ground it is harmless, no matter what pressure may be on it. The moment it leaves the ground it is dangerous. You can pull the slack with your hand or foot any distance, so long as the end touches the ground, but do not lift it. The instant you do, you become part of the electric circuit, and the current will run to the ground through your body.—New York Ledger.

WILKINS—J. COVERT WILKINS was born in Benton, Yazoo county, Miss., July 7, 1870 and died in Greenville, Miss., August 26, 1890.

Thus briefly do I chronicle the death of one, of such rare mentle endowments, and so gifted with every quality of mind and heart necessary to constitute a symmetrical character, that to know him, and call him "friend," was a rare privilege. It was with an indescribable thrill of sorrow and surprise that I heard of his sudden death, far away from that widowed mother, the light and joy of whose home he had been for "twenty beautiful years;" cut down in the morning of a life full of promise and rich in all the aspirations of a noble and ambitious young manhood. My memory recalls with distinctness and precision a period of two years, during which time, as his Sunday-school teacher, I had the rare satisfaction of guiding this singularly gifted young man in his search after truth—that truth which, I have reason to believe, made him wise unto salvation. In all my experience as a Sunday-school worker, I do not remember to have had a pupil so thoroughly painstaking and so eager in his search after the facts and doctrines of the Bible, or who always had such a strong mental grasp upon the lesson of the day. I can scarcely recall a Sunday when he was absent from his class, and his presence was a constant benediction to the other members of that class. The same was true in regard to our missionary and other meetings. In a word, whatsoever things were true, pure or of good report, always found in Covert an earnest advocate.

I have not seen him for nearly two years; but, as his former teacher and friend, and pastor's wife, I offer this tribute to departed worth. Another hand may write his memoir, but I lay one simple flower upon his new-made grave.

To that widowed mother, in whose home the light has suddenly gone out, no word of mine can bring comfort, neither can philosophy, nor stoicism, nor anything except sweet submission to One who does not willingly afflict the children of men.

MRS. REV. J. S. PARKER.

LEGGETT—PHILIP LEGGETT, son of Dr. W. W. and B. J. Leggett, was born in Copiah county, Miss., and died at his home in Hermanville, Miss., September 16, 1890, aged nineteen years seven months and eighteen days.

Philip joined the Methodist Church at Steel Chapel, under the ministry of Rev. W. W. Hurst, in the year 1888. He was loved and esteemed by all who knew him. Always dutiful, fondly affectionate to his parents, never in his life rendering disobedience, forgiving in disposition, industrious in his habits, upright in his life, and charitable in his disposition. He was agent and operator on the L., N. O. and T. railroad previous to and during two weeks of his illness. But, true to duty, he stood at his post until relief came, and, with his temperature registering 104, he reached home with tears of joy trickling down his cheeks. He would say over and anon, "I am so glad I am at home." He told us two days before his death that the good Lord had called for him, and that he was not afraid to die. A noble boy has gone to join a home circle in heaven. Sad, sad indeed it is to give up our boy, but we have a hope of a happy reunion where there will be no more parting.

FATHER AND MOTHER.

PARKER—JOSEPH WILLIS PARKER was born in Perry county, Miss., September 25, 1846; was happily married to Miss Catherine McCloud, June 27, 1867; professed religion and joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, at Harrisville, Simpson county, September, 1879, and lived a consistent member until the day of his death, which occurred July 21, 1890. Bro. Parker was a good man, a class leader, a thorough Methodist, and, as he lived well, so he died right.

His health began to decline in August, 1889, and his friends were apprehensive that his time was near at hand. He expressed a spirit of submission to the will of the Master. The writer visited him two weeks before his death. His general health was much improved. The church and religion were his theme. A few days later he was seized with congestion, which took him suddenly off. He said to his wife he had made his arrangements all right. Oh! how we miss him at the house of God! He always had a word of cheer for the pastor. When he could no longer speak he clasped his hands, raised his eyes heavenward, and passed away.

J. F. ROBINSON, P. C.

WOMACH—Mrs. CORA ANN WOMACH was born in Brookhaven, Miss., March 4, 1867. She was received into the church when twelve years old, and lived a consistent Christian until the day of her death, which occurred in Wesson, Miss., at the home of her foster-father, Mr. T. J. Dumas, August 9, 1890. She bore with patience a long wearisome illness, and passed away quietly in the triumphs of a living faith. W.

CANTY—WILLIAM J. CANTY was born in Sumpter county (then district), South Carolina, July 8, 1827, and died at his home in Scranton, Miss., August 28, 1890. He moved in boyhood with his father to North Alabama, where he grew into manhood, and on leaving there came to Jackson county, Miss., in which county he spent the remainder of his days. Bro Canty was twice married: first to Miss Rachel Wedgeworth, and some years after her death to Miss Nancy Young, who survives him. He was blessed with six children by his first marriage and seven by the last—ten of which number mourn his death.

It was in middle life when Bro. Canty united with the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in which church he lived a beautiful Christian life. He was to the Methodist Church at Scranton what Barbara Heck was to the Methodist Society in New York. He has been an officer in this church ever since its organization. Ill-health had kept him from church privileges for the last year. I have been struck with his oft-repeated expression in class meetings, "I am trying to do my duty." He left a margin for human frailties. Like Abraham, his character was built by doing his duty. It was not high, but solid. He was humble, but bold. One man who has known him long says, "I found him solid in business, politics and religion." Another says, "He was a man."

Bro. Canty's last words were, "I want to go." May God help us to appreciate such characters while living! GEO. H. THOMPSON.

WELSH—The community of Pearl River, La., and vicinity was shocked when, on the evening of August 12, the news was spread that the evening train on the New Orleans and Northeastern railroad had struck a cow with such force as to throw it against Bro. EDWARD WELSH, who was walking, with his mail bag upon his shoulder, along the path, seventy-five feet from the track. He was unconscious from this time until death released him on Friday, August 15. During this time he spoke but two words, once calling for water, and again crying, "Hallelujah!"

Bro. Welsh was born in Galway, Ireland, about the year 1840; brought to this country when quite young; reared by a widowed mother; on October 15, 1868, was married to Miss Emily Talley. He joined the Methodist Church during the pastorate of Rev. H. R. Singleton at Oak Grove Church. His life was one of deep piety. Modest, quiet and kind, his every-day walk was a standing rebuke to sin. Ever ready to do his Master's will, he was found at the post of duty, uplifting the fallen, encouraging the weak and improving the hardened sinner.

He leaves behind a wife and nine children and a host of warm friends to cherish his memory. The minister of the gospel, as he passes on the train through the little station, will ever miss the hearty grasp of the hand of Bro. Welsh; but of him we can say, "He rests from his labors, and his works do follow him."

H. C. BROWN.

ROSSEAUX—After a consistent Christian life of nearly eighty years, Sister CELIA ROSSEAUX (nee Evans) was, on February 19, 1890, called from labor to reward. She was born March 10, 1810, in the State of North Carolina; moved to this, St. Tammany parish, about the year 1822, and joined the Methodist Church at the age of fourteen. She was thrice married, and bore, successively, the name of Brockham, Mooro and Rosseaux.

Sister Rosseaux will ever be missed in the community. Her house was always open to the minister of the gospel, and in her home he was always certain to find a place made ready and a hearty welcome. Rarely do we see so long a life, amid all the vicissitudes of fortune, preserving piety, faith and charity unto the end, without one moment of wavering fear or doubt. She leaves behind six children and many friends to mourn their loss. Truly in the death of Sister Rosseaux the church has lost an earnest, sincere member, the community a bright and shining light and great power for good, and the family a loving mother; but earth's loss is heaven's gain, and she has gone from the battlefield to receive the victor's crown.

H. C. BROWN.

THOMASON—MARY VIRGINIA, daughter of M. C. and Malissa Thomason, was born April 28, 1880, and departed this life July 13, 1890. With patience she suffered many weeks. She realized that her suffering would soon cease. As the devoted mother stood leaning over her, with that anxiety only realized by mothers, she whispered, "Mama, I have suffered enough." Her papa lifted her up, and she threw her arms around his neck, and as she released him her spirit had taken its flight.

God pity these saddened hearts in their irremediable sorrow. How idle and empty seem words in the presence of such bereavement! We press the hand in silent sympathy, and lift our hearts to God in prayer.

L. H. SWAYZE.

Choose the Best.

"Freely and unhesitatingly, then, select what is best, and cling resolutely to it, for what is best is most profitable." This is good advice for those who are seeking some efficient remedy for bodily ills. We think we can prove to you that the best remedy is the Compound Oxygen Treatment of DRS. STARKEY & PALEN.

Below we give you some of the evidence. But we have more of it, hundreds of testimonials, which we shall gladly furnish.

DRS. STARKEY & PALEN:—"My wife thinks that your Compound Oxygen Treatment saved her life," REV. H. W. JONES, Monroe City, Mo., Oct. 21, 1889. "DRS. STARKEY & PALEN:—"I can not express the benefit I have received from your Compound Oxygen Treatment in one of the most severe cases of chronic bronchitis." P. J. MCGOWAN, Penn Yan, Yates Co., N. Y., May 13, 1889.

Send for the 200-page book. It is free to you and filled with testimonials from men and women who have been cured by the Compound Oxygen Treatment. All you have to do is to address DRS. STARKEY & PALEN, 1529 Arch street, Philadelphia, Pa., or 120 Sutter street, San Francisco, Cal.

GRANT'S FURNITURE STORE

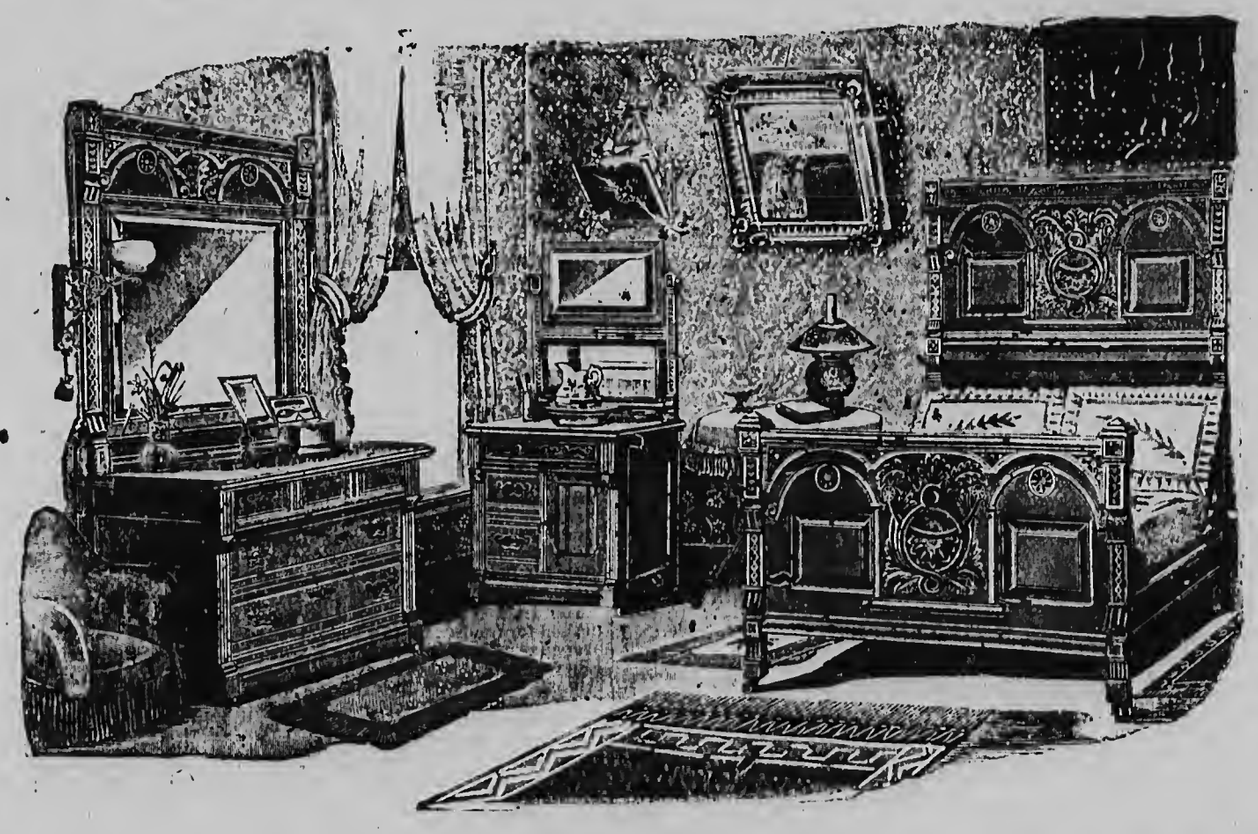
NEW STORE, AT 114 Camp St. NEW ORLEANS. NEXT DOOR TO ADVOCATE OFFICE.

BEAUTIFUL PARLOR GOODS.

I have one entire floor devoted to the display of those goods alone, and have over sixty different varieties to select from. Complete Suits anywhere from $35 to $650, and odd pieces—such as Sofas, Divans, Easy Chairs, Patent Rockers, Window and Reception Chairs—at as low prices in proportion as the Complete Suits. I have these goods in Cherry, Mahogany and Walnut, and can give you your choice of any of the following coverings: Crushed, Embossed, Plain and Silk Plushes, Hair Cloth, Mohair, Raw and Spun Silks, Satins, English Tapestries, French Valours, Petit Point, Brocatelle or Damasks. I make a specialty of these goods, have many of the patterns made specially for my own trade, and can offer a greater variety at lower prices than any other house in the South.

NEW STOCK

in all departments, and every grade of goods, from the cheapest to the most expensive, in endless variety. I have all the latest and most fashionable designs, and, as I have only purchased from factories whose goods I have been selling for the past six years, can and do guarantee every piece of Furniture that leaves my establishment.



LOW PRICES

are the order of the day, and I propose to sell strictly reliable goods at a lower price than has ever before been quoted in the South. My store has long been known as "The Cheapest Furniture House in New Orleans," and this season I intend to add to the reputation it has gained in this respect. I only ask a chance to save you money.

HANDSOME BEDROOM SUITS.

A very extensive assortment of these goods in every style; and whether you wish to pay $10 for a Complete Suit of twelve pieces, or from that price anywhere up to $1,000, I can sell you what you require. I have these goods in Black Walnut, Natural and Dark Cherry, and Natural and Dark Mahogany, or in imitation of any of these woods, and can furnish the very latest, neatest and most artistic designs.

I have also a large and carefully selected stock of Hall, Library, Dining-room and Kitchen Furniture; Reed, Rattan and Wicker Chairs, Rockers, Lounges and Cribs; Brackets, What-nots, Easels, Music Stands and Fancy Top Tables; Carpets, Carpet Strips, Matting, Shades, Curtains, Curtain Poles, and everything necessary to furnish a house completely throughout.

LARGE SALES.

I have a large city trade, and am shipping goods extensively to every Southern State. My country trade has increased very rapidly during the past year, and the facilities which my new store affords me for carrying a larger and better stock will enable me to still further extend it, and to give complete satisfaction to my customers.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

DOMESTIC.

Congress adjourned on September 30. The Democratic minority of the House of Representatives failed to express the customary vote of thanks to the speaker.

In the ten months' session, ended last week, President Harrison sent 3,837 nominations to the Senate for confirmation. As many of these nominations contained the names of more than one person, they represented probably 5,000 appointments. Of this large number all but twelve were confirmed.

Disastrous prairie fires occurred in North Dakota, last week. Many farmers have lost their crops of wheat, oats and hay.

Postmaster-General Wanamaker has issued a circular for the guidance of postmasters in the treatment of prohibited matter under the recent Anti-Lottery act. Among other specifications the circular says that the term "lottery" as used in this act embraces all kinds of schemes, general or local, for the distribution of prizes by lottery or chance, such as gift exhibitions, enterprises, concerts, raffles, or the drawing of prizes in money or property at fairs. Hence, letters, postal cards and circulars concerning them, and newspapers, pamphlets and other publications containing advertisements are unmailable.

The Mormon question is discussed at some length by Arthur L. Thomas, the governor of Utah, in his annual report to Secretary Noble. He asserts that the Mormon people are governed by the priests and that in every political and business act the church is put first, the country afterward. The governor says it is now over twenty-eight years since Congress condemned polygamy in Utah. The laws of Congress have been ridiculed and treated with contempt so long as such a course was safe, and then evaded and resisted as far as possible, and during all this time no change has taken place in the counsels or aims of Mormonism, and the conflict to-day is as clearly defined as ever.

The twenty-seventh Annual Convention of the International Brotherhood of Engineers will be held in Pittsburg on the sixteenth instant. Upon the action of this convention depends the future policy of every organization of railroad men in this country. The United Order of Railway Employees, composed of the Brotherhood of Railway Conductors, the Brotherhood of Firemen, the Switchmen's Mutual Aid Association, has invited the engineers to become members of this federation. In case the engineers accept this invitation, railway employees will have an organization of greater power than ever before existed.

The Mississippi River Commission made its allotments on October 4. The Commission gives $300,000 to the Yazoo front, $100,000 to the upper levee district, $200,000 to the lower district, $500,000 to the Teusas basin, $200,000 to the White river front, $200,000 to the section below Red river, $500,000 from Cairo to White river, including Plum Point reach; $720,000 from Memphis to Warrentown, including Lake Providence reach; Greenville $100,000, Vicksburg $75,000, Helena $25,000, New Orleans $100,000, Red river $25,000.

The appropriations made by the first session of the Fifty-first Congress were completed on the last day of the session, and present a sum total greater by $40,000,000 than the appropriations made by the preceding Congress.

FOREIGN.

While the German Emperor is in the company of the Austrian Emperor the Socialists are raising the standard of agitation in his rear. Freed since September 30 from the operation of the iron laws which Bismarck had contrived for them, they are spreading broadcast the most advanced theories of socialism, combined with a demand for those political rights which are still denied to the people of Germany. The new situation is viewed with alarm by the manufacturing and property-owning classes, who have never been inclined to accept with favor even the liberal recommendations of the Emperor regarding the treatment of working people.

The Czar is taking new precautions for the protection of his person. None except cabinet ministers are admitted to an audience without the presence of an officer of the guard, and the Eastern custom of tasting food before it is placed on the sovereign's table has been revived, after having been in disuse since the days of the Emperor Paul. The Russian autocrat seems suspicious of every one around him, and even his favorite advisers are said to dread an interview with him.

The Irish National League is hard pushed for funds. Of this fact there is every day more evidence. The English Liberals give abundant and valuable sympathy, but very little in the way of contributions, and unless a considerable amount of money shall soon be forthcoming the work of the League will be seriously crippled.

A fire at Sydney, Australia, destroyed about £1,500,000 worth of property. All losses are covered by insurance.

The Independence Belge, a newspaper in Brussels, says that the adoption of the McKinley Tariff bill insures the failure of the World's Fair at Chicago, as it will be a needless expense for Europeans to send exhibits there.

The National Gas Workors' Union, employed by the London Gaslight and Coke Company, are preparing for a gigantic strike, on account of the refusal of the company to accede to the demand of the union that only their associates be employed in the works. The company has a capital of £12,000,000 and employs 11,000 men.

Malaria

Literally means bad air. Poisonous germs arising from low, marshy land, or from decaying vegetable matter, are breathed into the lungs, taken up by the blood, and unless the vital fluid is purified by the use of a good medicine like Hood's Sarsaparilla, the unfortunate victim is soon overpowered. Even in the more advanced cases, where the terrible fever prevails, this successful medicine has effected remarkable cures. Those who are exposed to malarial or other poisons should keep the blood pure by taking Hood's Sarsaparilla.

Mr. P. D. D. Delacroix, Cypremort P. O., La. Nov. 30, 1888, says: "Three years ago an agent representing Dr. Davis' Compound Syrup of Wild Cherry and Tar came into my store. Being busy, was unable to give him any time. Before leaving he gave me a sample bottle of Davis' Wild Cherry and Tar, asking me to give it to anyone suffering with a cough or cold. Several days afterward I caught a heavy cold. Remembering the sample, thought I would try it. Six teaspoonfuls cured me. Ordered a supply at once, and have sold it with satisfaction to all. It acts like magic on all my family, and I would not be without it. I take pleasure in recommending it at all times." One dollar bottles hold two and a half times as much as 50c. bottles.

It is well known among successful merchants that liberal advertising is indispensable to the economical and successful working of their establishments.—Price Current.

MALARIA

OVERCOME BY

DR. KING'S

Royal Germetuer.

NEW ORLEANS, Sept. 2, 1890.

I have been for several years constantly subject to malarial fevers. The best medical treatment has failed to remove from my system the malarial poison that produced them. I have had to use an average of forty grains of quinine per week for years. The fevers would invariably return in a few days, if it was discontinued. The quinine was doing great harm to my nervous system, but I had to keep it up as my only hope. Recently I commenced using Dr. King's Royal Germetuer. It has done me more good than all the medicine I have ever taken. I have not had a fever since commencing its use, nor found it necessary to take a dose of quinine. It has toned my nerves, built up my strength and given me a buoyancy and healthfulness of feeling that I have not known for years. My experience justifies me in saying that this wonderful remedy is all that is claimed for it, if not more.

LOVELY WINTER FLOWERS

SCILLA CLUSI, a grand winter flower producing enormous clusters of bloom two to three feet in circumference. They are of lovely light and dark blue colors and borne in such marvelous profusion that it makes a plant of wonderful and striking beauty. The bulbs are very large and strong, and should be planted in a five or six inch pot and are absolutely sure to bloom freely during winter, and the great heads of bloom keep perfect for weeks. Freezing does not harm it, and bulbs can also be planted in the garden this fall to bloom in early spring like Tulips. Try it, either for the house or garden. It is sure to bloom and create a sensation there being nothing among winter flowers which will so astonish and please all beholders. Price of extra large Bulbs, sent out once by mail, postpaid, 20 cents each; 7 for 50 cents; 7 for $1.00. Also

A SONG OF COURAGE.

BY F. L. STANTON.

Be brave, my soul!
Though foes around thee fighting fast
Would drive thee from the field at last,
Be brave! the struggle soon is past,
And then—the promised goal!

My soul, be strong!
Though great temptation hover near
And hard may seem the cross to bear,
There is a jewel in each tear,
In every sigh a song!

My soul, be true!
Though on the shrine of truth the blaze
Sheds in the dark its dying rays,
Keep thou thy vigil! In the ways
The angel walks with you!

My soul, stand fast!
A little while with halting feet
To tread the thorn-paths scorched with heat,
Where trampled hearts must bleed and beat!
A little while—and then the sweet

Letter No. 21.

NAPLES AT NIGHT FROM THE SEA—STROMBOLI—PAUL'S JOURNEY BY SEA—EGYPT—FROM ALEXANDRIA TO CAIRO—SCENES FROM THE CAR WINDOW—VILLAGES—THE DESERT OF SHUR—THE BAZAARS OF CAIRO—THE MOSQUES—THE VIEW FROM THE CITADEL.

On a beautiful evening in August I took ship at Naples, and sailed for Egypt. The sight of this city twinkling at night, in ascending lights around its semi-circular bay, is one of the Italian pictures that memory loves to recall. Vesuvius had the red plume of war floating in the night wind, and a bloody gash in his southern side that looked forehoding.

Next morning we sighted and passed Stromboli—that most peculiar volcano island. It rises up suddenly from the sea all around, and comes to a cone at the height of three thousand feet. One would think that people would be slow to settle where they would be rendered doubly helpless in time of peril by fire above and water all around; and yet here, nestling at the foot of this volcano, whose fires never go out, is a large town or city. America has countless thousands of acres of land with no natural convulsions to disturb, to which she invites the nations; and yet the people of this volcano helt prefer to scrape a living on hard rocks, having their houses occasionally knocked to pieces by earthquakes, and every four or five years running a race for their lives against streams of lava, and under showers of scoriæ.

It has been both pleasant and interesting to me to discover that I am traversing the same route by sea that Paul passed over in coming to Rome. According to the last chapter in Acts, he took a vessel that had sailed from Alexandria; I took one that was sailing to Alexandria. He landed at Puteoli, just nine miles above Naples. Passing this place in the day—as he evidently did, from the narrative—his eye rested on this beautiful and on this smoking summit of Vesuvius. This was the very year in which the terrible earthquake occurred that almost overwhelmed Pompeii and several other cities. God was letting the corrupt land know that his servant had arrived! Luke says that they came from the island of Melita, thence to Syracuse, and touched at Rhegium. With what interest, as our ship passed down the Straits of Messina, did I look at this old city of Rhegium, and at the mountains that line both the Italian and Sicilian shores! The thought that this noble herald of the gospel had passed this way, and that his eyes had surveyed the landscapes before, gave a charm to them over and above that which they possessed naturally. What a spectacle it was! I can realize it here as I could not far away. Christ's ambassador in chains! God's invading army, consisting of a single individual, and he a prisoner! South of Sicily we turned eastward, and ran parallel with Paul's course for six or seven hundred miles.

On the fifth day from Naples our ship cast anchor in the port of Alexandria. It needed not a second glance to show me that I was in a new world, in one sense, and in the Old World, in another. The palm trees near the river; the turbans, red fez caps and robes of the men, and the veiled women—all proclaimed, most powerfully, the East. Again and again a view of the Nile, through a perspective of palm trees, spoke like a voice, saying: "You are in the Dark Continent, but you are also in the borders of one of the most ancient civilizations. You are in the far-famed land of Egypt." Who wonders that I read that night in the Word of God about Joseph in his sojourn here, and what the Gospels say about Jesus, as a child, being brought down to Egypt! So I am in one land already that has been made sacred by the presence of the infant Savior.

It seems strange to see a railroad in this old sleepy land; and yet here is one running from Alexandria to Cairo, and a day's journey still farther on up the Nile. In the trip to Cairo, which takes something over four hours, you are held to the window by a constant interest. The great fertilizing river is now beginning to cover the fields, and the farmers are all at work preparing for his welcome coming. I judge that these Nile farmers have power, by their ditches and small levees, to throw the water upon any portion of land that they desire. I saw countless fields of wheat, corn, and rice, of considerable height, the first two of which needed no irrigation, and could not have endured a flood. The character of the country and crops reminded me much of our rich Mississippi and Louisiana swamp lands. It would have been easy to have fancied yourself back home, but for the buffaloes plowing in the fields, the camels in caravan procession along the high-road, and the turbans and veiled women everywhere to be seen.

The villages of the poorer classes at first puzzled me for a descriptive word; but, after a few glances, the proper phrase came—they are exactly like large dirt daubers' nests. I suppose you remember the tenement that this interesting third cousin to the wasp builds on our American rafters. The house of a poor Egyptian is simply a dirt dauber's nest enlarged. The railway often ran for miles by the side of one of the high-roads of Egyptian travel. It was like gazing on a panorama to keep the eye fixed on that road. And it was a living panorama of deep interest. There were donkeys, buffaloes and camels; there were men in all the vivid and varied costumes of the East, and women black-robed, as a rule, and black-veiled up to the eyes. There was a traveler and his dragoman dashing along on horses, and there was a group of travelers in the slow-moving caravan of camels. Yonder is a band of soldiers, and yonder, riding to himself, is a stalwart, bearded man, in red turban and white robe, sitting on the back haunches of a diminutive donkey, who progresses with such a swift, gliding motion that the man looks as if he were sailing along the surface of the ground in a sitting posture. But I wish you could see his gravity and dignity of mien. The Sultan, on his throne, could not look more impressive and magisterial.

In drawing near to Cairo, I noticed on our left a high, yellowish ridge of ground, apparently thirty or forty feet above the level of the plain on which we were traveling. I needed not to be told that it was the beginning of the desert that reaches eastward to Gaza and the Dead Sea, and southward to Mt. Sinai and the lands where God led his people by the pillar of cloud and fire. I could not see over it, but I knew its barren wastes, and I remembered what had occurred upon it; and it actually seemed like a presence to me. Over that plain Abraham had come and returned; over it Joseph had traveled as a grief-stricken youth, and was carried back with honors due to royalty. What a procession they made! Over it Jacob had appeared wondering and rejoicing, and was carried back with funeral celebrations to Hebron of such an extent that the people said, "This is a grievous mourning to the Egyptians." Under the long, sandy horizon-line of this desert Moses disappeared with a great multitude of people, who never came back. And over this very plain, after the flight of centuries, came and went back again "the young Child and its mother."

More than once lately have I seen a mother and her young child traveling on these dusty roads, under these burning August skies. The clinging babe, the downward droop of the mother's face, and the quivering heat beating oftentimes upon them on a treeless road, have thrown a new light and meaning upon the quiet statement made in the gospel of that journey from Palestine to Egypt. How much of suffering is there back of the simple affirmations of the Bible! Truly Christ suffered for us from the very days of infancy! Truly the Father did not spare his Son! And there is the desert that brings these things to mind. What a monument it is!—or, better still, what a wondrous pedestal it is! Forty feet high, and over a thousand miles around the base, and upon it History and the Bible have grouped figures and armies and scenes of the most profoundly interesting and important character.

The bazaars of Cairo consist of a number of exceedingly narrow streets lined with diminutive shops, and crowded with a jostling procession of human beings, camels and donkeys. In the front of the shop sits, Turkish fashion, the owner, either smoking his nargileh or dispensing his goods with the dignity of a judge giving forth justice. The scene, as you look, is one of animation and attractiveness. The different-colored turbans and dresses, the veiled women, the clatter of different languages, the sudden and constant looming up of camels with riders or burdens—these, and other things we have not time to mention, constantly interest the spectator. It was like a scene in the Arabian Nights.

I visited two mosques. Of course, I could not be admitted on their sacred floors until my unhallowed feet had been encased in slippers. The first pair were as large as frying pans, in which I viewed the dirt and dinginess and religious mummery of the mosque of Sultan Hassan. At the next my pedal extremities were again enswathed in Eastern slippers, which, this time, were as remarkable for length as the preceding pair had been for breadth. Armed at my feet with slippers equal to short-swords, I moved into the mosque of Mahomet Ali. This is as beautiful a building as the other is unattractive. The auditorium is a vast and lofty chamber, surmounted with a dome illuminated with exquisitely colored glass. The lights of the auditorium are ranged in concentric circles, with a few clusters besides, suspended at certain points. When lighted, it must be a place of great splendor. As you know, there are no chairs used in their worship, but the floor is covered with mats. Their spiritual leader addresses the sitting throng from an airy perch, reached by a carpeted staircase of thirty or forty steps. The females are admitted in a balcony that runs around the sides of the chamber at a height of fully fifty or sixty feet. Here, fenced off and deeply veiled, they get those portions of truth that may happen to fly upward. There is no music in a Mohammedan service. But, after listening to their secular or profane music, one has reason to be thankful that there is no song service in their mosques, if he happens to be dwelling in the vicinity. Infidelity has no hymn book and Mohammedanism has no religious singing in its worship. Both facts are significant, and mean the same thing, and that thing is, that they are both dead. The dead sing not. "The living, the living, they shall praise thee," said King Hezekiah. I shall have more to say about Islamism in another letter.

From the citadel I had a fine view of Cairo and the surrounding country. For the first time I looked down upon a minareted city. The church spire and gospel bell give way to the dome of the mosque, to the minaret and the voice of the muezzin calling four times a day to prayers. But this shall not be long. The promise is, that Christ "shall inherit all nations." The sight of the minarets and domes, the uplifted plumed heads of the palm trees, the windings of the river Nile; the shipping on its bosom, with mast and spar of bamboo making a curve peculiar, yet pleasing, to the eye; the sight of the pyramids, eight miles away, on the edge of the great desert—all these made a view striking, peculiarly oriental and beautiful. It was also calculated to impress me with the fact that I was a considerable distance from home. This was the first feeling experienced when I saw the Nile for the first time through a perspective of palm trees.

Traveling as I am now doing, independently of excursion parties, and alone, there are moments when, naturally, a feeling of loneliness sweeps down upon the heart. For instance: It is hard to be seeing constantly striking objects, and have no one to commune with on the subject. It is trying to see parties of friends and loved ones together, and feel shut out from like pleasure. There is a trying element on being forever surrounded with strange faces, listening to a Babel of strange tongues, and moving all the time through strange lands. But there are three things that instantaneously save me from the lonely feeling. One is, that I am traveling for the very purpose of seeing the strange and unknown. Next; a number of years ago I struck up an acquaintanceship and friendship with the clouds and stars. We have been on delightful communing terms for quite a while. As a boy, they spoke to me, and said many things that set me to thinking, and quieted my spirit. As a child of God, I have recognized a still, small voice coming out from their beautiful sanctuaries. Their voices are kindly, their faces are friendly and familiar. So, all through the different countries I have journeyed, I have repeatedly steadied and cheered my heart with a view of the clouds and the stars. They are the only things that have not changed since I left home. There they are, the same "bright, motionless pillars of heaven" when piled up on the horizon; and there are the same constellations that bend over the land of America.

Had you thought of what a peculiar advantage I possess over you in respect to the day? While writing this at four o'clock in the afternoon, you are just sitting down to breakfast, or, perhaps, rising from bed. The day with me is far spent. I have looked into its history, lived its life, seen it grow old before you rub the sleep from your eyes. This gives me an advantage over you. It makes me something like a prophet, in that I have seen what you have not seen.

To-morrow I take a dragoman, two donkeys and a donkey-boy, and visit the pyramids. B. CARRADINE.

Mississippi Constitutional Convention Notes.

The convention has been in session sixty days, and there is now but little probability of its adjournment before the ides of November. Many changes have been made in the organic law; but, for better or worse, the writer for the present must stand uncommitted in his judgment. Nevertheless much and severe criticism has been indulged in by the press and others throughout the State and outside the State.

Among the important changes made, though not yet a finality, are the following:

The Legislature to elect only its own officers; United States senators, State librarian, and presidential electors, when desired.

In land sales under execution or decree in chancery, they must first be put up in tracts of 160 acres or less, and then as a whole, the sale being confirmed by whichever way amounts to the most money.

Provision for a State bankrupt law. This is being severely criticised, and may be expunged or materially modified.

The governor, auditor and State treasurer each limited to one term, and the auditor and treasurer ineligible to succeed each other.

County treasurers and sheriffs allowed a term of four years, but can not succeed each other or themselves.

The State capitol not to be removed without a majority of the electors of the State at any election voting for it.

The fiscal year to begin October 1, and end September 30; all receipts and disbursements to be published by auditor and treasurer by December 31, following.

Women shall have equal rights with men to acquire and dispose of property.

No salaries to families of deceased officers.

Officers not to be retired under full or half pay.

The convention has received so much and such severe criticism on the "understanding" clause of Section 5, that a strong effort is now being made, which will, doubtless, succeed, to expunge it from the Franchise ordinance.

A State superintendent of public education elected by the people and at the same time the other State officers are elected. A superintendent of education appointed for each county by a State Board, consisting of the State superintendent, secretary of State, and attorney general.

The schools shall be run four months, and to be paid for by the poll tax, supposed to be about $250,000; balance $550,000 to be paid out of State treasury. It being estimated that it will take $800,000 to run the schools four months annually. License to retail spirituous and malt liquors, which heretofore formed a part of the common-school fund, hereafter go to the general fund. Counties and school districts have the privilege to raise by special taxation funds to run the public schools longer, if so desired. Separate school districts, as now, not recognized. In the distribution they stand as any county school.

On yesterday the convention decided in favor of an appointive judiciary, as now, by a vote of 55 to 36.

The Committee on Corporations has reported in favor of a section which prohibits cities, towns or counties from voting aid or lending their credit to any corporation or railroad, and providing that no corporation or railroad shall be exempt from taxation for a longer period than five years. This section has caused a vigorous protest from various citizens and towns through their Boards of Trade, who insist that its adoption will greatly retard the material advancement of the State and be of little or no benefit in the direction intended. A meeting of the Corporation Committee was held Thursday night, and representatives from various Boards of Trade throughout the State were present and insisted on having the section changed, so as to allow cities, towns or counties to vote aid to corporations by a two-thirds vote, and to further change it by allowing exemption from taxation for ten years where it was deemed necessary. It is not known what will be the outcome, but the arguments used were of a very convincing character and may result in having the section changed on the lines asked for.

This is good:

No lottery shall ever be allowed or be advertised by newspapers, or otherwise, or its tickets be sold in this State, and the Legislature shall provide by law for the enforcement of this provision, nor shall any lottery heretofore authorized be permitted to be drawn or its tickets be sold.

AITCH AITCH AITCH.

Parsonages—Care of Church Property.

A word to preachers and preachers' wives: I have long thought that there is great value in a good home for ministers of the gospel. Perhaps the first parsonage society ever organized in the Mississippi Conference originated by my suggestion in the city of Natchez in 1845. Latterly I have thought more on the subject than I did in the beginning of my ministry, as I have felt the need of a good home more. I began my itinerant life more than fifty years ago, and nearly fifty years have been given to the itinerancy proper. During all these years I have never lived in a really comfortable, well-furnished parsonage. Three I rendered comfortable during my occupancy. I have frequently had to occupy hired houses, and parsonages also, which were anything but comfortable, because of leaking roofs, smoking chimneys, summer's heat and winter's cold. Only eight years of my itinerant life have I lived in parsonages, and let me say that I have never left one that I did not leave both house and grounds improved. I have planted shade trees where they were needed, and fruit and nut trees that are now bearing where they were not destroyed by the carelessness of my successor. Suffer this much egotism from an old itinerant.

Now, a few facts and suggestions: A large part of the strength of the church consists in the value of its property. Parsonages within the bounds of the Mississippi Conference are increasing rapidly. They now number eighty-five, but many of these are of but little value. Two valued as low as $200, and a number of others at but little more. It would be an easy thing to improve all our parsonage property, and to increase its value one hundred per cent. Some parsonages ought to be torn down, or converted into outhouses, and better ones erected in their places. Our Church Extension Department is publishing plans that would greatly aid in the work of reconstruction, or in building. Now, suppose every preacher should adopt as his motto, "Nothing shall pass through my hands without improvement;" and so plant fruit, nut and shade trees, and never leave a church or parsonage in a dilapidated condition; where a nail is needed, drive it; where paint is wanted, put it on; where a gallery or a room can be added to advantage, with the aid of the members of the church, add it; keep the premises clean; take care of the furniture. Our district secretary of Woman's Department of Church Extension says, in prosecuting her work, many ladies decline to enter into the work, because parsonages and furniture are not cared for as they should be by the preacher's family. We are sorry to know that there is foundation for this complaint. In one instance the preacher made the front yard his horse and cow lot, and every flower and shrub was destroyed. In another instance the parlor was made the play-room for the boys, and the sofa was their spring-board for jumping. To remedy this complaint, we propose that whenever a new preacher takes possession of church property, an inventory be taken, the property delivered in good order, and the preacher be required to return it in the same condition. A WATCHMAN.

Letter from Mexico.

MR. EDITOR: The time draws near when we expect our Bishop, and soon after we will receive orders for another year's work. We shall, indeed, be glad to welcome him to our homes, and receive tidings from the dear home-land, but feel little anxiety as to our future home. We have the consciousness of knowing we have "done what we could." Of course, if wiser, and in possession of a more perfect knowledge of the language, we might have been more successful; but we can not reproach ourselves for what we could not help. Mr. Weems is almost through his last round, and has traveled safely thus far. On returning this week from his appointment, he met on the train a presiding elder from our sister church, who had just passed through a mob. Fortunately, he escaped unharmed; but one man was killed—one of the mob. The house was surrounded, and but for the soldiers sent to protect them, another Christian minister might now fill a martyr's grave. Alas! alas! poor Mexico! How long, oh! my Lord, before the blood-stained banner of the cross of Christ will be honored and loved, and Romish fanaticism no longer rule the people of this sin-cursed land? My heart aches for the poor Mexicans, and I long to lead them out of this slough of despondency up to the mountain of blessedness and peace.

I have a letter from the president of the society of Carondelet Church, telling me they have shipped a trunk of clothing for our mission school, and also telling me of the sympathy and interest in our work felt by young and old. Even the dear little children are working with their little hands and earnest hearts for our poor little waifs. The dear young ladies, who are just entering upon a life of pleasure and delight, turn aside from these to labor for our darkened land. The dear mothers, with willing hearts and hands, are working for Mexico. If I could only make you feel what inspiration your sympathy and help lends our efforts, I'm sure you'd realize how truly you are missionaries. May God bless you all spiritually, and also in basket and store! You will certainly be happy in the realization of the truth: "Inasmuch as you have done it unto one of the least of these, my brethren, ye have done it unto me." Soon you will hear from our Conference, and, doubtless, from our Bishop, who wields the pen of a ready writer, and can let you see Mexico as it now is. God bless you all!

ONE LESS AT HOME.

One less at home!
The charmed circle broken; a dear face
Missed day by day from its accustomed place;
But, cleansed and saved and perfected by grace,
One more in heaven!

One less at home!
One voice of welcome hushed, and evermore
One farewell word unspoken; on the shore
Where parting comes not one soul landed more,
One more in heaven!

One less at home!
A sense of loss that meets us at the gate;
Within, a place unfilled and desolate;
And far away our coming to await,
One more in heaven!

One less at home!
Chill as the earth-born mist the thought would rise,
And wrap our footsteps round, and dim our eyes;
But the bright sunbeam darteth from the skies—
One more in heaven!

One more at home!
This is not home, where, cramped in earthly mold,
Our sight of Christ is dim, our love is cold;
But there, where face to face we shall behold,
Is home and heaven.

One less on earth!
Its pain, its sorrow, and its toil to share;
One less the pilgrim's daily cross to bear;
One more the crown of ransomed souls to wear,
At home in heaven!

One more in heaven!
Another thought to brighten cloudy days,
Another theme for thankfulness and praise,
Another link on high our souls to raise
To home and heaven!

One more at home—
That home where separation can not be,
That home where none are missed eternally.
Lord Jesus, grant us all a place with thee,
At home in heaven!

—Littell's Living Age.

To the Rev. R. Abbey.

My Venerable Brother: Your letter to me in the ADVOCATE, of October 2, has been read and re-read with no little attention. Anything coming from your pen is entitled, at least, to attention and respectful consideration. But as I am really "a person of small general intelligence," I am somewhat at a loss to catch the drift or apprehend the force of your propositions, and wholly fail to perceive any argument. And I am afraid that I was not sufficiently clear in my discourse on The Sabbath, to which your letter refers, or you would not have suspected me of having fallen into the trap so cunningly set in our Annual Conference resolutions, such as, "Resolved, That we will not travel on Sunday, * * * except in cases of necessity"—voted for and spread on the Minutes in all apparent seriousness. "Necessity," either primary or secondary, did not enter into my argument, and shall not now. I learned long since in the school of experience not to be led off into side issues.

Neither could I accept what would have been your line of argument, for it would have led me to the point where you stood on Sabbath observance and the use of Sunday trains, etc., and that position I do not care to occupy—for I am convinced that error is there. This I say with due deference to you and the other preachers who agree with you.

I had not overlooked your recent articles on the "hebdomadal count of time," nor was I ignorant of the rotation of the earth on its axis and around the sun; but I must confess that I did not see the necessity or the needfulness of lugging in science to confuse the minds of general readers, such as those for whose benefit my brethren in the District Conference requested that the sermon be published. I was dealing with the question from purely a biblical standpoint, and not relying on science or hypercriticism. Our common people know little, and care less for such things. It is not "the principles of jurisprudence," as laid down by some people, that they regard, but the principles of plain common sense. They can not understand why the poor man may not work in his field or his grist-mill on the Sabbath, while great corporations may run railroad trains, or have machinery cleaned and repaired on the Lord's day. And railroad men (the train men) are beginning to manifest a profound contempt for a gospel which appears to permit such things, and for the preachers of such a gospel who encourage such inconsistency. "I believed and, therefore, have I spoken." Indeed, I am firmly convinced that God knew all about "the diurnal revolution of the earth" when the Fourth Commandment was given; and I suspect he knew or foreknew just a little about the "International Date Line." Besides I find some instructions in the Bible about people who should find that "there is a discretionary proviso implied" in God's commandments. In the exercise of this discretion, the Roman Catholics have eliminated the Second Commandment and filled their churches and their homes with graven images. And, under the plea of Christian civilization, Protestant preachers act and speak as if God had not foreknown what should come to pass, and try to make his commandments as elastic as the consciences of some people.

Your suggestion of a doubt as to my sincerity or fixedness of purpose against ever using a Sunday train is hardly warranted by your knowledge of me; and I respectfully, but firmly, insist that even your very vivid imagination could not suggest such a telegram as "would have put you (me) on a Sunday train, or anything else that would promise the quickest return." The brethren who use Sunday street cars and Sunday trains think me fanatical. Possibly I am; but I think I am only fearing God and trying to keep his commandments.

Respectfully and fraternally,

T. L. MELLEN.

Dr. Sledd in Canada.

The address of Dr. Sledd, our fraternal messenger to the General Conference of the Methodist Church in Canada, is given by the Guardian, of October 1:

Dr. Carman introduced Rev. Dr. Sledd as the fraternal delegate from the Methodist Episcopal Church, South.

Dr. Howard Sprague, president of Nova Scotia Conference, was glad to have the honor of introducing the honored representative of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. He gave an account of his own visit to Nashville in 1878, when he represented the Canada Methodist Church.

Dr. Sledd then came forward, and was received with great cheering. He belonged to a church which contained 4 000 ministers and 1,200,000 members. They in the South had heard of Methodism in Canada, and prayed that her members might be a thousandfold more than they are. His church had been independent since 1846. Her history has been one of deep interest and much suffering. He depicted the condition of the church during the war, and portrayed the congratulations which they received after the sad desolation experienced during the war. In Wesley's day there were divisions in the family, and still there are diversities, but not in doctrine. In the South they had received the delegates sent from Canada with great joy. He rejoiced in the Methodist fraternity. His church had always been true to the Methodist standards. No old article has been obliterated and no new one has been inserted. Any personal divergencies do not trouble us. No new link has been added to the chain. We are no believers in necessity. If any are not saved, it will not be because of any decree. Every man may be saved. You say that's sound. Well, we believe in the depravity of the race and the supernatural power of the Holy Spirit. Works are the fruits of faith. Priestly intercession and all sacerdotalism in every form we abhor. We believe in no gradual justification, but in present salvation. Consciousness is a final court of appeal in philosophy. Methodists believe in the knowledge of the forgiveness of sins, which makes men happy. We believe in being made holy in this life. These doctrines were believed by our fathers. He described what was required of ministers—gifts, graces, fruits. He must be called of God. The rival fires have always been kept burning. The increase of the membership of the church has been greater than the increase of the population. We aim at the perfection of the saints. Attention is paid to Christian education. We have seventeen colleges, many of which have biblical chairs. Vanderbilt University is a grand institution. We have fifty seminaries and colleges for the education of our daughters. Many of the ministers are graduates of our seats of learning. Our Publishing House at Nashville is doing a good work. Besides the General Conference organ, we have twenty weekly papers. In some Conferences we have a system of colportage, which we think is a valuable auxiliary. The chief part of the mission of Methodism is to care for the children. Nearly one-half of the Sunday-school children on the continent belong to Methodism. The Sunday-school is not only for the little people, but for the fathers. About a century ago Mr. Wesley called his mission in America "a few sheep scattered in the wilderness." In regard to missionary operations, Canada is ahead of the South. Missions are established in China, Japan, Mexico, Brazil, and the Indies. The Woman's Missionary Society has thirty-one missionaries, fifty-seven teachers, fifty-one schools. 1,248 members and one hospital. Uncle Larry, an aged minister, has largely developed the missionary spirit among the children. Our General Conference wants to develop the missionary spirit, and has appointed three missionary secretaries, two of whom travel extensively. He referred to the church extension movement. There were a few other things on which he wished to speak—the whisky evil, the common enemy. The description of this evil was truly graphic. His church regards the manufacture and sale of intoxicating liquors as immoralities. They are, as a church, solidifying on prohibition. They mean to fight for God, their home, and their country. He must refer to the negro question. There are 6,000,000 people, all of whom, or their fathers, were slaves. He told of what the church has done on behalf of these people. There are 16,000 schools and normal colleges for the colored race. There are also universities for their good. The outlook is hopeful. This Conference, he knew, rejoices with them and wishes them prosperity; for they are members one of another. The churches should be getting closer together. In conclusion, he thanked the Conference for their kindness.

Dr. Sutherland moved and Dr. Briggs seconded a resolution of thanks to Dr. Sledd for his address on this occasion, and expressed the hope that in future there would be many fraternal delegations between the two churches.

Dr. Lathern supported the resolution by an interesting relation of historical facts in connection with Methodism during the last century.

He that seeketh to be eminent amongst able men hath a great task; but that is ever good for the public. But he that plots to be the only figure among cyphers is the decay of a whole age.—Bacon.

Public Education.

Under this caption "Caddo" writes very eloquently about a subject which lies very near the heart of every citizen of the country who thinks for the best interests of the generations which are to follow us in the administration of the affairs of the State and Church.

There are, it seems to me, many and great difficulties which "Caddo," and most others, who write on this subject, seem to overlook. This is especially true as to the particular kind of education insisted upon by him. The doctrine of higher education at public expense is a subject which has not, until recently, agitated the public mind. However, at present, the subject is receiving very general attention, and both pros and cons are being heard. There seems to be a limit to the possibilities of men, and, so far as my reading extends, the thorough education of all the people has never yet been reached by any State or nation in any age of the world.

The amount of revenue necessary to put each citizen through a collegiate course would be far in excess of the richest treasury of any State or nation. The great State of Texas, whose educational resources are said to be in advance of any State in the Union, does not aim higher than a common-school education; and yet about twenty-seven per cent. of her educable population are without facilities for education. The want of funds is not, however, the only nor even the chief difficulty in the way. There are a great variety of philosophies—many schools of thinkers and writers. In a political organization, the scientific and literary qualifications only are looked to in the selection of teachers.

Text-books are chosen, not so much on the merit of the book, as on the competing price at which publishers sell those books. Mental culture is the only aim of the free-school system, the law making no sort of provision for the moral culture of the scholars, or students rather.

To continue the education of the boy, under such circumstances, through an entire course of education, is but to root and ground him in the fallacies and errors of such training. Instead of the tax for which "Caddo" asks, I would suggest a thorough revision of the school laws of the State. The Bible, "without note or comment," should be placed in the course of study. Teachers should be required to sustain a good moral character—not merely a good social standing. The times are unfortunately upon us, when to say that A. B. has a fine social standing does not mean that the said A. B. does not drink, game and swear—nor even that he is not a man, in some respects, of very loose habits. The operations of the system should be kept within the limit of the revenue, in providing for and imparting a common-school education.

Suitable houses and appurtenances should be provided, suitable text-books furnished, and all else necessary to the greatest success of the system.

If "Caddo" will stop a moment, I think I can show him one of the troubles with the public-school system of Louisiana. Beside the $10,000 which the State owes the "Louisiana State University and A. and M. College," that school gets $2,950 out of the revenues of 1890. The "State Normal School" gets $12,500, and the "Colored University," in New Orleans, gets $10,000—$25,450. Summing it all up, this will be found to be from $65 to $75 per capita for tuition alone—somewhat more than $12 or $14, as suggested by "Caddo." Now add to this sum—say, $65 per annum—board, lights, fuel, washing, etc.—from $11 50 to $16 per month for the session of ten months—and you have the cost of each student in these "higher" schools, ranging from $181 to $235.

It is true that this calculation includes repairs and insurance of school property; but it is school money hurled down in these higher schools all the same, and it represents the actual cost of sending these to school. Now comes the real trouble. Two or three "higher" schools being all that any State is able to run, it monopolizes this department of education without providing adequate accommodations. Of this $181, the State pays $65; and of the $235, the State pays $75. The effect is a direct bid for patronage from all individual enterprises, not backed up by the State treasury.

Against this gift of tuition by the State colleges, every other college in the land has to contend. So, if the president of Lake Charles College (or any other) proposes to take your son or daughter for $181 or $235, these State colleges come up and propose to take them for $65 or $75 less!

In this view of the subject, it seems to me, that unless the State can accomplish what has never yet been accomplished by any State—i. e., furnish higher education for all the people—it had better let "higher education" alone, and go more generally into the "common-school" work.

ST. BERNARD.

To the Members of the Mississippi Conference.

Dear Brethren: Permit me to call your attention to the collection for church extension, and to remind you of the importance of our meeting in full the assessment made on us. It is not necessary to say anything of the great good accomplished by this fund from year to year. The excellent results, both in our own Conference and beyond, are apparent to all. The department of church extension, wisely administered as it is, includes all good enterprises in one.

The contributions to this cause in the Mississippi Conference have advanced steadily each year from the beginning, showing that our people have a growing estimate of its importance.

It is gratifying to report that the assessment of last year was paid in full, our Conference being one of the two in the whole church thus coming up to the mark. Shall we not do even better this year? The treasurer, Rev. J. A. Ellis, informs me that several pastoral charges—Crystal Springs, Vicksburg, West Jackson, Brandon and Vancleave circuit—have already forwarded this claim in full. Let us not fall behind them. Fraternally,

E. H. MOUNGER,
Sec. of Board of Church Ex., Miss. Conf.

Notice.

To the Claimants on the Conference Fund of the Mississippi Conference, Their Friends and Kindred—

Dear Sisters and Brethren: It is the desire of the Joint Board of Finance that every preacher who has borne the burden and heat of the day shall be comfortably cared for; that every widow shall realize that there are eyes to pity and hands to help her; that every orphan shall find in its father's Conference the fostering care of a loving mother and tender father.

In order to realize these desires, we point you to I. Tim. v, 8. You may have a different view of this subject; but the committee and the church at large look upon the Conference fund as a sacred charity.

The Joint Board of Finance is not a pension bureau, but a Board of Charities. Let every claimant write to us, and let no one expect or ask for aid unless they are in want. Let no son or daughter permit a beloved father or mother to live on the charities of a willing people while they have enough and to spare.

Now, may the God of all grace minister to your every want, and help us not only to sympathize with you, but to help you, as the beloved of heaven, to await, in peace of mind and heart, the coming of our Lord!

From the Work.

PLEASANT HILL CIRCUIT, LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

The good work on Pleasant Hill circuit still goes on. Since I last wrote you I have held several meetings, and the Lord has abundantly blessed us. Our meeting at Mount Pleasant, in August, was a grand success. We held a ten days' meeting there, protracting the Quarterly Conference, in which I was alone after Sunday, the presiding elder leaving me at that time; yet I was not alone, for the Lord was there in great power, reclaiming and converting the souls of many. Result: Family altars, prayer meeting, and a Sabbath-school.

At Marthaville, the first of this month, Bro. McVoy, Jr., was with me, and did most excellent work, preaching with power. Several conversions and accessions.

At Beulah, however, the greatest manifestations of the Spirit's presence have been given. In July we had a meeting there, when the fire began to burn; and when our camp meeting opened there, last Friday night, the work began at once, and through the entire meeting, which closed Tuesday night, there was great interest, the Spirit of blessing descending in pentecostal showers, and all declared it to be the best meeting they had had there for ten or twelve years. We had seventeen accessions and about twenty-five conversions. A young men's prayer meeting was organized at the close, a number pledging themselves to attend and carry forward the work already begun. Bro. Boltz, who is a man of power, was with us after Saturday. May the Lord reward him according to his work! Bro. Holliday came in on Monday, and did good service. We are thankful to God for these brethren, and for the great work he has done among us. The tent-holders have appointed Friday night before the fourth Sabbath in August, of next year, for the opening of the camp meeting at this place.

You will thus see how good the Lord has been to us up here. We have had fifty-three accessions and about fifty conversions up to the present. To God be all the praise!

W. F. HENDERSON.

LIVE OAK.

We held the fourth quarterly meeting for Live Oak circuit at Friendship Church, in the northwest corner of Livingston parish, September 27 and 28. The attendance was large, both of officials and of the people, to hear the gospel. Bro. Denson reported seventy-five accessions and seven applicants this quarter. The presiding elder's assessment was paid in full, and all other claims reported in full except for the pastor in charge, and there were good assurances that his salary would be paid in full, probably overpaid. John S. Lee was granted license to preach.

This circuit has had a prosperous year. It has made a good beginning for a new circuit. Those who know this section of Livingston parish—its palmetto and cane-brakes, slashes of mud and water, and its dense jungles—will be gratified to know that there is such a rapid development in every respect, especially in religion. There are some small plots of excellent land. A brother, with whom we dined, said he made eight bales of cotton on five acres last year; also one of his neighbors made eight bales on six acres. This year he expects to make a bale to the acre on all the land he cultivates in cotton. This was without fertilizers. This gentleman had a small negro boy waiting about the house, who was said to be the only negro in five miles of that place. Labor is very scarce. Another brother, with whom I stopped, said that he had never owned a lock. Inference: Honest people live in that country.

WATERHOLES, MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

I want to tell the readers of the ADVOCATE something about Waterholes. It is one of the pioneer churches in South Mississippi, and is where those good and grand old Christians, "Uncle Quiney and Aunt Patty"—also Judge Lemuel Lewis, Stephen Regan, Luke Conerly, and others—used to worship God. These have all gone up higher; but their strength of character and influence for good is yet manifesting itself, for the members have just completed a new house for worship, which is more convenient and more comfortable than the old one was.

The third Quarterly Conference for the China Grove circuit has just been held here, and we had been praying for a spiritual feast at that time; so when Bro. Lewis (W. B.) came, he preached from Galatians v, 16 ("Walk in the Spirit, and ye shall not fulfill the lust of the flesh"), just such a sermon as we wanted to hear, full of the Holy Ghost. In all, he preached four sermons for us; all with power, and in the spirit of the Master. The last one, on Consecration, from St. John xvii, 19, did our hearts good, and we will live nearer to God in the future.

Waterholes has always paid its assessment, but from this time on will work mightily for the salvation of souls. Pray for us, that our hearts may always be aglow with the light of divine truth. Pray especially for me, for I have to subscribe myself as,

All books received will be acknowledged in this column. A fuller notice will depend upon the interests of our readers.

BOOKS.

THE DAVIS MEMORIAL VOLUME. By J. William Jones, D. D. B. F. Johnson & Co., Richmond, Va.

This volume is a brief outline of the life and character of Jefferson Davis. Besides this, the author has gathered choice selections from the world's tribute to his memory, and these will, doubtless, be prized as souvenirs in the homes of the many people who loved the great leader and who revere his character and cherish a remembrance of his many virtues. The book is dedicated to Mrs. Davis, and is published by her authority.

MOTHS AND BUTTERFLIES. By Julia P. Ballard. G. P. Putnam's Sons, New York. For sale by Eyrich, 130 Canal St., New Orleans. Price, $1 50.

This is a revised and enlarged edition of Insect Lives. The entomologist will revel in this beautiful book. The style of the author is clear as crystal. Her descriptions of moths and butterflies make you see them as you never saw them before, and you discover a beauty in them that you never dreamed was there. The illustrations are very fine. The book is brought out in that style of the art for which the Putnams have become very justly celebrated.

ARROWS FROM TWO QUIVERS: Sermons, by Rev. R. H. Rivers, D. D., and Rev. H. C. Morrison, D. D. Barbee and Smith, Nashville, Tenn. Price, $1.

Here are thirty-four sermons—seventeen from each of these preachers. They are as unlike as possible, yet are alike interesting. The subjects are gospel subjects entirely. There is no travelling out into the byways to find themes upon which to interest the reader. Each has poured out his treasures in his own way, and we have a small volume of edifying discourses which will be read with profit by many.

This book is the history of the Forty-ninth Regiment of Massachusetts Volunteers in the late war, and is written in the form of letters. We suppose it will interest all the survivors of that part of the Federal Army.

MAGGIE BRADFORD'S SCHOOLMATES. By Joanna H. Mathews. Frederick A. Stokes Company, New York. For sale by George F. Wharton, New Orleans. Price, $1 25.

This is a very pleasant story told in a pleasing style, and will hold the attention of the young reader from the beginning to the close. The moral of the story is good.

THE SECRET OF SUCCESS.—To young men who would "get on" in this world, and reach the age of fourscore years, with happiness and prosperity, there is little more to be said. But I will refer them to a study of my own rules of action:

Briefly, I would say—Be honest; do not spend as much as you make; don't smoke or drink; depend upon your own personal exertions, and do not leave important affairs to a third person; don't have too many irons in the fire; do not get above your own business, and, above all, be systematic. Advertise your business on all possible occasions; but attend to it, too, and see that your claims and promises made to the public are fulfilled. It does not pay to have a single customer go away dissatisfied. Nor does it pay to take money for services for which you do not render an equivalent.

The best working years of a man's life are usually between twenty-six and sixty; but much good work is possible long after the threescore year mark has been passed. I can say, for myself, that every moment of my time is put to some definite purpose, and, though I have numberless calls and demands, I enjoy a reasonable recreation each day. Both work and rest, and joy also, should make up the sum of a busy life. —P. T. Barnum, in Ladies' Home Journal.

Goodness, like the river Nile, overflows its banks to enrich the soil, and to throw plenty into the country. Goodness is generous and diffusive. It is largeness of mind and sweetness of temper—balsam in the blood, and justice sublimated to a richer spirit. Goodness is justice and somewhat more. Goodness is modest and sincere, inoffensive and obliging: it rullies and disturbs nobody, nor puts anything to pain without necessity.—Collier.

LESSON IV.—October 26.

JESUS IN GETHSEMANE.

Luke xxii, 39-53.

TIME.—Thursday evening of Passion Week.

PLACE.—An olive-garden near Jerusalem; a favorite resort of the Master. Probably the homestead of a friend.

39. And he came out... as he was wont—The garden or small farm of Gethsemane, "the oil press," which is about half a mile from the city, probably belonged to a disciple; possibly to St. Mark. Judas knew the spot, and had ascertained that Jesus was going there. The walk would be under the full pastchal moon, amid the deep hush that falls over an Oriental city at night. Although the exact spot of this struggle can not be determined with certainty, the general position of Gethsemane is clear; and then, as now, the checkering moonlight, the gray leaves, the dark-brown trunks, the soft greensward, the ravine with Olivet towering over it to the eastward, and Jerusalem to the west, must have been the main external features of a place which must be regarded with undying interest, while time shall be, as the place where the Savior of the world entered alone into the valley of the shadow.

40. The place—Luke neither gives the name Gethsemane nor describes it as "a garden." It is with him simply "the place" to which our Lord was wont to resort. He said unto them—First he left eight of them to sleep under the trees while he withdrew with Peter and James and John, whom he told to watch and pray. Pray that ye enter not into temptation—The words are suggestive (1) as throwing light on the meaning of the "temptation" clause in the Lord's prayer, which the disciples were now to use in all the fullness of its meaning; (2) as indicating that our Lord was himself about to enter on a time of temptation, to which he was called, and from which he would not shrink. And yet he, too, as the sequel shows, could utter a prayer which was in substance identical with that which he taught the disciples to use.

41. He was withdrawn—Literally, he was taken away, or, he tore himself away (comp. xxi, 1), showing the reluctance with which he parted from this support of loving sympathy, under the imperious necessity of passing through his darkest hour alone. About a stone's cast—A customary measurement in the Greek and Roman writers. This descriptive touch, implying a report coming directly or indirectly from an eyewitness, is peculiar to St. Luke. Kneeled down—"And fell on his face." Matt. xxvi, 39. And prayed—Literally, and was praying. The tense of this verb implies continuous and sustained prayer.

42. If thou be willing—This prayer does not imply the least feeling of revolt; for Jesus is ready to accept the Father's answer, whatever it may be. What if nature rises within him against this punishment? This repugnance is legitimate. It was not with the view of suffering thus that man received from God a body and a soul. This resistance of natural instinct to the will of the spirit—that is to say, to the consciousness of a mission—is exactly what makes it possible for nature to become a real victim, and offering in earnest. So long as the voice of nature is at one with that of God, it may be asked, Where is the victim for the burnt-offering? Sacrifice begins where conflict begins. But at the same time, the holiness of Jesus emerges pure and even perfected from this struggle. Under the most violent pressure the will of nature did not for a single moment escape from the law of the spirit, and ended after a time of struggle in being entirely absorbed in it. Luke, like Mark, gives only the first prayer, and confines himself indicating the others summarily, while Matthew introduces us more profoundly to the progressive steps in the submission of Jesus. How much more really human do our Gospels make Jesus than our ordinary dogmatics! It is not thus that the work of invention would have been carried out by a tradition which aimed at deifying Jesus. Jesus does not for a moment give up the work of human salvation; he asks only if the cross be really the indispensable means of gaining this end; can not God in his unlimited power find another way of reconciliation? Jesus was thus required, even he, to obey without understanding, to walk by faith.

43. There appeared an angel unto him from heaven—The strengthening by means of the angel is physical, and the appearance likewise. This strengthening probably took place between the first and second prayer; and the effect of it is, that he prayed more earnestly (ver. 44) and arrived at the entire resignation expressed in the second and third prayer of St. Matthew's narrative.

44. And being in an agony—The Greek noun primarily describes a "contliot" or "struggle" rather than mere physical pain. The phenomenon described is obviously one which would have a special interest for one of St. Luke's calling, and the four words which he uses, "agony," "drops," "sweat," "more earnestly" (literally, more intensely), though not exclusively technical, are yet such as a medical writer would naturally use. They do not occur elsewhere in the New Testament. More earnestly—No wonder. He is in a veritable death-struggle, and summons up, therefore, all his energies to an unremitting struggle of prayer. The most striking commentary on this expression is given undoubtedly by the Epistle to the Hebrews, which also bears a thoroughly Pauline coloring, where strong crying and tears are spoken of, with which our Lord offered up his prayers and supplications to him who was able to save him from death. It was not a course of mere shrinking from death and pain, which even the meanest nature can overcome, but the mysterious burden of the world's guilt—the shrinking of a sinless being from the depths of Satanic hate and horror through which he was to pass. As it were great drops of blood—The intention of the evangelist seems clearly to be to convey the idea that the sweat was (not fell like, but was) like drops of blood, that is, colored with blood, for so I understand the word, as just distinguishing the drops highly colored with blood from pure blood.

45. He found them sleeping for sorrow—Sorrow induces sleeplessness in its first stages, but when very great (and long continued) it may so weary down the whole outer and inner man that one, as it were, sinks into a stupor. Nor do the evangelists tell us that it was a common, sound (normal) sleep.

46. Why sleep ye?—"Simon, why sleepest thou?" The account of Luke is too brief for us to have been able to get from it alone a satisfactory explanation of the case. We must conceive that our Lord after the third prayer so entirely recovered his composure that the sight of the still sleeping disciples now no longer distressed and disquieted him. He granted them, on the other hand, this refreshment, which, on this whole terrible night was not again to fall to their lot, and himself for some moments guards their last transient rest.

47. Behold a multitude—Composed of Levitical guards under their "general;" a Roman chiliarch ("tribune"), with some soldiers, part of a maniple or cohort from the fort of Antonia (John xviii, 12), and some priests and elders. One of the twelve—It seems as if in narrating the scene the evangelists unconsciously add the circumstances which to their mind branded the deed with its first horror. To kiss him—It is probable from the known customs (1) of the Jews and (2) of the early Christians that this was the usual salutation of the disciples to their Master. St. John, it may be noted, makes no mention of the sign; probably because here, as elsewhere, he seeks to give touches that others had passed over rather than to repeat what the oral or written teaching of the church had already made familiar.

48. With a kiss—He exclaimed, "Rabbi, hail;" but received no "Peace to thee" in reply. Overacting his part, he not only kissed his Lord, but kissed him fervently.

49. Lord, shall we smite with the sword?—The bringing of the sword was part of the misconception which Jesus had not cared further to remove at the supper; and if Judas had pressed into the inclosure they might have been entirely unaware as yet of the number of the captors. Future years would teach them that Christ's cause is served by dying, not by killing.

50. The servant of the high priest—Malchus.

51. Suffer ye thus far—Probably addressed to the captors, and meaning, Excuse thus much resistance, or "Allow me the liberty thus far"—Free my arms a moment that I may heal this wounded man. These snatches of dialogue—often of uncertain interpretation from their fragmentary character—are inimitable marks of genuineness. It was probably during this pause that all his disciples—even Peter, even John—"forsook him and fled."

52. Unto the chief priests... which were come to him—The expression shows that these venerable persons had kept themselves safely in the background until all danger was over. It is evident that the whole band dreaded some exertion of miraculous power. As against a thief—Rather, a brigand or robber. Am I one of the Sicarii, or bandits? It is a reproach to them for their cowardice and secrecy. "If I had really done wrong, how is it you did not arrest me in the temple!"

53. The "sitting" in the temples of Matt. xxvi, 55, implied that our Lord took the position of a teacher more or less recognized as such, not that of one who was addressing the multitude without authority. This is your hour, and the power of darkness—A reproach to them for their base, illegal, midnight secrecy. The power of darkness—Rather, the authority. The power is not independent, but delegated or permitted, since the death of Christ is a part of a divine plan.

The Minimum Christian.

The minimum Christian! And who is he? The Christian who is going to heaven at the cheapest rate possible. The Christian who intends to get all of the world he can, and not meet the worldling's doom. The Christian who aims to have as little religion as he can, without lacking it altogether.

The minimum Christian goes to church in the morning, and in the afternoon also, unless it rains, or is too warm or too cold, or he is sleepy, or has the headache from eating too much dinner. He listens most respectfully to the preacher, and joins in prayer and praise. He applies the truth very sensibly sometimes to himself, oftener to his neighbors.

The minimum Christian is very friendly to all good works. He wishes them well, but it is not in his power to do much for them. The Sabbath-school he looks upon as an admirable institution, especially the neglected and ignorant. It is not convenient, however, for him to take a class. His business engagements are so pressing through the week that he needs Sabbath as a day of rest; nor does he think himself qualified to act as a teacher. There are so many better prepared for this important duty that he must beg to be excused; still, he will do it if he must. He is in favor of visiting the poor, but he has no time to take part in those labors of love. He is very friendly to home and foreign missions, and gives his mite. He thinks there are "too many appeals," but he gives, if not enough to save his reputation, pretty near it; at all events, he aims at it.

The minimum Christian is not clear on a number of points. The opera and dancing, perhaps the theater and card-playing, large fashionable parties, give him much trouble. He can't see the harm in this, or that, or the other popular amusements. There is nothing in the Bible against it. He does not see but a man may be a Christian and dance or go to the opera. He knows several excellent persons who do. Why should not he?

In short, the minimum Christian knows that he can not serve God and mammon. He would if he could, and he will come out just as near doing as he can. But what if he came out mammon's side?—Epworth Herald.

House-to-House Visitation, and Why It Is Needed.

A correspondent, signing himself "A Visitor," makes the following trenchant observations on the importance of house-to-house visitation: In all our cities, there is only too much need of this amongst the people living near our places of worship. Visitation of members of society and of the congregation is important, but not so important as this. The artisan rarely hears the gospel message except from some more or less excited open-air preacher. He doesn't read tracts, even when these are left at his house. He won't accept as a sign of real interest in him the annual delivery of a handbill announcing special services. He thinks religion is "humbug," and sometimes, perhaps, has too much cause so to think. Look at his past history, and the state of his heart and of his mind will cease to be a matter of wonder. He left Sunday-school at sixteen, or before, feeling "too big" for the class. He didn't come in to the church from the school, but he found companions who spent their Sundays in walks or in idleness. He heard in the workshop almost every week "religious discussions" in which the member of the Secularist Society was able to show that there were, at least, difficulties in the way of religious belief. Then he saw what looked like inconsistency in a good many people who professed and called themselves Christians. Thus, bit by bit he went on, until, like King-ley's "Tom Thurnal y," all the religion he had left was "love for his dear old father." Since then he has for years taken the Sunday edition of a paper in which clerical scandals have a special prominence, and so he has fortified his opinion that "religion is a sham." How is this man to be influenced? Experience has shown that he won't come to special services, for even when a popular evangelist is about, the congregation is chiefly made up of people from other churches or chapels. From a little experience, I am convinced that the most effective agency in dealing with men of this class is direct personal contact with them in their homes. Not that such men will welcome you at first; but if a call is made on some afternoon, and the wife and children are favorably impressed, the husband will generally be not unwilling to welcome a minister (or layman) a few evenings later. This is work for which "sanctified common sense" is needed, and for the results of which it is often necessary to possess one's soul in patience; but until such work is more generally taken up, there will be empty pews in our churches, a large preponderance of women in our congregations, and the hard-handed son of toil will be conspicuous by his absence.—Methodist Times, London.

"It is a fact" that Hood's Sarsaparilla does cure scrofula, salt rheum, and other diseases or affections arising from impure state or low condition of the blood, overcomes that tired feeling, creates a good appetite, and gives strength to every part of the system. Try it.

A Country Charge.

Scarcely any young man of even modern ability can fail, after proper preparation, to find a neglected country field of Christian labor, where by patient effort in the lines marked out by heavenly appointed means he can win more than 100 souls back to paths of righteousness and lead them to seats of everlasting glory. And among these hundred stars of his crown it is more than likely there will be some of special brilliancy who shall be a guiding light to thousands more.

The seductions of the city and the very bustle of its activities militate against the permanent influence of the preacher. The audience goes out from the sound of the metropolitan preacher's voice to listen to a very Babel of voices of every description and upon every class of subjects, and to have their eyes dazzled with the display of those who have become suddenly rich. Calm reflection is almost impossible, even for the youngest. But how different in the country, where the educated minister can by his mental attainments easily lead the thought of the whole community, and, with the young, follow up the impressions of one week with those of the next; and thus secure the cumulative force of continuous effort. The opportunity for study, also, which is open to the pastor of the country church, as compared with that of the city pastor, is of the greatest importance, both to his present and to his future work. Happy is the pastor whom Providence permits to begin the arduous work of his calling in some country parish, where he can command the situation rather than have the situation command him, and where in comparative quiet he may go over again, amid the practical affairs of life, the great themes of the gospel which he is to preach.—Prof. G. Frederick Wright, in Bibliotheca Sacra.

Hood's Sarsaparilla

Is a peculiar medicine. It is carefully prepared from Sarsaparilla, Dandelion, Mandrake, Dock, Pipsissewa, Juniper Berries, and other well-known and valuable vegetable remedies, by a peculiar combination, proportion and process, giving to Hood's Sarsaparilla curative power not possessed by other medicines. It effects remarkable cures where other preparations fail.

Hood's Sarsaparilla

Is the best blood purifier before the public. It eradicates every impurity, and cures Scrofula, Salt Rheum, Boils, Pimples, all Humors, Dyspepsia, Biliousness, Sick Headache, Indigestion, General Debility, Catarrh, Rheumatism, Kidney and Liver Complaints, overcomes that tired feeling, creates an appetite, and builds up the system.

Hood's Sarsaparilla

Has met peculiar and unparalleled success at home. Such has become its popularity in Lowell, Mass., where it is made, that whole neighborhoods are taking it at the same time. Lowell druggists sell more of Hood's Sarsaparilla than of all other sarsaparillas or blood purifiers. Sold by druggists. $1; six for $5. Prepared only by C. I. HOOD & CO., Apothecaries, Lowell, Mass.

The Voice

Is easily injured by the slightest irritation of the throat or larynx at once affecting its tone, flexibility, or power. All efforts to sing or speak in public, under such conditions, become not only painful but dangerous, and should be strictly avoided until every symptom is removed. To effect a speedy cure no other medicine is equal to

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral

The best of anodynes, this preparation rapidly soothes irritation, strengthens the delicate organs of speech, and restores the voice to its tone and power. No singer or public speaker should be without it. Lydia Thompson, the famous actress, certifies: "Ayer's Cherry Pectoral has been of very great service to me. It improves and strengthens the voice, and is always effective for the cure of colds and coughs."

"Upon several occasions I have suffered from colds, causing hoarseness and entire loss of voice. In my profession of an auctioneer any affection of the voice or throat is a serious matter, but at each attack, I have been relieved by a few doses of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. This remedy, with ordinary care, has worked such a that I have suffered very little inconvenience. I have also used it in my family, with excellent results, in coughs, colds, &c."—Wm. H. Quartly, Minlaton, Australia.

"In the spring of 1853, at Portsmouth, Va., I was prostrated by a severe attack of typhoid pneumonia. My physicians exhausted their remedies, and for one year I was not able to even articulate a word. By the advice of Dr. Shaw I tried Ayer's Cherry Pectoral, and to my surprise and great joy, in less than one month I could converse easily, in a natural tone of voice. I continued to improve and have become since a well man. I have often recommended the Pectoral, and have never known it to fail."—George R. Lawrence, Valparaiso, Ind.

A Model Church.

The church at Philippi was the model church of New Testament times. It lived, prospered and did well seven years, or more, without a pastor or preacher. Indeed, the membership strove harder to do the right thing in the absence of the preacher. Paul says of them, "Ye have always obeyed, not as in my presence only, but now much more in my absence." They were not eye-servants, men-pleasers. They knew that God was present all the time working in them to will and to do of his good pleasure, and so they worked out their own salvation. They had it to do by themselves, without a pastor, according to the divine movings. This church grew strong because it worked. Exercise made the membership strong. They kept up their prayer meetings, class meetings, love-feasts and public services; and they took up their public collections and sent their contributions to Paul, who was in prison at Rome during nearly half of this seven years. No great wonder the apostle loved this church with peculiar tenderness! Too often it happens that for the preacher to be out of sight is to be out of mind; and so if he is absent, he goes unpaid. If he goes away unpaid, why it is just so much made. Not so with this church. They provided for the preacher while he was in prison, and sent one of the stewards to carry the money and provisions to him. We repeat, This was a model church. There was none other like it then, and there are, comparatively, few like it now.

The church at Philippi had a good beginning. It began in the conviction and conversion of the jailer—rather a bad character to begin with: but he got religion, and that made a new man out of him. He never forgot, and did not allow his church to forget, his obligation, and theirs, to Paul and Silas—particularly to Paul.

A church that begins as this one did, and keeps itself at white-heat by constant work for the Master, never falls from grace nor fails in the collections. A church that grows in grace always abounds in liberality. These two things always go together. The financial test of a gracious state is eminently sound and scriptural. The church at Philippi did what they did because they loved Christ and his ministers. The only possible way in which they could make a practical exhibition of their love for the Master, was by providing for the wants of his minister. This they did for Christ's sake. The same motive is in the hearts of all lovers of our Lord now.

So far as the record goes, Paul had held but one public service in that city, and had performed no pastoral or ministerial function except to baptize the jailer and his family; and yet seven years after this we find this church contributing to his support. They recognized the obligation to support the ministry, and, having no pastor of their own, they did the next best thing—sent their money to the nearest and neediest preacher they knew. They did not niggle and haggle about the lack of preaching or the want of pastoral work, as if glad of a pretext to keep from paying the preacher. They gave as unto the Lord, and not to man; as a religious duty, a means of grace to their own souls, and not as so many dollars for so many sermons and social visits. I say "social visits," because the public demand for pastoral visiting is not nearly so great as some people think it is. The need for it is great, but the need is one thing and the demand quite another.

Paul, as bishop of that diocese, was anxious to send Timothy to this church, not because Timothy was a star-spangled-banner preacher, but because he "had no man like-minded who would naturally care for their state." He would send Timothy if he could, or come himself if God opened the way; but, pastor or no pastor, he urged them to do as they had been doing: "Work out their own salvation as God worked in them to do his will."

God works in all his people to do his will; and if all his people were trying as hard to work out their own salvation as was the church at Philippi, then model churches would be more numerous than they now are.

Men of Timothy's mind and churches of the Philippian mould have a wonderful affinity for each other. Deeply pious preachers are never in great demand by dead churches—never. He is too religious and not literary enough to suit our people. "If our gospel be hid, it is hid to them that are lost."

Paul commended and complimented the Philippians for their faith, zeal and liberality as he condemned and shamed the Corinthians for their worldliness and sensuality, as he should have done in both cases, and as judicious and faithful pastors do now. If the church is not living right, say so; but if worthy, commend. A word of commendation helps the church, as it encourages and stimulates the preacher. Don't withhold the meed of praise when worthily won. It is apostolic, Pauline.

GILDEROY.

On Praying

We heard two prayers recently that set us to moralizing: one was that of our declamatory Brother Show-off, which so dazzled the hearers that they quite forgot "the manna and quails," which were its less brilliant, but more substantial objective; and the other was that of Brother Wind-to-a-close, which, whatever effect it may have had upon the Being addressed, put the hearers into a sound slumber. If we wanted to be critical, we would say of the former that it was malapert, and of the latter that it was maladroit, but we do not, and have actually been driven to this statement by the conviction that malapertness is not the worst that can be said of the former, nor maladroitness of the latter. The Lord, we are persuaded, can often forgive blunders as well as blunderers, when he can not forgive heartlessness, and will even smile upon the mawkish attempts of the former to reach him as a mother upon the first steps of her first-born, while he has only frowns and fury for triflers. The man who can pray without trembling either has too good an opinion of himself, or too bad of his Lord, or too mean of the holy privilege of prayer. What is speech to him who has desire; or sentences of gold to him that has faith which will remove mountains; or a sweet voice and confident manner to him who has an infusion of divinity, and whose soul is up in arms to scale the walls behind which is concealed the spoil to be taken in lameness. Those many who quote the apostle as saying, "The prayer of the upright man availeth much," utterly pervert Scripture, as well as furnish us with a diagnosis of prayer which the sacred writer could never have been led to approve. What he said was, "The effectual fervent prayer of a righteous man availeth much," and what is said of the fruitful beseeching of Elias, in the same connection, is not that "he prayed," but that "he prayed earnestly." "Ask," "seek," "knock," said Jesus, with the rising inflection. The prayer of the widow, which he offered as a model, excelled in nothing but bare importunacy, and of the neighbor who begged three loaves in the night-season, in nothing but the strenuous insistence which will not take "no" for an answer. Looking back through the mists of ages for models in prayer and prayerfulness, we see Jesus himself whole weeks in the desert, and whole nights in the frost-crowned summits of mountains. We have often wished for the text of that prayer that was sprinkled with the bloody sweat, and of which only the groans and the agonized posturings have been preserved to us, and of that at Peniel which brought the Superior Light through the gates of dawn, and of that which shook the heavens at Pentecost until they flowed. Nor is this desire to fail of consummation, for we shall find them all at last in some gold and vellum receptacle of our Father's house, word for word, and sound for sound, as they fell upon the camera of fire and were taken up by an angelic guard. Surely there is no excuse, as there is no scriptural precedent, for languid prayer, for if our desire is weak and the fountain of our affection will not flow, we may suffer another to speak for us who standeth indeed within our heart as the angel of the Apocalypse in the sun, and "maketh intercession for us with groanings which can not be uttered." "Lord, teach us how to pray," was a petition which long antedated Pentecost, and which was, doubtless, provoked by despair of that infinite praying model who stood before the weak suppliants. But, looked at from an inartistic standpoint, what is more eloquent than prayer. "Prayer is the flight of the soul into the bosom of its God," said one who had often felt its ballast under him in such exploiting. We lately visited the scene of an eloquent minister's labors in another part of the State, and covering many years, to find that of his faithful and distinguished toils, nothing was remembered so vividly as a Sabbath morning's prayer at a camp meeting, upon whose wind of devotion he had carried the listeners with him to heaven. We have a book in our library, entitled "The Lost Truths of Christianity," and in this connection we have thought it might be worth somebody's time to pen a companion volume on "The Lost Arts" of the same great subject, and to devote the introductory chapter to the topic of this brief article. J. M. B.

How to Save the Boys and Girls.

This is the question of questions. It involves the existence and well-being, not only of the State, but of the Church. Those who watch movements, social and religious, may well be alarmed at the thousands of youth unsaved, recklessly bent hellwards. How to stop them, and how to stay the increase of the number, is the duty of every Christian to prayerfully consider and actively prevent, if possible. The church is more fully alive to this need than ever. She is seeking by new labors, societies and attractions to draw the young into her fold and to hold them closer to Christ, the center of life. Her efforts are cheeringly successful, but alas fall far, very far short of what should be done. And why? Is this work impracticable? Can not our young men and young women be saved? Must they go down wrecked, forcing into untimely graves heart-broken mothers and fathers? If not, let the Christians of each church awake to the rescue; let every Sunday-school superintendent and teacher redouble their efforts; let every watchman in Zion, with unabating zeal, prayer and faith, continue lovingly to woo the lambs into the Shepherd's fold; but, above all, let parents redouble their vigilance and holy watch over their children.

No power equals a Christian mother's in leading souls to Christ. A godly woman wields a tremendous heart-force; and when it bears upon the child God has given her, what can equal it? How fearfully guilty the parent that blindly refuses to use this God-given power and opportunity! Moments and circumstances are within their reach, with their household treasures available by no others; impressions for or against Christianity are made by them not possible by anyone else. Mothers and fathers have within their control destinies not allotted to other kindred, friends or associates. Boys and girls are the product of all the past and the foundation-strata of the future. The temple that is to be will depend largely upon the material used in its construction to-day, for each layer of stones is permeated with the one it rests upon and impregnates with its capillary force each atom of the stone above it.

"No man liveth to himself" is true in more senses than one. Then how important the qualities of the material in this spiritual structure! Who is to prepare souls for use by the Master-builder? Principally, Christian mothers and fathers. Not pastors, nor Sunday-school teachers mainly; but those to whose hearts the little ones are closest and dearest, who are bone of your bone and blood of your blood—yes, life of your life.

"Can we save our precious ones?" the writer hears thousands of tender, loving parents ask. I answer, unhesitatingly, Yes; because the Bible says, "Train up a child in the way he should go and when he is old he will not depart from it." Again, to meet the cry of the unwise, God says, "If any man lack wisdom, let him ask of God, who giveth to all men liberally." With these precepts and the added promises who need fail; and if we fail, whose fault must it be?

But we Methodists believe in testimony. Where can such instances of fulfilment of the promise in the above precept be found? I answer: In hundreds of families all over Christendom. But to be explicit, will state I know of a widow in New Orleans who was left with four little boys and a girl. These boys are now grown, everyone of them working Christians, consecrated to Christ, ornaments in society, models in business life, and students. How has she done this? By a queenly life of Christliness arching over these children. No care, thought or pains spared to lead them to high and holy aspirations. Home was made the brightest and happiest place to them on earth. They went to church, to prayer meeting and to Sunday-school with mother. She gave herself up to their development and pleasure. She had them taught music and other accomplishments, and made home the center of their thoughts.

I know, at least, a dozen families of different degrees in social life whose children are all members of the church and recognized leaders in Christian work. Some of these are families of bishops and preachers. But I will only describe a family I recently visited at Pearlington, Miss., where a godly father and mother—the backbone of our church at that place—have reared a family of seven children, all of whom are saved, and all but the baby-boy are workers for Jesus—nearly all of whom at a recent public meeting confessed Christ and voluntered to devote themselves to his service. This occurred in a town where until lately there had been no spiritual life, no outflowing of the Holy Spirit for years; it had been considered a dead town. How have these Christian parents accomplished this result? By living godly lives before their children, leading them to their Savior when at mother's and father's knee, teaching them what it means to be holy, showing in their godly lives the truth that directs and blesses all who obey and honor God. These parents filled home with pure joys, with pleasures, bright and lasting. Music, flowers, cheerful Christian fellowship and other kindred delights make the young people of that entire community recognize that home as the most charming place in that vicinity. How to save the boys and girls? Save them at home by Christian effort, God-blest at the fireside.

A Special Gift to Centenary College.

MR. EDITOR: I have just received from a generous friend of Christian education in Atlanta, Ga., one thousand dollars in cash, the interest of which is to be used in aiding young men studying for the ministry in Centenary College. This gift came to be made in the following way: This pious servant of God read, as he told me, in the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE of what the church is trying to do in educating her ministers at Centenary College, and thereupon resolved that he would help in the great work, even with the moderate means which God had given him. He wrote to me enquiring how he should carry out his wish. I gave him such suggestions and attentions as have resulted in the gift above mentioned, which he intimates is not to be his last. The author of this benefaction is not a man of large means, but is willing to tax himself that he may promote the kingdom of Christ through what he believes to be one of its most powerful agencies—a Christian college. He said when he promised me the gift, "I would wish to do this if I knew that I would come to a crust of bread." He has set an example which I hope will prove provoking to many. He has planted a tree which I trust will not only grow itself, but be the first of many like it whose fruits shall gladden the church for generations to come.

The fund will bear his name, and will bear also the blessings of his generous soul to thousands who in future years shall hear the Word of God from the lips of those whom his beneficence has equipped to speak it.

W. L. C. HUNNICUTT.

Millsaps College Notes.

Macon, on last Sunday, increased her contribution to Millsaps College by a collection amounting to $281 75.

On the same day Bishop Galloway presented the cause at Rolling Fork and raised $351 55.

Millsaps College Day was observed at Edwards on Sunday, October 5, and a cash collection of $16 50 was taken.

This speaks well for the zeal of Bro. Nicholson and his liberal people, since within the last three months the agent presented the claims of the college at that point and secured subscriptions amounting to nearly $600.

Now let the reports come in, and let every Mississippi Methodist take part in this general effort for the endowment of the college. A. F. WATKINS.

Notes.

"The live pastor is enthusiastic, ambitious; above all, ever in quest of new victories for his Master's honor."

"Every little thing, as surely as a great one, involves a great principle; and no great principle can be counted a little thing.'"

The perishing around us need something more than our sympathy. They need our time, talents and energies expended in efforts to save them.

Why do our obituary writers put poetry in their obituaries, when the poetry never does appear in the paper? Can anybody answer this question?

"How much of that which is worst in us is a result of our living within ourselves instead of living for others, and in the light that others shed upon our pathway!"

Northwestern Christian Advocate:

We have known some sallow, cadaverous clergymen, who never have any fun, sit an hour talking of their indigestion, go to the table and eat dinner enough to satisfy an athlete, and then devote half the following afternoon doubting whether justification is by faith after all.

"How shall we reach the masses?" Turn the masses into units, and let each Christian go after one unit, and in one year's time, instead of twenty millions, this land will contain sixty millions of Christians!

Northwestern Christian Advocate:

If by some beneficent catastrophe each preacher in the world were pastor of three churches ten miles apart, and all were restricted to horse-locomotion; and if, next, all horses were seized by the epizootic—that equine form of the grip—how sermons would improve as the result of pedestrianism!

There are about thirty preachers in the Louisiana Conference who had just as well begin to pack up. We don't know who they all are, nor where they will have to go, and, as this uncertainty exists, we advise every preacher to hold himself in readiness to say, "Here I am; send me."

Many of our pastors, in writing of their revival meetings, have used these words, "This meeting closes the season with us." We suppose the meaning is, that there will be no more protracted meetings. We trust the revival spirit will be fostered, so that the flame will continue to burn all through the winter. Can anyone give a reason why it should not?

"Beware of schism. of making a rent in the church of Christ. That inward disunion, the members ceasing to have a reciprocal love 'one for another,' is the very root of all contention and every outward separation. Beware of everything touching thereto. Beware of a dividing spirit. Shun whatever has the least aspect that way."

The curious thing to us is that Mr. Wesley should so often caution people professing the experience of holiness, or perfect love, against "a dividing spirit." Does the profession of perfect love produce "a dividing spirit"? If not, why so many warnings on that particular point?

"The right man in the right place." We do wish somebody would discover "the right man in the wrong place," or "the wrong man in the right place," or "the wrong man in the wrong place," or make some other discovery that would change the phrase in some way. We think the right man has been in the right place long enough and should give place to some other man in some other place.

Whitworth College, among other attractions, has now a musical department under two celebrated directors: Prof. Bach, of the Conservatory of Munich, who has charge of the piano, organ and theory, and Prof. McKernan, a noted artist, who will teach voice and choral singing. President Fitzhugh is determined to spare neither pains nor money to place Whitworth at the head of Southern colleges, and to keep it there.

We have received the first number of Reapers and Sowers, our new Sunday-school missionary magazine. It is an illustrated monthly of 16 pages published for the Sunday-schools of our church. It is 25 cents a year to single subscribers, 15 cents a year to clubs of five, or more, to one address. Now, let all our Sunday-schools supply their scholars with this beautiful monthly, and thus help to educate them into the missionary spirit. Address Barbee and Smith, Nashville.

The Wesleyans are making preparation to celebrate the Centenary of John Wesley's death, which occurred March 2, 1791. One form of the celebration will be the raising of £10,000, to "put Wesley's tomb and the graveyard in which he lies in proper condition; to secure Wesley's house as a permanent Museum of Methodist History and Antiquities, and to give to Wesley's central chapel (City Road)—the mother church of Methodism—thorough, suitable and enduring repair." It will not be amiss for American Methodism to celebrate this centennial in some suitable manner.

Personal and Otherwise.

Another writes that his people—150 Methodist families—take 155 religious papers, 85 of which are the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE. The brother's name is B. F. Philips, and the people make up Black Hawk circuit, in North Mississippi Conference.

Dr. Carradine, fresh from his European and Eastern tour, entertained the preachers' meeting for twenty minutes 1st Monday. The Doctor had a good time generally, gained several pounds in flesh, and looks better and brighter than we have ever seen him. We are sorry we lose him from our work here; but we will follow him with our prayers for a successful work for the Master in his new field. He leaves Thursday evening for St. Louis.

At the close of his fiftieth year in the ministry, Rev. S. Black, of the Western Virginia Conference, asked for a superannuated relation, but was so overcome by emotion he could not talk. He sent to the secretary's desk the following paper, which was read in the hearing of the Conference and the large audience present:

During these fifty years I traveled, at least, 75,000 miles; received $6 181 28, being $137 36 per year. During the same time I received in presents $1,182 61, and $400 36 in marriage fees, making a total of $7,761 24, being $155 28½ per year, having a family thirty-six years of that time.

If "Section Five" of the Franchise article adopted by the Mississippi Convention does not crumble to pieces under the incessant bombardment of the press, then it is made of tougher stuff than we think!

A private note, dated October 9, from Rev. F. S. Parker, our pastor at New Iberia, La., closes with this cheering news: "A revival is in progress here. Six were converted to night."

Bishop Lane, of the Colored Methodist Episcopal Church in America, held the District Conference of his church in this city last week. The Bishop is a great worker, this being his fifteenth District Conference this year. That church is making good progress all over the country, and in this city it is obtaining a strong foothold. We wish it the success which it so eminently deserves.

If you don't send us a notice of your meetings, how can we know enough about them to notice them in the ADVOCATE?

Bishop Keener returned from the Holston Conference last week, and gave the preachers' meeting a very entertaining sketch of the improvements going on in the Tennessee Valley. The Bishop is looking better and stronger than when he left us for Missouri.

A letter from Rev. P. H. Dieffenwierth, a superannuate of the Louisiana Conference residing at Largo, Fla., dated October 8, says: "The lamp of life is burning out quietly. Vitality is low, but I am not sick. I abide in expectant submission and trust that the grace which has sustained me thus far will bring me triumphantly through." We pray that our brother may be graciously sustained to the end.

The North Georgia Conference Woman's Missionary Society has begun the publication of The Little Workers, for the young people of our mission bands. The first number is a complete success. It is an eight-page monthly paper, edited by Miss Annie Maria Barnes, and the price is 25 cents a year. Miss Sallie Stewart, Oxford Ga., is treasurer, to whom all moneys should be sent. Communications should be sent to the editor, Duluth, Ga.

According to the Interior, the Northern Presbyterians gave last year for the support of the church and its enterprises eighteen dollars for each communicant. They gave ninety cents apiece for foreign missions. If we contributed as much for missions, it would amount to $1,080,000!

Bishop Keener preached at Church Street, Sunday morning, and at Broad Street, Sunday night. We heard the morning sermon. He is in fine preaching trim. His voice is clear and penetrating. Outside the balze doors at the entrance of the audience-room, every word, even when uttered on a low key, was audible. It is needless to say the sermon was a fine one. The closing part was especially spiritual and full of meat.—Holston Methodist.

The Christian Guardian:

The stay of the Rev. Dr. Siedd, the representative of the Methodist Church, South, was brief, but he made the impression of being an able man of an excellent spirit. His sermon was impressive, sound and forcible. His address was full of interesting information about Methodism in the South, and his able and comprehensive statement respecting what his church held and taught, showed that it held fast the apostolic doctrines which are characteristic of Methodism with an unfaltering grasp. As our Canadian Methodists are not so well acquainted with the history and achievements of Southern Methodism, it was particularly gratifying to hear of what God had wrought in the "sunny South." It was impossible to listen to the eloquent and instructive address of Dr. Siedd without realizing the truth of Solomon's words: "As cold waters to a thirsty soul, so is good news from a far country."

Rev. J. R. Culpepper held a meeting in Cleveland, Tenn., recently, and 100 persons joined the Methodist Church.

We are under obligations to our old preceptor, Dr. R. H. Rivers, of Louisville, Ky., for a copy of "Arrows from Two Quivers," a book of sermons by himself and Dr. Morrison. We accept the gift as a reminder of pleasant and workful hours at Centenary College during the "early fifties." We have already noticed the book in our "book notices."

Postal Card Reports.

—Rev. J. H. Callaway writes from Eden, La.: "Our meeting at Gray's School-house was a glorious success. Some hard ones were touched; strong men wept and rejoiced. We were hindered some by the weather. Do not know how many conversions, but 13 were received into the church. Praise the Lord, holiness is spreading! Amen!"

—Rev. J. T. Howell, writing of Mt. Vernon circuit, says: "Have held all my meetings. Results: 25 accessions; church revived, demonstrated by new family altars, new prayer meetings, new leaders at public service, new interest in Sunday-school work; church and parsonage repairing. To God be all the glory. Think the collections will be full."

—Rev. Robert P. Howell reports from Floyd, La.: "I have finished my round of protracted meetings, having held four. Some of the results are: About 50 conversions, 4 sanctifications, and about 45 accessions to our church. Conference collections are nearly all up in full. Praise the Lord! Our ensign is, 'Holiness unto the Lord.'"

—Rev. P. Howard writes: "Assisted again by the same two faithful and efficient brethren, Whittington and Wm. Carroll, of the East Feliciana circuit, I have just closed a good meeting at Pipkin's Chapel, St. Helena circuit, resulting in 16 accessions, quite a number of conversions, and a general revival of spiritual and practical religion among the membership. Thanks to the good brethren and praise to the Lord."

—Rev. J. T. Nicholson writes from Edwards, Miss.: "College day and quarterly meeting coming together, Bro. Little preached on Sunday morning in interest of that institution, and gave us a clear, strong sermon on Christian education, and took a collection. Our cash collection for this day is $30, which, added to previous contributions, puts the Edwards endowment fund up to $600, in round numbers. Every assessment will be paid in full. Woman's and juvenile missionary societies organized during this quarter. Every department of the church work is prospering."

—Rev. J. N. Ware writes from Marion, Miss.: "We have about closed the round of our meetings, with some glorious results. Our meeting at Lockhart was a grand success. Eight family altars erected; about 20 conversions and 10 accessions to the church. Lockhart is the place where so many people came out of the church by the holiness move. We took 4 of them back in the church. Rev. J. D. Crymes did us great work there. We have taken in 36 members on the work this year and baptized 15 children. Many people are made to praise God, while others are cold and indifferent. To God be all the glory."

THE SHORTHAND INSTITUTE.

The "record" is claimed for the shorthand system of Messrs. Isaac Pitman & Sons of London, Eng., both for speed and legibility of the notes, and, in this latter respect, it is held to be the best extant in either England or the United States for general reporting and correspondence. It is ably and thoroughly taught in this city (together with type-writing when desired) at No. 234 St. Charles St., by the Rev. Walter Dunstan, who is so well known in this city and State and who has had an experience of over twenty-six years as a practical shorthand writer and teacher. The many prominent positions occupied in this city by former pupils of Mr. Dunstan speak for his ability as a teacher, and as a verbatim reporter his reputation is too well known to require any comment at our hands.

Bro. Dunstan, who is determined that his pupils shall have the benefit of every modern improvement, has just received direct from the Remington factory at Ilion, N. Y., a Remington (Polyglot) machine for the use more especially of his foreign students. This machine writes all modern languages, and will materially facilitate the student in acquiring the art of type-writing. Thoroughly competent lady teachers, who have been especially trained for the purpose, teach those who desire ladies as instructors.

Bro. Dunstan is prepared to attend promptly to all orders for shorthand or type-writing work, and solicits the same, guaranteeing accuracy and promptness.

Church Lighting.

An essential element in the work of every church is a well-lighted sanctuary. A gloomy temple is not a wholesome place to worship in. Cheerfulness belongs to Christianity. The church should be well supplied with windows to admit the sunlight, and supplied with the very best appliances known to science for the artificial light needed for illumination at night. The most efficient dispenser or diffuser of light, either from oil lamp or gas or electric light, is the Reflector manufactured by Mr. I. P. Frink, of this city. There are differences in the quality of reflectors as they are differences in the quality of flour. Competition has brought a number of inferior reflectors into the market. Those who reflect before they buy will buy the Frink reflector.—New York Christian Advocate.

Meridian District.

Dear Brethren: The fourth round of Quarterly Conferences has begun and will end in less than two months. Let these two months be filled with earnest, honest, persistent efforts by laymen as well as preachers to round up the Conference year grandly.

Let the young converts, which number hundreds, be tenderly looked after. Let them be carefully and prayerfully indoctrinated to guard them against proselyters and to establish them in the most holy faith. Let proper sermons be preached. Let proper books be put into their hands. Let the ADVOCATE reach their home circle. Get them to attend class meetings wherever a class leader can be had. No active class leader denotes low spiritual condition.

Let the preachers look closely after the Conference collections. The assessments are all below the ability of the people to pay. Failure at this point will indicate either a want of fidelity on the part of the preacher or a lack of religion on the part of the people. The fourth Quarterly Conference will disclose what the third and the other two suggested with ever-increasing emphasis.

Let the stewards bestir themselves if they have not already done so. The salaries of the preachers are all small enough. A failure to pay in full would be shameful. I have been to every parsonage in the district except one, and I know how the preachers live and how their families pinch and economize. Every dollar, yea, every dime of the salaries is needed, and a grievous wrong will be done if the last dime be not paid.

Let the district parsonage trustees keep the need of a district parsonage before the minds of the people. Let the preachers do the same. Let our men and women of wealth be liberal in their contributions, and let the poor contribute according to their ability, and there will soon be a home for the presiding elder's family—whoever he may be—next year. Altogether, brethren, and this reproach will be taken from the 6,000 Methodists in this district. "Forward! be our watchword." T. L. MELLEN, P. E.

THE RAINDROP ARMY.

BY EMILIE POULSON.

As if a million fairies
Were beating fairy drums,
With soft and gentle tapping,
The Raindrop Army comes!

The frightened little Sunbeams
All hid behind a cloud,
When first they heard the roll call
Of thunder, deep and loud.

And sorry are the children
Who stay in-doors to-day,
Because the Raindrop Army
Is marching on its way.

But soon the West Wind whispers:
"I'll put the troops to rout":
And in a trice the Sunbeams,
And children, too, are out.

Ho! ho! the Raindrop Army!
Its drums no longer sound;
And hark! the West Wind's bugle
Fills all the air around.

Ho! ho! the gorgeous banner
The Sunbeams now display,
As all the Raindrop Army,
Defeated glide away.

The Boy We Like.

The boy we like has a merry, open face, fresh and ruddy with the combined effects of healthful exercise and soap and water. Although not at all pedantic, he always looks neat, and takes care of his clothes, and does not consider it "fun" to use his hat as a football. He prefers a brisk walk, or a football match, to moping over the fire on a winter's afternoon, and if there is skating to be had, he does not think it an "awful nuisance" to take his sisters, but he puts on their skates for them without a murmur. He is fond of reading, but does not mind putting his book aside to join in a juvenile game with the younger members of the household. At school he is a painstaking scholar, and he is quite as earnest in the playground and cricket field, where, although he is an excellent "bat," he is always ready to take his share of "fielding." Though he has not a very musical voice he cheerfully joins the others around the piano, "chiming in," as he expresses it, in the hymns on Sunday evenings. Of course, he is his "mother's pet," but that is not his fault, and he does not enroach upon her kindness towards him for selfish ends. He likes good, hearty, not foolish fun, and never frightens or teases his sisters by throwing spiders or frogs at them. He is kind to animals, and is very gentle with little children. He never minds "holding" the baby—in fact, rather likes it—and that "uncrowned king" is generally "very good" with him. He does wrong things sometimes, but is speedily very sorry, and quickly asks forgiveness. He is usually as readily forgiven as he readily forgives an injury. When asked what he would like to be, he does not quite know, but thinks, in a rather vague kind of way, that he would like to be a carpenter, or a railway guard. He makes boats and things, and is particularly handy in correcting a broken latch, or fixing shelves. His great difficulty is getting up in the morning. He does not grumble if he can not invite his companions home to tea more than three time a week. On Sundays he sits very attentively in the pew, does not look at his watch (a present from his mother) on an average once a minute, eat sweets, or read the hymn book during the sermon. Above all, although the boy we like is human, and has his faults, these he tries to overcome. He has a bright, happy faith in the power and love of his Savior and Master. He tries earnestly to follow him, and endeavors to fulfil his behests in his daily pursuits and pleasures. The boy we like is a "good" boy. His life is happy and useful, and is a foretaste of that still larger life that lies before him in his years of manhood.—London Baptist.

The Prizes of Energy.

Twenty years ago a few young men in London resolved to meet every evening to exchange ideas. The number gradually increased until it was necessary to hire a room. Growing ambitious, they hired lecturers, and many people were brought together. Many of them now trace back their success to this effort at gaining knowledge. Indefatigable industry, coupled with the desire for knowledge, produces great results. Walter Scott, when he was in a lawyer's office, spent his evenings in study. John Britton, the author of architectural works, said: "I studied my books in bed on winter evenings, because too poor to afford a fire." He used every opportunity to read; the books he picked up for a few moments at the book stall helped him, he says. Napoleon had indomitable perseverance and energy. Dr. Livingston, at the age of ten years, working in a factory, bought with his first wages a Latin grammar, and studied it until twelve at night. He studied Virgil and Horace the same way, and finally entered college and was graduated.

Many will ask how they can advance themselves in knwledge. The first thing is determination; the next, perseverance. Walter Scott gave this advice to a young man: "Do instantly whatever is to be done, and take the hours of recreation after business; never before it." Business men often say, "Time is money." But it is more than that to the young man. If used rightly, it is self-improvement, culture, strength and growth of character. The habit of idleness is a hard one to get rid of. The habit of reading anything and everything is weakening to the mind. Books chosen and read with care cultivate the mind and character. The books you read should raise your thoughts and aspirations, strengthen your energy and help you in your work. Thackeray says: "Try to frequent the company of your betters. In books and in life frequent that which is the most wholesome society; learn to admire rightly. Note what great men have admired; they admire great things; narrow spirits admire basely and worship meanly."—Christian at Work.

To Write a Composition.

"The first thing," says the little lad or maiden to whom this task has been assigned, "The first thing is to get a subject."

Let the lad or maiden pause just here long enough to catch this bit of wise advice, given to the readers of the Youth's Companion:

What boy of ten has meditated on "Liberty" or "The Franchise," or what do little American girls know of the Italian palaces, or nightingales, or larks, concerning which they are apt to write verses and tales?

No man or woman can write strongly or nobly of a subject of which he or she knows nothing; how much less likely, then, is a child to do it?

Let John or Jenny, sentenced to "write a composition" for next week, take some matter which is perfectly familiar and also interesting to them—a game of foot-ball, the peculiarities of their pet horse or dog, or some subject of school or village dispute, and candidly set down their secret opinions about it. If they have any common sense, imagination, feeling, or any intellectual talent, it will be manifested on this well-known ground.

The scholar will thus unconsciously learn to express himself simply and forcibly upon everyday matters which, though he may never be called upon in after life to write for publication, will always be an invaluable power to him.

What Mary Gave.

She gave a string and a crooked pin and a great deal of good advice to the three-year-old brother who wanted to play at fishing.

She gave Ellen, the maid, a precious hour to go and visit her sick baby at home, for Ellen was a widow, and left her child with its grandmother while she worked to get bread for both.

She could not have seen them very often if our Mary had not offered to attend the door while she was away.

But this is not all that Mary gave. She dressed herself so neatly, and looked so bright and kind and obliging, that she gave her mother a thrill of pleasure whenever she caught sight of the young, pleasant face.

She wrote a letter to her father, who was absent on business, and gave patient attention to a long story by her grandmother, and when it was ended made the old lady happy by a good-night kiss.

Thus she had given valuable presents to six people in one day, and yet she had not a cent.—The Little Ones.

Household.

Don't Worry.

If you encourage this demon, you will find him your bitterest enemy. The Angel of Death is an awful visitor, and the stoutest hearts quail when he crosses the threshold. Thousands pave the way for him and hasten his coming by allowing themselves to worry. Anyone possessing a nervous temperament finds it quite natural to fret and worry over every trifle that comes in his way, and one must, indeed, possess a great deal of moral force in order to overrule this inclination.

Perhaps many never take the trouble to think what this habit of worrying leads to. I call it habit, but it gradually develops into disease. It sours one's nature and dwarfs his soul. Then follow cynicism and melancholy.

"Moonstruck madness, moping melancholy."

After these, in quick succession, came hypochondria and lunacy, which soon shade off into madness. Thus you see vast, shadowy horrors, drawn up in battle array around the citadel of Reason. Sappers are at work; suddenly the wall is breached; Reason is dethroned, and all the mental forces massacred.

There is an antidote for this dread malady, if applied before your will has become weakened. When you are worried and feel a wave of wickedness surge through your soul, pray. Pray as Moses did when the children of Israel were sorely beset by the Amalakites; and as Joshua vanquished the host on this occasion, so will you put to flight the enemy that would destroy your peace. Resolve to be patient under any and all circumstances, and you will be a victor in the battle of life and will win for yourself a crown of immortality.

How to Make a Good Wife Unhappy.

See your wife as seldom as possible. If she is warm-hearted and cheerful in temper, or if, after a day's or a week's absence, she meets you with a smiling face, and in an affectionate manner, be sure to look coldly upon her, and answer her with monosyllables. If she forces back her tears, and is resolved to look cheerful, sit down and gape in her presence, till she is fully convinced of your indifference. Never think you have anything to do to make her happy, but that her happiness is to flow from gratifying your caprices; and when she has done all a woman can do, be sure you do not appear gratified. Never take an interest in any of her pursuits; and if she asks your advice, make her feel that she is troublesome and impertinent. If she attempts to rally you good-humoredly or any of your peculiarities, never join in the laugh, but frown her into silence. If she has faults (which, without doubt, she will have, and perhaps may be ignorant of), never attempt with kindness to correct them, but continually obtrude upon her ears: "What a good wife Mr. Smith has!" "How happy Mr. Smith is with his wife!" "Any man would be happy with such a wife!" In company, never seem to know you have a wife; treat all her remarks with indifference, and be very affable and complaisant to every other lady. If you follow these directions, you may be certain of an obedient and heart broken wife.—New York Ledger.

Compound Oxygen has been before the public for twenty years. It has passed its period of probation, been "tried, and not found wanting." We have treated over 50,000 patients in various parts of the world. An International Congress of our patients, each speaking in his own tongue, would rival the scene at the Tower of Babel. All this, we are proud to say, has been accomplished not by any species of charlatanry. We never have professed to cure all cases of disease, nor to warrant a cure in any case. We simply present the testimony of those who have tried it. We have their permission to refer you to them, if you desire further information.

Send for our brochure of 200 pages, a treatise on Compound Oxygen, its discovery, mode of action, and results, and you will find a record of cures in many chronic cases, with well-attested testimonials. Fine Work in the New Metal.

Mr. Henry Troemner has just completed four remarkable assay-balances, which were yesterday inspected by a number of distinguished chemists and other scientists. These scales are not only remarkable for their great sensitiveness under comparatively heavy loads, but also for the material of which they are constructed—the metal aluminium. They were manufactured for the great laboratory now being erected by the Illinois Steel Company, at Chicago, which is intended to be the finest physical and chemical laboratory in the world, surpassing even the magnificent one equipped by Mr. Edison at Orange, N. J. As an example of the care with which this laboratory is being built, it is stated that each of these four balances will have a separate foundation isolated from the building and reaching solid rock.

The balances resemble in general appearance the finest form of chemical balance, and are encased, as usual, in glass, with the usual attachments.

No one examining them casually would suspect that but one metal was employed in their construction, and that one "the metal of the future"—aluminium. The supporting pillars have been colored to resemble steel; the supporting beam is a dark bronze in color, and the screw heads and washers have been gilded, but all alike are of aluminium. So far as Mr. Troemner is aware, this is the first time that this metal, destined to be so useful in the arts, has been used for such a purpose. The reason why it was selected was because of its peculiar combination of the qualities of lightness and non-corrosibility, together with great rigidity and tensile strength. Its strength may be judged from the results of some tests made by Tinius Olsen, which showed that a specimen measuring .2416 (rather less than a quarter) of a square inch in section broke only after a strain of 3,205 pounds. Mr. Olsen found that its limit of strain per square inch was 13,260 pounds; limit of elasticity per square inch, 9,100 pounds; percentage of elongation, 00.6. These tests were undertaken to determine the best metal to use, and this was determined to be English aluminium, alloyed with five per cent. of silver. The pure aluminium was imported in ingots, and the remaining processes carried out in Mr. Troemner's works. Great difficulty was found in casting the metal, moulds of plaster of paris and steel both failing on account of the viscidity of the melted aluminium. This difficulty was finally obviated by the use of dry sand moulds heated intensely before the fluid metal was poured in. By this means some remarkable castings were made, free from all imperfection. The toughness of the metal made it difficult to work, the tools refusing to bite into it without the use of spirits of camphor, as in drilling glass. The color of the metal is silvery white, and, except in the parts previously noted, it has been allowed to retain its natural color. Even the handles and knobs of the case have been made of aluminium, highly polished, and the effect is very handsome.

The scales are exceedingly delicate, and, although capable of carrying 250 grains (about five ounces) in each scale pan, they will indicate with accuracy the one one-hundredth of a milligram (about one seven-thousandth of a grain). The bearings of the balances are made of agate, and are the only part not made of aluminium. Knife edges of agate, set in aluminium clamps, rest on polished plates of agate when the scale is in use.—Philadelphia Ledger.

The Clergy of America take kindly to Life Insurance, and have been its firmest champions. They fight for it and thoroughly believe in it. There are many splendid financiers in the Church; that they are intelligent and thoughtful for their future goes without saying. All denominations seek the protection of Life Insurance, and are careful to select the company offering the greatest security and the most advantageous terms to policy-holders.

The Episcopal Diocese, of New York, has an Insurance Fund for all of its members, and the Mutual Life, which is the largest and strongest company in the world, with over $122,000,000 assets, has been officially selected by that body to issue all the insurance to these worthy people.

A Southern Department of this Company has been opened in New Orleans under the management of Mr. T. H. Bowles, with offices in Louisiana National Bank Building.

MURRAY—Mrs. JEMIMY ELIZABETH MURRAY, daughter of Lewis Petty, of sacred memory, and wife of M. E. N. Murray, was born August 15, 1833, and died August 16, 1890, at her home near Wayneshoro, Miss., aged fifty-seven years.

Sister Murray was converted and joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in Autumn of the year 1856 at Reed's Chapel, Sumpter county, Ala. She was a "bright and shining light" in the church of God. She enjoyed sweet communion with the Savior, rejoicing evermore. Sister Murray was faithful in all the relations of life: a faithful wife, faithful neighbor and friend, but, above all, a faithful Christian. She was ready when the summons came. She has entered into "the glory of the Lord," to go out no more forever. She leaves many friends and relatives who sadly miss her, and mourn their loss, but the saddest of all is the heart of her devoted husband, whose life and home she cheered and brightened so long by her Christian virtues. Sad, indeed, is his heart, and lonely and desolate his home. Nevertheless his "heart is fixed," he "lives by the faith of the Son of God." By and by there will be a happy meeting. E. F. EDGAR.

MASSEY—T. L. MASSEY was born October 8, 1855. He joined the church in early life, but under the influence of worldly association he was led astray, and engaged in that delusive and fascinating amusement called dancing. He, however, returned to the church, and became a steward. At the time of his death he was recording steward. He was twice married. First, on March 29, 1882, to Miss Carrie Hunt, who died December 21, same year. On November 7, 1888, he was married to Miss Anna Stevens, who, with their little son, Leslie, survives him. After an illness of three weeks, during which he was patient, he died June 20, 1890. One evening, after alarming symptoms during the day, he said to his wife: "God like to have taken me home to-day." He seemed very little inclined to talk during his illness. One day, after two or three subjects had been mentioned, to none of which he seemed to give attention, he was asked if he trusted in God. He brightened up and nodded assent. May God bless and spare his mother, a devoted Christian, who reared a large family, all of whom, except one, are members of the church. His pastor,

BENJ. S. RAYNER.

ROY—JOHNNIE LEE, infant son of Rev. J. R. and M. M. Roy, was born in Ouachita parish, La., July 3, 1889, and died July 12, 1890, aged one year and nine days. Johnnie was a sweet and interesting little fellow, and when well was always contented at play, either with his little sister or the toys his mother gave him for his amusement while at her work. But after disease fastened itself upon the little frame he then became fretful. His father, unconscious of the fact that his baby-boy was dangerously ill, started out from home on a journey about forty miles; but before reaching his destination was overtaken by the sad news of his child's departure to the celestial world, there to repose on the bosom of him who once said, "Suffer the little children to come unto me, and forbid them not; for of such is the kingdom of God." May the Holy Spirit comfort the bereaved parents!

J. T. REAMES.

DICKERSON—The following resolutions were adopted by the Sunday-school at Beauregard, Miss.:

Whereas, In the wise providence of God, Miss JENNIE DICKERSON was taken from our midst by death, September 3, 1890, and as she had been for years a devoted member and faithful teacher in our Sunday-school at Beauregard, Miss., therefore, be it

Resolved, That we, as a Sunday-school, do hereby give expression to our grief and sense of loss at her death, and that we extend our sympathies to the bereaved family.

Resolved, That her life and character be cherished in our memories as worthy of example.

Resolved, That these resolutions be sent to the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE for publication; that a copy be sent the family, and to each member of her Sunday-school class.

AGNES G. CHRISMAN,
For Committee.

DICKINSON—WILLIAM DICKINSON was born in Green county, Miss., on January 5, 1816, and departed this life at his son-in-law's, Mr. L. R. Reeves, in Harrison county, Miss., on September 16, 1890, aged seventy-four years nine months and eleven days. He was twice married: first to Miss Elizabeth Felphs, and the second time to Miss Annie M. White on March 13, 1847. He joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in the year 1881, under the ministry of Rev. Stewart Calhoon, in Jackson county, Miss.

About three years before his death his mind became very much impaired, and at times he was a great annoyance to the family, and then at other times he seemed to be right in mind. He was confined to his bed about three months before his death, and during this time he was helpless almost as an infant. No one can tell how he suffered; but all of his sufferings now are over. I visited him several times during his last sickness, and he always seemed glad to see me. Almost every time I would enter his room he would say to me, "I want you to pray for me before you leave." He seemed to love to hear prayers and the songs of Zion. I would talk to him in regard to departing this life, and he would seem to be cheerful and happy. I said to him: "Is all your trust in the Lord Jesus Christ?" His answer was: "All my trust is in the Lord." Then I said: "Trust in the Lord, and he will carry you through;" and he replied: "Yes, he will carry me through all right." So from his own testimony we think he is in the bright home of the soul, and at the beautiful gate waiting and watching for his loved ones that he left on earth. Wife and children, look up; the kingdom is just before you. J. H. HOLLAND.

MCDONALD—JAMES PARKER MCDONALD, son of R. V. and L. O. McDonald, died at the home of his parents, August 5, 1890, aged twenty years nine months and four days. Parker was one of our best young men, and the church, Sabbath-school and community have sustained a great loss in his death.

His was a beautiful Christian life; so softly and gently did he let his light shine in all the varied duties of his short life. He joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, when about eight years of age, under the ministry of Rev. W. B. Lewis. He professed religion early in life, and the two last years of his career he grew rapidly as a Christian; never very demonstrative, but in his own quiet, happy way manifested unmistakable signs of a heart full of love for his Savior and unwavering faith in his power to save. He was very punctual in attending all religious services at Ebenezer, the church of which he was a member; always present, and taking special interest in the Sabbath-school. He loved to sing the songs of Zion, and never refused to pray when called on at the family altar or in public. One of his prominent traits was his willingness to help wherever duty called, which won for him the love and esteem of all. During his last illness he said he was trusting in his God, and was not afraid to die. He is sadly missed, but most of all by his devoted parents, to whom he was truly a dutiful and helpful son. We deeply sympathize with the household where this precious link is missing, where his vacant chair is found.

AUNT WILLIE.

WHATLEY—SAMUEL WHATLEY was born July 20, 1820, and died at his home, Eden, La., June 16, 1890, aged sixty-nine years eleven months and ten days.

It was my happy privilege to know this man of God for six months. He gave me a home at his house, and encouraged me in my work as soon as I arrived on Centerville circuit. He was prayerful all the time. When the neighbors would come to see him they were most always reminded of their prayers, and of the necessity of being ready for the judgment. He used to appreciate my poor, weak labors so much that I was humbled when in his presence talking of religion, and asking me to pray for him that he might be with us a little longer. We loved him so, that we pleaded with God to spare him to us a little longer. And he did live a good while longer than the doctors said he would. But on Monday morning, June 16 he dropped dead while walking across the floor. He died with heart disease. No one was present to say good by. Uncle Sam's many friends and relatives were at his burying, weeping. Oh! let us meet him in heaven, where there is no more weeping or parting.

J. H. CALLAWAY.

NOW the God of peace, that brought again from the dead our Lord Jesus, that great shepherd of the sheep, through the blood of the everlasting covenant, make you perfect in every good work, to do his will, working in you that which is well-pleasing in his sight, through Jesus Christ; to whom be glory for ever and ever. Amen.—Hebrews xiii. 20, 21.

PIK-RON makes a plain white wood any imitation you wish to obtain.

The Success of the Original supports the imitations and there's a crowd of them hanging to Pearline. It saves work for them, as it does for everybody. It saves them talk, too. It's the one cry of the peddler that his imitation is "the same as Pearline," or "as good as Pearline." It isn't true, but it shows what he thinks of Pearline. He knows that Pearline is the standard—the very best for its purpose. So does everybody who has used it.

Beware of the basket gang—be sure you get Pearline. Get it from your grocer—and send back any imitation he may send you. Pearline is never peddled, and is manufactured only by

GRANT'S FURNITURE STORE

NEW STORE, AT 28 and 30 Camp Street, NEW ORLEANS

BEAUTIFUL PARLOR GOODS.

I have one entire floor devoted to the display of these goods alone, and have over sixty different varieties to select from. Complete Suits anywhere from $35 to $650, and odd pieces—such as Sofas, Divans, Easy Chairs, Patent Rockers, Window and Reception Chairs—at as low prices in proportion as the Complete Suits. I have these goods in Cherry, Mahogany and Walnut, and can give you your choice of any of the following coverings: Crushed, Embossed, Plain and Silk Plushes, Hair Cloth, Mohair, Raw and Spun Silks, Satins, English Tapestries, French Velours, Petit Point, Brocatelle or Damasks. I make a specialty of these goods, have many of the patterns made specially for my own trade, and can offer a greater variety at lower prices than any other house in the South.

NEW STOCK

In all departments, and every grade of goods, from the cheapest to the most expensive, in endless variety. I have all the latest and most fashionable designs, and, as I have only purchased from factories whose goods I have been selling for the past six years, can and do guarantee every piece of Furniture that leaves my establishment.

LOW PRICES

are the order of the day, and I propose to sell strictly reliable goods at a lower price than has ever before been quoted in the South. My store has long been known as "The Cheapest Furniture House in New Orleans," and this season I intend to add to the reputation it has gained in this respect. I only ask a chance to save you money.

HANDSOME BEDROOM SUITS.

A very extensive assortment of these goods in every style; and whether you wish to pay $10 for a Complete Suit of twelve pieces, or from that price anywhere up to $1,000, I can sell you what you require. I have these goods in Black Walnut, Natural and Dark Cherry, and Natural and Dark Mahogany, or in imitation of any of these woods, and can furnish the very latest, neatest and most artistic designs.

I have also a large and carefully selected stock of Hall, Library, Dining-room and Kitchen Furniture; Reed, Rattan and Wicker Chairs, Rockers, Lounges and Cribs; Brackets, What-nots, Easels, Music Stands and Fancy Top Tables; Carpets, Carpet Strips, Matting, Shades, Curtains, Curtain Poles, and everything necessary to furnish a house completely throughout.

LARGE SALES.

I have a large city trade, and am shipping goods extensively to every Southern State. My country trade has increased very rapidly during the past year, and the facilities which my new store affords me for carrying a larger and better stock will enable me to still further extend it, and to give complete satisfaction to my customers.

B. F. ALEXANDER, P. E.

Bro. Van Valkenburgh requests us to say that at last, after long waiting, he has a full supply of the new Discipline and is prepared to fill all orders at once.

The Southern Almanac.

We omitted to mention in our last issue the reception of the above almanac; but can not allow the opportunity to pass without bringing such an artistic and admirably compiled publication to the notice of our friends. With a handsomely illustrated cover, lithographed in colors approaching as nearly as possible those of characteristic Louisiana scenery, which it ably depicts, and upon the last page representing a bold lion (emblematic of the firm name) just issued from his native jungle, the invitation is most pressing to inspect the attractive matter within. And it contains a fund of valuable, interesting information upon live subjects, medical, commercial, historical and social, making it alike useful and worthy of a place in the home, in the office, or on the farm. The publishers, the well-known drug house of I. L. Lyons and Co., New Orleans, will furnish a copy to those desiring one.

Gen. W. W. Belknap, secretary of war during President Grant's first term, died October 12.

Cuticura Soap

FOR BAD COMPLEXIONS, RED ROUGH HANDS AND BABY HUMORS.

BAD COMPLEXIONS, WITH PIMPLY, blotchy, oily skin, Red, Rough Hands, with chaps, painful finger ends and shapeless nails, and simple Baby Humors prevented and cured by CUTICURA SOAP. A marvelous beautifier of world-wide celebrity. It is simply incomparable as a Skin Purifying Soap, unequalled for the Toilet and without a rival for the Nursery. Absolutely pure, delicately medicated, exquisitely perfumed, CUTICURA SOAP produces the whitest, clearest skin, and softest hands and prevents inflammation and clogging of the pores, the cause of pimples, blackheads, and most complexional disfigurations, while it admits of no comparison with the best of other skin soaps, and rivals in delicacy the most noted and expensive of toilet and nursery soaps. Sale greater than the combined sales of all other skin soaps.

Address POTTER DRUG AND CHEMICAL CORPORATION, Proprietors, Boston, Mass.

Aching sides and back, weak kidneys, and rheumatism relieved in one minute by the celebrated CUTICURA ANTI-PAIN PLASTER. 25 cents.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

DOMESTIC.

The first joint session of the British Iron and Steel Institute and the American societies of engineers and iron and steel manufacturers was held in Carnegie Hall, Pittsburg, Pa., on the ninth. The meeting was a success beyond anticipation.

Twenty-one Chinese were arraigned, last week, in the United States district court at Seattle, Wash., on the charge of being illegally in the United States. They were arrested on a sloop at Port Townsend two weeks ago. The judge ordered them returned to Victoria, B. C.

Putnam's European Hotel, Chicago, while crowded with guests, took fire on October 12, at 1:35 A. M. Four persons lost their lives.

The New York World published on October 12 a sensational story to the effect that the census office is being used with a deliberate purpose on the part of the Republicans to retain their congressional majority. The story further states that the Southern States in particular were to be subjected to this sort of treatment, those of them showing the greatest growth to be scaled down to 14 or 16 per cent. Very circumstantial details are given of the operation of the scheme, including a picture of the house in which the nefarious scheme was conducted.

Ten thousand farmers from Ohio, Indiana, Iowa, Wisconsin, Illinois, Missouri, Kansas and Colorado, who were in St. Louis during fair week, attached their signatures to a memorial addressed to Hon. Levi P. Morton, president of the United States Senate. The memorial embodies the objections of the farmers to the Conger bill, which passed the house on August 28, and which places a tax on compound lard and prohibitory restrictions on its sale.

The rate of progress governing the proceedings of the Mississippi Constitutional Convention does not give promise of an early adjournment. The trouble seems to lie in the fact that the convention is an unwieldy body by reason of its numbers, and the presence of a score or so of aspirants for political or judicial honors, anxious to make records that will endear them to the people.

Associate Justice Miller of the Supreme Court of the United States died October 13. He was appointed to the position of associate justice by President Lincoln in 1862.

It is thought in Washington that the President will conclude to call an extra session of Congress to meet about November 11. This action will be taken, it is claimed, to satisfy the Republican leaders, who wish to pass the elections bill and an apportionment bill.

FOREIGN.

Germany, having failed to induce Russia to recognize Prince Ferdinand as the lawful ruler of Bulgaria, has advised Austria to abandon for the present her design to obtain recognition for Prince Ferdinand from the European powers.

The Russian government will immediately begin the construction of the Siberian railroad. Officials of the government will have entire charge of the work, and no contractors will be employed.

Madame Bonnet, in whose possession was found plans of the defenses of Nancy, and who, when placed under arrest, confessed that she was in the employ of the German government, has been convicted of being a German spy. She was sentenced to five years' imprisonment and to pay a fine of 5,000 francs.

Mr. Balfour will address the National Union of Conservatives at Liverpool. Lord Salisbury had been announced as the speaker, but the change was made in accordance with the policy of the ministry to devolve upon the Irish Chief Secretary the leading championship of the union in the cause, both in the House of Commons and on the platform.

The English government has advanced to the Midland Great Western Railway Company of Ireland £400 000 for the purpose of enabling the company to build lines to connect the coast with inland markets in the distressed districts of Ireland.

Messrs. Dillon and O'Brien, who were charged with conspiracy against the government, and whose cases were fixed for trial in Tipperary, have abandoned their defense and left Ireland. Detectives are searching for them.

The French Cabinet is considering a plan by which it is hoped to come to terms with America on the tariff question. The proposition substantially is one of mutual concession of reciprocity. Unless some terms are arrived at, an attempt will be made to virtually exclude all American products from French markets.

The cholera epidemic continues at Barcelona, Spain. A special hospital has been erected there for the sufferers.

For over fifty years Dr. Davis' Compound Syrup of Wild Cherry and Tar has cured coughs, colds, asthma, bronchitis, throat and lung affections. It is the regular prescription of a physician of extensive practice, who, after prescribing it for twenty years, was induced by the gratifying results to make it a proprietary medicine. Davis' Wild Cherry and Tar soon became known as the best remedy for all throat and lung troubles. Why? Because it has merit and will cure. A. C. Haffenfinger, Philadelphia, says: "I know a man suffering with his lungs who was in the hospital a year without benefit. I induced him to take Davis' Wild Cherry and Tar, and to-day he is well. I know it saved his life." Try it.

R. G. Dun & Co.'s Weekly Review.

R. G. Dun & Co. say: Business in all branches shows improvement. Prices of commodities are a trade stronger than a week ago. The feeling of confidence everywhere increases.

At Boston business is good with advanced prices on many articles, as trade is adjusting itself to the change of duty. At Philadelphia, advance in wool and good trade in groceries. Chicago's trade is slightly below last year, with moderate increase in iron. The volume of business in all lines of merchandise fully up to last year.

Southern reports indicate the early movement of the cotton crop. The great industries are gaining, in spite of the enormous output of pig iron the tone is stronger.

Wool is bought largely at better prices. Breadstuffs have been advancing in spite of small exports which fall far below last year's. Wheat has risen 3½ cents for the week on sales of 30,000,000, and corn nearly 2 cents on sales of 10,000,000. The treasury has taken in during the past week $3,000,000 more than it has paid out.

The state of foreign trade is fairly satisfactory. The value of exports last week showed a decline in comparison with last year. The movement was remarkably heavy.

The business failures occurring throughout the country during the past seven days number 215, as compared with a total of 197 last week. For the corresponding week last year the figures were 214.

MALARIA

DR. KING'S

Royal Germetuer.

NEW ORLEANS, Sept. 2, 1890.

I have been for several years constantly subject to malarial fevers. The best medical treatment has failed to remove from my system the malarial poison that produced them. I have had to use an average of forty grains of quinine per week for years. The fevers would invariably return in a few days, if it was discontinued. The quinine was doing great harm to my nervous system, but I had to keep it up as my only hope. Recently I commenced using Dr. King's Royal Germetuer. It has done me more good than all the medicine I have ever taken. I have not had a fever since commencing its use, nor found it necessary to take a dose of quinine. It has toned my nerves, built up my strength and given me a buoyancy and healthfulness of feeling that I have not known for years. My experience justifies me in saying that this wonderful remedy is all that is claimed for it, if not more.

TO DIE.

BY H. A.

In a correspondence some time ago with a lady in Kentucky, mostly on religious subjects, she made this singular, but rather natural remark: "Oh, it is just as natural to die as it is to be born." And I paraphrase it as follows:

'Tis as natural to die as it is to be born,
For death does but open the other life's morn;
In birth we lay sweetly on Jesus' breast—
'Tis our evil surroundings that give us unrest.
'Tis as pleasant to die as it is to be born
If the Savior be nigh our couch to adorn;
Let the world of temptation be under our feet
And the Savior be present—our joy is complete.
'Tis as easy to die as it is to be born,
For the bed of the Savior has never a thorn;
'Tis only the tempter that gives us such fear,
But temptation is harmless if Jesus be there.
'Tis as quiet to die as it is to be born,
Resting calmly on Jesus' beautiful form;
Only Satan's devices give cause for alarm
By exciting our vices—that does all the harm.
'Tis as blessed to die as it is to be born,
For without it the crown could never be worn.
Death's terrors are powerless—the grave has no gloom
For the tried and the trusting; no, welcome the tomb.
'Tis successful to die as it is to be born;
It takes both to secure us the life we have borne;
The one to justify us; the other is given
To seat us, and crown us, and home us in heaven.

Letter No. 23.

APPROACH TO JOPPA—HOUSE OF SIMON THE TANNER—THE PLAIN OF SHARON—TIMNATH—HOUSE OF DAGON—LYDDA—THE THRESHING-FLOOR—THE MAHOMMADAN POSTURE THE VALLEY OF BETHSHEMESH—THE VALLEY OF AJALON—KIRJATH JEARIM—MIZPEH—A BEDOUIN ENCAMPMENT—A SLEEPING JACOB—JERUSALEM.

In all my journeying I have looked forward with a tender, glad feeling that each day brought nearer the Holy Land. And when only a few days intervened, I would say, "One week more, and I will be in Jerusalem;" and then again, "To-morrow I shall see the land forever made sacred by the presence of the Savior." The experience, as I studied it, was like that of one who urges his way and draws nigh to the place where abides one he loves most deeply."

On the morning of August 22 I obtained my first view of Palestine as a line of seashore, and in the dim distance beyond the mountains of Judea. A little later Joppa, on its conical-shaped hill, appeared. Leaning against the side of the vessel, I recalled the four great facts of the city's history. Here ships came, bringing cedar and other wood for the building of the temple of Solomon. At this place, I doubt not, Solomon's fleets landed, bringing gold and ivory, and apes and peacocks; to this place Jonah came and took ship when he fled from the presence of the Lord; at this place Tabitha, or Dorcas, lived and died, and was raised from the dead by the hand of Simon Peter; and here, on the roof of Simon the Tanner's house, near the sea, Peter saw at midday the sheet knit at four corners, and filled with all kinds of creeping things, let down from heaven three times, and heard at the same time the explaining voice of God. I had full time to think over all these things, and even read of them afresh in the Scripture before we cast anchor. As we swept into position, I noticed a ship unloading her cargo of lumber, as if the King of Tyre was still filling his contract and Solomon still receiving. Just beyond the lumber vessel was a small two-masted ship, just such as I think Jonah embarked in in that mad and impossible flight from God. The landing here is always difficult, because Joppa is without natural or artificial harbor, and the heave and swell of the sea has an unimpeded sweep to the shore.

As soon as I landed, and before going to the hotel, I visited Simon the Tanner's house by the sea. Along streets narrow and dirty I walked to the place. This much we have in the way of identification—that only three other houses dispute the claim; that this house is certainly by the sea, and has the flat, retired roof that the sacred narrative leads us to expect. As I stood upon the roof I took in the wide-open heaven through which that wonderful sheet was let down. A wide space was a lifting frame for the broad lesson given to the apostle. What a lesson it was! And how hard it was for Peter, even after that, to remember! Of all lessons that the Spirit strives to impress upon the human heart, there is none that man learns with greater difficulty, and forgets with greater readiness, than the one of the "four-cornered sheet." The gospel flood of salvation can not go as it should, and do what it is able, because of the walls and barriers that men have built everywhere between each other. The Egyptians would not eat with the Hebrews, for "that would be an abomination to the Egyptians." "The Jews have no dealings with the Samaritans." "God, I thank thee," said the Pharisee, "I am not like this publican." Caste law and hatred are implacable and undying. Let us all take a fresh look into the sheet, and listen to the interpreting voice of the Spirit. After I had descended from the roof I noticed I had been there at the very hour of the day that Peter had the vision, viz: "the sixth hour," which is twelve o'clock.

I left Joppa in the afternoon on a carriage with a dragoman, who proved to be an intelligent man, and blessed with a remarkable knowledge of Scripture. One or two miles from the town we entered upon the plain of Sharon. Its width is twelve miles, and length nearly thirty. On the eastern edge rose up the mountains or hills of Judea. As I looked on them I recalled the verse, "And Mary arose in those days, and went into the hill country with haste, into a city of Judah." The plain of Sharon, although bare and brown in this sultry month of August, yet greatly impressed me by its size and natural beauty. In the spring it must be a lovely spectacle. I looked in vain for a rose or any kind of flower; and, stopping the carriage, in the search had to pluck instead a little thorny bush, with which the plain abounds. All this may be part of the judgment that is on the land.

During the afternoon we passed the site of Timnath, where Samson lost his wife and had his revenge on the standing corn of the Philistines. A wretched mud village now marks the spot. I was also shown the town where the Temple or House of Dagon stood, and where the wonderful scene of the image falling before the ark of God took place.

Farther on we came to Lydda, called by the Arabians to-day Ludd. Two points of identification are readily seen—one in the similarity of names, and the other in Acts ix, 38, "And forasmuch as Lydda was nigh to Joppa." I suppose it is seven or eight miles distant. Here it was that Peter healed Eneas, and a great revival sprang up therefrom. I walked through the streets of the dirty and poverty-stricken town where once "dwelt the saints." The houses are constructed of mud and the stones of ancient ruins. The streets, which are narrow-winding alleys in reality, are strewn with litter and filth. The floors of many of the houses, mud-colored and windowless, were often four or five feet below the level of the street. The refuse accumulates well. The things taken in by the eye were revolting in many instances to almost every sense. I felt that Lydda was not such a place in the time of Peter. A great crime has been committed in this country. God's Son was killed not thirty miles from this spot, and the face of Jehovah has been turned from the land for two thousand years. And his vengeance is written in barren fields and naked mountains and long lines of ruins all over this land. What will not happen to a country when God hides his face!

I am struck, however, with the fact that the Jews constitute a small part of the population that partakes of this desolation. I meet twenty Egyptians, Arabians, Syrian peasants, and people who don't know who they are, to one Israelite. All this, however, is in perfect fulfillment of the propheoies of old. The Jew was to be driven into all nations, and the stranger was to enter in and possess the country. Mr. Rothschild is, however, still importing them from Russia and elsewhere. He has five or six colonies between Joppa and Damascus. Here he is settling the poor wanderers, and teaching the boys how to be farmers. I saw one of his colonies in the plain of Sharon.

I notice that every village of any size has its threshing-floor. How often we all met the expression in Holy Writ, and concluded that it was a large, airy room like a barn, with a plank floor, and as substantial a covering. Here my preconceived ideas went to the winds, as they have been going on many things since I left home. It is good to leave home occasionally. The "threshing-floor" is a plot of ground two or three hundred feet square, level as a floor, and occupying the top of a hill, or an elevated piece of ground. I used to wonder why David offered Araunah, the Jebusite, such a price for his threshing-floor for the altar; but, after seeing the size and need of such a place, the wonder departed. The threshing floor at Lydda was an animated scene, although I passed it late in the evening, when the main work was over. Long lines of grain in sheaves were in one part. A number of men were engaged in winnowing the chaff from the wheat in the old-time method of flinging the grain against the wind, while still others were filling sacks.

The cactus hedge abounds. It gets higher and thicker the nearer we approach the Judean mountains. The natives eat the fruit, and I propose trying the same thing in the morning, when the bulby fruit has the dew upon it. The camels eat the leaf, thorn and all, and evidently regard the prickly plants of the hedge and the thorns of Sharon as luxuries. The camel that will eat anything and the donkey that eats little are certainly the animals for this poverty-stricken country.

The Mohammedan, as you know, possesses the land. In a mosque at Lydda, at the hour of sunset, I saw some of them at their devotions. On a piece of matting he prostrates himself, touching the earth three times with his forehead, while he utters what is called the short prayer. He then arises, and, standing erect and motionless, with face to the east, while his eyes are fixed upon a pillar or wall before him, goes through the long prayer, apparently oblivious of the presence of anybody and everybody. The night we passed in Ramleh. It has no scriptural associations, and the most remarkable thing they can relate in matters of the world is, that Napoleon once slept there.

In a few miles I was pointed out the beautiful valley of Bethshemesh, along the side of which the cart, laden with the ark of God, was drawn so wonderfully; the cows, as the Bible says, lowing as they went. The valley, after a while, turns southward and merges into the valley of Ajalon. Here, again, memory is stirred at that bold prayer and demand of faith upon the part of Joshua: "Sun, stand thou still on Gibeon, and thou moon, in the valley of Ajalon." Great was the victory that day over the five kings! They were pursued from Gibeon to Azekah, across and down the valley of Ajalon. The Bible says God took a wonderful part in that battle, for he rained down great stones from heaven upon the enemies of Israel. As I passed down the valley and along the hill-sides, I suddenly began to notice myriads of stones on all sides. Strange to say, I had not thought of the Scripture statement until I saw the stones. In no other part of the country did I see stones like these before me for peculiarity of size and multitude. They were just such as would be used in hurling down upon a great army. I picked up one of the smaller-sized ones, two and a half inches in diameter, for the editor of the ADVOCATE.

An encampment of Bedouins near the road attracted my attention. In walking through it a scene of abject poverty presented itself, while naked children stared and ill-natured dogs barked at me. A blanket stretched on a pole was all the shelter and, indeed, all the home they possess. "Two women were grinding at the mill." It was the same kind of mill used in the time of the Savior. There were two circular stones, the upper stone having a small aperture through which to pour a handful of grain at a time. By an iron handle the woman revolved the upper on the nether stone, and the triturated grain gradually worked out at the surface edges. It was a slow and wearisome work. One of the women, with whom I spoke, said her life was one of misery.

A few miles farther on we began to ascend the mountains of Judea toward Jerusalem. It is true that, no matter how you approach the city, you have to "go up to Jerusalem." At the height of seventeen hundred feet we had a charming view of the plain of Sharon, and the Mediterranean Sea beyond. I can not, in suitable words, convey to you the dreariness of these mountains around Jerusalem. The road runs for twenty miles through and over them, and throughout it is a scene of profound desolation and mournfulness. The mountain-sides show unmistakable signs of having once been terraced from summit to base, and cultivated; but the vineyards are gone, and the terraces are in ruins, and, with the exception of an occasional grove of scattering olives, these noble trees are gone. The mountains themselves, denuded of their once beautiful coverings, stand up and roll on to the distant horizon in bold, bare forms of limestone, rock, and red clay.

Upon the summit and side of one of these hills stands Kirjath Jearim, where the ark of God was carried, and remained so long. Beyond this, and visible for miles, is Mizpeh, where Samuel used to assemble the children of Israel, where Saul was elected, and was found "hid in the stuff." Two miles farther on, and northward of the Jaffa road, is Gibeah. It was near this place that Saul, in such sinful haste, sacrificed to the Lord with his own hand. Samuel had gone to Mizpeh with promise to return; but Saul would not await his coming. When the eye takes in the two places, separated only two miles, something of the dark, impatient spirit of the King of Israel at once impresses the mind. With deep interest did I look upon the places connected with a life of the most brilliant beginnings, and dark and fearful endings, that is mentioned in the Word of God. I rode slowly all day, with my Bible frequently in hand, comparing the land with the Book, and the Book with the land. God certainly made them both. Among the peculiar sudden pleasures of the two days' travel from Joppa to Jerusalem was the recognition of Bible pictures and sayings on all sides. The carob tree brought up one scene, the sight of the two women grinding at the mill another; while near Emmaus I saw an Arabian, a young man, lying near the road "with a stone for a pillow." Jacob and Bethel came immediately to mind.

It is impossible to see Jerusalem as you approach it from the west. A new town is rapidly growing on that side of the city, hiding the wall and ancient buildings from view. Through droves of camels and donkeys, and through crowds of Arabians and Syrian peasants, I entered the Jaffa Gate and found myself, in a few moments, in the Grand New Hotel. In several minutes more I ascended the terraced roof of the building to look upon the city of our God and his Christ. I went up alone, with my heart in my throat. The lofty lookout was near the west wall by the Jaffa Gate, and commanded a widespread view of the city and the "mountains round about Zion." On the left was the Church of the Holy Sepulchre, covering, it is said, the sites of the cross and the tomb. Immediately in front was the unmistakable site of the temple where Infinite Wisdom taught and Infinite Power wrought miracles. Still farther beyond, and lifted high, was Mount Olivet, with its northern and southern slopes, and roads to Bethany, so familiar to the Christian and reader of the Bible. Here was suddenly arrayed before me the sites of the most amazing and important transactions in the history of the world, and, indeed, of the universe. The incarnation, the life and teaching of the Son of God, his crucifixion and death; the resurrection, the ascension, and the descent of the Holy Ghost, were all, in a sense, before me. It was a sudden materializing of spiritual truths before my eyes. It was a startling presentation to the eye of places thought about, talked about, loved and reverenced from the far-off days of childhood, and a far-away country, with but little hope of ever seeing them in the flesh. How would you have felt under the circumstances? What would you or any lover of Christ done? Shall the Crusaders, at the first sight of the distant city, fall upon their faces and knees, with streaming eyes, crying out, "Jerusalem! Jerusalem!"—and the more spiritual follower of the Savior feel no melting of the heart; and shall his cheeks be dry in the city of our God? At first a feeling swept over me that baffled all analysis and description. A pressure, a weight, an awe was upon me as came, I fancy, on Zechariah, when he saw the vision in the temple; or that fell on men of old time when they drew nigh the visible presence of God. And, then, let men call it weakness; let them question the propriety of mentioning such things in a public letter; but somehow I feel that I am not writing to critics, but to friends, and so I say that the sight of these places of the gospel fairly broke my heart, and I bowed my head on the railing before me and wept as I rarely weep in life.

Mississippi Constitutional Convention Notes.

The convention has spent the entire week in discussing the report of the Judiciary Committee, and have adopted, with sundry amendments, the first twenty-eight sections.

The judicial power shall be vested in a Supreme Court, and such other courts as may be provided for in the Constitution.

The Supreme Court to consist of three judges, any two of whom shall constitute a quorum.

The Legislature to divide the State into three Supreme Court districts, and the governor to appoint, with the advice and consent of the Senate, one judge for and from each district. Term of office, nine years.

Two terms of the Supreme Court to be held annually at the State capital at such times as the Legislature may provide.

No one appointed to a supreme judgeship under the age of thirty years, and must have practiced law five years in the State immediately preceding his appointment.

Circuit judges and chancellors to be appointed by the governor for a term of four years each, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate. Neither shall be under twenty-six years of age, and must be a resident of the State and practicing lawyer for five years before appointment.

Two terms of the Circuit and Chancery Courts each held in every county annually.

Compensation of judges of all the courts to be fixed by law, and not to be increased or diminished during term of office.

Supreme Court clerk elected as other State officers, and for a term of four years.

Circuit and Chancery clerks elected in the respective counties as other county officers, and for a term of four years.

Boards of supervisors and justices of the peace to be chosen or provided for by law, and to hold their office for four years.

The Legislature to establish such other inferior courts as may be necessary.

The attorney general and district attorneys to be elected for four years each, as other State officers are elected, with salaries fixed by law.

All public officers, for willful neglect of duty, or misdemeanor in office, shall be liable to presentment and indictment by a grand jury, and, upon conviction, shall be removed from office, and otherwise punished as may be prescribed by the Legislature.

On Friday, at eleven o'clock A. M., the convention adjourned, probably out of respect for the advent in the city of Barnum and Bailey's Great Show, until seven P. M.

All State officers' terms extended two years.

All county officers from State senator down to constable, four years from next election in 1891.

AITCH AITCH AITCH.

This life is a state of probation and exercise like to that (which prefigured and represented it) of God's people in the wilderness, wherein God leadeth us through many difficulties and hazards, in many wants and hardships, to humble and prove us, in order to the fitting us for another more happy state.—Burrow.

Bro. H. M. Ellis writes from Auburn, Miss.: "I have but three churches on my circuit; but there will be four sermons on Christian Education on the twelfth instant, and talks to three Sunday-schools. Will that suit you?" Yes; I like that. The cause has taken hold of that brother.

Bro. T. B. Reagan says: "Please send me some more blank notes by return mail. I want them for next Sunday. I intend to present the cause at all of my churches." I like that universal affirmative.

Bro. George H. Galloway's success at little Osyka, on last Sunday, was gratifying in the extreme. One hundred and twenty-six dollars from that church is a noble expression of the generosity and zeal of that loyal people.

Let no preacher and Sunday-school superintendent fail to take up a collection for this cause. Five cents will pay for a money order, and anything over that amount is worth sending. The Methodists of Mississippi are in earnest about this matter.

Get Ready for Work.

By a new consecration.
By leaving Grumbler Alley.
By broad Christian liberality.
By looking on the bright side.
By rebuilding the family altar.
By forgiving all your enemies.
By speaking well of the parson.
By loyalty to the prayer meeting.
By planning large revival results.
By parting company with the devil.
By moving into Thanksgiving street.
By harmonizing churchly differences.
By getting cured of irreligious dyspepsia.
By taking an allopathic dose of sunshine.
By warmly greeting the stranger at church.
By being charitable toward the crooked stick.
By taking a short-cut to every field of usefulness.
By keeping your hump of self-esteem well pollniced.
By going to church Sunday evening as well as morning.
By planning liberal things for the church benevolences.
By hearty co-operation in all legitimate churchly doings.
By paying in advance a liberal instalment of the pastoral stipend.
By showing a warm side to the fine Sunday-school of your church.
By refusing to criticise the pastor in the presence of your family.
By praying and paying in proper proportion and with due regularity.
By making a large allowance for the idiosyncrasies of your brethren.
By calling to see the new minister, and not waiting for him to find you.
By seeing that the parsonage flour barrel contains a few measures of meal.
By being willing to do service in the ranks, if the church does not see fit to make you a major-general.—Exchange.

THE HOUR OF COMFORT.

Sometimes there comes within the life,
This checkered life of ours,
So much of loss and pain and strife,
That dim and eye, with tear-drops rife,
Look up and see no flowers.

A sudden sorrow clouds the day,
And the tired heart grows faint;
Our strength and courage die away,
And lips that have been firm to pray
Can only make complaint.

And life becomes at such a time
An unattractive thing:
There is no sound of cheery chime,
The days move on in dreary rhyme,
And bring no heart to sing.

If such a time should come to thee—
And somewhere in the years
For everyone its pain will be—
Do not despair, but try and see
Some sunshine through the tears.

And know that he whom sorrows teach,
Receives a gift from heaven;
His tenderness some hearts may reach,
To whom the glad in vain might preach,
And joy through him is given.

O, then, be thou a comforter
To some more sad than thee;
And while thou thus dost minister,
Strange bliss in thine own heart shall stir,
And grief forgotten be.

An Open Letter to "Mirtie."

My Dear Sister: You remember that you insisted early in the year that I should write up Black Hawk circuit for the ADVOCATE; so that you, together with many other of my friends, might know my impressions of my new work. I wanted to comply with your request forthwith, but, of course, I could not write intelligently until I became acquainted with the people and the work; hence the long delay. The Conference year is nearly ended, my protracted meetings are all over, the fourth quarterly meeting just past. I am now well acquainted with my people, and feel that I have something to write that will interest you, and, at the same time, not be speculation. First, the parsonage is located in Black Hawk, Carroll county. Black Hawk is sixteen miles from Carrollton, on the G. P. R. R.; eighteen miles from Valden, on the I. C. R. R.; sixteen miles from Lexington, on the I. C. branch railroad; and sixteen miles from Sidon, on the Y. V. R. R.

So you see we are, so to speak, in a little paradise all our own. We are removed from all the contaminating influences felt by all railroad towns, and close enough for a few hours' drive to give us all advantages of travel in any direction. Black Hawk is small as to size, but large in aspirations—in fact, is the largest little town of my acquaintance. I have five appointments, and the furthest one from the parsonage only ten miles—one four, one six, one eight miles. The church in Black Hawk is almost in a stone's throw of the preacher's home, which is a neat, comfortable frame-building with four large rooms, kitchen and pantry, and all necessary outhouses. Presiding elder's assessment, $104, all paid; assessment for preacher in charge, $800, and this will be paid in full, and every dollar of assessment ordered by the Conference will be paid. The people are very kind to us; but not more so than the people of "dear old Hebron." I say "dear old Hebron," for, indeed, the memories of the kindness of that people will always be treasured by wife and me; we never expect to love any people better. But, to give you an intelligent idea of this people, let me say we have three splendid churches, an organ in two of them; the other two churches not so good. Of one hundred and fifty Methodist families visited, I report sixty-six family altars and one hundred and fifty-five church papers taken. We have six live Sabbath-schools, and one of the best Sunday-school superintendents I have ever known. We have five regular prayer meetings. I have on this work more who will speak out for Jesus in experience meetings and more who will pray in public than any work I ever served. Our meetings this year were a glorious success; and no professional evangelist with us either. Bros. Burroughs, Oakley, Robertson, Howell, Perkins and Sanders and Evans, of our Conference, gave me valuable help, and my brethren of the local ranks did all that I could ask of them. Result of the year's work, about 125 or 130 professions of conversion (many of them members of the church). We have had 85 accessions to the church, baptized 33 adults and 92 children.

On the whole, I will say, "The water has agreed with us." This has been a pleasant year to both wife and I, and we are not only willing to try Black Hawk another year if the Bishop says so, but we are ready and willing to go at his bidding. Ever yours,

B. F. PHILLIPS.

P. S.—If any preacher in the three patronizing Conferences can show a better report in regard to family worship, Sunday-schools, prayer meetings and church literature, all the people would like to hear from him. My people take eighty-five copies of our Conference organ. B. F. P.

Indian Mission.

MR. EDITOR: Please add to my Indian Mission contributions Thomas Norvell, $5, and Mrs. Louisa Allen, $1, postoffice, Green's Creek, Miss.

And, now, I wish to make one more request of the Methodists of Mississippi. Our Annual Conference will be here in about two months, and I want to urge all that intend to help in this great work, to send on their names and amounts by the time of our annual meeting. We don't want the money now; we want names and amounts now, and then be ready to send the money when I call for it. We must do what we can by that time, or, at least, get enough to commence the work, or I will have to turn over what I have, and leave the poor Indians to their fate, so far as we are concerned. Some paid in their money about fifteen or eighteen months ago, and they would not be willing to wait so long; so we must do something right away. And, now, I wish to say that I do not think what others are doing will excuse us at all. We ought to do something for their salvation ourselves—give them the gospel from a Methodist standpoint; for, as I have already said, if the Baptist and Catholic doctrine will do for the Indians, it will do for all, and so we might cease all effort, and let them have the field. But I, for one, do not think it will do; so we had better avail ourselves of this opportunity, and do what we can for their salvation. We have home missions all over the country for the whites, and are making a strong effort to help the negro; and why not have a mission for the Indians? Why let them go down at our doors and be lost, which they are doing every year? Why not organize a mission, and work as hard for their salvation here as in the Territory? Why not, oh! why not? Three thousand, or more, in perfect heathenism at our doors, and we making no effort at all for their salvation. "Wherefore he saith, Awake, thou that sleepest." What will become of us and them?

Now, we have in cash about $55, and a promise from the Home Mission Board of $20, and then about $230, when we call for it, for the first year; and then about $150 running through five years. I think we might have the missionary at work now, for I am confident if we had a man in the field, I could raise the money quick.

Now, let everybody pray for the success of the Indian Mission, and send amount on postal card to me. We ask the children to help.

CATO, Miss.

The Mississippi Conference Missionary.

MR. EDITOR: I am just in receipt of a communication on this subject, which I take the liberty of publishing, with the earnest prayer to God that we may all go and do likewise. It is from a young friend of mine who is preparing himself for the itinerant ministry. (Parentheses mine.)

Dear Brother: We had a meeting yesterday evening (Sunday) at the college (Centenary) and made a move for a collection of ten dollars to go to assist the Mississippi Conference in sending the missionary, and succeeded in raising twenty-five dollars in cash and subscriptions.

Just think of it! An effort to raise ten dollars resulted in a collection of twenty-five dollars, two and one half times as much as was asked for. The first of this year—January, I think—I received a letter from Dr. J. W. Lambuth, Kobe, Japan. He closed the letter with a request that I ask a few friends to send him twenty cents to buy Testaments for the Japanese. At the close of the morning service, the following Sunday, I read the letter and simply stated that I would receive the money and forward it to Dr. Lambuth. Almost as rapidly as I could write the names, I recorded five dollars and ninety cents, and several who happened to be away from church that morning voluntarily came to me and expressed an earnest desire to assist. These two facts show how this cause will take hold of our people when properly presented. May the spirit of the first great missionary, Jesus Christ, move us to come to Conference in December with the $1 200 pledged, and every charge represented!

Christian Workers Convention.

There will be a Union Undenominational Assembly of Christians at work in the United States and Canada at Hartford, Conn., November 6–12, 1890.

It is convened under the auspices of the Committee for Christian Workers in the United States and Canada, and is the fifth of such meetings which have been held.

The subjects which are to be considered will relate to matters connected with aggressive Christian and benevolent work—more especially to plans and methods of work for reaching the classes not reached by the ordinary ministrations of the gospel.

A large number of earnest and well-known Christian workers, pastors, evangelists and city missionaries from different parts of the United States and Canada will be present, and a varied programme covering many important phases of practical Christian work is being prepared.

A general invitation is extended by the committee to all Christians who may be interested or engaged in practical Christian effort to attend as visiting delegates, with the privilege of participating in the discussions and proceedings.

Reduced railroad and entertainment rates have been provided for all who desire to avail themselves of this privilege.

Full particulars, partial list of subjects, speakers, etc., may be obtained by addressing the secretary, Rev. John C. Collins, New Haven, Conn.

Of the local committee, Rev. H. H. Kelsey, Hartford, is chairman.

The John Wesley Centenary.

On the second of next March it will be exactly one hundred years since John Wesley fell asleep in Christ. It has been justly felt that such a centenary could not be allowed to pass unnoticed. The last Conference appointed a special committee to make arrangements for its commemoration. We publish to-day a spirited appeal from that committee to the people called Methodists in every part of the world. Their interesting and important communication reminds us that since Wesley died the world has witnessed the French Revolution, the Napoleonic Wars, the abolition of the temporal power of the Pope, the emancipation of Italy, the unification of Germany, and, in fact, the creation of modern Europe. Almost the entire history of the United States and our vast Colonial Empire is included within the same period. This century has also been marked by the exploration of Africa and the unveiling of those portions of the globe which had previously been shrouded in impenetrable gloom. Moreover, slavery has been abolished wherever English is spoken, and, indeed, throughout the civilized world. This island has passed through the immense revolution involved in its transformation from a thinly populated agricultural oligarchy into a multitudinous industrial democracy, with gigantic colonial dependencies in every quarter of the globe. We need not dwell upon the miracles accomplished by modern science with the assistance of steam and electricity. In a word, the hundred years which have passed away since Wesley died are, without controversy, the most wonderful and eventful in the history of this planet. Religious progress has not kept pace with the swift rush of scientific, industrial, and political advance. Nevertheless, some memorable chapters have been added to Christian history. For the first time since the Reformation the Protestant Churches have realized the transcendent importance of foreign missions, and have organized the evangelization of the heathen on an unprecedented scale. In all these great world-movements Methodism has played a not insignificant part. The document before us justly claims that Methodism is one of the "potent factors" of nineteenth century history. When Wesley died there were between three and four hundred thousand Methodists in the world. To-day there are about thirty millions, including representatives of nearly every land, from the yellow Chinaman in the East to the red Indian in the West. But, far beyond its own direct numerical growth, Methodism has leavened every church and every land with evangelical fervor and missionary enthusiasm. Under God, the principal instrument of this vast revival of primitive Christianity was the man who died on March 2, in the year 1791. It was most desirable, it was morally inevitable that the centenary of such a man's death should be commemorated.—Methodist Times, London.

The wages that sin bargains for with the sinner are, life, pleasure, and profit; but the wages it pays him with are, death, torment, and destruction. He that would understand the falsehood and deceit of sin, must compare its promises and its payments together.—Dr. South.

From the Work.

ST. TAMMANY CAMP MEETING.

I had the pleasure of attending the St. Tammany Camp Meeting, which closed Wednesday night, September 25. I think it was a good camp meeting, the effects of which will be promotive of great good in that section of country. The preaching was of a high order, intellectually and spiritually. The preachers appeared to be in earnest, and held up a high standard of Christian experience. The church was rather cold and backward at the start, but she caught the holy fire and went to work by assembling together in the woods to pray, and going out into the congregation to talk to and persuade sinners to the altar-place. The conversions were generally bright and demonstrative, the old-fashioned sort; when they got the blessing they would sing it out. Mr. Editor, I don't like those kind of conversions that the parties appeared to be ashamed or sorry they got it. I don't know the number converted, but a good many, I think. The meeting closed late at night; yet it looked like they wanted to stay there forever, loth to go away. The young people marched through the campus singing, as I thought, the sweetest songs I ever heard. I have been acquainted, more or less, with that country for thirty-five years, and can say I know no part of our country that has improved in every particular as that, and it is largely attributed to Bro. Ellis, a local preacher, who is now closing out his fourth year on that pastoral charge, and that camp meeting together, he being the originator of the meeting. Bro. Ellis lives in the hearts of his people; but, dear me! how the preachers do live in that country. There were two Quarterly Conferences held on the camp ground. I find quite an improvement in finances. There were three pastors present; neither of them have received up to this time one hundred dollars, yet they appeared to be as happy as princes. Well, they may be; for the first year I was a presiding elder, years ago on the work, that is now divided into two pastoral charges, they paid their pastor three cat-squirrels and a half-bushel of potatoes. He was with us at the camp meeting. What a change since then! I witnessed one of the grandest scenes at the close of the camp meeting: After the people had been called upon several times for money I thought them pretty well drained. Bro. Ellis got up and said he wanted to test their religion; see how deep it was. If it had not got down to their pockets, it would not do; that there was a very poor widow on the ground; she was the purest and the best; she had four helpless children; three of them were badly afflicted. Now, you who want to give her anything for Christ's sake, come up, put your money down on this table. What a rush!—the preachers leading the way, and soon that table was covered with money, while some sang, some shouted! What a glorious close of a camp meeting! The benediction was pronounced; but songs and shouts went on. That country is settled up with Germans; they are religious and thrifty, and will turn that piney woods into an Eden, and if they can keep Bro. Ellis there, it will not be long; but he has some brave and noble young men with him in the blessed work.

A. B. NICHOLSON.

SHILOH CAMP MEETING.

About one year ago the tent-holders of the Shiloh Camp Ground resolved to enclose the ground with a wire fence, and adopt the gate-fee system; so they appointed a committee for the purpose of getting up the fence, which they did well; and when we met this year, on September 26, we found the ground much improved, and the fence in waiting to receive us; and, I am glad to say, we had the best order (almost perfect) and the best meeting we have had for years. We had a large crowd enough for the gate fee to pay for the fence ($160) and all other expenses, lacking $5, which was raised, and everything paid in full. We also resolved and reappointed the same committee to get up a hotel and place to take care of the horses by next year, and several resolved to build tents; so you may expect to hear from Shiloh Camp Ground in the future.

And, now, I want to thank the following brethren for faithful and efficient services rendered at our meeting just closed: Rev. P. A. Johnston, our presiding elder; and Revs. D. P. Bradford, I. L. Peebles, J. F. Robinson, L. Kendall, T. J. Miller, C. C. Griffin; Father Adams, from Madison county (I failed to get his given name); Dr. R. Burton; and last, but not least, Bro. T. B. Holloman, from Canton station, Mississippi Conference, came in the last day. We want to see him again. We had fine preaching all the time. I do not believe we had a sorry sermon at all; had some very fine sermons. Hope all the brethren will be with us next year.

We received ten members and baptized nine children, and the church wonderfully revived. "Bless the Lord, O my soul!" A. D. MILLER.

LECOMPTE AND BOYCE CIRCUIT.

I would like to give an outline of ten months' work on this new field, or corners of the old fields, rearranged. What was Lecompte and Boyce has added to it Pineville, Lemothe's and Camp Ground. At Pineville we have at this date thirteen accessions and a flourishing Sunday-school. At Lemothe we have organized a society of thirty members with a good Sunday school. At Lecompte we have moved steadily on, with hope bright and courage strong. At a way-side-place, called Brashier's Store, which was kindly loaned us for the purpose, we have had a good Sunday school, and now have secured land and lumber and are building a neat school-house for the community. Several have joined the church in this community. At Lemothe's, where Bros. Beard and White (B. F.) have sown the good seed, the harvest is ripening beautifully. At Rapides Camp Ground (where Bro. C. M. Lyons last year in the wild forest selected and built this rustic tabernacle to God's glory) we have had a most gracious revival. There was no especial outburst or acclaims of joy, but there was an illumination upon many faces which indicated the Holy Ghost within. Thirty-one accessions and forty bright conversions; many of whom now lead in public prayer; and songs of praise may be heard almost everywhere. While we give to God all the glory, we gratefully remember the efficient assistance of Revs. T. B. White and A. D. McVoy, Jr., of Mansfield (who secured five girls for the college, with several soon to follow), J. T. Sawyer and F. N. Parker, of New Orleans; William Wimberly, of Plaquemine; J. F. Foster, of Simmsport, C. M. Lyons, of Columbia; George Jackson and B. F. White. Mrs. B. F. White was a factor for good in the service of song. Bro. E. G. Hunter, a convert of last year, thrilled the audience with his evidence of the good of religion. At Boyce we have had a refreshing from the Lord. Bro. J. M. Beard was with us, and, though had rain and physical difficulties, eight were added to the church, old differences forgotten or buried, and a momentum forward that we trust will land us all in heaven.

S. H. WHATLEY.

ROCKY SPRINGS CIRCUIT, MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

On the third Sunday in September I began a meeting at Rocky Springs, and continued four days, resulting in seventeen accessions to the church and much spiritual good to the membership. Quite a number were heard to pray in public who never did such a thing before. Rev. J. M. Morse, of Carthage station, did all the preaching. He has assisted me in four of my meetings this summer, and has completely won all hearts. My people say they want him as their pastor when I am moved, and his say they want me when he is taken from them; so you see we can not be located this winter on the ground of "unacceptability."

Last Saturday I began a two days' meeting at Hickory Ridge. Rev. N. J. Roberts, of Utica circuit, came out and preached two sermons for me, and took three members into the church. Yesterday I preached twice, and had seven accessions to the church. Up to date I have received 159 members.

Prospects are fair for paying every cent of the preacher's salary and all other collections. I think I will have a full report. These people would do much better if some Bishop, editor, or agent would come and preach to them. Our Conference has two agents—one for the Conference Endowment Fund, and the other for Millsaps College. We also have an editor in New Orleans, and a Bishop at Jackson, Miss.; but we never see any of them.

Now, Mr. Editor, don't you think we do well to have a big revival and get all our collections without seeing any of our "big guns?"

I want to tell you of two members I have on this circuit. The first is a good sister, who has been an acceptable member of the Methodist Church for sixty-two years, and says she has never complained of the church, nor the church of her.

The second is a good brother who is well qualified for the stewardship. On one occasion he argued with a man five weeks for ten cents for the church, and never got mad, nor made the man mad. I write these things as they were told me. I think these are two remarkable characters. V. D. SKIPPER.

PALMER CAMP MEETING.

The Palmer Camp Meeting closed on Friday morning, October 10. We had a grand and a glorious time. The good Lord was with us from the first service to the close of the meeting. I never have seen greater displays of divine power in all the past. His power was expected and looked for by a great many good people on the Whittington circuit for some time before the meeting commenced. There seemed to be more interest manifested than ever before. I never have seen more earnest workers for the conversion and salvation of souls than I witnessed at this camp meeting. The good Lord heard the prayers of his people, and he sent down great reviving and convicting and converting power. I never have heard more earnest and soul-searching preaching than I heard at this camp meeting.

We had with us five itinerant preachers. Rev. J. B. Walker, D. D., from New Orleans, La. It is not necessary to state to the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE how he preached, for he is known far and near as a powerful preacher. There were four of our Mississippi preachers with us: A. B. Nicholson, George H. Anders, H. C. Brown and M. L. White. They all did good preaching. There were eighty conversions and twenty-two accessions to the church, and a great number of backsliders reclaimed. There was a large attendance at this camp meeting from first to the close; and we had splendid, good order all through the meeting. The Whittington circuit is in good working order at this time. We had a good meeting at all the churches on the circuit before camp meeting. The circuit is somewhat behind, financially; but the good people say that they will clear the decks before Conference. To God be all the glory!

BOOKS.

LEAH OF JERUSALEM. By Edward Payson Berry. A. D. F. Randolph and Company, New York. For sale by Wharton, 5 Carondelet St., New Orleans.

This is a story of the time of Paul. It is something wonderful how in these days writers are weaving romances out of the characters and incidents of the sacred scriptures. Whether this is a "good sign" or not, it evidently shows that the "holy writings" are influencing men in many directions. The story of this book is told with thrilling interest, and keeps you enthusiastic to the end.

RHYMES FOR LITTLE READERS. A new color book. Lithographed from original water colors by Miss A. W. Adams. Oblong 4to, $1. Boston: D. Lothrop Company.

In Rhymes for Little Readers Miss Adams has produced a distinctively American "color book," and one that will be voted as every way delightful by the small folks of the nursery. The choice in material includes some of the well-remembered jingles that have now become classic, but the main feature of the book—the pictures—are full of life and spirit without that redundancy of color that sometimes makes the child's picture book something too vivid in tinted inks.

This is a romance of the days of the Messias. In the preface, the author says: "To those who muse over the marvelous story of that greatest of all gifts to the world—the Word made flesh—who would know what was the immediate effect of his mission upon those among whom he walked and labored, this story of a brave, yet uncertain, a desiring, yet wavering, soul is presented as one of the possibilities of a time that was filled with uncertainties, and of a people as unready to accept as they were unfitted to comprehend the divine opportunity proffered them." That sentence tells the story of the book.

PERIODICALS.

—BIBLIA, for October, is full of papers relating to Egypt and Palestine. Charles H. S. Davis, Meriden, Conn. Price, $1 a year.

—WOMAN'S MISSIONARY ADVOCATE, for October, sustains the reputation it has achieved, and goes on its way gladdening souls and awaking our women to an enthusiastic appreciation of missionary opportunities and privileges. May it increase more and more! Publishing House, Nashville, Tenn. Price, fifty cents a year.

—The HOME-MAKER begins a new volume with October, and is now edited by Mrs. Croly (Jennie June). The present number is well filled. Home Maker Company, New York. Price, $2 a year.

—The QUARTERLY REVIEW. Barbee and Smith, Nashville, Tenn. Price, $2 50. The October number is before us. J. M. Wright contributes a paper on Usury and Usury Laws; Preparatory Education is from the pen of Charles H. Curd; Family Religion is from Thomas A. Seals; E. D. McCreary writes on Three Decades of Evolution; William E. Edwards on Egoism versus Scripture; Crawford Jackson on Three Dispensations of Christian Experience. The Editor's Table has four valuable articles. This is an unusually good number of this valuable periodical.

—DEMOREST'S FAMILY MAGAZINE, for November, takes us all around the world. Starting at Wellesley, by simply turning the leaves we are transported to "The Land of the Lapps," and the numerous illustrations and vivid descriptions make us quite familiar with these queer people; then the illustrated serial story carries us to China, and we complete the circuit by visiting the seals in Alaska and Greenland, taking a little diversion by the way in reading "Chat" about society doings, and enjoying in imagination so many good things told about in "Home-hold," that we wish Thanksgiving were already come. In fact, if you want to be amused with good stories, learn how to keep house and make it beautiful, how to keep well, or anything else that you want to know, take our advice and send your (subscription only $2 a year) to W. LESSON V.—November 2.

JESUS ACCUSED.

Luke xxii, 54-71.

GOLDEN TEXT.—He was wounded for our transgressions, he was bruised for our iniquities—Isa. liii, 5.

TIME.—Midnight, between Thursday and Friday of Passion Week.

PLACE.—The court of the high-priest's house, and the council-chamber of the Sanhedrin.

54. Then took they him—Rather, seizing him, with roughness. And led him—With his hands bound, probably behind his back. (John xviii. 12.) Into the high-priest's house—The actual high-priest was Joseph Caiaphas (another form of Kephas), son-in-law of Annas. The trial of our Lord by the Jews was in three phases: (1) Before Annas; (2) before Caiaphas; (3) before the entire Sanhedrin at dawn. Each trial might be regarded as supremely important. Peter followed afar off—"To see the end." If he had followed closely, not one of these temptations would have come with the same force.

55. And when they had kindled a fire—It is well known that the nights in Palestine, especially in the early year, are often very cold. We can not, therefore, be surprised at the servants warming themselves in the open court, while Peter, assuming as well as he can the appearance of an indifferent observer, takes his place in the midst of them, in order to be able to see and be witness in the immediate vicinity. Hall—Court. Sat down among them—That is, among the servants of the high-priest—sat in the middle of a group composed of the very men who had just been engaged, more or less directly, in the arrest of his Lord.

56. As he sat by the fire—Literally, by the light, or blaze, as in Mark xiv. 54. This, of course, threw the features of the disciple into bold relief. A certain maid—Apparently the portress (John xviii. 17), who had meanwhile been relieved, and who, after a brief gaze, recognized Peter as the man whom she had admitted. This man was also with him—Minute as the reminiscence is, it is interesting to note that it is through St. John's narrative that we get the explanation of the "also." St. John had already been seen and known as a disciple of Jesus.

57. Woman, I know him not—"Nor do I understand what you mean." (Mark xiv. 68.) The "woman" should come last. Peter—who has been described as "consistently inconsistent"—showed just the same kind of weakness many years later. It was temperamental. (Gal. ii. 12, 13.) The accounts of these denials by the evangelists are (as St. Augustine says of their narrative generally) "variations, but not contrary." They are capable of perfectly easy and perfectly natural reconcilement, and are a valuable proof of independence.

58. After a little while—The trial before the sacerdotal committee naturally took some time, and they were awaiting the result. Another said him—Of this second denial St. John says: "They said to him" (xviii, 25); and as the portress was sure to have gossiped about him to the girl who relieved her at her post, the second denial was due to his being pointed out by the second maid to the group of idlers who were hanging about the door, one of which was prominent in pressing the charge against him.

59. About the space of one hour after—To St. Peter it must have been one of the most terrible hours of his life. For he is a Galilean—This they could at once tell by the misplaced gutturals of the provincial dialect which betrayed him;" that is, pointed him out.

60. The cock crew—Rather, a cock. It crew for the second time.

61. The Lord turned, and looked upon Peter.—St. Luke alone preserves this most touching incident. Jesus must have looked on his erring apostle either from the chamber in which he was being tried, if it was one of those chambers with open front, or else at the moment when the trial was over, and he was being led across the court-yard amid the coarse insults of the servants. If so, the moment would have been one of awful pathos to the unhappy apostle.

62. And Peter went out—A testimony for the depth of his repentance, and of his longing for solitude, is found in the fact that after this, in the whole history of the Passion, we no longer discover the slightest trace of him. And wept—Not only "shed tears," but "swept aloud;" and, as St. Mark says, "the continued weeping." It was more than a mere burst of tears. Bitterly—St. Mark says epibalon, which may mean "when he thought thereon," or "flinging his mantle over his head."

64. Prophesy, who is it that smote thee?—The words derived their point from the fact that the officers had blindfolded (literally, covered his head) their prisoner. Was he able, through his supernatural power, to identify those who smote him?

66. As soon as it was day—The oral law decided that the Sanhedrin could only meet by daylight. The three synoptical evangelists agree that a meeting of the Sanhedrin was held at day-break. Elders...chief priests... scribes—The three constituent parts of the Sanhedrin. The Sanhedrin was the successor of the great synagogue, which ended with Simon the Just. Where they met is uncertain. Their council—Synedrion; from which the word Sanhedrin (spelt sometimes Sanhedrim) is derived. It gloried in being a mild tribunal, but was now an extremely degenerate body, and unworthy of its earlier traditions. The Jewish authorities had lost the power of inflicting death; they could only pass sentence of excommunication, and hand over to the secular arm.

67. Art thou the Christ—Literally, if thou art the Christ, tell us. The object of the Sanhedrin was somewhat different from that of the priests in the house of Caiaphas. They had only succeeded in establishing (by a most illegal personal appeal) a charge of constructive blasphemy. But blasphemy was not a charge on which a Roman could pronounce a capital sentence. Hence, in order to get Christ crucified, they needed a charge of treason, which might be constructed out of his claim to be the Messiah.

68. And if I also—I believe these words to have been said as a formal protest on the part of our Lord against the spirit and tendency of the question asked him, before he gives an answer to it; and as such they form an original and most valuable feature in the report: "It is with no view to examine and believe that you ask this question; nor, were I to attempt to educe from your own mouths my innocence, would you answer me or release me. I am well aware of the intention of this question, but the time is come for the confession to be made. Henceforth," etc.

69. Hereafter shall the Son of man sit—Rather, but from henceforth shall the Son of man be seated at. Our Lord seems at last to have broken his silence in these words. In order to end a miserable and useless scene. The words would at once recall Dan. vii, 13, 14; see John i, 51. "Hereafter," or "from henceforth." The kingdom is here spoken of as being about to be immediately inaugurated, since our Lord's cross is regarded as the first step to the throne of his glory.

70. The "I am" has something of the same significance as in John viii. 24, 25; viii. 58. The silence was broken as they expected. "He was indeed what the words they had uttered implied, the Son of God, sharing in the Father's eternity, the Head of an everlasting kingdom. No words in the whole gospel records are more decisive against the views of those who would fain see in our Lord only a great moral teacher, like Socrates or Ookya Mouni. At the very crisis of his history, when denial would have saved his life, he asserts his claim to be much more than this; to be all that the most devout Christians have ever believed him to be. At such a moment, when men stand face to face with seeming failure and with death, dreams and delusive claims, for the most part, melt away. Here claims that men have presumed to think of as delusive were strengthened and intensified, and reproduced in the calmness of assured conviction.

71. We ourselves have heard—We have heard him profess himself the Son of God; he is therefore guilty of blasphemy, and, as an impostor pretender to a divine mission, we must proceed against and condemn him to death. Thus they proceeded as far as they could; he must now be dragged before Pilate, as the Jews have no power to put him to death. His trial before Pilate is related in the subsequent chapter.

Boils and Pimples and other affections arising from impure blood may appear at this season, when the blood is heated. Hood's Sarsaparilla removes the cause of these troubles by purifying, vitalizing and enriching the blood, and at the same time it gives strength to the whole system.

Sensible Advice.

Dear Brother: You ask for some hints as to your course. The opportunity to learn Hebrew and Greek during your youth was denied you, nor can you repair the deficiency now; what, then, are you to do? I answer that the evil, though great, is not irreparable. John Bunyan did not know a word of the original languages of Scripture, yet he was a more effective preacher than any scholar of his day. True, you are not a Bunyan, but you may emulate his spirit and methods. Hence, in complying with your request, I have to say that the great requisite is to be master of the English Bible, and have it at finger's end. The way to do this is, first, to know its contents. This you can gain by reading it through once a year for at least five years—not for critical or devotional purposes, but simply to know what it contains. Three chapters a day will accomplish this. Read carefully, and at the close take five minutes to find out what you have gotten by the reading, what new truths, precepts, promises, images or fine expressions, have come before you.

The next thing is to get a true idea of the meaning, purpose and special usefulness of the separate books of the Bible. Take a month for each one and set apart half an hour a day for the study. Learn the object of the book, its division, its character in itself and as part of the whole, and whatever else you can fall in with. Write down in your own words what conclusions you have come to, and why. This will systematize and clarify your views, and help you to understand other matters. Then you are to take a part of each day for critical study. Have the Revised Version side by side with the Authorized, and always compare them. Use a good reference Bible and get what help you can from related Scripture. If you have a commentary, consult it. If not, go to work yourself. Ask first what does this verse (or passage) mean, and think a good while before giving it up as too much for you (as the Apocalypse is for most of your brethren). Then ask what does it teach, and here be honest and fair, not forcing matters. When you have learned what a passage means and what it teaches, you know it and not before. The next point is to put in your memory wherever of the Bible impresses or attracts you. 'Tis a great thing to have divine words at call. Then get your matter for sermons out of the Bible—such portions as occur to you in your reading. And when you have a text treat it fairly, deducing from it only such things as you suppose it was intended to teach.

Do not be ashamed to be "a man of one book." It is no end of a book, and will give you all you need. Your business is to know it and push it home upon your people. Do not stop to prove it, but, assuming it as God's Word, set it forth, showing its meaning and its application. Get your illustrations out of the Bible and your own experience and observation. Pray much and often for divine help. Preach to yourself before you preach to the people. Have unbounded faith in the Author of the Word, and remember that you do not go to the war at your own charges.—Christian Intelligencer.

The Great Theme.

It is sweet to preach the gospel, but it is not easy. It is no child's play to be like the wise householder that brings things new and old out of his treasure. But it is very easy to preach about secular things and the happenings of every-day life. Some men have a great reputation because of their bold utterances on the sins of the day, and they have great followings when they preach on the "Press as a Civilizing Agency," and topics like that. It is easy to grow eloquent about the saloon and the gambling houses and the snares set for the feet of the young. It is easy to denounce the shallowness of politics or the baseness of municipal rule, or the soullessness of the corporations. But to preach the gospel of Jesus Christ with a perennial freshness is not easy. "Who is sufficient for these things?" To come, one's self hardened, to lighten the burdens of others; to come, tormented with convictions, to be a guide and a light to others; to step into the pool of men's unholy passions and to seek to cleanse them by the tenderness of the Savior; and to do this all the time, holding one's self apart from temptations to please them, or amuse them, or entertain them; to do all this demands a whole man and him entirely consecrated to his work. The difficulty does not lie so much in the innumerable variations of the same great truth of salvation, that are required both by the frequence of preaching and the multiform needs of many people; but in holding one's self down to the "one thing" of preaching Christ. He is the answer to every anxious query. He is the satisfier of every troublous doubt. He is the bearer of every pressing burden. He is the sweet of all life's bitterness. He is the consoler of every crushing sorrow. He is the inspiration of every laudable effort. He is the reward for every sacrifice. He is God's wisdom and God's power given to every One that believeth—B., in Christian Advocate.

"One Was Likest God."

Miss Fanny Gary, daughter of Judge Gary, of Chicago, a young lady of wealth and position, lately worked for two weeks in a Division street tailor's shop, from seven o'clock in the morning till six at night, as a substitute for a consumptive girl, who could obtain her needful holiday only on condition of having a competent seamstress in her place, which, until Miss Gary insisted on taking it, she found it impossible to do.

How rare is that sweet charity which seeketh not its own, but another's good; but ever and anon the annals of humanity are enriched with instances of kindness and self-forgetfulness which have their inspiration from him who though he was rich, yet for our sakes became poor, that we through his poverty might have everlasting life." The world has yet an infinite deal to learn of the meaning of love. Few have passed beyond the stage of an experience or motive that does not have its end and substance in the question, Wherewithal shall I be fed or clothed? While the poor consumptive girl was having her holiday in the glad wood or by the wave, that other, "likest God," was also keeping holiday in a glad heart that wrought another's happiness.

There are rare and pleading opportunities offered every life to do some office not unlike this; if not in kind, at least as much to the real purpose and tenor of nobility. The poor ye have always with you. Many would love to break an alabaster box of ointment on the white feet of the Bridegroom if he were present in bodily form. But he is not; he is gone away. If to the least of his little ones it be done, it is done to him. Gold and garlands on the altar are good; but food for the hungry and ministry to the suffering are better than sacrifice.—Los Angeles Christian Advocate.

Peculiar

To itself in many important particulars, Hood's Sarsaparilla is different from and superior to any other medicine.

Peculiar in combination, proportion and preparation of ingredients, Hood's Sarsaparilla possesses the full curative value of the best known remedies of the vegetable kingdom.

Peculiar in strength and economy—Hood's Sarsaparilla is the only medicine of which can truly be said, "100 doses one dollar." Medicines in larger and smaller bottles require larger doses, and do not produce as good results as Hood's Sarsaparilla.

Peculiar in its "good name at home"—there is more of Hood's Sarsaparilla sold in Lowell, where it is made, than of all other blood purifiers.

Peculiar in its phenomenal record of sales abroad, no other preparation has ever attained such popularity in so short a time. Do not be induced to take any other preparation. Be sure to get

Ayer's Sarsaparilla

The Best Blood Medicine

So say Leading Physicians and Druggists, and their opinion is indorsed by thousands cured by it of Scrofula, Eczema, Erysipelas, and other diseases of the blood.

"Ayer's Sarsaparilla has won its reputation by years of valuable service to the community. It is the best."—H. S. Lang, Druggist, 212 Merrimack st., Lowell, Mass.

Dr. W. P. Wright, Paw Paw Ford, Tenn., says: "In my practice, I invariably prescribe Ayer's Sarsaparilla for chronic diseases of the blood."

Dr. R. R. Boyle, Third and Oxford sts., Philadelphia, Pa., writes: "For two years I have prescribed Ayer's Sarsaparilla in numerous instances, and I find it highly efficacious in the treatment of all disorders of the blood."

L. M. Robinson, Pharmacist, Sabina, O., certifies: "Ayer's Sarsaparilla has always been a great seller. My customers think there is no blood-purifier equal to it."

"For many years I was afflicted with scrofulous running sores, which, at last became so bad the doctors advised amputating one of my legs to save my life. I began taking Ayer's Sarsaparilla and soon saw an improvement. After using about two dozen bottles the sores were healed. I continue to take a few bottles of this medicine each year, for my blood, and am no longer troubled with sores. I have tried other reputed Blood-purifiers, but none does so much good as Ayer's Sarsaparilla."—D. A. Robinson, Neal, Kansas.

The annual meeting of the Publishing Committee of this paper will be held in this office, October 29, 1890.

The Delay—Fire.

Monday morning, about one o'clock, a fire was discovered in the ground floor of 110 Camp street. Before the firemen could get the fire under control, 110 Camp street, occupied by Aitken & Co., was completely destroyed. The office of the German Gazette, 108 Camp street, was seriously damaged, and our building, 112 Camp, was much injured. The roof was completely destroyed, and the type and fixtures of the Familienfreund, Dr. Abrens' paper, is a total loss, there being no insurance. Our type-room and press-room and editor's and publisher's offices were completely drenched with water. Whatever loss we have sustained is completely covered by insurance. Our readers will excuse the appearance of our paper when they learn that we were compelled to have the press-work done outside of our office. There necessarily has been a delay in getting out this issue; but we have made all arrangements for the future, and the paper will continue to be published, we hope, without farther interruption.

Since the above was written we have been informed that the damage to our building is estimated by the insurance company at $1,375, and that $275 will cover all damage to press and type and office furniture.

A Little Calculation.

A brother writes that since he has been taking the ADVOCATE he has paid for it about fifty dollars, and wants to know if we can't let him have it now for one dollar a year. Let us make a little calculation. In each number of the paper there are five pages of good and solid reading matter. In one year this amounts to 260 pages. During this time the brother has been taking the paper he has had 6,500 pages of good reading matter, for which he has paid $50. We think this is the cheapest reading the brother ever had. To satisfy ourselves on this point, we went into Bro. Van Valkenburgh's book-store and priced several books, and this is the result: One book equal in reading matter to six numbers of the ADVOCATE was marked $1 50; another book equal to eight numbers of the ADVOCATE was marked $2 50, and another book equal to five numbers of the ADVOCATE was marked $1 50. From this we see, by a little figuring, that if the brother had paid for the ADVOCATE at the same rate, he would have paid about $15 a year. In the 25 years he would have paid $375, whereas he has only paid $50. So that really we have made the brother a present of $325 in 25 years.

Look at it another way: The reading matter in one volume of the ADVOCATE is equal to eight and a half volumes of Dr. Clarke's "Elijah Vindicated." In 25 years this would run up to 212 volumes, which, at the market price of that book—$1 50—would amount to $318. Yet the ADVOCATE, with the same amount of reading matter, costs only $50 for the same time. Verily, we think we can not afford to give the brother any more than we are giving him. Thirteen dollars a year is about as much as we can stand.

Christ in You.

"This is a great mystery," but it is a great fact. It is the greatest of all mysteries and the greatest of all the facts of consciousness. The mystery deepens with every effort put forth for its solution, and yet the fact is revealed in greater prominence in the consciousness by every effort to solve the mystery. The very mystery that enshrouds the fact is the best evidence of the existence of the fact. In the ancient tabernacle, the visible shekinah was evidence of the mysterious presence of the invisible God. In the human tabernacle, the mystery of "Christ in you" so emphasizes the fact of Christ's presence to the consciousness that it can never be doubted. The fact once experienced silences every questioning and dispels all doubting. An apostle describes his conversion as simply the discovery of this fact of consciousness. He says: "When it pleased God to reveal his Son in me." The truth is, there can be no mistaking the revelation of a fact to the consciousness, no matter how mysterious the fact may be.

Speaking of his disciples in his prayer to the Father, our Lord said: "I in them and thou in me." When Paul stood up before Ananias and received the blessing of regeneration, he realized not only that he was made a "new creature," but that he was made a "new creature in Christ Jesus." The regenerative process was a double work to him. He was himself renewed, and Christ was formed within him at the same time. His dead spiritual nature was revived by the breath of the Spirit, and his spiritual life vitalized by the touch from the inflow of Christ's life. So profoundly was Paul convinced of this great fact that never for one moment did he question its existence in himself. It was the fountain of all his enjoyment, the incentive to all his work, the alleviation in all his toil and the consolation in all his distress. The one and only boast of this great, humble, brave spirit was: "Christ liveth in me." In all his preaching, in all his writing this mysterious fact of Christian experience challenges attention by its bold prominence. The continual refrain, sounding out above every note of joy, above every tone of sorrow, is, "Christ is all and in all." Indeed, so much was Paul impressed with the greatness and preciousness of this fact of experience, that he sees the whole wealth of redemption concentrated in it. He speaks of it as "the riches of the glory of this mystery, which is Christ in you, the hope of glory."

From all this it is plain that "Christ in you" is the essence of religion; that it is the only religion worth anything to the individual. This is so because it is the only religion that touches the inner nature—the consciousness—and impresses upon it the indubitable fact of its presence, and causes it to respond in testimony to that fact. As far as the individual is concerned, "Christ in you," testifying to the human spirit of its renewal, is the only ground of hope, the only foundation for peace of soul. All other testimony is weak. All other religion is as the "baseless fabric of a dream."

"Who Appoints the Committee?"

In the economy of our Methodism, pastors are made responsible for the administration of Discipline in the charges they are appointed to serve; and it is their duty "to receive, try and expel members, according to the provisions of the Discipline." Hence the law says: "The preacher in charge shall appoint three discreet members, who shall investigate the report or accusation;" and in case a trial is deemed necessary, then "the preacher shall appoint a committee of not less than five, nor more than thirteen." In both cases the committees are to be appointed by the preacher, and he may not raise these committees in any other way. The law is mandatory It says it shall be done this way.

In the case of a traveling preacher it is the duty of the "presiding elder in the absence of the Bishop to call together as many traveling preachers as he shall think fit—at least, three—to investigate the report or accusation." If the Bishop is present, it is his duty to "call together" this committee. If the accused is a presiding elder, then the "Bishop shall appoint a committee."

One of the duties of a Bishop is to "suspend preachers in the intervals of the Conferences, as necessity may require, and as the Discipline directs." We have seen what it directs to be done.

It appears from the foregoing that the power and duty of appointing committees of investigation and of trial inheres in the preacher in charge, in the presiding elder and in the Bishop. In the first-named because they are appointed by the last named, by the Bishops.

The law nowhere provides for the raising or appointment of a committee of investigation or trial by a Church, Quarterly, or Annual Conference. If a committee is called for in any case, it is to be appointed by the Bishop, presiding elder or preacher in charge. This is the law, and it has been the practice of the church from its organization down to this time. No amount of sentiment, political, religious or secular, should be allowed to override the law and usage of the church and make it practically inoperative, a dead letter on the book.

It is eminently wise and proper that the jury be selected by an umpire who is, or supposed to be, impartial. In the case of members of the church, the law places this responsibility on the preacher in charge; and in the case of preachers, it puts the responsibility on the Bishop or on his representative, the presiding elder. It is not wise in any man, or body of men, to assume responsibility clearly placed on another; and it is weak and sinful for any man, or body of men, not to shoulder responsibilities with which they have been specially charged.

This is a good time for young men who desire the office of a Bishop, and covet the best gifts, to consider the duties and responsibilities of Bishops. It is a great office, full of honor, but it is one full of care and of grave responsibilities.

GILDEROY.

Our Papers.

St. Louis Advocate: We would not undervalue any advance which may have been made in our organism or machinery—but something must be done to keep the fires burning, or we will lack the power to move the machinery. The secret of our life and power is in the genuineness and depth of our experience. And in this is not our church to-day drifting away from that of our fathers? It is vain to point to how much may be given to missionary, educational and other good causes. We rejoice in the advance along those lines. But such things are not of themselves infallible evidences of advance in Christian life, much less can they take the place of vital experience. "These ought ye to have done, and not to leave the other undone." We would not restrain the gift of one dollar or recall one missionary, but rather multiply them. But we do believe that there is a great demand to look where we are drifting in our religious experience, and that something must be done on this line. We are in sympathy with what our Bishops said of the class meeting: "Its revival, if it be possible, would be an incalculable gain to the church." We do not advise the revival of this or that stereotyped form of class meeting—God in the history of the church does not exactly repeat himself. But we would sound the alarm that the spiritual condition of the church demands attention; and say it is vain to multiply machinery in other directions if the one agency which looked to Christian experience falls into disuse. We need the class meeting—or it may be God's will to give us something better along the same line.

Nashville Advocate: That fine, indefinable quality that we call spirituality, is an indispensable requisite to a successful ministry. It is not a natural endowment, a refined temperament, subtlety of intellect, charm of manner, cultured eloquence. It is a grace bestowed—being "filled with the Spirit." It is often seen and felt in crude, ungainly, uncultivated natures, whose only opportunities for high, refining associations have been found in their communings with God. It lends itself to the rudest form of speech, provided only that the speaker has the prophet's call, and speaks consciously under a divine impulse. It is the power of the pulpit. If it be wanting, all else is "sounding brass or a tinkling cymbal." Many a preacher of to-day, seeking in the science and current literature of the time the material and polish of style that he thinks necessary for his impressive and attractive sermons, neglects the secret place where a few hours' communion with God would furnish him with revelations that would blaze through the mind and conscience of his congregation like the light of the coming judgment, and impart to him a wisdom and spirit like that of Stephen, which none of the people could withstand. This is attainable by every man called of God to this ministry; and he who is without it should halt awhile and wait in God's secret places until he be endued with the power from on high.

Alabama Advocate: A discourse is measured by its weight, not by its length. A brother was asked: "How long does your pastor preach?" "Thirty minutes, measured by what he says; sixty by the time he consumes," was the answer. A day of such preaching is not a day of great preachers. Sermonic prolixity is unpardonable, is an imposition against which sensible audiences ought to protest. There is but one explanation of the gaseous emptiness of these "long-drawn-out" harangues—a lack of preparation. The old brother who found himself "in the brush" and "just 'hollered' out of it" is a case in point. It is a trite saying, but none the less true, that what is worth saying in public is worth the most thorough preparation. The preacher who goes into the pulpit with an empty head will soon find himself preaching to empty pews. The man of the nineteenth century wants ideas, not fuss and sweat. Perspiration can never be substituted for inspiration. An hour spent in incoherent and tedious rambling over a subject that has never been thought out, is an insult to an intelligent audience. It is time to do away with the old Hardshell idea that the mouth has only to be opened for the Lord to fill it. Thorough preparation will make most of our sermons about half as long and about twice as thick and about five times as interesting. Suppose you try it.

Alabama Advocate: The truth is, somebody ought to write a book, yes, a whole book, on the Ethics of Methodism. It is a fruitful subject, but has hardly been written on at all. Our people ought to be shown what are the obligations created by our system of doctrine, by our ecclesiastical system, and by the two as they have been providentially correlated. At present, we are working mostly in the dark, at haphazard, as occasions suggest; and will never get out of this boyish way of doing things until we rise up high enough to see all our obligations at one view. Then we will lay down our lines and build thereon for milleniums and not for decades. Until we do this, we will go on as we have been doing, building and pulling down, like little children amusing themselves with mud-houses. The country is now settled, and it is time for the church to stop experiments and makeshifts. In every respect, let us in the future build for permanancy, and let us regard as permanent what we now have; and let us "strengthen the things that remain," so that they will not be shaken by any contingency of war or peace in the days to come. Particularly let us build up our colleges, male and female, and make them really great institutions.

The Interior: But the Sabbath is in its essence a different day from the rest. When God blessed it and hallowed it he mingled something with the time that makes it different. We used to say that light and heat were immaterial things, but later discovered that they were in some way constituents of materiality. So while we would not regard the glory of God as a material emanation, yet we do not doubt its absolute reality. Now, it seems to me that he put a real element of his own placidity into the Sabbath, and into all nature. The lake dimples and shimmers below me as it did not yesterday. A leafy birch beyond my window seems to be in the enjoyment of serene happiness. A crossbill sits with his red breast to the sun more quietly than usual. I think if we would listen and observe and reflect, we would find that the Sabbath has a sanctity of its own, quite independent of any use we may make of the day; that it is in esse a different day from the others. I have no doubt that in saying this my readers will respond: "Yes, that is true. I have often been impressed with it myself." God's laws are all parts of nature—they are the souls of things. There would be a seventh-day Sabbath though there were no decalogue—indeed, there was before the decalogue was framed. The ancient Akkasians observed it long before Abraham made his journey from Ur to Jericho—a thousand years before Sinai. There is a great deal more in the observance of the Sabbath than mere obedience to a command. It is putting ourselves in harmony with ourselves and our surroundings. It is escaping hurtful and disagreeable jar and collision with moral, physical and spiritual forces.

Texas Advocate: In the study of the events in the gospel narratives we fail of the best results if we do not learn the principles of the Christ-character. It is the Christ-character of which the events in his life are the revelations that we should endeavor to know and attain for ourselves. A perfunctory imitation of the conduct of Christ will amount to little in the estimation of the value of one's life. It is the inner character revealing itself in conduct that counts. Conduct on any given occasion similar to that of Christ will go for naught by any true test of the worth of life unless it be produced by a Christ-like character.

Florida Advocate: The Battle Creek Adventist publications are misleading. The Adventists have mistaken time and again the period of our Lord's coming, have misinterpreted Holy Scripture so badly that open failure has been the result in many instances, and yet they imagine that the world ought to accept their teachings after so much blundering. Their position about the Sabbath is wholly untenable, a mischievous delusion; it does no good, but unsettles a few by disturbing fancies and creates controversy and bad feeling. Their books ought not to be kept in the house.

Mid-Continent: A sad case of hide-and-seek in morals has been developed. Christian nations are denouncing the slave trade of Africa; meanwhile sending them ship-loads of rum and gin. Some Arabs recently held a convention in Khartoum denouncing the liquor traffic and threatening that all persons found engaged in it should be sold as slaves. Their language is very emphatic as they bitterly inveigh against the "Christian nations which obstinately inundate the country with their infernal liquor."

If no special passage in your life be so conspicuous as to arrest any man's attention, let your character, as a whole, make an impression for the truth. Let its weight, however little, press everyone it touches away from the wrong and into the right.—Dr. Charles F. Deems.

Notes.

Our Missionary Reporter, for the current month, is full to overflowing with interesting, entertaining and instructive missionary reading. Have you subscribed for it yet? It is only fifty cents a year. It will do you great good to expend five dimes a year that way. Try it; and if it don't, why, then, you can spend them in some other way.

The St. Louis Christian Advocate thus defines loyalty to the Methodist Church:

Loyalty does not consist in merely being subject to its discipline, though that is a part of it, but in being in spiritual accord with those great scriptural principles which were under that mighty movement called Methodism, of which John Wesley was the providential leader.

According to the official figures, the population of Louisiana is 1,116,828 being an increase of 176,828, or 18.82 per cent., since 1880. According to the same figures, the population of Mississippi is 1,284,887, being an increase of 153 290, or 13.55 per cent., since 1880. Thus it is seen that Louisiana has gained 23,592 more inhabitants in ten years than Mississippi.

In calling their people to the observance of "self-denial week," this year, the Salvation Army officers use this language in their circulars: "We call for your help to carry the tidings of redeeming love to the poor and the lost, to the uncleansed and the unloved and the uncared for 'in all the world.' We claim that help in the great Master's name." Does not that remind us of the message Jesus sent to John?

Before he left for St. Louis, Dr. Carradine laid a souvenir of Palestine on our desk. It is a soft, whitish rock from the valley of Ajalon, and is a little larger than a hen's egg. The Doctor was good enough to inform us that it was one of the rocks with which the Israelites pelted the Philistines, and that he gave it to us to throw at all Philistines who seek to invade the ADVOCATE office. Let all such know, then, that we are prepared for them.

Edwin Arnold's new poem, "The Light of the World," will have an introduction by Richard H. Stoddard. It will be illustrated with reproductions (by special arrangement) of Hoffman's celebrated pictures of the "Life of Christ," and by a portrait of the author. The poem will be also copiously annotated. Funk and Wagnalls, New York, have the control of the American edition. This edition will be issued some time this month, and prior to the publication of the poem in Europe.

The Bishop of Cork, at the unveiling of the Berkely memorial, said:

The world can not afford to forget its great thinkers, much less afford to forget one such who was of us and dwelt amongst us. The great thinkers of the world live in the result of their thoughts. They are few in number. The workers and toilers of the world are many, those who use the thoughts of others and build with them are many, the popularizers of the thoughts of others are many, but those whose thoughts mark a distinct step in the general progress of knowledge are few.

A contributer to one of our exchanges, writing on the force of illustrations in preaching, gives this incident:

A minister called upon a member who had been neglecting the week-night service, and went straight up to the fire-place in the sitting-room, and with the tongs removed a live coal from off the fire, and placed it on the hearth, then watched it while it turned from the red glow of heat to a black mass. The member in question carefully observed the proceeding, and then said, "You need not say a single word, sir; I'll be there on Wednesday night."

Ten rich women in New Jersey resolved that they would each find one mother, poor, burdened with family cares, and extend to her personal sympathy and helpfulness. Many are the cheering messages now entering ten humble homes, many the rough places smoothed by actual loving service, and continually is felt the reflex influence, the experience that "it is more blessed to give than to receive." Thus, twenty homes are lifted up into the light.—New York Observer.

Sister, whether you are rich or poor, you can do just that same work in your own neighborhood and earn the reward of a happy heart, happy for having alleviated the sorrows and smoothed the cares of one fellow-sufferer. Will you rejoice in the reward?

The Young Men's Christian Association seems to be growing at a steady pace. There are now 1 341 associations, with a membership of 213,000; these have 205 buildings, valued at $8,352,910; the total amount of property is $10,400,000. There are 1,095 secretaries and assistants. Over $1,600,000 are contributed annually for local work and $102,000 for general work. There are 302 college, 82 railroad, 10 German, 36 colored, and 11 Indian Associations. There are 1,031 Bible training classes, 1 537 weekly prayer and praise meetings. There are 511 libraries with 422 912 volumes; 731 reading-rooms; 368 gymnasiums; 145 literary societies and 178 boys' departments.

Personal and Otherwise.

The Christian man who employs a woman at a dollar a day to do work for which he would have to pay a man three or four dollars a day, had better bible his Christianity under a bushel.

Rev. C. McDonald, presiding elder of Woodville district, gave us a call last week. He is winding up affairs on his district preparatory to the meeting of Conference, December 17.

Rev. T. K. Faunt LeRoy, our pastor at Ruston, La., was in the city last week in attendance upon the meeting of the Confederate Veterans' Association. Bro. Faunt LeRoy served in the army as captain and major of artillery, and is, therefore, a veteran. He preached acceptably to our Felicity Street congregation last Sunday morning.

Three newspapers in Jackson, Miss., have been consolidated: Commonwealth, New Mississippian and Farmers' Day.

Dr. D. C. Kelley was tried at the late session of the Tennessee Conference for abandoning his work, and suspended for six months.

McKendree Church, Nashville, has nine local preachers, nine trustees and forty-two stewards. Well officered as to numbers!

That was a terrible sentence in Judge Chrisman's speech in the convention the other day! Did you notice it? It was this:

"Some of our people are as much debauched by whisky money as Louisiana people are by lottery money."

Poor Louisianians! Poor Mississippians! Rich Lottery! Rich saloon!

The chief of police of this city was assassinated last Thursday night within a few steps of his own door. Several parties are implicated, and have been arrested. The fact of such a horrible crime caused a thrill of horror in the community. The fact that the most important officer should be thus shot down arouses on all sides the deepest indignation. It is hoped that the perpetrators of this dastardly crime will be brought to speedy justice. The conviction before the courts and the hanging of a few of the murderers in this city will do more to stop such crimes than anything else.

Notice.

The trustees of Millsaps College will meet in Jackson, Miss., Thursday, December 4 1890, at half-past nine A. M. THOS. J. NEWELL,
Secretary.

Postal Card Reports.

—Rev. T. S. West writes from Wesson, Miss.: "Millsaps College Day observed; the collection taken—cash, $52—which will be forwarded to the treasurer."

—Rev. W. W. Cammack writes: "We observed Millsaps College Day at Fannin; raised fifteen dollars in cash. This makes seventy-five dollars in all given to the college by this charge."

—S. Hilbert, superintendent Methodist Episcopal Sunday-school at McComb, Miss., reports: "The collection yesterday for Millsaps College amounted to $21 85. Of that amount the Sunday-school gave $3 85."

—R. L. Campbell, Prof. Payne Institute, Augusta, Ga., writes: "Payne Institute has just had its most successful opening. We are crowded now, with more to follow. Oh! how we need more room and more teachers."

—Rev. H. P. Gibbs reports from Pleasant Grove, Miss.: "Educational Day was celebrated at Pleasant Grove yesterday. Collection, $42. Will celebrate at other places this round, and report results from entire circuit."

—Rev. E. H. Caey writes from Como, Miss.: "Cash collection for Millsaps College yesterday, $50. Bros. Shands and Newell were with us. A fine impression made for the college. The speeches of yesterday will tell for good in the days yet to come."

—Rev. D. G. W. Ellis writes: "Millsaps College Day was observed on the Madison circuit, resulting in seventy-five dollars cash and subscriptions to be paid first of November, next, I may add something to it before I forward it. Other collections behind, but hope to bring them up."

—Rev. R. A. Burroughs writes from Okolona station, North Mississippi Conference: "I preached on the subject of Christian Education yesterday, and our collection was $26. Our church at Okolona has given about $700 to Millsaps College. Church in a fine condition; have received during the year 50 members. All the collections will be in full by Conference."

—Rev. J. H. Evans writes from Williamsburg, Miss.: "We are moving up on this new work made out of an old one, and I think will be able to come up to the Conference with a good report; collections all promised and, I hope, will be in full. Four new churches on the way: two of them finished, except the painting; the others lack ceiling on the inside. Forty additions to the church this year."

—Rev. T. W. Lewis writes from Winona, Miss.: "Rev. M. L. Blanton assisted me nearly two weeks in a meeting here. We had some six accessions, and a good meeting in the church. The influence left after the meeting is splendid. Some of our people did not attend, and hence missed the benefit the meeting would have been to them. I have received 98 into the church here by letter and in profession of faith during the twenty-one months I have been pastor. We trust the church is in a better condition now than it has been, though there is much coldness here yet. Why is it that our little Southern towns are so cold and selfish? We ought to be the best people on earth. We observed Millsaps College Day."

—Rev. W. J. Porter, writing from Farmerville, La., says: "The Lord has blessed me most wonderfully this year. After nine days of continued services, we closed a union meeting at the little town of Marion (fourteen miles north of Farmerville), Sunday night, October 12. There were quite a number of conversions, eighteen accessions, with two other applicants for membership. Sunday evening, Bros. Calaway and Ward, Baptist ministers, with the writer, officiated alternately in the same pool until we had baptized thirteen in the name of the Holy Trinity. We organized a Methodist Church, with nine members, with more to follow. There was an offering of over sixty dollars, divided among the preachers, and four new subscriptions for the ADVOCATE."

—Rev. J. H. Brown writes: "The sixth and last protracted meeting on Water Valley circuit, North Mississippi Conference, closed on Sunday, October 12; the Lord having been with us in great power. About seventy professed faith in Christ, and eighty or more were added to the church, and more to follow. Church greatly revived and a number of family altars established. 'Not unto us, O Lord, not unto us, but unto thy name give glory.' The camp meeting—joint interest of Water Valley station and circuit—was a success; thirty or more professions of conversion. Dr. Newell, of Grenada; Dr. Sims, of Oxford, and Dr. McLaurin, agent of the American Bible Society, were present a portion of the time and did excellent preaching. Much improvement has been made in building and repairs. A new tabernacle will be built soon."

—Rev. H. M. Young, writing from Jonesboro circuit, North Mississippi, says: "We have had sixty conversions on the work, and thirty two accessions to our church, with more to follow. We had an excellent meeting at the Camp Ground Church, with eight accessions. We were assisted here by Rev. L. A. McKeown, who did faithful and efficient work. We had a good meeting at Ebenezer Church; eleven conversions and eight accessions. At Faulkner, the most difficult point on the work, we had a wonderful revival. Our presiding elder, Rev. W. S. Lagrone, assisted us four days, preaching earnestly and effectively. After nearly a week's labor, the revival wave burst forth, and in less than three days more than a score and a half of souls were converted. In the latter part of the meeting we were also assisted by Rev. S. C. Bass, pastor of Cumberland Presbyterian Church. We have had a good year on the Jonesboro circuit. There has been a good revival throughout the charge. To God be all the glory!"

—Rev. H. M. Banks, Spring Creek charge, Louisiana Conference, writes: "I wish to say that the Spring Creek Camp Meeting was a glorious success from first to last. Eternity will only tell the good accomplished of 1890. The Holy Ghost carried the truth in the hearts of the people, convincing many of sin, righteousness and of the judgment to come. May God bless those dear brethren who labored so faithful in word and doctrine. Bro. Blocker, of Plaquemine, was with us from the first service to the last, preaching, praying and singing in the spirit of the Master to the conviction and conversion of sinners and to the edification of believers. Bro. S. H. Cooper was with us for three days doing good work for the Master. Bro. Cooper is so well known and so much beloved on Spring Creek that his very presence is a source of comfort to many. Bros. George Jackson and S. H. Whatley came to our assistance on Sunday morning, adding much to the interest of the meeting. The results of the meeting so far as known were twenty-five conversions, seven accessions by profession and two by certificate, and such an upbuilding of believers as will never be known till eternity shall reveal it. The camp-meeting interest on Spring Creek has been greatly revived. Some thought that the camp meeting ought to die out, because of some disorderly persons who disturbed the peace of the worshiping people; but they begin to see that there is more power in the living God than in an arm of flesh, because in answer to prayer God put his hook in the enemy's mouth and quieted him in such manner that the work of God went on, and Satan and his emissaries were driven from the camp, and peace was upon Israel. I think I will be able to bring up all the collections ordered by the Conference, and the chances are good for a full salary for the preacher. Praise the Lord for all his benefits to the children of men! We have baptized a goodly number of children during this year. God bless the lambs!"

—Rev. H. M. Evans reports from Adams circuit: "We have finished our Ebenezer and Beulah protracted meetings, and at both the Lord gave us gracious and fruitful revivals. Rev. F. M. Keen, of Amite City, was with us in our Ebenezer meeting after Monday, and rendered most excellent help, for which we heartily thank him. Our church at that place was greatly stirred and many backsliders reclaimed. We closed with half the congregation praising God, and Bro. Keen pronounced it the best meeting he was ever in. There were seven accessions and many more conversions. This church, with its sixty odd members, now has a young people's prayer meeting in addition to the regular one, a Woman's Missionary Society of twenty members, and almost every family, its altar. The brethren have just re-covered the church and now talk of ceiling it. Our Beulah meeting was about as good. Dr. Bethea, from our local ranks, gave most valuable assistance here, God bless him! One special and glorious feature was a pardon service, at which all the quarrels of the members were settled and dropped and brotherly love renewed in the hearts of all. Here there were five young men received and put to work in the Lord's vineyard. The number of professions was in excess of the number received by far, but can not be remembered. The prayer meeting was revived and many family altars erected. Another result of this meeting was a subscription for the building of a new church; the present one being very old, ugly and uncomfortable. The amount subscribed during the meeting is almost sufficient to meet the demands, and a new church will soon be a reality. We praise God from whom these and many more blessings are flowing! Pray for us, that we may be proved faithful and zealous."

Dedication.

On Sunday, October 12, Bro. Oakley, of Columbus, was with us at Sidon, and dedicated our new church. He preached to the perfect satisfaction of everybody present, and everybody went away delighted. He had a collection of $200 to raise before he could dedicate the church; but everything was raised and the "decks cleared," and the work was soon complete. The good people of Sidon will long remember Bro. Oakley's visit, and will be glad to have him come back some other time.

The preacher in charge was not able to attend the dedication on account of having the measles. He hopes to be at the next dedication on his charge, which will not be long off. We expect to have good houses of worship on the Belzoni circuit.

Church Dedication.

At Pachuta, on the line of the N. O. and N. E. R. R., in Clarke county, Miss., Sunday, October 12, 1890, it was my pleasure to solemnly dedicate to the service of God a very handsome frame building, costing $800. The Lord's Supper was administered to a goodly number of communicants. Millsaps College was not forgotten; $20 being contributed in cash. In the afternoon a Woman's Auxiliary Missionary Society was organized. At night five persons applied for church membership. The meeting goes on under Bro. W. B. Hines' leadership. Credit is due John E. Hurd, John E. Johnson and J. C. Bass, the Building Committee, and Sister Emma Johnson for their untiring assistance.

Notice.

To Applicants for Admission on Trial into the Traveling Connection in the North Mississippi Conference:

The Examining Committee will meet you in Grenada at three P. M., on Monday, December 8, 1890. We desire you to be well prepared for this examination. You will find the required course of study in the appendix to the Discipline. In the "ordinary branches of an English education," your examination will be confined to spelling reading, English grammar, arithmetic and geography. Let all our young preachers who aim at the itinerant ministry first secure as full an academic preparation as they can.

Church Dedication.

Wednesday, October 15, in Jasper county, Miss., about four miles northwest of Heidelberg, I dedicated Philadelphia Church—a new house of worship begun last year and completed this. I was assisted in the services by Revs. B. S. Rayner, R. F. Witt and J. W. Chambers. The Building Committee was composed of F. C. Thornton, H. A. James and A. McLellan. The neat, well-ceiled, comfortably seated little church—25x40 feet, valued at $660—reflects great credit on the committee, the people and the preacher in charge.

And the best lamp ever made, like Aladdin's of old, a "wonderful lamp!" A lamp absolutely non-explosive and unbreakable, which gives a clear, soft, brilliant white light of 85 candle power! Purer and brighter than gas light, softer than electric light, more cheerful than either! That lamp is

And with it there is no smoke, no smell, no broken chimneys, no flickering, no sweating, no climbing up of the flame, no "tantrums" nor annoyance of any kind, and it never needs trimming. Its founts (oil reservoirs) being tough rolled seamless brass, with central draft, it is absolutely unbreakable, and as safe as a tallow candle.

Only five years old, and a [illegible] of lamp to make such a telling success. Tested it is, for lamps may come and lamps may go, but the "Rochester" shines on forever! We make over 2,000 artistic varieties, Hanging and Table Lamps, Banquet, Study, Vase and Piano Lamps, every kind, in Bronze, Porcelain, Brass, Nickel and Black Wrought Iron.

Ask the lamp dealer for it. Look for the trade-mark stamped "The Rochester." If he has not the genuine Rochester and the style you want, or if no lamp-store is near, send to us for free illustrated catalogue and reduced price-list, and we will box and send you any lamp safely by express, right to your door.

GROVES—JAMES ALSTON GROVES was born in Elbert county, Ga., September 25, 1798 and died at Brown's, Dallas county, Ala., June 30, 1890. He graduated with honor at Columbia, S. C.; was admitted to the bar and practiced law at Washington, Ga., in partnership with O. H. Prince. He married Mrs. Tabitha Beall, who lived only a few years after their marriage. He then removed to Kosciusko, Miss., where he married the widow of Judge Mitchell, with whom he lived thirty or more years. He then married Mrs. Johnson, and removed to Opelousas, La. She lived after this marriage only two or three years. He leaves no children. In December, 1889, or early in January, 1890, he came to live with his nephew—Dr. Joseph A. Groves—at Brown's, Ala., where the writer first met him. The deceased professed religion in early life and joined the Methodist Church, which relation he continued to sustain until the time of his death.

In his latter life he was licensed to preach. In many respects Bro. Groves was a remarkable man. He attained considerable eminence as a jurist; was a strong advocate of the temperance cause, and as opportunities presented he would deliver lectures on the subject of total abstinence. He was gifted in prayer and delighted in religious conversation. He had a strong memory and possessed much valuable Methodist history, having lived nearly a century. He died full of faith in God.

J. C. JOHNSON.

DAY—Little LILLIE BELLE, aged five years five months and one day, daughter of Bro. R. D. and Sister F. L. Day, died very suddenly of congestion, August 23, 1890, at her parents' home, near Wesley Chapel Church, Franklin county, Miss. She was christened in the faith of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, by Rev. N. B. Young in 1888.

Dear loved ones: "Let not your hearts be troubled: ye believe in God, believe also in me. I go to prepare a place for you; and if I go and prepare a place for you, I will come again and receive you unto myself." Jesus has made manifest this blessed promise by coming and receiving unto himself in his Father's house with many mansions the spirit of precious little Lillie. Sorrow not, but seek refuge in a sympathizing Jesus. Hear him speak to thee: "Peace I leave with you, my peace I give unto you: not as the world giveth, give I unto you. Let not your heart be troubled, neither let it be afraid. Ye have heard how I said unto you, I go away, and come again unto you."

CHAS. W. CRISLER, P. C.

COSTLEY—VERNA KATIE COSTLEY, daughter of John T. and Katie C. Costley, was born November 18, 1880, and died near Fayette, Jefferson county, Miss., August 29, 1890. Her mother died three years ago. Since that time she has lived with her grand-parents. She was a good-disposed child, and belonged to the Sabbath-school, which she loved dearly. Was a sufferer for months, but was called off very unexpectedly; only confined to her bed one day and night. When death came she was at first alarmed, and asked all to pray for her. When told that she must pray, she did so, and received an answer to her prayer at once. Her dying testimony was very affecting; kissing everyone good-bye, asking them to meet her in heaven. She leaves a father, two sisters and one little brother and many friends and relatives to mourn her loss.

R. B.

ABNEY—Mrs. ELIZA ANN ABNEY, daughter of Christopher and Catherine Talum, was born in Jasper county, Miss., March 16, 1840, and died August 23, 1890. She was happily married to Mr. J. P. Abney, December 22, 1857, and lived a happy life with him. Sister Abney was greatly loved by all that I ever heard speak of her. She was a member of the Methodist Church, and by her kindness proved that she was a Christian. She died of catarrh of the head, and for six months prior to her death she suffered a great deal. But her suffering has ended. She has left a husband and eight children to mourn her departure. "The Lord giveth, and the Lord taketh away; blessed be the name of the Lord!"

PASTOR.

NEWSOM—The following resolutions were adopted by the Quarterly Conference of Scotland circuit, Mississippi Annual Conference, August 13, 1890:

Whereas, God, in his infinite wisdom, has removed by death from our midst our young brother, the Rev. T. F. NEWSOM, who was twenty-three years old, and at the time of his death was going to school in the eastern part of the State, preparing himself for active duties in his Master's vineyard (He had been licensed to preach one year ago, but the Master called, and said, "Come up higher;" "You have been faithful in a little, I will make you ruler over much. Enter thou into my joy"); we desire to express our appreciation of his sterling worth as a member of our church, his noble Christian character and his untiring devotion to the cause he loved so well, that of being an humble servant in the work of saving souls and doing good among his fellow-men; therefore, be it

Resolved, That while we bow with humility and reverence to the will of him who doeth all things well, we feel that in the death of our brother the church has lost one of its most useful and consecrated members.

Resolved, That we shall ever hold in memory the true manliness and exalted Christian character of our departed brother, and shall revere with gratitude his kind and fraternal spirit and his power as a minister of the glorious gospel of Jesus Christ.

Resolved, That we tender his bereaved family our deepest sympathies, and pray Almighty God that their sorrows may be lightened by the comforting presence of the Holy Spirit, strengthen their hopes of a happy reunion in the bright beyond, where parting is no more.

JOHN C. WILKINSON, Sec.

BARWICK—When persons have advanced in life even to middle age, death does not seem so sad; but when called away in the very bloom of a bright, promising life, our hearts are saddened. Mrs. ETHEL BARWICK (nee Brown) was born October 26, 1871, in Madison county; moved to Rankin county when quite a child, where she grew up to model womanhood. She was married to Mr. Edward Barwick in 1889. After only six months of happy union she was called away March 1, 1890.

Having joined the church when young, and fully appreciating the obligations assumed, we are not surprised to know that when the end came it was peace. She told her husband she was going to leave him, and requested them to sing at her burial, "Asleep in Jesus," and "God be with you till we meet again." May God bless the lonely husband and loving relatives, who miss dear Ethel

A FRIEND.

MONTGOMERY—My sister, Mrs. S. K. MONTGOMERY died at her residence, near Pickens, Holmes county, Miss., on September 11 1889 aged sixty-eight years. She was born and reared in the Methodist Church by her Methodist preacher-father, Rev. Peter James, in the days when the life of the preacher was something different from what it is now. She was left a widow during the war, with five young children entirely dependent on her. With Christian faith and heroism her entire life from then until her death was devoted to them. The last year of her life she lived an invalid, borne with Christian meekness. Her death leaves but two of us on this side the "river."

PETER JAMES.

GALLOWAY—On August 23 the mortal remains of MARY LOUISE, daughter of G. W. and F. E. Galloway, was buried at the family cemetery, near old Madisonville, Madison county. Her life was short; but her gentle disposition won all hearts.

Father, mother, sisters and brothers, another tie calls you heavenward. Let us strive to meet our loved ones over there."

AUNT SALLIE.

NOW the God of peace, that brought again from the dead our Lord Jesus, that great shepherd of the sheep, through the blood of the everlasting covenant, make you perfect in every good work, to do his will, working in you that which is well-pleasing in his sight, through Jesus Christ; to whom be glory for ever and ever. Amen.—Hebrews xiii. 20, 21.

Medicine Not an Exact Science.

"This alone is certain; there is nothing certain." This is especially true in medicine. There is no honest physician who will warrant a cure, or say with certainty, "I can heal you." All that he can do is to use the means in his power and "spare no pains." Still, if any remedy has proved efficacious in many cases, curing obstinate and chronic ailments, one is justified in giving encouragement and recommending its use. Such a remedy is Compound Oxygen. The result of years of labor and study, it has proved eminently successful, and is recommended, not only by patients, but by many physicians who use it in their practice, and also in their own families. One of our patients writes: "I need not attempt to describe the state of one who suffers from insomnia. It is enough to say, I know by experience. For many months I did not sleep more than three or four hours out of the twenty-four, could not work, and lost forty pounds in weight. Now I no longer lose flesh, can work, and best of all, can sleep. I not only say, "Blessed is the man that invented sleep," but, "Blessed be the man that invented Compound Oxygen." DRS. STARKEY & PALEN:—"I used your Compound Oxygen Treatment for very serious trouble with my throat and lungs. At the end of five months I found myself a well man." WILLIAM PENN NIXON.

Mr. Nixon is widely known as the editor of the Chicago Inter-Ocean. We can furnish you with hundreds of testimonials. Write us and we will send, free, our brochure of 200 pages, containing abundant evidence, a history of Compound Oxygen, records of cases, and a great deal of valuable and interesting reading. Enables a Miserable Dyspeptic to Eat Bacon, Cabbage and Turnips.

Case of Mr. C., stated by Dr. John C. Coleman, a retired Surgeon of the United States Navy, Scottsburg, Va.

"Mr. C. was for years a sufferer from DYSPEPSIA, unable to eat Meat or Vegetables, living upon TEA and CRACKERS, BREAD and MILK, and Other Similar Articles, which were frequently thrown off in an undigested state. The use of BUFFALO LITHIA WATER for some eight weeks enabled him to eat with impunity BACON, CABBAGE and TURNIPS, and resulted in his restoration to robust health."

Water in cases of one dozen half-gallon bottles, $5 F. O. B. here.

GRANT'S FURNITURE STORE

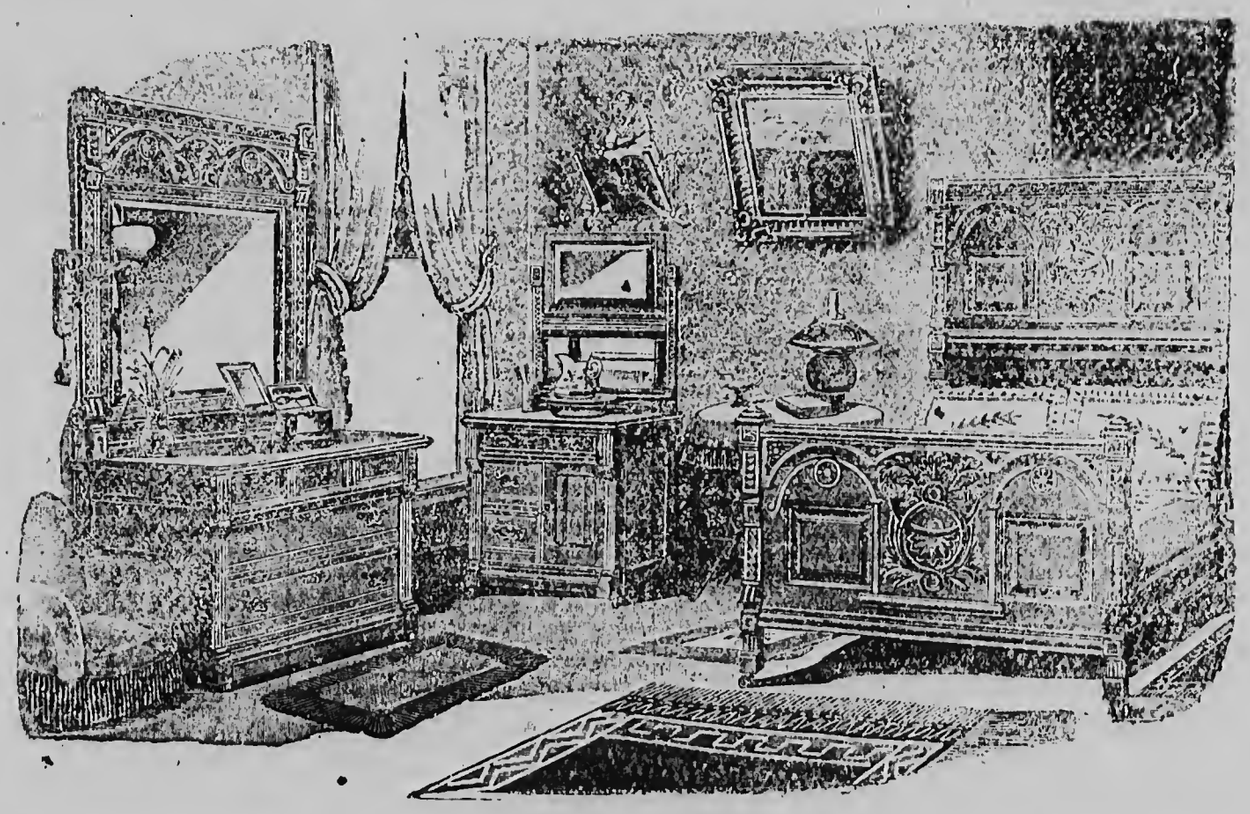
NEW STORE, AT 28 and 30 Camp Street, NEW ORLEANS

BEAUTIFUL PARLOR GOODS.

I have one entire floor devoted to the display of these goods alone, and have over sixty different varieties to select from. Complete Suits anywhere from $45 to $650, and odd pieces—such as Sofas, Divans, Easy Chairs, Patent Rockers, Window and Reception Chairs—at as low prices in proportion as the Complete Suits. I have these goods in Cherry, Mahogany and Walnut, and can give you your choice of any of the following coverings: Crushed, Embossed, Plain and Silk Plushes, Hair Cloth, Mohair, Raw and Spun Silks, Satins, English Tapestries, French Velours, Petit Point, Brocatelle or Damasks. I make a specialty of these goods, have many of the patterns made specially for my own trade, and can offer a greater variety at lower prices than any other house in the South.

NEW STOCK

In all departments and every grade of goods from the cheapest to the most expensive, in endless variety. I have all the latest and most fashionable designs and, as I have only purchased from manufacturers whose goods I have been selling for the past six years, it is safe to guarantee every piece of Furniture that leaves my establishment.



LOW PRICES

are the order of the day, and I propose to sell strictly reliable goods at a lower price than has ever before been quoted in the South. My store has long been known as "The Cheapest Furniture House in New Orleans," and this season I intend to add to the reputation it has gained in this respect. I only ask a chance to save you money.

HANDSOME BEDROOM SUITS.

A very extensive assortment of these goods in every style; and whether you wish to pay $40 for a Complete Suit of twelve pieces, or from that price anywhere up to $1,000, I can sell you what you require. I have these goods in Black Walnut, Natural and Dark Cherry, and Natural and Dark Mahogany, or in imitation of any of these woods, and can furnish the very latest, neatest and most artistic designs.

I have also a large and carefully selected stock of Hall, Library, Dining-room and Kitchen Furniture; Reed, Rattan and Wicker Chairs, Rockers, Lounges and Cribs; Brackets, What-nots, Easels, Music Stands and Fancy Top Tables; Carpets, Carpet Strips, Matting, Shades, Curtains, Curtain Poles, and everything necessary to furnish a house completely throughout.

LARGE SALES.

I have a large city trade, and am shipping goods extensively to every Southern State. My country trade has increased very rapidly during the past year, and the facilities which my new store affords me for carrying a larger and better stock will enable me to still further extend it, and to give complete satisfaction to my customers.

J. D. HARPER, P. E.

The Clergy of America take kindly to Life Insurance, and have been its firmest champions. They fight for it and thoroughly believe in it. There are many splendid financiers in the Church; that they are intelligent and thoughtful for their future goes without saying. All denominations seek the protection of Life Insurance, and are careful to select the company offering the greatest security and the most advantageous terms to policy-holders.

The Episcopal Diocese, of New York, has an Insurance Fund for all of its members, and the Mutual Life, which is the largest and strongest company in the world, with over $122,000,000 assets, has been officially selected by that body to issue all the insurance to these worthy people.

A Southern Department of this Company has been opened in New Orleans under the management of Mr. T. H. Bowles, with offices in Louisiana National Bank Building.

THE SUN.

FOR

1891.

Some people agree with THE SUN'S opinions about men and things, and some people don't; but everybody likes to get hold of the newspaper which is never dull and never afraid to speak its mind.

Democrats know that for twenty years THE SUN has fought in the front line for Democratic principles, never wavering or weakening in its loyalty to the true interests of the party it serves with fearless intelligence and disinterested vigor. At times opinions have differed as to the best means of accomplishing the common purpose; it is not THE SUN'S fault if it has seen further into the millstone.

Eighteen hundred and ninety-one will be a great year in American politics, and everybody should read THE SUN.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

DOMESTIC.

The United States Express Company has issued peremptory orders to allow its agents not to receive money, tickets or lists of drawings from the Louisiana Lottery Company, or in any way to assist in the transaction of the Lottery business, and says that any statement that the company is acting to the contrary is false.

The matter of most interest to the army now awaiting the action of Secretary Proctor is the promulgation of regulations to carry into effect the recent act of Congress providing for the examination of officers before promotion and for lineal instead of regimental promotion. He has already taken the subject under advisement.

The Democratic members at the capital are jubilant over the prospects of the next House. They state that the prices of food have risen to such an extent since the new tariff, that old wages are hardly able to scoure them, and the laboring classes in the North are not slow to voice their dissatisfaction. The proposed Force bill has also made the South a unit again.

Secretary Blaine has received a dispatch from Minister Ryan at the City of Mexico, announcing that the Mexican republic will adopt the recommendation of the International American Conference with regard to uniform system of weights and measures.

The Treasury Department has prohibited the importation of hides of cattle from Australia, Belgium, Denmark, England, France, Germany and other European countries where contagious diseases now exist, unless the importer proves conclusively that the hides were thoroughly disinfected before shipment.

Secretary Blaine has received information from the United States minister to Russia to the effect that the alleged persecutions by the Russian government of the Jews is totally without foundation.

Acting Land Commissioner Stone has issued a circular calling attention to the fact that the number of entries have decreased from 252,479 in 1888 to 106,163 in 1890, and the cash receipts have increased in the same time from $147,000 to $176,229.

The anarchists of Chicago will commemorate on November 11 the death of Spies, Fisher, Engel and Parsons, who were hung on that day three years ago. The programme as outlined includes a visit to the anarchists' graves at Waldheim. A large hall will be secured for memorial exercises, and arrangements will be made for a big street parade.

The Department of State has been officially notified that an Industrial Exhibition will be held at Lyons, France, in the year 1892, in which the departments of silk and electricity will be open to exhibitors from all nations. A cordial invitation is extended to all American exhibitors.

FOREIGN.

Messrs. Wm. O'Brien and John Dillon, who succeeded in evading the Irish police with the intention of proceeding to America to lay the cause of Ireland before the people of that country, were in Paris on October 16. Mr. O'Brion said the sole object in refusing to face his accusers to the end in Tipperary was to keep his engagement to speak in aid of the Irish cause in America. He was confident that the mission to that country would meet with success. The nationalist party were in perfect accord, and Ireland had implicit confidence in Mr. Parnell. After reaching America, Dillon and O'Brien will separate. The former will visit the Northern and Eastern States, and O Brien the Western and Southern.

The Canadian papers have taken a decided stand against the McKinley Tariff bill. There are threats of retaliation all along the line.

It is rumored that Italian troops have occupied Kassala despite the refusal of England to recognize Italy's claims to that point. The Sultan has notified the British minister that his consent as suzerain will never be given to the surrender of Kassala to Italy, and that the Porte expects England either to evacuate Egypt or protect the integrity of Egyptian territory.

A meeting of the Northern Conservative Union was held at Newcastle on October 17, and was attended by 4,000 persons. Among those present was Mr. Balfour, Chief Secretary of Ireland, who was presented with a number of addresses. He was given an enthusiastic welcome by the meeting.

A papal encyclical to the Italian bishop strongly protests against the government's violating the liberty and rights of the papacy and Catholicism, and accuses the government of reversing modern society and asks the prayers of the faithful.

During the first two weeks of October, 486 cases of cholera and 259 deaths from the disease have been reported in Spain. There is still a daily average of six deaths in Valencia, but the epidemic shows a general steady decline.

The Sultan has surrendered to Germany, for the sum of 4,000,000 marks, his sovereign rights over that portion of the East African coast which is leased to the German East African Company.

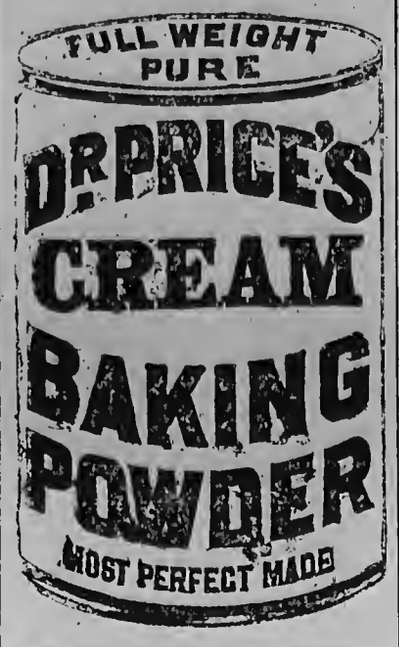
The Emperor William evinces deep interest in the socialist congress at Halle, and is reported to have said that the socialists must prove themselves worthy of liberty or they would again be deprived of it.

The employers of Sydney have refused to meet the strikers at a conference, asserting that the latter broke their agreement and coerced the free men, to whom the employers owe a debt of gratitude.

Don Carlos has been ordered to leave Italy owing to his recent claim made from Venice that he was King of Spain.

The crew of a Yankee fishing schooner rescued from destruction a British torpedo boat in the Gulf of St. Lawrence, which had been abandoned by H. M. S. Pelican during a terrible storm on October 12.

"I often prescribe Johnson's Anodyne Liniment for Erysipelas," said a physician to us.



Its superior excellence proven in millions of homes for more than a quarter of a century. It is used by the United States Government. Endorsed by the heads of the Great Universities as the Strongest, Purest and most Healthful. Dr Price's Cream Baking Powder does not contain Ammonia, Lime or Alum. Sold only in Cans.

Cotton Movement of the United States

Secretary Hester's weekly New Orleans Cotton Exchange statement shows that the rapid rate of marketing the cotton crop had been fully kept up during the past week.

The amount of the crop brought into sight during the season to date is 1,725,(3), against 1,507,950.

The movement since September 1 shows: Receipts at all United States ports 1,448 013, against 1,229,101 last year.

Foreign exports thus far for the season have been 838,698, against 664,808 last year, an increase of 173,890 bales. This indicates a gain during the past seven days in the excess as shows at the close of last week of 23,826 bales.

The total takings of American mills, North and South, thus far for the season have been 337 000, against 309,093 last year.

Including stocks left over at ports and interior towns from the crop and the number of bales brought into sight thus far of the new crop, the supply to date is 1 796 373 bales, against 1 571,413 last year.

MALARIA

DR. KING'S

Royal Germetuer.

NEW ORLEANS, Sept. 2, 1890.

I have been for several years constantly subject to malarial fevers. The best medical treatment has failed to remove from my system the malarial poison that produced them. I have had to use an average of forty grains of quinine per week for years. The fevers would invariably return in a few days, if it was discontinued. The quinine was doing great harm to my nervous system, but I had to keep it up as my only hope. Recently I commenced using Dr. King's Royal Germetuer. It has done me more good than all the medicine I have ever taken. I have not had a fever since commencing its use, nor found it necessary to take a dose of quinine. It has toned my nerves, built up my strength and given me a buoyancy and healthfulness of feeling that I have not known for years. My experience justifies me in saying that this wonderful remedy is all that is claimed for it, if not more.

Letter No. 25.

THE WONDERFUL HORIZON OF JERUSALEM—THE ABSORBING THOUGHT OF CHRIST—A SABBATH IN JERUSALEM—WHAT IS BEING DONE TO SAVE THE JEW—THE REASONS FOR FAILURE.

There is no horizon like that which encircles Jerusalem. Whether standing on the house-top, looking over at Mt. Olivet, or sitting on the side of Olivet, looking down upon Jerusalem, the same wonderful horizon is before you. It is an horizon marvelous, not so much in the natural features which it encompasses—although distinguished in this regard—but in the amazing transactions which have taken place therein. No other spot on earth has been as much honored as Zion, and no other landscape has beheld as stupendous scenes as that upon which I, with absorbed interest, am daily looking. It has beheld the infancy, the childhood and manhood of Jesus Christ. It was the great platform for the incarnation. It looked upon his face, echoed to his voice, witnessed his miracles; beheld his wonderful death, and shuddered as it did so; and gave him the flowery field and mountain-slope, from which he stepped into heaven. This same horizon, a glorious circle of the promises of God, received through the center of its blue and wavy outline the Holy Ghost. He, the Comforter and Sanctifier, descended here. In a word, in the midst of this horizon redemption was achieved. The salvation of man was accomplished—a work immutable, eternal in its character, that is to fill heaven with saints, souls with happiness and holiness, and crown the Triune God with increasing glory forever.

I find, in moving about the city, that the Savior is the absorbing thought. I thought, before I started on my trip, that I would dwell much on the life and deeds of David, Solomon, and a host of other scriptural characters. But it has not been so. True, you take note, for a moment, of this arch, that cave, or yonder spot, as connected, in some way, with Bible worthies; but, all the time, the heart's attention is trembling like the polarized needle, and is restless until it is fixed again on Christ. I see him, in a sense, everywhere. His figure fills the landscape. He has taken up city and surrounding mountain and valley, and stamped his name and image upon them. His life has written itself upon the rocks and roads. His presence descends as gently as the light and abides, without any sunset upon this sacredly historic place. No sword of enemy, or speech of infidelity; no effort of mind can separate the thought of the Son of God from Jerusalem.

My first Sabbath in this city was begun pleasantly, with the waking thought, "I shall spend the Lord's day in the city of our God." The pleasure was continued by a prolonged look at the Mount of Olives from the roof of the hotel at an early hour. At eleven, or somewhat before, I attended service at the Church of England Mission Chapel, near the Jaffa Gate. It was blessed to worship in the same city where Christ himself had preached, and the Holy Ghost had fallen upon the church. At three in the afternoon I worshiped in an "upper room" near the Damascus Gate, with a small band of American people who have colonized here, they say, in obedience to divine impression. There was no preaching, but mainly singing and prayer, conducted by themselves. They evidently have forgotten the Word which says that it pleases God "to save the world by the foolishness of preaching." Nothing I noticed takes the place of the preached Word. These people are really excellent in heart and life, but are being betrayed, I understand, into several serious errors. Two of which I mention are, the giving up of the Lord's Prayer and the forsaking of one of the Christian sacraments. I noticed in the little assembly, as visitors, two turbaned heads, and three others that wore the red fez cap. This meant the presence of Mohammedanism in the form of Arabians and Syrians. Five o'clock found me in what I believe to be the true Calvary, and concerning which I will write a special letter. It is a spot that is receiving every year an increasing attention. At six o'clock I was walking in the neighborhood of Bethany, and after that I returned by the upper road over the brow of the Mount of Olives, and, sitting down under an old olive tree on the side of the mountain, spent a while looking down upon the city of Jerusalem. It was a sacred hour, and so the night found me there; and when I arose to descend the hill, the moon was shining. I remembered, as I passed Gethsemane, and walked across the brook Kedron and up to St. Stephen's Gate, that it was on a moonlight night that Christ was arrested, and that it was along this road, and through this gate, or its predecessor, that he was led bound to the palace of Caiaphas and judgment-hall of Pilate. As I entered the gate and passed into the city, suddenly "two beggars," aged and ragged, rose up suddenly before me, hobbling on crutches, and jabbering in shrill voices to each other in the most discordant and unintelligible jargon. Such a spectacle of wretchedness I scarcely ever looked upon before; and the moonlight failed to soften, but actually heightened the appearance of misery, and made them look even less like human beings. Involuntarily, as they brushed near me, I felt a shrinking from them, but instantly had this rebuking thought: that if Jesus had been in my place, he would have gone up to them, laid his hand upon them, and said, "What would ye that I should do unto you?"

There are only two Protestant Churches represented in this great missionary field—the Church of England and the Lutheran. Besides them, however, there is a London Missionary Society that has a work going on; with what success I could not learn. A Jew, said to be converted, is also laboring among the natives; but when I understood that he regarded the Savior as the son of Joseph, I doubted his conversion and the results of his work. The Wesleyan Church and the Northern Methodist Church, with all their aggressiveness, are not found in this field. The Church of England has two buildings, or preaching-places—one inside the walls of the city, and the other outside where Jerusalem is spreading westward and northward. The first is attended by English-speaking people, and the second by the natives. This church, together with the Lutheran, is trying to reach the children through schools and the teaching of trades; but it is hard to reach the Jewish children. Two stories are told me in regard to the conversion of the Israelites. Some say they are being reached; others that they are not. Those that are called converted have not impressed me very profoundly. They seem to be in fear of each other, and one poor band of the descendants of Jacob gave up receiving help from Christian people "for fear of the Jews." A Jew, who told me that he was a Christian, I noticed shut up his little shop on Saturday, and what he sold, did so in a secret manner. Doubtless, he is a descendant of Nicodemus.

There are several things that, to my mind, militate against the salvation of this people. One is the type of Christianity we have reigning here in Jerusalem. I can not see in what respect the Catholic, Greek and Armenian Churches are superior to the Mohammedanism around them. The degrading superstitions, the lying miracles, the senseless mummery, endless and lifeless ritualistic forms, and the sight of the priests themselves, is sufficient to drive the Hebrew from such a church that professes to be of Christ.

Again, there is no preaching here! As certainly as the Bible is true, men are to be saved through preaching of the Word, with the Holy Ghost sent down from heaven. Singing is not the divinely ordained method; chanting does not bring souls to Christ; whining out a ritual through the nose never broke a heart or stirred a sleeping conscience. The whine, like an ecclesiastical lullaby, actually puts to sleep. All these things we have in abundance in Jerusalem, with howling priests and swinging censer. None of these things can move the Jew. He, thousands of years ago, had better—a greater temple, a more richly clothed priesthood, longer liturgies, more incense, and louder chanting. It is gospel preaching that is wanted. It was the preaching of the Savior that woke up this people. It was the preaching of Peter and Paul that swept in thousands of converts, and it was the preaching of Wesley and Whitefield that swept England and America as a wind sweeps and bends a wheat field. And it is this kind of preaching that is wanted here, and that we have not got.

One Sunday morning I heard a talk of twenty-five minutes, in which the sermon was full of painful pauses, and the minister perfectly unmoved by his subject. On another Sabbath in this city I listened to a little essay that was complimentary in its character of Nathaniel, which lasted just fifteen minutes. Preaching is what Jerusalem needs. A man full of the Holy Ghost, and who can stand up in the pulpit full of love to God and man, and can strike out from the shoulder at his audience without a thrill of fear, such a man, I believe, would see a crowded house, and conversions Sabbath after Sabbath.

The movement here upon Islamism and Judaism, while something is being done, is not the aggressive march of apostolic days. The church to-day—and I mean by that the Protestants—are moving down on the heathen nations with spelling-books and shoemakers' awls and carpenters' chisels. In this indirect method they propose to capture the world. Think of Paul and Peter opening day-schools, and teaching the children in Ephesus and Corinth various mechanical excellencies in wood and leather, in the sinuous endeavor to reach the parental heart, and, finally, the population at large. Instead, they flung themselves boldly into the midst of seething multitudes, and held up Christ, while the Holy Ghost fell, and men were pricked to the heart and found salvation. When Christ enters the hearts of these people of the East, that entrance of divine light and life will put a stop to mendicancy and indolence, and make a real man out of what was before simply the shape of a man. Meantime the Lord stands watching us, as he waited four thousand years in the world in its effort to save itself without Christ. And now he tarries to behold this educational and trade charge upon the powers of darkness, and the spiritual estrangement of man from God. What has it done? Did not an apostle gather in more in a day than we do now in a year? How long will it take us to capture the world for Christ and to sweep into the millennium, at the rate we are now going? Take a piece of paper and figure it out.

There may be another reason suggested by the reader why the Jew is not reached and saved here and elsewhere, and that reason is, that the judgment of darkness is still upon him.

I have reached the limits of my letter, and can only say this briefly: That the providence of God seems to be at work in bringing his people back to Jerusalem. Half the population of the city to-day is Jewish, and they are still coming. Again, God is inspiring interest all over the world in behalf of this people. Not only Jewish gold, but Christian money is invested here in their behalf. Not only a merchant in New Orleans, but prominent men elsewhere are seeking in various ways to ameliorate their most deplorable condition in this city. All this is certainly of God.

Last, let me say that I stood, several evenings ago, in the Jews' Wailing-Place. I saw fully two hundred, with the Old Testament in their hands, poring over its pages with unmistakable devotion. I heard the sobs of men as they repeated the words of God and buried their faces against the temple wall. I saw two long lines of aged women bending, as they sat on the stones, over the Bible, while their tears fell plentifully upon its pages. As I saw this, and more, I felt that here was not hardness of heart. I remembered since that they did not weep in the time of Christ after this manner. And it occurred to me that if the gospel could be properly presented now, if Jesus could be offered to a heart-broken people, they might now accept him.

B. CARRADINE.

The Kelley Case.

This case has become famous. Some time during the summer Dr. Kelley left his church in Gallatin, Tenn., and entered upon the canvass of the State as a candidate for governor. At the recent session of the Tennessee Conference the complaint was made that the Doctor had "abandoned his work." A committee was appointed to investigate the facts and report to the Conference. This committee reported that, after having examined into the case, they thought a trial was necessary. The report was rejected by an overwhelming majority. Whereupon Bishop Hargrove appointed a second committee to investigate the case, and this committee brought in a report that a trial was necessary. Then a committee of trial was appointed, and, after having gone over the case, reported Dr. Kelley guilty as charged, and suspended him from the ministry for six months. With one exception, as far as we can see, the presiding Bishop conformed to the law of the Discipline. That exception was in allowing the Conference to vote on the report of the Committee of Investigation, when that committee had reported a trial necessary. We do not think the law contemplated a vote in such a case. We present this summary of the law in its application to the case as given by a "Methodist Layman" in the Nashville American:

It is further claimed that the charge, as preferred by Mr. Wynn, was too informal, and indeed was no charge at all, but rather an inquiry addressed to the chair for information. That may be true of his first remark, but immediately afterwards, and before any action had been taken under it, he explained that he meant to arrest Dr. Kelley's character and to put the Conference upon inquiry concerning it. But it is really of very little consequence whether what Mr. Wynn said was a technical arrest or not. The Discipline, section 251, says: "When a traveling preacher is under report of immorality, or accused thereof in writing, signed by a minister or a member of our church, if it be in the interval of the Annual Conference, the presiding elder, in the absence of a Bishop, is to appoint an investigating committee," etc. At section 256 it provides: "When the accusation is preferred during the session of the Annual Conference it shall be referred to a committee of three traveling elders for investigation, who shall report to the Conference whether or not they judge a trial necessary."

From this it will be observed that if a mere report comes to the ear of the presiding elder or the Bishop he shall proceed to appoint a committee. The plain letter, as well as the reason of the case, therefore, made it the duty of the Bishop, if he had heard the report that Dr. Kelley had left his work, to appoint a committee to examine the case, even had Mr. Wynn remained silent. There can be no reasonable doubt of his duty in the premises. The same procedure is provided for in all grades of the church courts.

In the case of local preachers, section 267, it is made the duty of his pastor, upon a report of immorality, to appoint a like committee. So, of section 276, in case of laymen. In all cases of immorality the Discipline requires the officer charged with the disciplinary oversight of the delinquent to take notice of reports even where there are not written charges, and upon his own motion to appoint a committee.

It may be objected here that Dr. Kelley is not charged with immorality, and that therefore the laws quoted are inapplicable.

The General Conference of 1890, in adopting the report of Dr. Kelley's committee, quoted at length above, distinctly places the conduct of Dr. Kelley in the category of immoralities, and distinctly provides that it shall be proceeded against as such.

The second and third questions proposed above have perhaps been sufficiently answered in the foregoing answer to question No. 1. Not only was no vote of the Conference necessary to authorize the appointment, but I think a careful examination of the law, collating it with the acts providing for trials of others than traveling preachers, will convince the candid investigator that the Bishop makes the appointment not as president of the Conference, but by virtue of his office as Bishop, and that the act of appointment would have been equally valid if it had not been performed from the chair or in the presence of the Conference at all. Indeed, it is nowhere written that the investigating committee shall be members of the Conference to which the accused belongs, though the uniform practice, I am informed, is to appoint them from that body.

The fourth question raised is: When the report of the first committee was rejected, had the Bishop discretionary power to appoint another?

I have been unable to appreciate the difficulty that exists in the minds of some upon this point. The Discipline plainly says: "If the Conference differ in judgment from the committee a new committee may be appointed to inquire into the facts and report." The power that appointed the first committee is here clearly given the right to appoint another, and if the Bishop believed that due enforcement of the law lay in that direction he could not, without infidelity to his obligation to the church, refrain from appointing it. This committee sustains the relation of a grand jury to the case. The first indictment was summarily quashed without objection to its form or substance, and without inquiring into the facts. It showed a determination on the part of the Conference to "deny the case a trial by the committee." The Bishop displayed on the side of law and for the vindication of the church an equal determination that "trial by committee should not be denied." And so, in a most laudable exercise of a discretion which was, to a conscientious officer of the church hardly a discretion at all, he appointed a second committee.

The second committee having returned an indictment, was it the province of the Conference or of the Bishop to appoint the committee of trial?

The Discipline gives in this immediate connection no intimation as to how this should be answered. I find no authoritative statement as to what has been the practice of the church, but in McTyeire's Manual, page 263, it is stated of committees generally: "Committees are appointed by the president unless the general rule or special order of the assembly otherwise designates."

In the case at bar there is no general rule, and as the committee is not one raised by a special order of the Conference, but under express provision of the Discipline, it devolves upon the presiding officer to make the appointment under the rule as stated in the manual.

By analogy and comparison, however, with other provisions for the appointment of similar committees, it becomes quite evident what is the policy of the church upon this subject. In the case of a layman the preacher in charge, i. e., that ecclesiastic who is responsible for the enforcement of discipline in his case, appoints the committee of trial (Discipline, section 277). Probationers and local preachers are tried before the Quarterly Conference, which, being composed of few persons, sits as a body without the interposition of a committee. Private members and traveling preachers, therefore, are the only persons tried by committee in the inferior bodies, and if the procedure is based upon principle, the same rule would govern in the case of the preacher that holds in the case of the layman. I am told, by well-informed preachers, that the uniform custom in the Annual Conference is for the president to appoint committees of trial. It does not appear why Dr. Kelley's case should be made an exception from the customary procedure.

The Bishop, having assumed the right to appoint this committee, was it an abuse of power on his part to appoint a majority of said committee from among those who voted to ratify the report of the investigating committee? It was "not a theory, but a condition," that confronted Bishop Hargrove at Pulaski. Notice had been served upon him through the public prints by one of the most influential presiding elders in the Conference, that one hundred and twenty-five ministers in the Conference, unmindful of their thrice-repeated vow of obedience to the Discipline of the church, stood ready to override the law and defy the lawfully appointed expounder of it in their determination to prevent even an inquiry as to whether it had been violated. A test vote had been taken and the almost absolute accuracy of Mr. Duncan's count of noses had been verified.

Another presiding elder, over his own signature, had proclaimed that having heard an official episcopal construction of law averse to the accused, he had, therefore, determined to report "nothing against him." With almost a whole Conference thus in revolt, did it not become the chief law officer of the church, sworn to maintain its discipline, to look about for the "faithful few among the faithless?" When your civil judge sends out the sheriff to summon a venire of jurors does he direct him to bring those who respect the law or those who despise and defy it? Whom did the Methodist Church expect Bishop Hargrove to appoint upon this committee; those who stood by their political chieftain or those who had sworn to stand by the church?

It has been objected that the majority of the committee were not competent to serve, because they had expressed opinions adverse to the accused. The objection is asinine. Had not the minority expressed opinions in his favor, and were they not equally disqualified?

The fact is, the vote on the investigating committee's report was not an expression of opinion, and would not have disqualified them from serving on a jury under the most rigid rules of the common law. The question presented to the Conference in voting upon the report of the committee was not, "Is Dr. Kelley guilty; but if Dr. Kelley is guilty of violating the law of the church should he be made to answer for it?" One hundred and sixteen said: "No, he shall not answer for it, even if he is guilty, and for fear he may be guilty, we will not inquire into it." The twenty-five said: "Let him answer." There was no place in the question for an expression as to his guilt or innocence, except inferentially, and inferentially one hundred and sixteen members of the Conference believed him guilty, for if they had not, they would have demanded a trial that his innocence might be established. Four of them, when forced to answer upon their honor as Christian gentlemen, declared by their verdict how well grounded were their fears. Packed jury, indeed! The majority was made up of men who had openly proclaimed their devotion to the enforcement of the law, and the minority of men whom the Bishop knew would be true to their ordination vows when directly confronted with duty, no matter how disagreeable it might be.

Before entering upon a discussion of the particular issues made, it is necessary to a right understanding of the subject that some explanation be made of the relation of the Bishop, or superintendent, to the Annual Conference, and of both to the General Conference, the supreme legislative body of the church. These relations are admirably set forth by Bishop McKendree, one of the greatest and wisest of the Methodist fathers, in the following extract from his writings (see McTyeire's Manual of the Discipline, p. 37):

"The superintendents are chosen by the General Conference, are the repositories of executive power, and are held responsible as overseers of the whole charge. By calling upon them, the administration, in every part of the work, may be brought under the inspection and control of the General Conference. But if the power of superintending the work were taken from the Bishops, they must be released from the responsibility; and if they should be released, there would be no person or persons accountable to the General Conference for the administration; and consequently, the connection between making rules and enforcing them would be dissolved. The legislative body would then have no control over the executive, no power to enforce their rules or laws. The several Annual Conferences are under the control of general rules, enforced by responsible superintendents, so that if a preacher should depart from the discipline or doctrine of the church, it is the Bishop's duty to correct, remove from office or bring him to trial, according to discipline."

The college of Bishops in 1811 made the following deliverance on the subject of the Annual Conferences:

"These are subordinate organizations with their powers clearly defined and limited in the form of discipline. Their rights and privileges are strictly chartered, and out of the record they have no jurisdiction. To those bodies the president (the Bishop) sustains, as an executive officer, a peculiar and important relation. He presides not merely to preserve order and decorum, but with an official oversight, to guard against innovations and to bring forward the business as prescribed by the Discipline, and see that it is done according to the law of the church" (Episcopal Address, 1811, Journal Gen. Conf., p. 155).

In 1840 the General Conference said:

"The president of an Annual Conference has the right to decline putting the question on a motion, resolution or report, when, in his judgment, such motion, resolution or report does not relate to the proper business of a Conference; provided, that in all such cases the president, on being required by the Conference to do so, shall have inserted in the journals of the Conference his refusal to put the question on such motion, resolution or report, with his reason for so refusing; and provided, that when an Annual Conference shall differ from the president on a question of law, they shall have a right to record their dissent on their journals, but there must be no discussion on the subject" (McTyeire's Manual, p. 21, sec. 8).

Having thus defined the powers, duties and responsibility of the Bishop or superintendent, let us proceed to an examination of the questions growing out of the proceedings at Pulaski:

1. Was the character of Dr. Kelley duly "arrested" according to law?

2. Was it the duty of the Bishop to proceed to the appointment of a committee of investigation without a vote of the Conference?

3. Whose duty was it to appoint the said committee?

4. When their report was rejected by the Conference had the Bishop discretionary power to appoint another, and if so, was that power prudently exercised in appointing another committee?

5. Was it within the province of the Bishop or of the Conference to appoint the committee of trial?

6. The Bishop having assumed the right to appoint it, was it an abuse of power on his part to appoint a majority of said committee from those who voted to approve the report of the investigating committee recommending a trial?

LIFT A LITTLE.

Lift a little! Lift a little!
Neighbor, lend a helping hand
To that heavy-laden brother,
Who for weakness scarce can stand.
What to thee with thy strong muscle,
Seems a light and easy load,
Is to him a pond'rous burden,
Cumbering his pilgrim road.

Lift a little! Lift a little!
Efforts give one added strength,
That which staggers him when rising,
Thou canst hold at full arm's length.
Not his fault that he is feeble,
Not thy praise that thou art strong;
It is God that makes lives differ,
Some from wailing, some from song.

Lift a little! Lift a little!
Many they who need thy aid:
Many lying on the roadside,
'Neath misfortune's dreary shade.
Pass not by like priests and Levites,
Heedless of thy fellow-man;
But with hearts and arms extended,
Be the good Samaritan.

Columbus District, North Mississippi.

Nineteen charges in a district give ample scope for material, but leaves little leisure to a presiding elder for writing. Nineteen charges mean nineteen consecrated men at the helm, putting all the force of example, of teaching, and of administration, into the propagation of the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ amongst the people. Around them gather the good men and women—those who genuinely love God and seek his glory—to help forward this grand, aggressive enterprise of saving the world through Christ. With us, as elsewhere, there is a mixture of the evil and the good, even in the church—the wheat and the tares. But they are not often mistaken, even by men of the world. Doubtless the church militant will never be free from erratic and unsound members, and wicked persons who creep in unawares. Only the omniscient Lord can make the complete expurgation. Whatever forbearance and patience may be endured by the church towards offending members, in order to save them, pulling them out of the fire, our official ary ought to be of "men of solid piety, who both know and love the Methodist doctrine and discipline." This the preachers and the presiding elder on Columbus district are trying to secure. There is large room for improvement along all the lines of Christian work. We need to quicken our pace to keep even with the demands upon us. Many of us are well-nigh asleep, and have no adequate sense of the responsibilities that are upon us. Doubtless we preachers need a more intense appreciation of the work we have to do, and a deeper experience of saving grace. We can do nothing well unless we daily walk with God. Our baptism must be that of the Holy Ghost and of fire. Then we shall speak to the people the wonderful works of God.

There are marks of improvement in this district—in the building of new churches, the repair of old ones; the building of one parsonage, and the repair and furnishing of more; in the increased attention to Sunday-schools and to family religion. It is too soon to tell how the financial figure will stand. Our crops have been seriously injured, and this is likely to depress collections; though the hope is, that our people will see that a minimum demand shall not be allowed to fail, for there is left ample to pay all that is asked. The preachers have given their whole time and energy to their flocks, excepting only here and there a short incidental absence, and those exchanges of labor which are made in protracted meetings. Nearly every church in the district has had such a meeting. This itself makes a severe draft on the time and energy of the preacher, and forbids summer vacations. Some of these meetings have resulted in very little addition to the membership, but have witnessed great spiritual improvement in the church itself. In some places the whole community has been moved—sinners converted, members converted, or moved into higher life, and the moral tone and convictions of the people elevated. In most cases these meetings have been held by the pastors with such help as they could get from brother pastors. The results show the presence of evangelical and evangelistic power in our itinerant ministry. The power of the Holy Spirit is with our preachers and people when they look to him. In some others of these most fruitful meetings the Rev. Joe Jones was present, and conducted almost all the services by invitation of the preacher in charge. All these preachers, and most of the people who heard Bro. Jones, approved his ministry. At first many are shocked and offended at Bro. Jones' rough and coarse expressions. Some few of these good persons remain offended, and go away to say hard things about the evangelist, and seem to show tempers sometimes that are far worse than Bro. Jones' words. These friends, however, are very zealous for the Lord's house and the decencies of his holy service. They do not know how to approve killing Philistines with the jaw-bone of an ass, or saying, "Ye generation of vipers," to the crowd. But most of Bro. Jones' hearers go back again and again. They soon come to see that the meaning he has in his expressions is good; that all his aim is to win men to Christ; that every blow he makes is to crush evil and to defend virtue. He pleads for a pure life, a genuine devotion to Christ, fidelity to Christian obligations, liberality in supporting the institutions of the church—her ministry, her missions, etc. All who observe his walk testify that he lives a Christian. He uses expressions which most people wish he would leave off, and think are blemishes; but we must remember that rough, coarse words, if they are used with pure intentions and in the service of truth, may not be offensive to God, though they may be to our literary taste. Suppose he be the Lord's man for a good work; suppose he draws men from the sinks of sin that I could never reach, and leads them to Christ, and I find them washed, hating their old ways, choosing the people and the service of God, and walking now as other Christians walk—what shall I say? Will it not be becoming in me to rejoice in the good he does, though he work not after my manner, and though I could by no means adopt his? These preachers who have had Bro. Jones to help them are willing to have him again—among them Dr. J. D. Cameron and Dr. T. C. Wier; and the people who have heard him will again crowd the churches for the benefit of his ministry. By their fruits ye shall know them.

The time for our Annual Conference session draws near. When the reports are all in we can see more accurately what has been done. O! may our work abide the Master's test, and receive his "Well done!"

Barnum & Bailey's great show and circus, more properly termed "Barnum & Bailey's great demoralizer," exhibited at this place to-day to an innumerable host of all colors, hues, shades and conditions of men, women and children, from the infant on its mother's knee to the gray-haired centenarian with one foot in the grave and the other just on the brink. They came from the country, from the hills and the hollows, from the wooded vale and the broad spreading plain; they came from the hamlet, from country village and from the densely populated city; they came in crowds of tens and twenties and hundreds; they came on foot, on horseback, in wagons, in buggies and carriages and in road carts by the dozens. They commenced coming on Thursday evening and filled all the hotels and boarding-houses in town, and on Friday morning before the break of day every road leading into the city was thronged, and long before the parade began at eleven o'clock, Capitol and State streets presented a seething and surging mass of humanity, high and low, rich and poor, black and white, all mixing and hurrying with breathless haste towards one general destination—the parade.

It is said by the oldest inhabitant (who is always on hand on memorable occasions) that such a vast crowd has never been seen in Jackson before.

The Constitutional Convention that has been in session here since August 12, last, adjourned at eleven o'clock A. M. until seven P. M., whether in deference to the show and circus or through some other motive I have no means of knowing; suffice it to say, it did adjourn. This convention is costing the State between $600 and $700 per day; now just how much this adjournment cost the State it will not take much of a mathematical calculation to ascertain. It is said that the members were at the show and circus in force, but that they had more respect for it than for the convention, as they kept silent during the entire performance. When the convention was in a "row" over the question of adjournment to go to the show a sprightly young member from one of the river counties raised the point of order, that "if the members only wished to adjourn to see the show, it was unnecessary, as there were already in the house and then on the floor a Campbell, a Bird and any quantity of asses." The president, being a good presiding officer, decided "the point well taken"—but the convention adjourned nevertheless and went. All classes, shades and professions were well represented there. The churches of all denominations were on hand in force; officers and members alike caught the contagion and seemed to vie with each other in their endeavors to see who could take the largest number of their neighbor's children and poor little orphans to see the animals(?). (Children are always in demand when "shows" come around. Some old maids had quite a number of their neighbor's "little darlings" looking at those "wonderful animals" that generally accompany circuses.)

Many church members who have struggled with poverty all their lives, and have ever been too poor to pay anything towards the pastor's salary, suddenly became rich and bought one-dollar tickets for the "old woman and all the little ones" to go to the show. Many a dollar was spent for tickets that should have gone to the purchase of shoes and clothing for the hungry and naked children of these same church members, or their pastor. One old Baptist brother said he went because he had "rheumatiz and was feeling poorly," when his wife told him to go, and the "fun" that he would have would revive and make him feel better. Thus it is from the days of Adam the sins of man are laid upon the woman. But the old brother lost his dollar—didn't see any fun, his rheumatiz got worse, and he went home a sadder, a madder and a sicker man than before he went.

And thus it is the bonnetless girl and the shoeless boy must so remain, perhaps, through all the winter. The money that should have gone to supply these wants has been carried away by this rapacious horde of "public demoralizers." Jackson and the surrounding country are several thousand dollars poorer now than this morning. Many heretofore good men and women were induced to attend and forced to see and hear things that had it been anywhere else their feelings would have been shocked beyond expression; and, no doubt, they now feel ashamed of the company they were in at the circus. The dirty jokes of these wicked men should not be heard by ladies and gentlemen whose names are on the church register, who profess to be followers of the meek and lowly Jesus, and whose presence is frequently seen around the communion table in the house of God.

If church members would not patronize the show and the circus, they would not dare to come among us, leaving in their tracks the seeds of immorality and vice as thick as thistle seeds, whose disastrous effects eternity alone can reveal.

AITCH AITCH AITCH.

Public Education.

A correspondent of the ADVOCATE, of October 15, signing himself "St. Bernard," comments on my communication on public education in your paper of two weeks previous. He and I agree on the question of public schools; but he does not know it. My previous article set forth the plea for Christian people taking hold of the public-school system as being cheaper and more possible for universal education than private schools, and that with universal education the mental fertility would be such as to offer a more profitable harvest in the evangelical field to thus pay the Christian workers for the time and care bestowed on the upbuilding of the masses, though they might never be beyond the church flock. This had direct reference to the public schools of the State in contradistinction to the private schools. I cited the expense of the public schools as being twelve dollars to fourteen dollars, and private schools as costing forty to fifty dollars per annum.

"St. Bernard" interprets this to mean higher education, and cites that the higher education at the State colleges costs from sixty-five to seventy-five dollars per student. He claims that I and other writers on this subject always make this mistake. The mistake is not mine, but his. I wrote strictly in behalf of the children, and not of State institutions of Louisiana as against our private and denominational colleges. The colleges must, with universal education secured by the economical method of public schools, be more than crowded in the next few years with those who seek higher education; while with only meagre common schooling going on among the people, and that at great expense, the colleges, both State and undenominational, must struggle to fill their classes. The cost of twelve to fourteen dollars per capita was even higher than it should have been as an average for the State, because it is well known that New Orleans has among the finest public-school systems of the United States, and it only cost them $11 68 per attendant; and the country schools cost much less, and should not average, for the very best, more than two-thirds the cost in New Orleans, or about eight dollars per child for nine months. Thus it will be seen that private tuition is, at least, five times greater than public education, and, therefore, far more difficult in giving universal education.

The public schools are but the vehicle of the people for good, and, therefore, will be what the people make them or demand of them; hence my appeal to the Christian people to make them ample for universal education, which is impossible from private schooling. "St. Bernard" refers to the tax spoken of in my first article. I must elaborate that idea, so that it may be understood that the matter is with the people and that they must act. The finest school systems of the Northern and Eastern and Western States are secured by local taxation, which amounts to $8 50 to $1 50, contributed by the State from direct taxation.

To illustrate this point: Louisiana, as a State, in 1889, gave $165,000 to public education. Had the people given eight and a half times as much more, we would have had $1,567,500 from taxation instead of $165,000 from State and $96,000 from local taxation. If we want what others have, we must work for it and pay for it as they do. With the revenues available from other sources, our school finances added to the above amount from taxation (like other States) would have amounted to $2,149,500, which would have been enough to educate in the public school eighty per cent. of our children, while only forty-two per cent. of the total children of the United States are in the public schools. Is there not work in this subject to enlist our most humane sympathy and demand our most earnest effort in behalf of universal education?

"St. Bernard" refers to the morals of the public-school teacher, and suggests that it be made a perquisite to employment that they be free from gaming, drinking and profanity. The law on the subject covers his point. They are not required to be church members, as that would be the State interfering in religious matters; but the law does require the superintendent of each parish to make an examination of all teachers employed, as to good moral character. If any immoral teachers are employed, it is good grounds for complaint and public action by the people.

Again I beg the Christian people to take hold of the public schools and make them a success.

CADDO.

Public Education.

I have read with much interest the articles in the ADVOCATE under the above head. Of a truth, no subject so much concerns the safety of a State as her schools. A large per cent. of the youths of our country receive no training worth the name outside the school-room. They get no lessons in the line of morality, duty or citizenship save from the lips and example of some "good Samaritan" teacher. I speak from several years' personal observation in some dozen counties of my State.

Therefore, the opportunities and responsibilities of our teachers are infinite. Yet I am frank to say our schools fall far short of what we have a right to expect of them. This failure results from two causes. First, a mistaken notion as to the true mission of public schools. Second, the inefficiency of our teachers. The college professor, sitting back in his dignity, occasionally delivering a learned (?) lecture, and doing but little real teaching, says that the primary object of all schools of the lower grades is to prepare for the college and university. He claims that the curricula of these lower schools ought to be arranged with reference to the "higher courses." What an ideal No school ought to be preparatory to another. Prepare a pupil to enter college! My dear teachers, stop all this, and prepare your pupils for life. Teach them the fundamental principles of true manhood and citizenship, and if they never see a college they will be "heroes in the fight." The work of every school ought to be perfect and complete in itself; if not, then it is a failure. That teacher and that school that fail in this is unworthy of support. I know I am treading soil made sacred by the customs and traditions of ages.

Another equally false notion of the mission of the public schools is that they ought to teach a fixed number of subjects, and impart a definite amount of information. One's education is usually gauged by his acquaintance with text-books, and his ability to repeat from memory unrelated facts and rules. The true aim of all school work is to make men and women. Stop the cramming process and teach the pupil to think and investigate for himself. Schools never make scholars, but they do turn out a host of hopeless and helpless creatures whom I will not dignify by the term man. No man is educated until he has learned to think. I care not how wide is his acquaintance with books, his course of study is fruitless unless his mind is trained to concentration and abstraction.

The second cause of failure is widespread and almost universal. It will always be there until a higher estimate is placed upon the services of the hardest-worked and poorest-paid servant of the commonwealth. Truly we need more and better teachers, but we will never have the better ones till we pay them a salary that will justify the thorough preparation.

As teachers, let us get out of the old beaten tracks, and gird ourselves for a new race. The dawn of a brighter day is upon us.

KILMICHAEL, Miss.

If thou hope to please all, thy hopes are vain; if thou fear to displease some, thy fears are idle. The way to please thyself is not to displease the best; and the way to displease the best, is to please the most; if thou canst fashion thyself to please all, thou shalt displease him that is all in all.—Quarles.

THREE MONTHS ON RICHLAND CIRCUIT.

Conference is coming, and then the hearts of some will be glad and others sad. To one who has never "gone up, bringing his sheaves with him," this Conference is of special interest. Of course, Mr. Editor, they will not expect everything full and running over from a "stripling." There is a good deal of truth in what "ye seniors" have said about young preachers. In July this circuit was left without a preacher, and Bishop Galloway laid his hand gently upon my head, and said, "Go and occupy." I have realized—in part, at least—what it is to be in charge of a circuit. A want of experience has pressed upon me heavily, but "I have done what I could." Of the three churches which we occupy, two have been repainted. One has been supplied with hymn books. We have organized one new Sabbath-school, which is doing well.

Rev. F. A. Whitson, of the Okolona circuit, came down and helped us at Richland. He did acceptable preaching, and made lasting impressions.

This circuit has been served by some of the ablest men our Conference has had. J. M. Boon, who now is heard in Brooklyn Avenue, Kansas City; G. W. Bachman, our efficient coiporteur; J. F. Evans, now at Vaiden; Thomas Cameron, of Batesville; Dr. Adams and Bro. Barcroft, of sacred memory—all have been here. They have done much to put this circuit to its present good standing.

At this writing the collections are being raised with fair promise of full report at Conference. Last year Richland circuit made a fine showing. Only 140 members were reported, and the Minutes show that $750 were paid the preacher, $107 the presiding elder, about $240 to the different Conference causes. We find the total to be about $1,100, or about $8 per capita. This is a good showing.

Since July six have been dismissed by letter, and only two have been received—one by profession and one by restoration. Within the bounds of the circuit the country is sparsely settled; but the people here are good, and can sympathize with a preacher. Several hundred dollars have been raised on the circuit for Millsaps College. The ADVOCATE is read and appreciated by our people. We are working and praying for the Master's smiles.

SPRING CREEK CAMP MEETING.

This annual gathering of God's people in the parish of Rapides came on last week and this, and, aided by several ministers—Revs. S. H. Cooper, S. H. Whatley, — Fenn, George Jackson, and the writer; also assisted by the local ministry and many good workers, with Bro. Banks, the faithful pastor, in the lead—the pure Word of God was preached, and a volume of song and fervent prayers went up to the Hill from whence cometh our help. The outside crowd did not behave very well, yet much better than for years past; and the good tenters and others feel very hopeful of better decorum after this. While only a few persons joined the church, some twenty-five were converted, and the church greatly built up.

Spring Creek Camp Ground is beautifully situated, with a commodious tabernacle, and an abundant supply of fine water and pine knots. It seems to be the "hub" of the Spring Creek circuit, and, if properly encouraged and worked up, will most certainly continue to grow in power and usefulness. A more generous and fervent people I have never met at camp meeting than the supporters of this encampment have proven to be. The country is fine and full of the best class of citizens, and red-hot with Methodist fire when given a half chance.

Brethren of the ministry, I, for one, believe in rallying to the help of that community and country, and I see a large field white unto the harvest. Let us not neglect a good people because the pines are numerous, large and long, and because we have hills to drive over to reach the camp ground. They are, indeed, an appreciative people, and they are God's property.

We were especially delighted to meet our good old brother, Isaac Ryan, and his excellent wife, who had just gotten in from a few years' sojourn in Texas. Bro. Ryan is a great Methodist, full of good works, and is much needed in that country.

RAYNE, La.

RIPLEY, MISS.

Our meeting at New Albany closed last Sunday night. We were ably assisted by Bro. Joe Jones, who preached twenty-two sermons for the whites and two for the colored folks in eight days. Though it was late in the season, the audiences were very large, composed of all the denominations represented in our county. God was with us from the beginning, and both saint and sinner are stirred as never before. Joe Jones speaks with no uncertain sound, uses no insinuations, but speaks as a man sent of God—direct to the heart. No man ever came into our midst who so agreeably disappointed the people. The press in some parts had represented him as being anything else but a gentleman, a Christian, an able preacher. So hundreds came out through curiosity, but before one day would pass away they unanimously would exclaim, "How this man has been misrepresented!" His sermons were eminently heart-searching, plain, pointed and practical. It was no trouble for him to find out the sins we were afflicted with, and he spared no time or pains in looking after them all. The leading idea in his sermons to the church is doing something for God and humanity. His sermons on principle, on thought, on love in families, on bringing the children into the church early, on parents' watchfulness over their families, on prayer and trust in God, are among the best we ever heard. Bro. Jones is awfully in earnest, full of love to God and his fellows. No man sympathizes more with the sinner in his fallen condition, no man more ready to do for the poor than he, and no man more ready to defend the right and fight the wrong on all occasions than he. We have a forward movement on all the lines of Christian duties. To say that our people were pleased with Bro. Jones, would but faintly express it. Bro. Gilreath, his traveling companion, who leads the singing, contributes no small share to the success in these meetings. We think a low estimate, as one of the results of the meeting, will be fifty additions to the different denominations—the Methodists twenty-five, and the others fully as many. Other results can not be computed in this life. We bid these brethren God-speed.

THE STORY OF SCOTLAND. By John Mackintosh, LL.D. G. P. Putnam's Sons. New York. For sale by Eyrich, 130 Canal St., New Orleans. Price, $1 50.

This is another one of "The Story of the Nations" series, and is a brief history of Scotland from the earliest times to the present century. The early history of most nations is enveloped in legends and myths, and Scotland has its legendary story touching the origin of its inhabitants. Scotland is one of the few countries that were not entirely subjugated by the Roman arms. For eight years the great Roman general, Agricola, endeavored in vain to bring the Scots and Picts in subjection to the Empire. From that time on to the present the history has run on, showing some of the most determined and daring exploits ever accomplished by any people. It has been a land of romance and song, of military prowess and religious freedom, of intellectual achievement and moral progress. The author has told "the story of Scotland" in a charming manner.

This is followed by a biographical and critical paper on the Israels, father and son, by David Coal Thomson; Love's Rubicon is a short poem, by Kate Carter; The Modern Schools of Painting and Sculpture, by Claude Phillips, has four illustrations; Degas: the Painter of Modern Life, is by George Moore. Cassell Publishing Company, New York. Price, $3 50.

—Every reader of the November number of the QUIVER will be interested in the opening article, which is a sketch of the life and work of Mrs. Elizabeth Prentiss, the author of that popular book, Stepping Heavenward. All mothers will be interested in Charlotte M. Mason's account of Our Willful Boy, because the author tells how willfulness may be overcome. A Tale of a Dutch Hero is the first of a series of papers on heroic subjects by "Peveril" the author of In the Good Old Days. There are serials continued, there are short stories and there are poems, making in this one number sufficient variety to please all tastes. Cassell Publishing Company. Fifteen cents a number; $1 50 a year, in advance.

LESSON VI.—November 9.

Jesus before Pilate and Herod.

Luke xxiii, 1-12.

GOLDEN TEXT.—Then said Pilate to the chief priests and to the people, "I find no fault in this man."—LUKE xxiii, 4.

TIME.—Thursday of Passion Week.

PLACE.—Palaces at Jerusalem.

1. Whole multitude—It seems probable that the chief priests, elders, scribes, and captains of the temple, together with their servants and dependents, made up the "multitude" mentioned here. The common people were generally favorers of Christ; for this reason the Jewish rulers caused him to be apprehended in the night, in the absence of the people.

2. Perverting the nation—This was the first head of indictment, and had the advantage of being perfectly vague. Forbidding to give tribute—This charge was utterly false, but was closely connected with the partly true charge which immediately follows. The enemies of our Lord vary their accusation in accordance with the court before which they plead; before the Sanhedrin it is blasphemy; before Pilate it is treason. This was a complete falsehood; but a political accusation was necessary for their purpose, since a heathen would not have listened to any religious accusation. The mixture of religion with politics is always perilous to truth and sincerity. This was their second charge. Christ a king—The word "king" is an explanation to bring the case under the head of treason. Yet they must have been well aware that this charge was all the more false in spirit from being true in letter; for Christ had always refused and prevented every effort to make him a temporal king. This was their third charge.

3. And Pilate—We learn from John that the same question was put by Pilate and answered more fully, in consequence of which Pilate twice pronounced Jesus innocent. (John xviii, 38; xix, 4.) This explains the sentence of acquittal in ver. 4, which is scarcely intelligible without it. Art thou the King of the Jews?—Luke narrates the trial very briefly. The Jewish priests had expected that on their authority Pilate would at once order him to execution; but, on the contrary, he meant first to hear the case, and asked them what accusation they brought, refusing to accept their bare assertion that he was a "malefactor." Pilate only attends to the third charge, and asks Christ this question on the Roman principle that it was always desirable to secure the confession of the accused. We see from St. John (xviii, 33) that Jesus had been led into the Pretorium while his accusers stayed without; that he had not heard their accusations (xviii, 34) and that Pilate was now questioning him at a private examination.

4. I find no fault in this man—This conclusion, which sounds so abrupt in St. Luke, was the result of the conversation with Pilate in which Jesus said, "My kingdom is not of this world." It had convinced Pilate of his innocence, and he expressed his conviction in this unhesitating acquittal. According to John xviii, 36-38, Pilate did not say this till after our Lord had declared to him that his kingdom was not of this world, and probably not till after he had found on examining witnesses (ver. 14) that all their evidence amounted to no proof of his having set up himself for a temporal king.

5. Teaching throughout all Jewry—This reference to our Lord's teaching throughout Judea is explained by Luke's account of the interval between the departure from Galilee and the arrival at Jerusalem; it coincides very strikingly with the statement of St. John. The charge of "beginning from Galilee" probably rested upon the crowds that had followed him on his last journey to Jerusalem, and may have been intended to remind Pilate of the revolt of Judas of Galilee.

7. Herod's jurisdiction—Pilate's object may have been (1) to get rid of the responsibility—or, at least, to divide it—by ascertaining Herod's opinion; (2) to do a cheap act of courtesy which might soothe the irritation which Herod, as well as the Jews, felt against him. Herod lived at Tiberias and Pilate at Cesarea. During the immense assemblage of the Jewish feasts the two rulers had come to Jerusalem, Pilate to maintain order, Herod to gain popularity among his subjects by a decent semblage of conformity to the national religion. At Jerusalem Herod occupied the old palace of the Asmonean princes. Who himself also was at Jerusalem—It was, of course, no strange thing that the Tetrach of Galilee, professing Judaism, should come up to keep the passover in the holy city. And it is clear he kept a kind of court there, and his so-called Herodian rabbis with him, and was attended by his troops. Up to this time he had remained in sullen seclusion, and no visits of courtesy had been exchanged between him and Pilate.

8. It must have been a deep aggravation of Christ's sufferings to be led bound amid coarse attendants through the densely crowded streets.

9. He answered him nothing—We can hardly help asking ourselves what were likely to have been among Herod's questions. Did the Prisoner who stood before him really claim to be a King? Did he proclaim himself as the Christ? Was he John the Baptist risen from the dead? If not, who and what were his earthly parents? The unbroken silence of the accused must have been strangely impressive at the time, and is singularly suggestive when we remember how he had answered Caiaphas when he had been adjured in the name of the living God. He had spoken to Pilate in the tones of a sad gentleness. To Herod alone, the incestuous adulterer, the murderer of the forerunner, he does not vouchsafe, from first to last, to utter a single syllable. A murderer of the prophets, who was living in open and flagrant incest, and had no higher motive than mean curiosity, deserved no answer.

10. And vehemently accused him—They were now bent on securing their purpose, and perhaps feared that Herod's well-known superstition might rob them of their prey; especially as he was much less afraid of them than Pilate was, having strong influence in Rome.

11. Set him at nought—Treating him not as a criminal, but only as a person worthy of contempt. Arrayed him in a gorgeous robe—Literally, bright; a robe of white tissue of some kind richly embroidered with silver. It probably means a white robe, for it was the custom of the Jewish nobility to wear such. In such a robe Herod, by way of mockery, caused our Lord to be clothed. But the nobility among the Romans wearing purple, for the most part, Pilate's soldiers, who were Romans, put on Jesus a purple robe (John xix, 2), both companies following the custom of their own country, when, by the way of mocking out Lord as a king, they clothed him in robes of state. Herod with his men of war—His body guard. Sent him again—This involved a second distinct acquittal of our Lord from every political charge brought against him. Had he in any way been guilty of either (1) perverting the people, (2) forbidding to pay tribute, or (3) claiming to be king, it would have been Herod's duty, and still more his interest, to punish him. His dismissal of the case was a deliberate avowal of his innocence.

12. Pilate and Herod were made friends—The cause of the quarrel is uncertain; apparently something concerning Herod's power of jurisdiction, which was conceded by Pilate in sending Jesus to him, and again waived by Herod in sending him back. They were at enmity—Perhaps in consequence of the incident mentioned in xiii, 1. This is the first type of Judaism and heathenism leagued together to crush Christianity. Neither Pilate nor Herod cared or thought anything about our Lord's religious character or mission.

Tedious Sermons.

"How long does your pastor preach?" "Thirty minutes, measured by what he says; sixty by the time he consumes." There was no fault-finding. The pastor had no stauncher supporter. His place was never vacant. From the announcement of the text until "Let us pray," he was all attention. Yet he witnessed to a fact and expressed a conviction. He would not have all sermons thirty minutes long; some, he confessed, were short at an hour. But he would have men know what they wished to say, say it, and quit. Prolixity comes from many things. Chiefly, perhaps, from lack of preparation. Bishop Morris used to say: "Any one can preach a long sermon; only the student can preach a good sermon in thirty minutes."

"Does your pastor always preach that well?" "Yes, he prepares carefully; he is no pulpit-pumper." A friend of ours used to say that he was necessarily vociferous when he was unprepared. Rambling, incoherent, tedious must he be who presumptuously opens his mouth in the pulpit expecting it to be filled. It is surprising how the bulk of the loose hay is reduced by the press. Very few sermons an hour long but can be compressed to their advantage into half that time.

The next cause is included rightfully in the former; namely, a violation of the rule of unity. We bring in many things that belong equally to other subjects. The point is lost in expansion. Like an unhelmed ship, we drift with the winds.

Again, the habit of repetition wastes time. A statement is made. It is repeated negatively. Over and over again the changes are rung upon it, until a dozen repetitions are inflicted before advancing to the next, which is similarly treated. This vicious practice and its twin, padding, can, indeed, make a mountain of a mole-hill. It is quickly detected and universally despised.

Doubtless some misread the example of the fathers. In the olden time, when opportunities to hear the gospel were few, it became the minister to follow St. Stephen's example and declare at once all the oracles of God. Hence the fathers sometimes preached for three hours. But if any one imagines that their sermons were unbroken oil, let him read them. Models they are of perspicuity, logical force, evangelistic fervor. But opportunities now are as frequent as then rare. Hence the need of long sermons has disappeared. A well-prepared sermon by the presiding elder, effectively delivered, at his quarterly visitation, may seem brief, although an hour long; but sermons of that length by the regular pastor become a weariness to the most loyal flesh.

The habit of tarrying long at our sermons grows upon us with advancing years. Much of the unacceptability of old ministers is due to this. Brethren, try the half-hour gauge. Be prepared and animated, and quit at thirty minutes, whether you are through or not. Our word for it, your congregations will double and your hearers will forget that you are old. Try it. Fourteen solid hours in immediate preparation for thirty minutes before the people!—Western Christian Advocate.

The Size of Heaven.

Some men are great on statistics. They love to figure out results. Sometimes they direct their mathematical talent toward working out Bible problems. Frequently their calculations are very unreliable and fanciful, as they get far beyond their depths of comprehension, but occasionally their figuring displays surprising ingenuity, and serves to confirm faith in Scripture statements. Recently one of our own countrymen, Captain J. B. Sharkley, a measurer of vessels in the Boston Custom-house, has been using his calculating genius in an attempt to arrive at the size of heaven as based upon the measurement given in Rev. xxi, 16: "And he (the angel) measured the city with the reed, twelve thousands furlongs. The length and the breadth and the height of it are equal." Most readers are content with an acceptance of the fact as here stated and realize not its significance as expressive of vastness of extent. Our Boston statistician, however, sees in it and helps us to see in it by means of his calculations, a city of extensive dimensions, capable of holding billions of people. He says: "Twelve thousand furlongs—7,920,000 feet; cubed—497,793,088,000,000,000,000 feet. Reserving one-half of this space for the throne and court of heaven, and one-half of the remainder for the streets, we have 124,198,273,000,000,000,000 rooms. We will suppose the world did, and always will contain 900,000,000 inhabitants, and that a generation lasts 31½ years, making in all 2,970,000,000 every century, and that the world will stand 1,000,000 years, or 10,000 centuries, 29,700,000,000 inhabitants. Now, suppose there are 100 worlds like this, equal in number of inhabitants and duration of years, a total of 2,970,000,000,000,000 persons, there would be more than 100 rooms, 16 feet square, for each and every person." This is certainly interesting figuring and shows that there is ample space in heaven for vast myriads. Inspiration, however, describes the redeemed as a "multitude that no man can number." The God who so declares will find in his "many mansions" not only an abundance of room for them, but a fulness of joy, magnificence of residence and perfectness of existence.—Presbyterian, N. Y.

Veni, Vidi Vici! This is true of Hall's Hair Renewer, for it is the great conqueror of gray or faded hair, making it look the same even color of youth.

For bruises, sprains and scalds, nothing equals Salvation Oil, the pain-eradicator. 25 cents.

Now the God of peace, that brought again from the dead our Lord Jesus, that great shepherd of the sheep, through the blood of the everlasting covenant, make you perfect in every good work, to do his will, working in you that which is well-pleasing in his sight, through Jesus Christ; to whom be glory for ever and ever. Amen.—Hebrews xiii, 20, 21.

Dyspepsia

Makes many lives miserable, and often leads to self destruction. Distress after eating, sick headache, heartburn, sour stomach, mental depression, etc., are caused by this very common and increasing disease. Hood's Sarsaparilla tones the stomach, creates an appetite, promotes healthy digestion, relieves sick headache, clears the mind, and cures the most obstinate cases of dyspepsia. Read the following:

"I have been troubled with dyspepsia. I had but little appetite, and what I did eat distressed me, or did me little good. In an hour after eating I would experience a faintness or tired, all-gone feeling, as though I had not eaten anything. Hood's Sarsaparilla did me an immense amount of good. It gave me an appetite, and my food relished and satisfied the craving I had previously experienced. It relieved me of that faint, tired, all-gone feeling. I have felt so much better since I took Hood's Sarsaparilla, that I am happy to recommend it." G. A. PAGE, Watertown, Mass.

The Liver

When out of order, involves every organ of the body. Remedies for some other derangements are frequently taken without the least source of the trouble, and until that is set right there can be no health, strength, or comfort in any part of the system. Mercury, in some form, is a common specific for a sluggish liver; but a far safer and more effective medicine is

Ayer's Pills.

For loss of appetite, bilious troubles, constipation, indigestion, and sick headache, those Pills are unsurpassed.

"For a long time I was a sufferer from stomach, liver, and kidney troubles, experiencing much difficulty in digestion, with severe pains in the lumbar region and other parts of the body. Having tried a variety of remedies, including warm baths; with only temporary relief, about three months ago I began the use of Ayer's Pills, and my health is so much improved that I gladly testify to the superior merits of this medicine."—Manoel Jorge Pereira, Porto, Portugal.

"For the cure of headache, Ayer's Cathartic Pills are the most effective medicine I ever used."—H. K. James, Dorchester, Mass.

"When I feel the need of a cathartic, I take Ayer's Pills, and find them to be more effective than any other pill I ever took."—Mrs. B. C. Grubb, Barnwellville, Va.

"I have found in Ayer's Pills, an invaluable remedy for constipation, biliousness, and kindred disorders, peculiar to miasmatic localities. Taken in small and frequent doses, these Pills on the liver, restoring its natural powers, and aiding it in throwing off malarial poisons."—C. F. Alston, Quitman, Texas.

Act Well

"Whenever I am troubled with constipation, or suffer from loss of appetite, Ayer's Pills set me right again."—A. J. Kisor, Jr., Rock House, Va.

"In 1858, by the advice of a friend, I began the use of Ayer's Pills as a remedy for biliousness, constipation, high fevers, and colds. They served me better than anything I had previously tried, and I have used them in attacks of that sort ever since."—H. W. Tiersh, Judsonia, Ark.

THURSDAY, OCTOBER 30, 1890.

A goodly number of complaints have reached us in regard to the delay of our paper last week. We expected such, because our readers, many of them, could not learn of the fire that so disarranged our work until they read the account of it in our paper. We have worked under very great difficulties; but the business tact of the manager and the indomitable pluck of our foreman and his assistants have enabled us to come out on time this week. We thank our friends for their patience and sympathy.

The Centenary College of Louisiana.

MR. EDITOR: A printed circular gotten up in Alexandria, La., has reached me by mail, as I suppose it has many others in Mississippi and Louisiana. In this circular it is set forth, as so many reliable facts:

1. That a college is about to be established in Mississippi which will deprive Centenary of two-thirds of its support and patronage.

2. That it will become necessary to remove Centenary from Jackson, La., and to establish it at some other point.

3. That it could be used for an insane asylum, and the proceeds of the sale of it used elsewhere.

4. That "a further endowment of one million of dollars will almost certainly be secured from a source that can not now be mentioned, provided an eligible location is chosen."

5. That that location will be Alexandria and its vicinity, being the best and most central for such college.

6. That $50,000 paid, at the rate of one-fourth every six months ($12,500) "will accomplish what is desired."

Along with this there comes a subscription paper headed, "Whereas, Centenary College is situated inconveniently, and it is thought the building Millsaps College will greatly injure said Centenary College; and, whereas, we believe it will be to the best interest of said college to sell the buildings and improvements at Jackson, and rebuild at a more central place; and, believing that Alexandria, Rapides parish, is the best place for the location of said college," etc.; therefore, we agree to give the amount opposite our names, etc. Also a telegram appeared in the Picayune, about September 12, giving notice that "a public meeting, at the invitation of Rev. B. F. White," had been held in Alexandria, and "a gentleman had subscribed twenty acres of land, three miles from the town, for the early establishment of a Methodist college," in view of "the fact that it is confidentially believed that a wealthy lady of our State has determined to donate $1,000,000 to such an institution," etc.

I need not say that I was somewhat overwhelmed at such an array of statements and purposes affecting the welfare of Centenary and education generally in Louisiana and Mississippi. I have been a trustee of Centenary for forty years and president of its Board of Trustees for almost a quarter of a century. Having labored with many of its friends all the time to maintain it in its integrity and usefulness as an institution of learning, you will not think it strange that I was quite taken aback at the zeal and voluntary assumption of the Rev. B. F. White, in his bold attempt to shape the future policy of the Louisiana and the Mississippi Conferences in respect to this venerable institution. The more so, because the last year of the college was decidedly the most prosperous year in its history since the war, having matriculated one hundred and thirty-seven students, and its income having doubled that of any other year. Whether this was owing to the increased interest in denominational education, excited by the friends of Millsaps College or a general improvement in the financial condition of our people, which enabled them to send their boys to college it is not easy to determine; but such is the fact.

After the war Centenary had a hard struggle for life, but meanwhile did a grand work in educating probably five hundred young men who otherwise would not have been educated. Fifteen thousand dollars or more was raised to repair its buildings, and since then, from time to time, amounts have been contributed by its friends, enough to put the buildings in first-rate order. It is entirely out of debt. It has no scholarship unsatisfied. It is within four miles of one of the largest trunk railroads in the South, putting it in convenient connection with New Orleans, Baton Rouge, Natchez, Vicksburg, Jackson, Memphis, with Shreveport by the Texas Pacific at Baton Rouge, and with Bastrop by the Northwest at Natchez, with two trains running each way daily. It has the finest college buildings in the entire South excepting, it may be, those at Vanderbilt, which include its hall capable of an audience of 3,500 persons; two wings, each 190 feet long, two stories high, all built substantially of brick, with pillared fronts and rooms which can accommodate 200 students. Over and above all, a centre building four stories high, with ornate facade of twelve columns, each 50 feet high, making in all a front of over 700 feet; a campus of full 60 acres. On commencement occasions it commands an audience such as no college in this State or any other Southern State does command.

These are items of importance, and to them may be added that during the past two years the endowment of the college has been largely increased, and is swelling every day. But beyond all else, the college possesses a record of sixty-five years as an institution of learning, honorable and reliable beyond estimate. Its alumni have everywhere added to its fame, not to mention the thousands of young men who have attended its halls and classes for longer or shorter periods, now scattered all over the South. This record is its chief glory: one not to be surpassed and not easily obliterated by possible successes in other possible directions.

The endowment of "one million of dollars" which will almost certainly be secured from a source that can not now be mentioned, which "it is confidentially believed a wealthy lady of our State has determined to donate" for the early establishment of a "Methodist college," as the telegram has it, has been flitting before the excited mind of our good brother until he almost realizes it as an actual fact, though it be as yet but "confidentially believed."

A million of dollars could hardly be detained in Alexandria for such purposes; but if it can be, there will be no need with such a sum at command of destroying Centenary in order to establish there an institution of the highest kind. There is plenty of room in Louisiana, without putting down one school to build another, for all the means that can be brought to bear upon the training of her youth. Seamen have a very good saying, which all of us would do well to adopt, viz: "Never let go one rope till you've got hold of another."

The Louisiana Conference, with the Mississippi, will, I trust, properly estimate the mischief that such rash movements and publications do to our institution of learning when started by parties who have not been especially entrusted with the welfare of the educational interests of the Conference. The president of Centenary, Dr. Hunnicutt, informs me that this agitation, fermented and furthered by these circulars and this telegram, all from one source, has been greatly in his way in his recent efforts to secure an increase in the endowment of the college. I have waited until I could be better informed of the matter before making this statement in behalf of the Board of Trustees of Centenary College.

Yours truly,

J. C. KEENER,
President of the Board.

Mississippi Constitutional Convention Notes.

The convention is still dragging along; when it will adjourn remains yet to be seen; but probably about the tenth or fifteenth of November.

The following sections of the Legislative supplemental report have been adopted during the past week:

The powers of the government of the State of Mississippi shall be divided into three distinct departments, and each of them confided to a separate magistracy, to-wit: Those which are legislative to one; those which are judicial to another, and those which are executive to another.

No person or collection of persons, being one, or belonging to one, of these departments, shall exercise any power properly belonging to either of the others, except in the instances in this Constitution expressly directed or permitted. The acceptance of an office in either of said departments shall of itself and at once vacate any and all offices held by the persons so accepting in either of the other departments.

No appropriation bill shall be passed by the Legislature which does not fix definitely the maximum sum thereby authorized to be drawn from the treasury.

The Legislature shall meet at the seat of government, in regular session, on the first Tuesday after the first Monday in January, of the year A. D. 1892, and every four years thereafter, and in special session on the first Tuesday after the first Monday in January of the year 1894, and every four years thereafter, unless sooner convened by the governor. The special session shall not continue longer than thirty days unless the governor, deeming the public interest to require it, shall extend the sitting, by proclamation in writing to be sent to and entered upon the journals of each house, for a specific number of days, and then it may continue in session to the expiration of such time. At such special session the members shall receive not more compensation or salary than ten cents mileage, and a per diem of not exceeding five dollars; and none but appropriation and revenue bills shall be considered, except such matters as may be acted upon at an extraordinary session called by the governor.

Also the following:

The rate of interest on the fund known as the Chickasaw School Fund, and on other trust funds for educational purposes, for which the State is responsible, shall be fixed and remain at six per centum per annum from and after the close of the fiscal year 1891, and the distribution of said interest shall be made semi-annually on the first of May and November of each year, as long as said funds are held in trust by the State.

The Legislature shall not remit forfeiture of franchise of any corporation now existing, nor alter nor amend charter thereof, nor pass any general or special law for benefit of such, except on condition that said corporation shall thereafter hold its franchise subject to the provisions of Constitution.

All existing charters or grants of corporate franchise under which bona fide organizations have not taken place at the adoption of this Constitution, shall be subject to the provisions hereof, and all such charters under which bona fide organizations shall not take place and be commenced in good faith within one year from the adoption of this Constitution, shall thereafter have no validity unless a bona fide organization shall take place thereunder and business be commenced within two years from the date of such charter or grant.

The Legislature shall pass laws to prevent abuses, unjust discrimination and extortion in all charges of express, telegraph, telephone, sleeping-car and railroad companies, and shall enact laws for the supervision of railroads, express, telephone, telegraph, sleeping-car companies, and other common carriers, by commission or otherwise, and enforce such laws by adequate penalties to the extent, if necessary for that purpose, of forfeiture of their franchise.

No railroad hereafter constructed in this State shall pass within three miles of any county seat without passing through the same, and establishing and maintaining a depot therein, unless prevented by natural obstacles. Provided such towns or its citizens shall grant the right of way through its limits, and sufficient ground for ordinary depot purposes.

Provision shall be made by general laws whereby cities and towns may be authorized to aid and encourage the establishment of manufactories, gas works, water works and other enterprises of public utility, not including railroads, within the limits of said cities or towns by exempting all property used for such purposes, from municipal taxation for a period not longer than ten years.

No railroad or other transportation company shall grant free passes or tickets, or passes or tickets at a discount, to members of the Legislature, or the members of the Board of Equalization, or any State, district, county or municipal officers. The Legislature shall enact suitable laws for the detection and prevention of violations of this provision.

All charters granted to private corporations in this State shall be recorded in the county in which the principal office or place of business of such company shall be located.

The exercise of the right of eminent domain shall never be abridged, nor so construed as to prevent the Legislature from taking the property and franchise of incorporated companies, and subjecting them to public use the same as the property of individuals; and the exercise of the police powers of the State shall never be abridged, nor so construed as to permit corporations to conduct their business in such a manner as to infringe the equal rights of individuals or the general well-being of the State.

The Legislature shall, by appropriate legislation, provide for the protection of the employees of all corporations doing business in this State from interference with their social or political rights by said corporations, their agents or employees.

Giving, and Giving Up.

The call of Bro. B. F. Lewis, in your issue of September 25, has the ring of a clarion note. It has been approved in a later issue by several brethren, and, doubtless, many more like myself have been saying "Amen!" in their hearts. The idea of a missionary supported directly by the members of our Conference ought to cause "the thoughts of many hearts to be revealed." I suppose all admit that ministers ought to be ensamples to the flock in giving as well as in other Christian graces. But how shall we best bestow our gifts on God's cause so as to illustrate this essential principle? For many years it was the custom among us to give up to the full measure of our ability (and sometimes beyond our power) at the missionary anniversary meetings, swelling the collection often to threefold its natural proportions. Later the idea has obtained among us that it is better to give in our congregations, or to make up their deficits in the report to Annual Conference. It strikes me that Bro. Lewis' suggestion opens a more excellent way than either. It affords a means of giving, easily observed by all without ostentation, and without encouragement to laxity among our laity in the matter of bringing up their assessments. It will also initiate a new and holy emulation among the brethren of the Conference to do what we can personally to pay for the privilege of preaching the gospel in home fields rather than in the dark and dangerous regions to which some are willing and ready to go if only the means be provided. That the need is urgent none will deny. I forbear to dwell on the many open doors and white harvest fields. These are constantly brought to our minds by the thrilling letters of our own Lamhuth and his younger brethren in the true apostolic succession. Verily, Ethopia and the Islands of the Sea are stretching out their hands to us. The question is, Will we, for the sake of those whom Jesus died to save, give up some cherished habit, amounting to an idol? The stain of self-indulgence ought to paint a lasting blush on the cheek of ease-loving ministers. How can we represent him who, in order to go about doing good, endured heat and dust, hunger and thirst amid homeless wanderings, unless we deny ourselves and follow him.

Let us show to the world and to our lay brethren "the proof of our love" to the missionary cause by this practical and practicable mode of expression. There is no calculating to what proportions this work will grow if we of the Mississippi Conference set the example at our approaching session by raising enough among ourselves to send out one missionary, who shall hereafter be sustained by our annual contributions. Oh! that all the active brethren might "lay by them in store," and bring up to Conference, at least, ten dollars for this object. I, for one, enter my subscription, and hope that the number of the names of such will fill a column within the next few weeks. Occupy the time and space, brethren, not waiting one for another. And may we not hope that at our annual meeting some capable soldier of Jesus Christ from our own ranks may say, "Here am I; send me"? So may we, in a double sense, send forth a Mississippi Conference missionary to the foreign field!

Yours in this hope,

J. P. DRAKE.

Dr. Austin Phelps, late professor in Andover Theological Seminary, died recently at Bar Harbor, Me. He was professor in the seminary since 1848, and was an author of repute, having published "The Still Hour," "The New Birth," "Theory of Preaching," and other popular works.

Personal and Otherwise.

Bishop Keener dedicated a new church in Mobile, Ala., last Sunday.

The increase in the subscribers of this paper has averaged a thousand a year for the last three years.

Give the article on the first page, entitled, "The Kelley Case," a careful reading. It seems to us to be a very good exposition of our church law as applicable to the case in hand.

Bishop Galloway passed through the city last week en route to Texas to hold his Conferences. The Bishop has been unwell for several weeks, but looks like he could do any amount of work.

We have worked under great difficulties this week. With the cinders and dust from the debris of the fire, and with carpenters hammering and hallooing around us, we have had a dusty and noisy time; but we begin to see the end.

Bro. Phillips is earning a reputation. The St. Louis Advocate, after quoting our "personal" in regard to his work for the papers, says: "We do not know when we saw a better report on the paper question." Bro. Phillips' zeal is "provoking many;" and may they be as successful as he!

One of our city pastors received a letter from a prominent preacher in another part of the country, and in the letter was a request that a pair of monkeys and a pair of parrots be sent him. Has that preacher members who will only "shell out" when "the show comes to town:" See article, on second page, by "Aitch Aitch Aitch."

The St. Louis Advocate, speaking of Dr. Carradine's first sermon in his new charge in that city, says:

The audience was large, and, of course, very solicitous. Looking from the pulpit into the upturned faces of that immense audience, it was easy to read anxiety, curiosity and restful, confident hope. Dr. Vinell, who had been filling the pulpit since Conference, introduced Dr. Carradine in his usually felicitous way. Dr. Carradine announced for his text, Rom. xiv, 12, "Every one of us shall give account of himself to God." Notwithstanding the subject was an old and hackneyed one, the sermon was one of the freshest and most suggestive we have heard in many a day. It was evident the Doctor was making no special effort to introduce himself; one could easily see a larger amount of reserve force. His ministry, if that is a sample, will be fresh, vigorous, forceful and spiritual.

Notice.

The trustees of Millsaps College will meet in Jackson, Miss., Thursday, December 4, 1890, at half-past nine A. M.

THOS. J. NEWELL,
Secretary.

Attention.

Rates to the Louisiana Annual Conference at Monroe, December 3, are as follows:

Southern Pacific road—Full fare to Cheneyville going, and one-third from Cheneyville returning.

Texas Pacific road—Round-trip tickets from place of embarkation to Shreveport, at four cents per mile.

L. N. O. and T. road—Full fare coming and one-third returning.

Queen and Crescent road—Full fare coming, and one-third fare returning.

Steamboats—"The Ouachita Consolidated Line" will give round-trip from New Orleans at $12, and other points in proportion.

Please remember that a certificate that you have paid full fare coming should be obtained from the agent of whom you purchase tickets, and of the agent of each line.

Parties from New Orleans and Baton Rouge, coming on the L., N. O. and T. railroad, can purchase tickets to Monroe, and the certificate of agent will be honored by the agent at Monroe and one-third fare tickets returning sold. Those living at other points, however, will purchase tickets to Vicksburg, and there of Queen and Crescent to Monroe. Those living on the Southern Pacific will purchase tickets to Cheneyville on terms already indicated for that road, and at Cheneyville buy round-trip tickets to Shreveport, and there get ticket of the Queen and Crescent to Monroe.

Remember that you must get a certificate that you have paid full fare from every agent of whom you purchase a ticket, except on the Texas Pacific. Over this road you purchase a round-trip ticket.

Round-trip tickets over the Texas Pacific will be on sale December 1 and 2, and will continue good until the tenth. On the other routes certificates may be issued as early as November 27, and reduced rate be given to the twelfth.

These, brethren, are the principal lines of travel to and from our Conference. There are, however, two or three short lines from which I have not yet heard, but will give their terms as soon as I can get them.

Please pay special attention to the above, that there may be no trouble in obtaining the reduced rates offered by the different lines of transportation.

THOS. J. UPTON.

The Kelley Case.

First, then, as to the initial step:

Dr. Kelley complains that his character was not arrested in due form as required by the Discipline, and he bases his complaint upon the following sections:

Sec. 52. Ques. 7. What method is recommended in the examination of the life and official administration of the preacher?

Sec. 54. Ans. 2. Let the name of every preacher be called, and let his presiding elder, or some other member of the Conference, state whether or not there be any complaint against him. If there be none, he may retire, and the Conference may make further inquiry concerning him, and pass his character without vote.

Sec. 55. Ans. 3. If there be a complaint, and the preacher has been advised of it, let it be stated to the Conference, and let the accused have the privilege of replying. He shall then retire, and the Conference shall determine by vote whether or not his character shall pass. (Discipline, page 48.)

These sections were enacted in 1858.

In 1890 (last May) the General Conference amended Section 263 in such a way as to operate as a repeal of the law of 1858, Section 55, in so far as it applies to the case of a preacher who has left his work. By that amendment it is provided that "such cases shall not be denied trial by committee." Observe that this amendment is not designed to save to the accused the right of trial by committee, but that it provides that the case can not be disposed of by a vote in open Conference, but must go to a committee. That such is unquestionably the interpretation to be put upon this amendment is evident from the circumstances of the case of trial that gave rise to it. A member of the Los Angeles Conference left his work and quit the Methodist Church. He did not appear at the ensuing session of the Conference, and treated its process with contempt. His character was duly arrested when his name was called, and, after a statement of the facts, he was, by vote of the Conference, expelled.

The General Conference, in reviewing the administration of the Bishop who presided in that case, pronounced the above procedure as in accord with the usage in such cases, but declared it unconstitutional, and to prevent a like occurrence in future, amended the law as above stated. Now, let it be observed: the act of maladministration complained of did not consist in denying the accused a right of trial by committee, for he had not demanded it nor been present at the trial. The complaint, therefore, was that "the case had been denied trial by committee."

This is of importance because it is claimed by Dr. Kelley that the design of the amendment is to give the accused the option of trial, either by the committee or the Conference, as he may elect.

As I intend to refer to this action of the General Conference again in the course of this article, I here quote it at length, noting the fact in this connection that Dr. Kelley was a prominent member of the committee which drafted it, and is himself the author of a part, if not all of it:

"The Committee on Episcopacy offer their report on the records referred from the Los Angeles Conference.

"The journal of said Conference shows the suspension and expulsion of a preacher in open Conference by motion and vote without the forms of trial provided in our Discipline, and prescribed for the trial of preachers charged with immoral conduct.

"It is to be noted that different steps and processes are to be followed according to the grade and class of the offense, but the final judgment is the same—the offender, if not reformed or cured, must be expelled; and always after formal trial and conviction before suspension or expulsion.

"It is, indeed, doubted whether one class of offenders need he or can be treated in this way. A refusal to perform the work assigned to an itinerant makes an offense of a peculiar kind. And when a suspension has been adjudged as a penalty for such refusal, it is an aggravation of guiltiness for such a preacher to treat with contempt the sentence by continuing to preach in defiance of the verdict against him. For such sinning, in such way, it has been claimed the process of punishment is and ought to be summary.

"Your committee is aware that the course pursued by the Los Angeles Conference was long the law and usage of the church. Formal trial by the existing methods was unknown until a comparatively recent date. In other years, before 1886, all preachers whom tried were arraigned before the open Annual Conference, and the case was determined, after the pleadings were over, by verdict, motion, and vote.

"Was this peculiar offense of violation of ordination and contempt of authority placed in another category than other sins demanding Conference recognition and treatment? Your committee does not thus judge, but hold that in every case the offending preacher should be subjected to the process of trial by committee according to law, and that this grade of offense is so high as to properly class it with immoralities.

"Such is their judgment, which is hereby delivered in the form of a resolution offered for your adoption:

"'Resolved, That in the items referred to this committee in the journals of Los Angeles Conference, the rulings accord with the decisions of the college of Bishops, but in the opinion of this committee this ruling infringes on the fifth restrictive rule, and that law which undertakes to specify the cases that should be referred to a committee of investigation and of trial should be amended.

"The committee propose to remedy the defect in the law by adding to the Discipline the following language: 'Provided, such cases shall not be denied trial by committee.'

"J. W. HINTON, Chairman.

"JAMES ATKINS, Secretary."

The evident effect of this amendment was to take such offenses as that which Dr. Kelley stood charged out of the category of those that may be disposed of summarily under section 55, for, if taken up under that section and to the question, "Shall his character pass?" an affirmative answer were given, the effect would be to "deny such cases trial by committee."

This amendment is not designed to ourh the power of the Bishop alone, bnt operates upon the Conference alse, and likewise forbids it to deny to the "case" a trial by committee. It is to be observed that the language of the amendment is not worded so as to save the "right" of trial by committee, but rather to prescribe that as the only process to be resorted to.

I think these considerations make it clear that the amendment of 1890 was designed to take cases of the kind under consideration out of section 55. If so, then the objection as to want of notice is likewise disposed of.

Postal Card Reports.

—Rev. M. J. Miller reports from Trenton circuit, Mississippi Conference: "I preached a sermon last Sunday at one of my churches on the subject of infant baptism, and at the conclusion received four members and baptized eleven children and two adults. Does that look like infant baptism is dying out? What our people need is to have the subject presented to them as it is in the Bible."

—Rev. L. W. Wood writes from Bay St. Louis, Miss.: "Just home from Salem Camp Meeting, where I saw and felt the power of God. I fully realize the meaning of the words, 'They were all filled with the Holy Ghost. Scores converted. Thank God for camp meetings! Our church at Bay St. Louis is a model church, 'in that it makes its collection and pays its pastor even when he is absent.' Pray for us."

—Rev. N. J. Roberts writes from Utica, Miss.: "In obedience to Bishop Galloway's request two of my churches observed Millsaps College Day. The Sunday-school at Utica Church gave on that day $7. The agent presented the claims of the college at this place, and secured in cash and subscriptions about $250 in April. After preaching at Bear Creek, on the second Sunday, I presented the claim of the college to a small congregation, and received, in cash and subscription, $33. Two other churches yet to hear from."

—Rev. H Bradford writes from Meadville, Miss.: "Have held two meetings on my circuit with the following results: At Meadville, 13 accessions to our Lodge of Good Templars; at Oak Grove, no accessions, but the church strengthened. At Noho we have had 11 accessions at our regular services; no protracted meeting at that appointment this year. This is my third year on this work. During these years we have built one church, have another under good headway, have repaired the third, and have added several features to make the fourth comfortable and attractive. We have 4 well-organized Sunday-schools, 3 singing classes, 3 Ladies' Aid Societies and one active temperance organization, whose influence is being felt for good all over the county."

—Rev. William G. Evans writes from Minden, La.: "Our meeting at Sibley (Lano's Chapel) was a grand success. Bro. Lallance and his good wife were with us, and both did good work. He preached with power, and she held up his hands and helped us greatly in the singing. We continued there for nearly two weeks. There were several very bright conversions. Two brothers took up the cross of public prayer and the whole community was deeply stirred. Our Quarterly Conference, the next Saturday, showed the whole work to be in a very healthy condition, and with a fine prospect of meeting all the Conference claims. The meeting at Sanders' School-house was still in full blast, Bro. Wren, a local preacher, at the wheel. I preached for him, Saturday and Sunday nights, to very fine audiences, and there was a genuine revival spirit manifest. The two meetings resulted in about 12 accessions. These meetings are the last of the year, but the revival and the 'season' goes on. The spirit is still with us."

Paine Loan Fund.

Over $1,500 are still due us on notes and subscriptions made to this Fund by parties living in the State of Mississippi, nearly every dollar of which is past due. We need the money in the conduct of our business, and have made repeated applications for its payment. We are very anxious to close up all these accounts before the approaching Conferences in that State, and respectfully and earnestly request all parties indebted to send what they owe to me by their pastors when they start to the sessions of their respective Conferences, or remit earlier to General Conference Notice.

At its late session the General Conference re-enacted the existing plan for its entertainment during session, May, 1894; and pursuant to its provision the undersigned were appointed a committee "to select a place for holding of the ensuing session (taking action on this point as early as practicable), and negotiate for railroad rates and hotel fares from those places inviting the General Conference." Subsequently to the adoption of the Plan of Entertainment the following resolution was adopted—viz:

Resolved, That it is the sense of this Conference that the action to-day shall not be construed as declining to accept the hospitality of any city which may give the Committee on General Conference Entertainment satisfactory assurance of ample, comfortable, and gratuitous entertainment for the next session of the Conference: and provided such offer of entertainment be accepted by the committee, no assessment shall be made on the church for Board of Delegates during Conference session.

The committee has been organized with E. W. Cole, chairman, and Rev. T. M. Finney, D. D., secretary; and has ordered this public notice, inviting application for the seat of the next session of the General Conference.

The Plan of Entertainment provides that the Book Agent shall make the estimate of expenses, and assess the same upon the Conferences during the year 1891; and for this purpose it is necessary that the selection of the place for holding the session shall be determined as early in that year as practicable, and not later than the first of May. All applications are to be forwarded to the secretary at his office in St. Louis, Mo. They should contain full information concerning railroad connections, class of hotels and hotel rates, location and size of room for the session and committee-rooms, and such other data as may be deemed pertinent respecting the accommodation of the business of the Conference and entertainment of delegates.

Missionary Meeting.

The Missionary Conference of the Greenville district met in Rosedale, October 8, at 3 P. M. Mrs. Somerville (the district secretary) opened the meeting with Scripture reading; Bro. Shumaker offered a prayer, after which Bro. Woolard welcomed the members of the Conference with beautiful and appropriate words. Mrs. Somerville responded; also addressed the delegates and visitors.

Conference being called to order by Mrs. Somerville, business proceeded. Roll of auxiliaries called, and responded to by delegates or letter: Greenville, Indianola, Bolivar, New Salem, Jonestown, Lula, Brooklyn, Greenville "Lilies of the Delta." After announcements meeting closed with benediction.

At 8 o'clock our dear Sister Hargrove was to have delivered one of her beautiful and impressive talks, but she was called home on account of sickness. Bro. Standefer (always ready for an emergency) came forward, and in an earnest talk renewed our zeal in the work so near and dear to each of our hearts.

Mrs. Somerville then addressed the audience on "Woman's Work for Woman," in beautiful, earnest and impressive words, calling on the women of Rosedale for their help in this part of the Master's work. The meeting closed with prayer and song, "God be with you till we meet again."

The next day we left for home, happy because we had been doing the Master's work, and had the glad news to report a new auxiliary with thirteen members.

To Bros. Woolard, Standefer and Shumaker we return our heart-felt thanks for their kind assistance in the work; also to the people of Rosedale for their kind hospitality while in their beautiful city.

BUFFALO LITHIA WATER

Goes to Hot Springs for Gout, Rheumatic Gout, Rheumatism, etc., etc.

DR. ALGERNON S. GARNETT, Surgeon (retired) U. S. Navy, Resident Physician, Hot Springs, Ark.:

"I have had excellent results from BUFFALO LITHIA WATER in GOUT, RHEUMATIC GOUT and RHEUMATISM, both in my own person and in the treatment of patients for whom I have prescribed it. It is a prophylactic as well as a remedy in Nephritic Colic and forming Calculi, when due to a redundancy of Lithic Acid."

Dr. Wm. B. TOWLES, Professor of Anatomy and Materia Medica in the Medical Department of the University of Virginia. Former Resident Physician, Hot Springs, Va.:

"I feel no hesitancy whatever in saying that in GOUT, RHEUMATIC GOUT, RHEUMATISM, and in all diseases of URIC ACID DIATHESIS, I know of no remedy at all comparable to BUFFALO LITHIA WATER.

"Its effects are marked in causing a disappearance of Albumen. In a single case of Bright's Disease of the Kidneys I witnessed decided beneficial results from its use, and from its action in this case I should have great confidence in it as a remedy in certain stages of this disease."

The Late Dr. Wm. F. CARRINGTON, Resident Physician, Hot Springs, Ark., Surgeon (retired) U. S. Navy, Surgeon Confederate States Navy, Medical Director Army of Northwestern Virginia:

"The BUFFALO LITHIA WATER, Spring No. 2, has signally demonstrated its remedial power in GOUT, RHEUMATIC GOUT, RHEUMATISM, URIC ACID GRAVEL, and other maladies dependent upon the URIC ACID DIATHESIS."

Dr. T. B. BUCHANAN, Resident Physician, Hot Springs, Arkansas:

"Send me five cases BUFFALO LITHIA WATER, Spring No. 2. I have made use of this Water for GOUT in my own person and prescribed it for patients similarly suffering with the most decided beneficial results. I take pleasure in advising GOUTY patients to these Springs."

Water in cases of one dozen half-gallon bottles, $5 F. O. B. here.

THE SUN.

FOR

1891.

Some people agree with THE SUN's opinions about men and things, and some people don't; but everybody likes to get hold of the newspaper which is never dull and never afraid to speak its mind.

Democrats know that for twenty years THE SUN has fought in the front line for Democratic principles, never wavering or weakening in its loyalty to the true interests of the party it serves with fearless intelligence and disinterested vigor. At times opinions have differed as to the best means of accomplishing the common purpose; it is not THE SUN's fault if it has seen further into the millstone.

Eighteen hundred and ninety-one will be a great year in American politics, and everybody should read THE SUN.

Our Young People.

A LITTLE GENTLEMAN.

His cap is old, but his hair is gold,
And his face is clear as the sky;
And whoever he meets, on lanes or streets,
He looks him straight in the eye
With a fearless pride that has naught to hide,
Though he bows like a little knight,
Quite debonair to a lady fair,
With a smile that is swift as light.

Does his mother call? No kite or ball,
Or the prettiest game can stay
His eager feet as he hastes to greet
Whatever she means to say;
And the teachers depend on this little friend
At school in his place at nine,
With his lessons learned and his good marks earned,
All ready to toe the line.

I wonder if you have seen him too,
This boy, who is not too big
For a morning kiss from mother and sis,
Who isn't a bit of a prig;
But gentle and strong, and the whole day long
As merry as a boy can be,
A gentleman, dears, in the coming years,
And at present the boy for me.

—Harper's Young People.

Six-year-old Logic.

Baby was sick and mother had sent all around town to find the doctor, but he was nowhere to be found. When father came home mother told him about it. Said he: "Why didn't you send to the bar room? I guess you would have found him there."

Charlie R. was standing by and heard the conversation, but made no remark. Some days later the little fellow was out with his mother, and they chanced to pass a saloon. Said he: "Let's go in there, muvver, and see what they are doing."

She replied: "Oh! my son, that is a wicked place, where men drink whisky and lose their senses, and play cards and lose their money, and I hope my little boy will never, never go in such a place."

Still some days later, while eating his supper, he thought very seriously for some minutes, and, finally putting down his spoon, he said: "Muvver, when I was coming from school to-day a boy told me that that wicked place where men lose their souls was a bar room."

"Yes, dear; what of that?"

"Well, didn't faver say when baby was sick that the doctor might be at the bar room?"

"Yes; what then?" said mother, becoming more interested.

"Well, if the doctor was in the bar room, and the bar room is that wicked place where men lose their senses, then I wouldn't have that doctor, for I don't believe he could make baby get well."

He had stored away all the evidence as he received it:

(1) Father said the doctor was at the bar room.

(2) Mother said a certain place was wicked, and that men there drank whisky, and lost their senses, and

(3) A boy wiser in the ways of the world than himself told him that this certain wicked place was a bar room.

He now brought it all before the bar of his own innocent heart, weighed it, and brought in his verdict: "I wouldn't have that doctor."

Oh! that we could all reason as clearly as this little six-year-old temperance lecturer. Verily, "out of the mouths of babes and sucklings," etc. S.

Push.

A young man, who, for want of other employment, had been assistant to a surgeon for a time, was riding out into the country from San Francisco to forget the operation he had just assisted at. The company in which he had gone to California in 1849 had disbanded, and each man started in for himself. So our hero, whom we will call Frank, was not settled as to what he would do. He didn't like the surgeon's business, and he was looking for something that he could engage in with less injury to his feelings. As he passed a new block of buildings going up not far from the city, whom should he meet but Blake, with whom he had sailed from Callao to San Francisco.

"I'm your man," responded Frank.

So it was arranged that Frank, who knew just where the paper could be had, should share the job with Blake, and they would divide profits. Blake was an upholsterer by trade. Frank had never hung a roll of paper in his life, but he had seen his mother paper the walls of his early home, and he thought he could learn. Blake at once busied himself in hiring hands to help put the paper on, while Frank bought and carted the materials. When the walls were papered, the young firm got the contract of carpeting the floors and hanging curtains at the windows. Then they set up an office in the city, and their business increased until before many years they had the largest upholstering establishment on the Pacific coast. They imported from Paris, London and other European cities, and had a large trade with New York. The fires that desolated their city repeatedly burned them out two or three times, but they began again, and at last prosperity was won.

Frank's motto was: "What man has done, man may do," and he had the courage to push and push till the doors through which he wished to pass stood wide open.—New York Christian Advocate.

Going up to High C.

One afternoon, Ethel attended a matinee where there was much fine music. On the way home she heard her mother remark to another lady that one of the singers, a noted tenor, sang unusually well.

"Yes," said the lady, "he went up to high C without making any fuss about it."

Ethel often heard music talked about at home, so that she knew that "high C" meant one of the upper notes on the musical scale within the compass of the human voice, but so high that some singers could not reach it. Therefore she asked no questions.

A few weeks afterward Ethel went into the country for a visit. On the morning after her arrival at the farm she got into the chicken yard, where she caused much commotion among the fowls. The hens cackled and the roosters screeched, while she chased them hither and thither to her heart's content, thinking it fine fun.

"Oh! I've had a lovely time playing tag with the chickens!" she told her mother afterward, and she added, "I 'most know that gray rooster went up to high C, but he made a dreadful fuss about it."—Youth's Companion.

Household.

She Resigned.

"You see how it is, my dear," he said, taking her soft hand which had never done very hard work, and patting it reassuringly; "I'm poor—only a thousand a year, dear—and we shall have a struggle to get along at first—"

"I don't mind that, in the least," she interrupted, stoutly, rubbing her cheek softly against his hand.

"And," he pursued, graciously having allowed her interruption—"we shall have to come down to strict economy. But, if you can only manage as my mother does, we shall pull through nicely."

"And how does your mother manage, dear?" she asked, smilingly—but very happy—at the notion of the mother-in-law cropping out already.

"I don't know," replied the lover, radiantly; "but she always manages to have everything neat and cheerful, and something delicious to eat—and she does it all herself, you know! So that we always get along beautifully, and make both ends meet, and father and I still have plenty of spending money. You see when a woman is always hiring her laundry work done, and her gowns and bonnets made, and her scrubbing and stove-blacking done, and all that sort of thing—why, it just walks into a man's income and takes his breath away."

The young woman looked for a moment as if her breath was also inclined for a vacation; but she wisely concealed her dismay, and, being one of the stout-hearted of the earth, she determined to learn a few things of John's mother, so went to her house for a long visit the very next day. Upon the termination of this visit, one fine morning John received, to his blank amazement, a little package containing his engagement ring, accompanied by the following letter:

"I have learned how your mother 'manages,' and I am going to explain it to you, since you confessed you didn't know. I find that she is a wife, a mother, a housekeeper, a business manager, a hired girl, a laundress, a seamstress, a mender and patcher, a dairy maid, a cook, a nurse, a kitchen gardener and a general slave for a family of five. She works from five in the morning until ten at night; and I almost wept when I kissed her hand—it was so hard and wrinkled, and corded, and unkissed! When I saw her polishing the stoves, carrying big buckets of water and great armfuls of wood, often splitting the latter, I asked her why John didn't do such things for her. 'John!' she repeated, 'John!'—and she sat down with a perfectly dazed look, as if I had asked her why the angels didn't come down and scrub for her. 'Why—John'—she said in a trembling, bewildered way—'he works in the office from nine until four, you know, and when he comes home, he is very tired, or else—or else—he goes down town.' Now, I have become strongly imbued with the conviction that I do not care to be so good a 'manager' as your mother. If the wife must do all sorts of drudgery, so must the husband; if she must cook, he must carry the wood; if she must scrub, he must carry the water; if she must make butter, he must milk the cows. You have allowed your mother to do everything, and all that you have to say of her is that she is an 'excellent manager.' I do not care for such a reputation, unless my husband earns the name also; and, judging from your lack of consideration for your mother, I am quite sure that you are not the man I thought you were, or one whom I would care to marry. As the son is, the husband is, is a safe and happy rule to follow."

So the letter closed, and John pondered; and he is pondering yet.

How an Ocean Cable Is Made.

Let us see what a submarine cable is, and how it is made. To do this a visit must be made to the enormous factory on the banks of the Thames, a few miles below London. Here the birth of the cable may be traced through shop after shop, machine after machine. The foundation of all is the conductor, a strand of seven fine copper wires. This slender copper cord is first hauled through a mass of sticky, black compound, which causes the thin coating of gutta-percha applied by the next machine to adhere to it perfectly, and prevents the retention of any bubbles of air in the interstices between the strands, or between the conductor and the gutta-percha envelope. One envelope is not sufficient, however, but the full thickness of insulating material has to be attained by four more alternate coatings of sticky compound and plastic gutta-percha. The conductor is now insulated, and has developed into "core." Before going any further the core is coiled into tanks filled with water, and tested in order to ascertain whether it is electrically perfect, i. e., that there is no undue leakage of electricity through the gutta-percha insulating envelope.

These tests are made from the testing-room, replete with beautiful and elaborate apparatus, by which measurements finer and more accurate than those even of the most delicate chemical balance may be made. Every foot of core is tested with these instruments, both before and after being made up into cable, and careful records are preserved.

After the core has been all tested and passed, the manufacture of the cable goes on. The core travels through another set of machines, which first wrap it with a thick serving of tarred jute, and then with a compact armoring of iron or steel wires, of various thickness according to the depth of water in which the cable is intended to be laid. Above the armoring, in order to preserve the iron from rust as long as possible, is applied a covering of stout canvass tape thoroughly impregnated with a pitch-like compound, and sometimes the iron wires composing the armor are separately covered with Russian hemp as an additional preservative against corrosion.—Scribner.

Paper Barrels.

After three years of experimental work an English company has succeeded in producing barrels which are able to compete favorably with barrels made of wood. The paper barrels are used principally for the carriage of gunpowder, mining fuses, fruit, flowers, molasses, paint, cement, matches, asbestos, dyes, chemicals, sugar and extract of meat. The materials used in making the barrels are waste paper, cardboards and (for the better quality) old sacks. When cardboard is used, it is soaked or boiled for six hours and afterward treated in the same manner as the other raw material. This is carefully sorted and put into a rag engine, or beater, where it is beaten and torn to pieces by a series of knives for about an hour and a half. It is afterward mixed with water until a pulp of sufficient consistency is gained. This is rolled, joined, shaped and dried, and the barrel is finally covered with hoops. Before the tops and bottoms are put in the barrels are painted with a waterproof composition made of linseed oil and rosin for ordinary purpose barrels, and with a special varnish where they are used for food products. The standard size made is sixteen and one-half inches diameter by twenty-eight inches long. The prices at which these barrels can be produced enables them to compete favorably with the wooden barrels, a wood barrel costing thirty-four cents and a paper one twenty-eight cents. One great feature is, that there is no waste with the process, all "wasters" being eaten up into pulp again.—Pittsburg Dispatch.

Many people neglect a cold, thinking it will go as it came. Frequently with serious results, the cold of to-day may be the pneumonia of to-morrow. Nothing will cure a cough or cold so rapidly as Dr. Davis' Compound Syrup of Wild Cherry and Tar. Its reputation has been established for over fifty years as the best remedy for coughs, colds, bronchitis, asthma, all throat and lung troubles. For croup and whooping-cough it is invaluable. Mothers will be saved much anxiety and loss of children by having Davis' Wild Cherry and Tar always on hand. Consumption has been cured many times by its use. One dollar bottles hold two and a half times as much as a 50c. bottle.

DR. KING'S

Royal Germetuer.

NEW ORLEANS, Sept. 2, 1890.

I have been for several years constantly subject to malarial fevers. The best medical treatment has failed to remove from my system the malarial poison that produced them. I have had to use an average of forty grains of quinine per week for years. The fevers would invariably return in a few days, if it was discontinued. The quinine was doing great harm to my nervous system, but I had to keep it up as my only hope. Recently I commenced using Dr. King's Royal Germetuer. It has done me more good than all the medicine I have ever taken. I have not had a fever since commencing its use, nor found it necessary to take a dose of quinine. It has toned my nerves, built up my strength and given me a buoyancy and healthfulness of feeling that I have not known for years. My experience justifies me in saying that this wonderful remedy is all that is claimed for it, if not more.

GRATEFUL—COMFORTING.

EPPS'S COCOA.

BREAKFAST.

"By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well-selected Cocoa, Mr. Epps has provided our breakfast tables with a delicately flavored beverage which may save us many heavy doctors' bills. It is by the judicious use of such articles of diet that a constitution may be gradually built up until strong enough to resist every tendency to disease. Hundreds of subtle maladies are floating around us ready to attack wherever there is a weak point. We may escape many a fatal shaft by keeping ourselves well fortified with pure blood and a properly nourished frame."—Civil Service Gazette.

WILSON—Mrs. JANE J. WILSON was born in Charleston, September 30, 1811, and departed this life in New Orleans, La., September, 1890, near seventy-nine years of age; like well-ripened grain when reaped for the heavenly harvest. She was twice married, but outlived both her companions, and spent the last seventeen years in the home of her devoted daughter, Sister Dillon. She joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in 1867. She well knew and loved to talk of the old men and leaders of our hosts in South Carolina. She had a cheerful temperament, and looked at the bright and hopeful aspects of things, and did not attempt to climb before she got to them. She could, doubtless, repeat with comfort the beautiful lines of Addison:

"Ten thousand thousand precious gifts
My daily thanks employ,
Nor is the least a cheerful heart
That tastes those gifts with joy."

Her last illness continued some eight months, but she heroically endured with cheerful patience, and, like Paul, often said, "It is far better to depart and be with Christ." She loved and often talked of old South Carolina and its pleasant memories; but she more desired "the Summerland of Song." Her sun went down in smiles, and she is now among the saved and blest. Loved ones deplore her loss, but hope to meet again.

J. B. WALKER.

LAMKIN—On July 4, at eight o'clock A. M., Bro. JAMES ALEXANDER LAMKIN passed away in perfect peace at his home at Midway, Hinds county, Miss., after a protracted and painful illness. His Christian life was exemplary, and his dying testimony satisfactory, saying to his family and friends, a few hours before his departure, that he was ready and willing to go. Bro. Lamkin was born in Georgia, May 28, 1828; moved to Mississippi in early life; was merchandising in Beauregard during the noted cyclone which devasted the town a few years ago, in which he received severe personal injury, besides being bereft of his entire worldly possessions, even his house being blown away. He afterward removed to Midway, where he remained until death.

He leaves a wife and adopted son to mourn his loss; but, thanks be to the God of all grace, they do not mourn as those who have no hope, but with the bright prospect of ere long meeting him on that blissful shore, where parting is no more. May the God of all comfort comfort them amid their sore bereavement!

WM. T. BEALL, P. C.

BIRCH—Mrs. SARAH BIRCH (nee Flanagin) was born October 5, 1815, in the State of Arkansas. United in matrimony to John Birch in April, 1832. In 1835 they came to St. Helena parish, La.; in 1878 she joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, under the ministry of Rev. J. S. Parker, and died June 5, 1890, in the full assurance of a glorious immortality beyond the grave, as she assured her children and loved ones who stood around her bedside in her last moments, that God, for Christ's sake, had pardoned her sins and she was going home to heaven.

Aunt Sallie, as she was familiarly called, lived a widow for some time, as her husband had preceded her to the eternal world several years. One son had also crossed the cold stream before her. She leaves four sons and a host of grandchildren behind to mourn their loss. She was very much devoted to her children, and they will miss her very much; but they mourn not as those without hope; and God grant that her sons and grandchildren may so live here that in the end they will all be prepared for a happy meeting in the sweet by-and-by.

H. C. NEWSOM.

SMITH—FANNIE CHAMBERS, consort of Palmer Smith, died August 9, 1890. How sadly we lament the demise of so true a Christian, so good a friend! This itinerant will miss her cheering welcome, her warm handclasp, her generous hospitality and her Christian sympathy. The church and the community miss her happy influence; the children feel the lack of mama's Christian example—the need of her godly teaching. The church and the world are poorer since her death; but we have good reason to believe she has been made a partaker of "the unsearchable riches of Christ." She knew him whom to "know aright is life eternal," who said, "He that believeth in me though he were dead, yet shall he live."

The last enemy that shall be destroyed is death. What havoc does death leave behind him! It is nature's curse, calamity and close. Man was constituted immortal. It is the corroding curse of sin that brings this exquisite framework, so fearfully and wonderfully made, to be the prey of worms and the companion of the dust. Death takes the mother from the babe of her bosom, the wife from her beloved husband, the soul from the body; but there, in the case of a Christian, the tyrant must stop—it can not take a believer's soul from a believer's God! When our sister died it was really death that died, and that groan which seemed the physical evidence of her departed spirit was but the first sound of the marriage bell which intimated her union and communion with God and with the general assembly of the saints above. There is not a grave dug in the clay of old Pisgah Churchyard over which the Christian can not say, "My Lord first lay there." "Yea, though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death, I will fear no evil, for thou art with me." Death only separates from a communion characterized by a thousand intermingling infirmities, and introduces into a bright and happy day where friend shall rejoice again in friend and parent in child. Surely we can bear the momentary severance of the passage for the glorious reunion, the blessed meeting upon that sunlit shore that lies beyond it. We are not to sorrow as those who have no hope, for if we believe that Jesus died and rose again, even so them which sleep in Jesus shall God bring with him." Be of good cheer. The Christian's suffering is paternal; the blow that smites most severely is inflicted by the hand which was nailed to the accursed tree. The cup even when bitterest, is filled with love in disguise, and not with wrath in the least possible degree. Not one blow reaches you, my brother, which has not been meted out by the wisdom and love of him who has taught us to say, "Our Father who art in heaven." "Not only so, but we glory in tribulations also."

I will pray the Father, and he shall send you another comforter; he shall teach you all things and bring all things to your remembrance. "Let not your heart be troubled," for "I am with you alway, even unto the end of the world." Remember then whom you serve, who watches over you, and what treasures you may draw from him. Some few years hence we will meet our loved ones in that better clime, where every pulse will be a wave from that ocean of joy and felicity which is around the throne of God and of the Lamb forever.

PASTOR.

WHITEFIELD—Mrs. JENNIE ELIZA RAYNE WHITEFIELD was born in New Orleans, La., June, 1846. She was the daughter of our late and lamented friends, Bro. and Sister Rayne, of precious memory. She was cradled in a household of faith, in the lap of domestic piety. In her girlhood she remembered her Creator, and sought his pardoning love and regenerating grace. She attached herself to the church of her parents—the Methodist Episcopal Church, South—and lived acceptably in its communion until our Father called her from the church militant to the church triumphant. For ten years and more she was united in marriage to our Bro. Joseph Whitefield, who lives to mourn his greatest earthly loss.

Her health for years past has not been the best, and has caused her much solicitude and suffering. She died suddenly of an apoplectic or paralytic stroke at her home at Shuqualak, Miss., in her forty-fourth year. As she lived in habitual preparation for her final call, she could not have been greatly surprised to find herself suddenly in the spirit world, among the glorified.

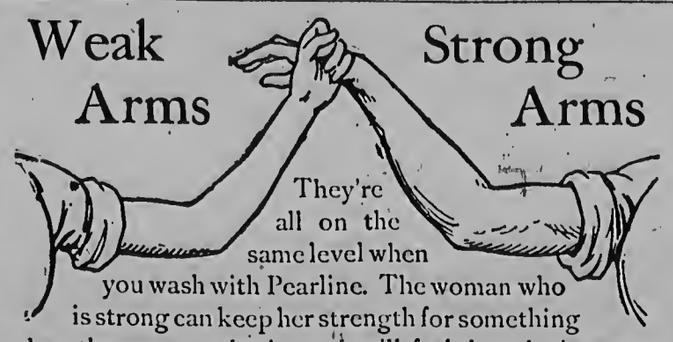
She was endowed with a good share of common sense and practical wisdom. Though a modest woman, she was firm in her convictions. She was hospitable and generous and diligent in her duties; a true and sympathizing friend, a good daughter and sister, and a faithful wife. Friends and brothers and sisters and husband mourn their loss, but sorrow not as those who have no hope. With her it is well, well forever!

J. B. WALKER.

BROWN—Our friend and sister in Christ, Mrs. RACHEL BROWN, is no more among us; "not suffered to continue by reason of death." She was born in London, England, in 1818. She married in 1837. She joined what is now the Moreau Street Church in 1841, before the Flat Boat Church was built, in some hired room. She assisted in building the Moreau Street Churches, and was a constant attendant and diligent worker in that charge for thirty-one years. In 1872 she removed her membership to the Felicity Road Church, in which she continued a beloved and acceptable member for eighteen years, until she ascended to the church triumphant. For some twelve or fifteen years she was a punctual teacher in the Felicity Sunday-school and helped many children to a better understanding of the Holy Scriptures. She was a constant and devout attendant upon all the services of the sanctuary, the class and prayer meetings and the preaching of the Word. She was an active member of all the benevolent societies of the church, and helped to build the present new and beautiful Felicity Street Church. She was a thankful and cheerful Christian, diligent and faithful in all the relations of life. For two years she was a great sufferer, but unmurmuring and resigned. Her end was peace; her home is heaven. We mourn, but rejoice in hope.

J. B. WALKER.

Weak Arms Strong Arms



They're all on the same level when you wash with Pearline. The woman who is strong can keep her strength for something else; the woman who is weak will feel that she is strong. It isn't the woman that does the work—it's PEARLINE.

So it is with the clothes. They needn't be strong. The finest things fare as well as the coarsest. They all last longer, for they're saved the rubbing that wears them out. Work was never so easy—never so well done. And safe, too. Nothing that is washable was ever hurt by Pearline. If it were otherwise—do you think we would continue to sell enough Pearline yearly to supply every family in the land with several packages.

Beware Peddlers and some unscrupulous grocers will tell you, "this is as good as" or "the same as Pearline." IT'S FALSE—Pearline is never peddled. 182 JAMES PYLE, New York.

GRANT'S FURNITURE STORE

NEW STORE, AT 28 and 30 Camp Street, NEW ORLEANS

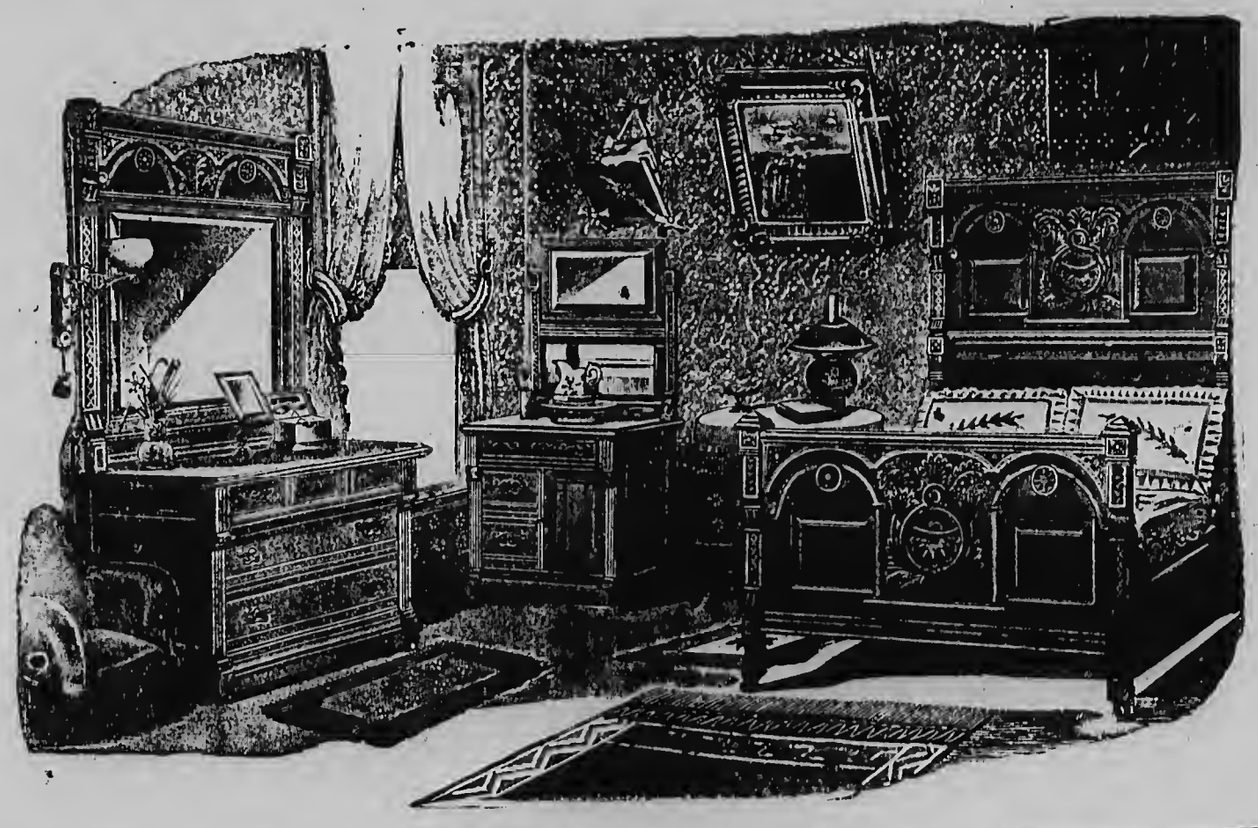
BEAUTIFUL PARLOR GOODS.

I have one entire floor devoted to the display of these goods alone, and have over sixty different varieties to select from. Complete Suits anywhere from $35 to $650, and odd pieces—such as Sofas, Divans, Easy Chairs, Patent Rockers, Window and Reception Chairs—at as low prices in proportion as the Complete Suits. I have these goods in Cherry, Mahogany and Walnut, and can give you your choice of any of the following coverings: Crushed, Embossed, Plain and Silk Plushes, Hair Cloth, Mohair, Raw and Spun Silks, Satins, English Tapestries, French Velours, Petit Point, Brocatelle or Damasks. I make a specialty of these goods, have many of the patterns made specially for my own trade, and can offer a greater variety at lower prices than any other house in the South.

NEW STOCK

In all departments, and every grade of goods, from the cheapest to the most expensive, in endless variety. I have all the latest and most fashionable designs, and, as I have only purchased from factories whose goods I have been selling for the past six years, can and do guarantee every piece of Furniture that leaves my establishment.



LOW PRICES

are the order of the day, and I propose to sell strictly reliable goods at a lower price than has ever before been quoted in the South. My store has long been known as "The Cheapest Furniture House in New Orleans," and this season I intend to add to the reputation it has gained in this respect. I only ask a chance to save you money.

HANDSOME BEDROOM SUITS.

A very extensive assortment of these goods in every style; and whether you wish to pay $40 for a Complete Suit of twelve pieces, or from that price anywhere up to $1,000, I can sell you what you require. I have these goods in Black Walnut, Natural and Dark Cherry, and Natural and Dark Mahogany, or in imitation of any of these woods, and can furnish the very latest, neatest and most artistic designs.

I have also a large and carefully selected stock of Hall, Library, Dining-room and Kitchen Furniture; Reed, Rattan and Wicker Chairs, Rockers, Lounges and Cribs; Brackets, What-nots, Easels, Music Stands and Fancy Top Tables; Carpets, Carpet Strips, Matting, Shades, Curtains, Curtain Poles, and everything necessary to furnish a house completely throughout.

LARGE SALES.

I have a large city trade, and am shipping goods extensively to every Southern State. My country trade has increased very rapidly during the past year, and the facilities which my new store affords me for carrying a larger and better stock will enable me to still further extend it, and to give complete satisfaction to my customers.

The Shortest Way.

"Ever go the shortest way to work: Now the shortest is according to nature." It is self-evident that the shortest and most natural way to reach the sonroes of disease is by inhaling some vitalizing agent or remedy, which, breathed into the lungs in the same manner as the air, but richer in ozone, is absorbed into the blood and distributed over the whole body. Our experience of over 20 years, having treated 55,000 patients with the Compound Oxygen, has convinced us that this wonderful vitalizing agent meets all requirements. The medical faculty are generally averse to the use of advertised remedies. This adds still greater importance to the fact that over one thousand physicians are using it in their practice.

We are permitted to refer to numerous patients, whose names and testimonials are to be found in our brochure of 200 pages, giving a history of the discovery, nature, and results of Compound Oxygen. Numerous records of cures in all chronic diseases. Brochure sent free. Address DRS. STARKEY & PALEN, 1529 Arch St., Philadelphia, Pa., or 120 Sutter St., San Francisco, Cal.

Notice.

All contributions and communications intended for the Transit and Building Fund Society of Bishop William Taylor's Self-Supporting Missions, should be sent to Richard Grant, treasurer, 181 Hudson St., New York.

The Clergy of America take kindly to Life Insurance, and have been its firmest champions. They fight for it and thoroughly believe in it. There are many splendid financiers in the Church; that they are intelligent and thoughtful for their future goes without saying. All denominations seek the protection of Life Insurance, and are careful to select the company offering the greatest security and the most advantageous terms to policy-holders. The Episcopal Diocese, of New York, has an Insurance Fund for all of its members, and the Mutual Life, which is the largest and strongest company in the world, with over $122,000,000 assets, has been officially selected by that body to issue all the insurance to these worthy people.

A Southern Department of this Company has been opened in New Orleans under the management of Mr. T. H. Bowles, with offices in Louisiana National Bank Building.

It is well known among successful merchants that liberal advertising is indispensable to the economical and successful working of their establishments.—Price Current.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

DOMESTIC.

The biennial convention of the Fenian Brotherhood was brought to a close at Patterson, N. J., last week. The session lasted three days. More than 200 delegates were present, representing all sections of the United States. By far the most important action of the convention was the unanimous indorsement of a recommendation of the general secretary, abolishing the secret oath of the organization. Hereafter all the transactions of the Brotherhood will be open and the public will be free to attend all meetings.

The two national campaign committees have practically finished their work of sending out documents. They are now on hand only to answer letters and meet such eleventh-hour demands as may be made upon them for information. Each committee has sent out enough documents to paper the land over, and if the 60,000,000 people who make up this nation are not educated on the tariff, the pension, the silver, and the Federal election questions by November 1, it will not be the fault of the committee.

It is said that a bill passed the lower House of the Choctaw Council depriving all citizens of the Choctaw Nation, who take the oath to become citizens of the United States, of the right to vote, hold office or sit on juries in that nation.

The committee having in charge the erection of a statue of President Chester A. Arthur, in New York City, has given the commission of the work to the sculptor, Ephraim Kaiser, who is now at work upon the model. The statue will be completed in about two years and will cost $25,000.

At the session of the Supreme Council of the Scottish Rite Masons, in Washington City, among those elected to receive the thirty-third degree were: Charles A. Hotchkiss, Texas; C. F. Buck and W. T. Benedict, Louisiana, and Col. R. de Clairmont, Guatemala.

The American mail sent out on the City of New York on her recent trip eastward, was for the first time on record ready for delivery in London on the seventh day after leaving New York.

President Harrison is having a hard time of it in trying to decide what to do about calling an extra session of Congress. There is no longer any doubt as to his own preference. Personally, he is strongly in favor of an extra session, and if he dared he would call one to-morrow. Furthermore, he is exerting all his influence to unite the Republican party on this question and on the affirmative side of it.

A most disastrous fire occurred in Mobile on October 26. The scene of the fire was the extreme northern end of the city, and includes, besides the destruction of between 7,000 and 8,000 bales of cotton, eight warehouses, three cotton compresses, large cotton-seed oil mills, the big ice factory, the Mobile fertilizer factory, two large wood and coal yards, three steamboats and a box factory. No lives lost. The business losses are estimated at $1,000,000.

Gold fields have been discovered in the Arbuckle Mountains, Chickasaw Nation. The mines there are said to be the richest ones ever known.

The first motion to secure final action from the Supreme Court of the United States on the question of the constitutionality of the New York electrical execution law was made in the Supreme Court on October 27. It was moved that the case be advanced and set down for a speedy hearing.

FOREIGN.

Germany and Austria are still irresolute as to future action in retaliation for the American tariff. Austria is helpless in this respect, as she has nothing to retaliate with, and exclusion of American products from the empire would hurt America very little, while the American market for Hungarian wines has greatly expanded of late years.

The Bank of Spain has contracted with the Bank of Paris for a three months' loan of 100,000,000f. The security given for the loan by the Bank of Spain consists of redeemable Spanish 4 per cent. bonds. The bank still refuses to give discount facilities. It even declines to discount the paper of the best houses in Madrid.

The tariff is much more severe upon Germany than at first appreciated. The German manufactures for the American market are mostly of inferior goods, upon which the tariff is heaviest.

Chancellor von Caprivi will meet Signor Crispi, the Italian Prime Minister, at Monza, on November 8, and will present King Humbert with an autograph letter from Emperor William. The interview, besides aiming at the establishment of personal relations between Gen. Von Caprivi and Signor Crispi, will concern the settlement of the intrigue in the Austrian court in favor of the Vatican against the Italian government.

Signor Crispi demands that he be allowed to deal with a freer hand with matters relating to the Vatican. Another Italian grievance is the avoidance of Emperor Francis Joseph to return King Humbert's visit to Vienna. Emperor Francis Joseph offered to go to Turin, but King Humbert declined to receive him anywhere except at Rome.

The Count De Paris continues to create the greatest enthusiasm in Montreal, and on October 24 large crowds congregated at different points as he passed to visit the religious institutions. It is estimated that fully 20,000 people cheered him at the depot on arrival. His first visit in the city was to the archbishop. The city has fairly gone wild over him. The French papers praise him most highly.

The Russian government has closed the Catholic Churches in the districts of Volkini and Podolki, and also the Dominican monastery in the town of Ostrog.

Two thousand and ninety-eight congratulatory telegrams, containing upwards of 74,000 words, have passed through the Berlin office for Count von Moltke, on the occasion of the ninetieth anniversary of his birthday, which was observed as a national holiday throughout Germany.

Oh, the folly of trying to restrain an evil by government tariff! If every gallon of whisky made, if every flask of wine produced should be taxed a thousand dollars, it would not be enough to pay for the tears it has wrung from the eyes of widows and orphans, nor for the blood it has dashed on the Christian church, nor for the catastrophe of the millions it has destroyed forever.—*Rev. Until the drink factor is eliminated from the problem there can be no successful solution of the wage question, or any other question that relates to the betterment of the working classes. Any system of social reform that does not take full cognizance of the vast and awful waste of property and human life caused by the drink traffic fails at the vital point and can not succeed. As long as the saloon and gin palaces crowd the streets of our cities and towns, so long are poverty and misery the inevitable condition of vast multitudes of our people. Universal peace, happiness and prosperity are not possible in a country that knows such a thing as the saloon.—New York Mail and Express.

As for the resurrection of the dead, I do not conceive it so very contrary to the analogy of nature, when I behold vegetables left to rot in the earth, rise up again with new life and vigor; or a worm, to all appearance dead, change its nature, and that, which in its first being crawled on the earth, become a new species, and fly abroad with wings. —Berkeley.

Letter No. 27.

THE DEBRIS OF JERUSALEM—A STREET FOUND FIFTY FEET UNDER THE CITY—PILES OF RUBBISH HIGHER THAN THE WALLS—THE STRIFE BETWEEN THE LATIN AND GREEK CHURCHES—THE CUSTOM OF SUPPORTING THE NATIVE CHURCH MEMBERSHIP—THE WAY MOTHERS CARRY THEIR CHILDREN—A TOUCHING SPECTACLE.

I had often heard of the piles of rubbish in or, rather, on the old Jerusalem; but not until I came and saw for myself could I realize what I had read on the subject. So deep are these accumulations in some places that it is impossible to tell how far beneath is the ancient city level. Not long since rubbish to the depth of twenty feet was removed by workmen for the purpose of securing a foundation of a hospital, when suddenly they came upon an arched opening. It proved to be a sky-light in the vaulted ceiling of a street that lay thirty or forty feet below. I went down to view it, and stood wondering and solemnized as I looked down upon a city thoroughfare along which people walked in the time of the Savior. It was a kind of Pompeii spectacle.

Another case, equally remarkable, occurred in the excavations made under a monastery. The ancient floor made bare in that place is fully fifty feet below the first rubbish that was removed.

One evening, in a walk on Mt. Zion, and inside the walls, I was amazed to see that the rubbish of ages had so accumulated that there were piles which now overtopped, by several feet, the walls of the city, which, at that point, are fully thirty feet high. The words of the prophecy, uttered six centuries before Christ, rush upon the recollection, "Jerusalem shall become heaps!" Let the skeptic come and see for himself, and be convinced. God has various ways of burying cities out of sight. The sluggish waves of the Dead Sea tell of one way; the black lava of Vesuvius, twisted in grim handwriting on the plain, tell of another; and the debris and ruins of the centuries speak of another.

This rubbish, or debris, of Jerusalem has a curious effect upon the traditions manufactured by the Greek and Latin Churches in regard to sacred localities. For instance, you are pointed to the house of Veronica and the lowly home of the Wandering Jew, where, according to the resistless testimony of the rubbish, these houses, if they ever existed at all, are to be found forty or fifty feet below, and must necessarily be out of sight. At another place on the Via Dolorosa they show you a deep impression on a rock in the wall, made, these churches affirm, by the hand of Christ as he rested for a moment under the burden of the cross. But the voice of the rubbish of Jerusalem says this is impossible, the Savior was not of gigantic stature, and if he rested at all, it was on a spot forty feet beneath the traditional site. Sometimes "a voice that whispers from the dust" does good.

One of the sad spectacles in Palestine, and that hurts Christianity to the heart, is the hatred and strife between the Latin and Greek Churches. This bitterness is seen in various respects. One way is in their dispute and struggle over sacred places. If there is a holy site in a village or town, immediately these two churches contend for its possession, or set up rival churches in different quarters of the town, both affirming that the true site is under their church roof. So in Jerusalem there are two places of the Ascension of Christ—one Greek and one Latin; in Bethany two places where Christ met Martha and Mary ere he proceeded to the grave of Lazarus—one on the left of the road, believed in by the Latins; and another on the right, believed in by the Greeks. In Nazareth they have two places where the angel Gabriel made the announcement to Mary of her coming motherhood—one on the north quarter, held by the Greek Church; and the other on the southern quarter, owned by the Romanists. Besides this, there are two Mounts of Transfiguration and two Gethsemanes—one Greek and the other Roman. And thus it is all over the land. When all the evidence goes to show that one of these churches is correct, then the discomforted one makes up for its loss by an abundance of sacred relics, traditions and sites of other scriptural occurrences. It is amazing to see how many important things have occurred on one little spot of ground after it gets a church roof over it. The effort to outdo each other in traditions and in the exhibition of sacred relics is painfully evident. If the Roman Catholics show the impression of Peter's foot on a paving-stone, the Greeks promptly exhibit the impress of Elijah's whole form on a bed of rock near Bethlehem. If the Greeks show a footprint in stone on Mt. Olivet, the Roman Catholics point you to a handprint in the rock on the Via Dolorosa.

The strife between the two has been evidenced in a far more serious way than I have yet mentioned. That way, sorrowful to relate, has been bloodshed. To-day a Turkish soldier stands in the Chapel of the Nativity, in Bethlehem, and a Turkish guard is posted in the Church of the Holy Sepulchre, in Jerusalem, for the purpose of keeping peace between two churches that call themselves Christian.

Can not the reader see what harm is wrought to Christ and his cause by such a state of things. Of course, we know that this is only a nominal Christianity; but the sad thought is that the Turk and the Syrian can not distinguish between the nominal and the real, the formal and the spiritual. They look at this spectacle, and say, "If this is Christianity, then we prefer our own religion."

A curious thing that prevails here is the church's support of its membership. A vast majority of the native members, if not all, are substantially helped by the ecclesiastical organizations to which they belong. A Syrian told me that his house cost him nothing, inasmuch as his wife, being a Catholic, received it from that church free of rent, and that all the other churches did the same. On making inquiry of the American consul, he confirmed what the man had said, saying that it was the custom of the Latin, Greek and Armenian Churches alike. I learned that it was quite common for the native members to change their church relationships from the Latin to the Greek, and vice versa, the only reason for the change being the offering of some superior material advantage by one over the other. One man left the Greek Church because he was offered, free of rent, a better tenement by the Church of Rome. I leave you to imagine the effect of all this upon the religious character of this people. Truly they are the descendants in spirit, if not in flesh, of the multitude that followed Christ for the sake of the loaves and fishes.

I can conceive of but two causes that bring this state of things about. One is the poverty of Jerusalem. Once silver abounded here like the stones in her streets; but to-day she is the poorest of all cities. Mendicancy abounds, and her inhabitants are supported as in no other city in the world. The Greeks, Latins and Armenians all support their members, while Jewish philanthropists abroad send help to multitudes of Israelites here, who are barely able, with all the help they receive, to keep soul and body together. The other cause is church pride. Each one of these rival organizations desires a large following—large religious retinues, so to speak—in their chapels and churches; and to obtain this following in Palestine requires, it seems, the "loaf-and-fish" policy.

I have been much interested in the way that mothers carry their children in this country. I wrote you how they were bundled in shawls in Scotland, and peeped out on the world like a bird from its nest. When I reached Egypt, and studied the phenomenon of baby-carrying there, my surprise was enhanced. I saw there a mother walking on the high-road, with her child of fifteen or eighteen months sitting astride her left shoulder, while, with his little hands, he clasped the maternal head. Next day this scene was outstripped near the pyramids, where I saw a mother carrying one child on her right arm, while a second child was astride of her left shoulder—a kind of second story. This was a pyramid of a different sort from the one I was visiting, and filled me with a profound pity. But it remained for my surprise to reach its climax in Palestine. One day, while riding around the walls of Jerusalem, I passed a woman who had just come out of St. Stephen's Gate, and was walking toward the country. She was carrying a coarse white sack, or bag, on her back, the ends of which passed over her head something like an halter. As she passed me, I heard the cry of a child, and, seeing nothing of the baby-kind in her arms, had my attention directed to the fact that the child was in the bottom of the sack, midway between the mother's head and heels. On closer investigation I discovered that the bag was simply a large white cloth, with the four ends gathered together and passed around the mother's forehead.

But this is not all. The next day, as I passed out of the Jaffa Gate, I saw a woman standing in front of a street-stall, buying something. She had a large burden on her head, and, in addition, from that same loaded head was suspended the cloth sack which I now recognized as a baby receptacle, and from which issued the stentorian yells of a youngster upon whom the sun was shining too fervently for his comfort. The woman was doing four or five things at the same time. She was carrying a load of something—I could not tell what—upon her head, and balancing it as well. She was, beside this, carrying a good-sized baby in the head-suspended sack, and she was buying something at the little shop, and, as she did all these things, she swayed her body back and forth to quiet the child! The crowning wonder was, that the woman did not seem to realize that her lot was a hard one; nor was there a sign of impatience in one of her movements. The heart was all the more melted at the spectacle of silent, patient suffering.

Kentucky Correspondence.

BY JOSEPH H. COTTRELL, D. D.

Of course, you will have no lack of expressions of regret for the mishap from the burning of the ADVOCATE office, and for the destruction of Dr. Ahrens' paper; but allow, from abroad, a sincere expression of interest and sympathy. I rejoice that the insurance will cover all, and that there will be no hiatus in the issuance of the ADVOCATE. It is associated with all the years of my itinerant life, and under each editorial dispensation it has been instructive. I am up by a good fire this morning at two o'clock. "I, myself, will awake early." This life of insulation, of separateness—or whatever else it may be termed—has its compensations. To be altogether uninterrupted; to have, with my books and journals, just as many hours of the day and the night as I please—is it not to be utilized? I refrain, however, from saying more of this, and will turn to what prompted me to this present writing. The editorial page of the ADVOCATE, containing the mention of the fire that delayed that issue, I've just read with special satisfaction. The editorial leader, "Christ in You," presents the doctrine most felicitously. It is just that that qualifies for all to which each is obliged. Each soul, from the genesis of its being, hath such nexus with the Word as that he—not it—is available for "righteousness, sanctification and redemption." Out of a Christian infancy we may develop a Christian boyhood and girlhood, and thence a Christian manhood and womanhood. Dr. Ahbey has served, through his catholic concept of the kingdom, very greatly to the advantage of our Zion. He took me to task once for saying that when one would show me a hen that lays rotten eggs, I would show a woman who bears babes answering the Calvinistic description; but he repeated, substantially, the same idea, only in a different way. Richard Watson says that "guilt is a concomitant of sin." If that be an unqualified fact, it follows that if there be sin in infants, there is guilt. But our theology does not allow that. No guilt attaches to an infant. Is it, therefore, void of sin? By no means. The term "sin," as used by Paul, has two significations. It signifies, sometimes, the limitations inevitable to the finite; that which was the occasion—not the cause—of Adam's transgression; that which was occasion of the fall of any other intelligences of the universe, that were agents. Sin or depravity, as morally or spiritually reprehensible, does not account for disobedience, for transgression. Adam was not depraved; but he disobeyed. So with the devil.

But this has been gone over and over enough. I merely touch the subject here, as at a tangent, because it obtrudes itself irrepressibly, in connection with this most delightful doctrine of gracious ennoblement. But for the grace of God, in Christ Jesus, there could be no volitional movement of any soul Godward. But for the attraction of gravitation, no one could stand on the earth. What need for the "butting?"

And now I've gone and written so lengthily on this as to have little space for saying what I wished to say anent the article—editorial—which prompted me to this essay. It gives the case pertinently, perspicuously, and—well, I do not say it for sake of the alliteration—powerfully. The Christ idea, as divine and altogether ennobling, is the central one of religion. In perfecting holiness we just put aside—we abandon—each habit, as it is discovered to be in anywise a hinderance to devotion and usefulness; and we come into all the measures of love, joy, peace, long-suffering, gentleness, faith, meekness, temperance, and such like. This, only, is living! This, only, is knowing!

The Franchise Ordinance.

Now that the Mississippi Convention, by a large vote, has refused to modify or change the franchise ordinance, first adopted by that body, we give our readers the full text of that now celebrated ordinance, "without note or comment."

Sec. 1. All elections by the people shall be by ballot.

Sec. 2. Every male inhabitant of this State, except idiots, insane persons and Indians not taxed, who is a citizen of the United States, twenty-one years old and upwards, who has resided in the State two years, and one year in the election district or in the incorporated city or town in which he offers to vote, and who is duly registered as provided in Section 3 of this article, and who has never been convicted of bribery, burglary, theft, arson, obtaining money or goods under false pretenses, perjury, forgery, embezzlement or bigamy, and who has paid on or before the first day of February of the year in which he shall offer to vote, all taxes which may have been legally required of him, and which he has had an opportunity of paying, according to law, for the two preceding years, and who shall produce to the officers holding the election satisfactory evidence that he has paid said taxes, is declared to be a qualified elector; provided, any minister of the gospel in charge of an organized church shall be entitled to vote after six months' residence in the election district if otherwise qualified.

Sec. 3. The Legislature shall provide by law for the registration of all persons entitled to vote at any election, and all persons offering to register shall take the following oath or affirmation: "I, ——, do solemnly swear (or affirm) that I am twenty-one years old, and that I will have resided in this State two years and in —— election district of —— county one year next preceding the ensuing election" (or if a minister of the gospel in charge of an organized church, two years' residence in the State and six months in said election district), "and am now in good faith a resident in the same, and that I am not disqualified from voting by reason of having been convicted of any crime named in the Constitution of this State as a qualification to be an elector; that I will truly answer all questions propounded to me concerning my antecedents, so far as they relate to my right to vote, and also as to my residence before my citizenship in this district; that I will faithfully support the Constitution of the United States and the State of Mississippi; and will bear true faith and allegiance to the same; so help me God." Any willful and corrupt false statement in said affidavit, or in answer to any material questions propounded as herein authorized, shall be perjury.

Sec. 4. A uniform poll tax of two dollars is hereby imposed on every male inhabitant of this State between the ages of twenty-one and sixty years, except persons who are deaf and dumb or blind, or who are maimed by loss of hand or foot, to be used in aid of the common schools and for no other purposes; said tax to be a lien only upon taxable property; provided, however, that the Board of Supervisors of any county may, for the purpose of aiding the common schools in that county, increase the poll tax in said county, but in no case shall the entire poll tax exceed in any one year three dollars on each head. The payment of the whole poll tax imposed is declared to be a qualification to vote; provided, further, that no criminal proceedings shall be allowed to enforce the collection of the poll tax.

Sec. 5. On and after the first day of January, A. D. 1892, the following qualifications are added to the foregoing: Every qualified elector shall be able to read any section of the Constitution of this State; or he shall be able to understand the same when read to him, or give a reasonable interpretation thereof. A new registration shall be made before the next ensuing election after these qualifications are established.

Sec. 6. Electors in municipal elections shall possess all the qualifications herein prescribed and such additional qualifications as may be prescribed by law.

Sec. 7. Prior to the first day of January, A. D. 1892, the elections by the people in this State shall be regulated by an ordinance of this convention.

Millsaps College Notes.

The following circular letter will be sent out, as soon as possible, to all subscribers to the Millsaps College Endowment Fund, whose notes mature within the next sixty days. It is commended to the attention of the Mississippi readers of the ADVOCATE, and to any others who may be interested. It is very desirable that our friends will not wait for the personal notification of the maturity of their notes; but, acting upon this notice, will remit to the treasurer at their earliest convenience.

JACKSON, MISS., —— —, 1890.

Dear Brother: Your note to the Millsaps College Endowment Fund for $—— is due December 1, 1890. It is urgently requested that these notes be paid promptly, in view of the meeting of the Board of Trustees, December 4, and the sessions of the Conference shortly thereafter. If possible, send forward the amount before December 1, that it may be embraced in our report. Remit to R. W. Millsaps, treasurer, Jackson, Miss., and your cancelled note will be returned.

Prompt attention on the part of subscribers will enable us to push forward the college to an early completion, and thus meet the most pressing obligation now upon our church in the State of Mississippi.

Trusting that this important matter will receive your prompt attention, I am, Yours truly,

A. F. WATKINS.

A. F. WATKINS, Agent.

Attention,

Rates to the Louisiana Annual Conference at Monroe, December 3, are as follows:

Southern Pacific road—Full fare to Cheneyville going, and one-third from Cheneyville returning.

Queen and Crescent road—Full fare coming, and one-third fare returning.

Steamboats—"The Ouachita Consolidated Line" will give round-trip from New Orleans at $12, and other points in proportion.

Please remember that a certificate that you have paid full fare coming should be obtained from the agent of whom you purchase tickets, and of the agent of each line.

Parties from New Orleans and Baton Rouge, coming on the L., N. O. and T. railroad, can purchase tickets to Monroe, and the certificate of agent will be honored by the agent at Monroe and one-third fare tickets returning sold. Those living at other points, however, will purchase tickets to Vicksburg, and there of Queen and Crescent to Monroe. Those living on the Southern Pacific will purchase tickets to Cheneyville on terms already indicated for that road, and at Cheneyville buy round-trip tickets to Shreveport, and there get ticket of the Queen and Crescent to Monroe.

Remember that you must get a certificate that you have paid full fare from every agent of whom you purchase a ticket, except on the Texas Pacific. Over this road you purchase a round-trip ticket.

Round-trip tickets over the Texas Pacific will be on sale December 1 and 2, and will continue good until the tenth. On the other routes certificates may be issued as early as November 27, and reduced rate be given to the twelfth.

These, brethren, are the principal lines of travel to and from our Conference. There are, however, two or three short lines from which I have not yet heard, but will give their terms as soon as I can get them.

Please pay special attention to the above, that there may be no trouble in obtaining the reduced rates offered by the different lines of transportation.

A Thrilling Scene.

A writer in the Wesleyan Christian Advocate, who signs himself "L. W.," giving an account of the Tennessee Conference, gives this vivid sketch of the tilt between Bishop Hargrove and Dr. Kelley:

When the Kelley case was announced, the stillness on the Conference floor was oppressive. You could not have heard a pin fall, even on your pew though—unless it had been a linchpin. Still there was dense quiet.

"Nothing against him!" said the presiding elder, when Dr. Kelley made a report.

Then George W. Winn, the Julius Cæsar of the Conference, and, perhaps, its most useful man, rose and preferred complaint against Dr. Kelley.

The fight that followed was magnificent. The Bishop with the law, but without the Conference; Dr. Kelley with the Conference, but without the law. The attitude of Dr. Kelley, who was fighting to keep out of committee of trial, was, save when he, under temporary loss of self-control, refused to obey the gavel, a grand spectacle. His independence and brain were never seen to better advantage.

On the other hand, the chair was at the height of presiding ability. No living man could have ruled that storm of politics and personalism with greater skill and power. The Bishop never lost his poise. Despite discourtesy and insult, he held the gavel with steady hand, and put this case where it belonged—in committee. His ruling was just and impartial. If there was mistake anywhere, it was in allowing a vote on motion to nonconcur in the report of a committee saying a trial was necessary. The man who melted the Conference to tears when he talked of the children, was unmelting steel in the flame center of this politico-personal volcano.

The verdict of committee, "guilty;" the penalty, "suspension for six months." Having been a member of the committee, it would be out of propriety to go into the trial on its findings. It is to be hoped, however, that our preachers will find work enough hereafter without leaving the pulpit to reform the State. Heaven save us from politics in the pulpit, and the pulpit in politics. The success of the gospel requires neither of these expedients.

SOMETIMES IN QUIET REVERY.

BY THOMAS MACKELLAR

Sometimes in quiet reverie
When day is growing dim,
The heart is singing silently
A sweet, unwritten hymn

The strains are not to measure wrought,
By cunning of the mind,
But seem like hymning angels brought
From heaven, and left behind.

The misty hills of bygone grief,
Once dark to look upon,
Stand out like blessings in relief
Against the setting sun.

The rain may fall, the wind may blow;
The soul, unhindered, sings,
While, like the bird 'neath sheltering bough,
She sits with folded wings—

A brief and pleasant resting space,
A glance at Heavah land,
Before she girts herself apace
For work that waits the hand.

Then giving thanks to him who poured
Refreshments in her cup,
She hears the calling of her Lord,
And takes her labor up.

A Dream.

BY JOS. H. COTTRELL, D. D.

About the first of October, 1890, I had a dream that affected me most surprisingly, and effected in my mind a thorough realization of what the power was in the teaching of Jesus which caused the common people to hear him in such delight. I had, in my dream, preached to a company with some effect, and I had come to another occasion of ministration—a company surrounding me, as I stood on the ground, ready to begin discourse. Just as I began, a little negro boy walked out from my left, and took his stand a little to the left of the front of me, looking with earnest, ingenuous inquiry into my face, as if he were reading therein the message I was, verbally, to deliver. His expression of countenance so simplified my being, and rendered deliverance of the gospel message so perfectly as if it exuded from me like as fragrance comes from a rose, that I surprised myself; and I felt that what is termed preaching, as distinct and different from simplest recital, is obstructive of the power of the salvation message. I took a seat, and the teaching seemed just to articulate itself; and all was so matter-of-course like—so perfectly at one with the natural environment of trees and grass and sunlight and other phenomena—that, instead of any weariness or exhaustion, there was the effect of replenishment and rest; and as if spoken out of the depths of spirit-life, or as if by an inspiration known, the secret of the power of the message, as delivered by Jesus, was that in simplest conversation he imparted the knowledge which cleansed and strengthened and gladdened the common people. Whether I dreamed it, or whether it was my first waking thought, I can not say; but this emphasized itself as the net product of the dream: In preaching, let there be such simplification and naturalness as will adapt the message to the narrowest capacity in the audience, and it will be all the more powerful and refreshing to such as are best instructed and richly cultured. As one "must become as a little child" to enter the kingdom, even so must there be childlikeness in deliverance of the word of wisdom. Of course, this childlikeness is by no imitation of children, but spontaneously; and unconsciously to him whose genuineness of interest on behalf of those he seeks to profit, he is as a message-bearing son from a father to the others of the children. An affectation of this, in tone of voice, form of expression, or in bodily bearing, is better denominated childishness than childlikeness; and from that there is recoil, everyone having intuitive perception of the counterfeit. Indeed, the true philosophy of living is to just live along through the unfolding mystery which heightens the surprise, but makes no explanation of our being, or of that which is its counterpart, objectively; retaining all the genial freshness of childhood by keeping off from any strut and out of all candidacy, but for such increment of knowledge, continuously cumulative, as ripens us into wisdom.

Taking Collections.

MR. EDITOR: I see, in the Nashville Advocate, of recent date, an article, in which the writer criticises the action of our Annual Conferences in grading our preachers by the amount of money they collect, and by other material signs of success. I think that his ground is well taken, because there is a growing tendency at our Conferences to rate a preacher entirely upon such a basis, without due reference to the spiritual part of his work, and the peculiar local conditions which surround him. The number of collections to be taken by the preachers is so great (and is constantly increasing) that our people are getting to look at us in the light of tax-gatherers, and thus a wall of prejudice is raised up between the man of God and his flock which he finds it hard to overcome. It strikes me that this matter of "serving tables" ought to be left in the hands of the Board of Stewards, who ought to do the collecting for all the different objects for which collections are made on that work—for presiding elder, preacher in charge, and Conference collections; the whole amount to be divided pro rata between them all. In this way the collecting of money would be taken out of the hands of the preachers and placed in the hands of the stewards—where, it seems to me, it properly belongs—and the preachers would be free to preach the "unsearchable riches of Christ" without being (unjustly, it may be) reproached with the charge "of always asking for money." Another benefit arising from this system would be that the stewards would inform themselves on the subject of these collections, and thus become identified with the church in advancing these objects; but some man may object that the stewards would not do the work as faithfully and persistently as the preachers. I admit that that might be the case; but, perhaps, even that might be a blessing. To collect money from an unwilling congregation by constant appeals from the pulpit, and pressing the point until, from sheer force of overpowering facts and logic, a man is compelled to give, is to me a way of doing this work that will react on us and cause our congregations to be hard of hearing, and hard-hearted as well. The Bible says, "God loveth a cheerful giver." If he don't love any other kind, there is a great many that "no man can number" whom the Lord don't love. I admit that our collections may fall off in quantity, but it will be made up in quality, inasmuch as God will add his blessing to the amount given. Do you think that God blesses a mean, stingy man's gift? I don't. I believe it is like dropping a rotten grain of corn into a hill; it never sees the daylight. If the prayer of the wicked is an abomination to the Lord, why shouldn't his money be also? In this way the preachers would indicate their tacit interest in the Conference collections, inasmuch as they would share pro rata with the other collections. They (the preachers) could exhort the stewards, and co-operate with them in their plans as to the manner of taking these collections; but it would all be a voluntary work on the part of the church. The stewards could do a good part of this work privately, as they are generally acquainted with the financial status of their members, and thus avoid public collections. I don't see a single instance where a public collection was taken by Paul or Peter, or any of the disciples. On some of our works the people are poor, under mortgage; some have large families to support on poor land by their own labor, children to be sent to school, churches and school-houses to be built at home; so as to hold our own. Yet, notwithstanding the preachers from such circuits are expected to do all this home work, and report all collections in full, if he fails in this, the preacher is dubbed a "poor stick," and sent to another work, just like the one he had, to see what success he may have on that. I believe in sending our best preachers to the mission stations and to our hardest works, and us little fellows to the big stations, to see if we will not then be able to bring up our collections. If the Conference won't do this, I hope they will not leave the other undone, as I am very much afraid I will not bring up my collections in full at the next Conference. Very truly,

ONE AMONG MANY (PREACHERS).

The Press and the Anti-Lottery Bill.

The cry of rage among the papers which have drawn quarterly on the Lottery for heavy advertising bills, supplying themselves for several years past (by this means) with what was otherwise lacking to enable the editors to "get a living out of the business," is amusing. Then there are a few which started out just after the adjournment of the Legislature in hope of "making a pile" out of the Lottery, by advertising its frauds and boosting its hypocrisy, which are not to be overlooked.

The first class remind us of a young dog—a puppy—taken from its dam "when its eyes open." Few people are ignorant of its howlings, not so much from a sense of mother-love or want of liberty, as from the absence of its daily and natural food.

The other class is like a boy who finds a bird in his first trap, and on his grasping it by the tail, and feeling the tingle of success run through his soul, realizes his failure—he has the tail, but the bird is gone.

"The liberty of the press" is not what is hurting these people; nor "the censorship of the press." It is the absence of the money for the advertisement. These papers raised no such howl about the "liberty of the press" when the Anti-Obscene Literature bill passed Congress, although a number of papers had to suspend on account of it. When glass and live animals, liquids, etc., were ruled out of the mails, why did they not then, or since then, raise a cry of warning against the infringement of the "liberty of the citizen"? This idea of personal liberty is a very dear one and sacred in the heart of every true patriot. But when the health or morals of the masses is to be impaired by the continuance and exercise of one's liberty, that moment personal liberty must yield to the general good. If any two functions of government have been fully and clearly passed upon by the courts, and thoroughly incorporated in American polity, it is:

1. That the government must protect the health of its citizens.

2. That the government must protect the morals of its people.

To fight against these two functions of government is to dig under the main pillars of the polity of our great Union. The course pursued by the Lottery papers all over the country is both unsound in principle and unpatriotic in practice.

J. A. PARKER.

BATON ROUGE, LOUISIANA.

Mars and Jupiter.

Mars, the fourth planet in order of distance from the sun, is conspicuous in color and brightness, being decidedly red. Its average distance from the earth is 48,600,000 miles. A planet is said to be at opposition when the earth is on a line between it and the sun. When Mars is at opposition about the same time that it is nearest the sun, its distance from us is reduced to 35,000,000 miles. These favorable oppositions occur in the latter part of August at intervals of fifteen or seventeen years. The last one was in 1877, and the next will be in 1892. The so-called fixed stars are themselves vast distances apart, though they seem so close together; and they are classed, chiefly for convenience, into groups called constellations. The planets are spoken of as being in certain constellations because they appear to be so; and it must be borne in mind by those inexperienced in astronomy that the planets are not really among the stars, but move through space at even greater distances from the fixed stars than they are from each other. The nearest star to the earth, so far as has yet been ascertained, has a distance of about 200,000 times our distance from the sun. Mars now appears in the constellation Sagittarius, and is moving eastward among the stars with an average orbital velocity of fifteen miles a second, or three-fourths that of the earth. In February it was in the constellation Libra (where Venus has been for several weeks past), and until April 22 moved eastward, getting far into the next constellation, Scorpio. About May 27 this same planet appeared above the eastern horizon just after sunset, but near the western border of Scorpio; and during June it seemed to move westward, again appearing in the constellation Libra. During the month of July it again moved eastward, and by the close of August was making another journey through Scorpio. By the end of the year it will have passed on eastward, successively, through Sagittarius, Capricornus and Aquarius. The retrogression of Mars during May and June was not due to any real backward motion of the planet, but to an apparent motion caused by the rapid motion of the earth and its position relative to Mars. The surface markings of this planet have attracted much attention, and it is hoped that at its next favorable opposition in 1892 some additional information will be gathered by the great telescopes.

The planet Jupiter ranks next to Venus in brilliancy, although its mean distance from the sun is 483,000,000 miles, and its minimum distance from the earth 369,000,000. The size of a planet has no dependence on its distance from the sun. The volume of Mars is one-seventh that of the earth, while Jupiter's diameter is about eleven times the earth's, making its volume 1,300 times that of our planet. Jupiter is larger than all the other planets of the system taken together. With a telescope of eight inches aperture and a magnifying power of 300, the surface of this planet appears covered with a great number of interesting features, which rapidly shift across the disc on account of the planet's swift rotation, for it turns on its axis once in a little less than ten hours. While the earth has only one moon attending it, and Mars only two (which are invisible except by the aid of powerful instruments), Jupiter has four, all of which may be seen with a small telescope.

Like all the other planets, Jupiter moves constantly eastward in its orbit, though with little more than one-half the velocity of Mars. It has been in the constellation Capricornus since February, and will remain in it during the remainder of the year. The planet began its retrograde motion on May 30, and completed it on September 28, so that it now appears to be moving eastward in its natural course among the stars. But since Mars moves so much faster than Jupiter, it is evident that these two planets will soon be passing through the same constellation, which will occur early in November; and during that month Mars will pass Jupiter and enter Aquarius, the constellation next east of Capricornus. However close to each other the two may seem, their orbits have an average distance apart of 341,000,000 miles. What a wonderful and perfect system of worlds is this through which we are being hurled! Surely such admirable arrangement must be, as was stated by Newton, "the work of an intelligent and most powerful Being." "The heavens declare the glory of God; and the firmament sheweth his handiwork. Day unto day uttereth speech, and night unto night showeth knowledge."

CENTENARY COLLEGE.

The Mother of the Salvation Army.

Mrs. Booth, the greatest Methodist woman of this generation, has passed away. We call her a Methodist, for a Methodist she was born, a Methodist she was reared, and a Methodist she would have been to this hour but for the folly and intolerance of those who, at a critical moment, drove her and her future husband out of the fold, and so deprived Methodism of one of the great original spiritual forces of the nineteenth century. What an irony there is in history! What subtle sarcasm lies in the fact that Wesleyan Methodism drove out William Booth for preaching the gospel on a South London common, and the Methodist New Connexion sacrificed his services because their wise men refused to see that he was manifestly called of God to be an evangelist! As we stand by the death-bed of Mrs. Booth, and realize what a world-center of gracious influence that family has become, it is difficult to avoid bitterness when we remember that all that might have been Methodist.

Nothing about Mrs. Booth was more lovely and admirable than the pre-eminent importance which she always attached to the training of children. Faithfully she has dealt with many a fashionable and many a titled mother—for her ministry was far more influential in the high places of the land than most people are aware—but always, whether rich or poor, the burden of her message has been the same, "Get your children saved!" And it is a very remarkable fact that every child of hers was saved, and soundly saved, at an early age. Grace is not hereditary, but all the Booths have been effectively called to the Christian ministry. Other men have founded religious organizations; the General and his wife alone, in the history of Christianity, have roared a family capable of carrying on the work when they pass away. The family is, perhaps, more unique than the Army itself. Each child was dedicated to God from the first, and the whole of its training was directed to the end of making it a Salvation soldier. But Mrs. Booth's last word on the whole matter strikes the true note. "Try," she said to a friend as she was very near her end—"try and raise up mothers. Mothers—mothers are the want of the world!" What the Salvation Army will do without its mother remains to be seen. She was at once its inspiring soul and its restraining genius. Caution and practicability were distinguishing notes of her character.

Mrs. Booth had a kindly feeling toward Methodism to the last. The General has up to this day. He can never forget that he was once a Wesleyan Methodist, and this filial feeling sometimes finds unexpected vent, to the no small astonishment of some who forget that when Methodism is bred in the bone, it never leaves a man as long as he lives. The younger generation, naturally enough, do not share that sentiment. Methodism is to them like any other of the churches. But it will always be more to the General, and it was always more to Mrs. Booth. Methodists will unite even more heartily than the rest of the Christians with the Salvation Army in paying homage to the departed saint. There is to be, we hear, a great memorial service in Olympia on Monday. Then on Tuesday there will be the great funeral procession through London to Abney Park Cemetery, where, in the midst of the graves of the officers who have been buried there, the Army mother will be laid to rest. There will be no need to wait for the centenary to make her tomb a fitting pilgrim-shrine for the faithful who will come from the East and the West, and from the North and the South, to call her blessed. Blessed, indeed, she has been—blessed in her life and blessed in her death.

Amid all the sorrow and loss we can not but rejoice that her mortal anguish is at an end forever. She was the Whitefield of the new Methodist movement, and supplemented her husband's organizing genius with sacred oratory of the most fervid and persuasive type. Mr. Stead, in his touching tribute to her memory, informs the public, for the first time, that the extraordinary internal revolution by which the Salvation Army is now, for the first time, adopting the programme of social Christianity, is mainly due to Mrs. Booth. She exerted over her husband a socialistic influence similar to that by which John Stuart Mill's wife weaned him from excessive individualism. Mrs. Booth, above all, did more than anyone else to recover and vindicate the scriptural right of woman to be a prophetess, a preacher of righteousness. John Wesley re-established the right of the layman to preach. Catherine Booth rendered the same inestimable service to woman. It is delightful to notice how unanimously all sorts and conditions of men are now agreeing to lay tributes of affectionate gratitude upon the grave of this holy and blessed woman. It is a pity that such expressions of sympathy and approval are so often withheld until the object of them needs them no more. How that gentle and sensitive heart would have valued a little more kindness amid the distressing conflicts of the fading past! But it is ever thus. We curse and atone our benefactors, and then we utter beautiful sentiments over their dust. It is not so in heaven, where Catherine Booth is now rejoicing.—Methodist Times, London.

The Text and the Sermon.

The universal custom in our Protestant Churches is to announce a text at the commencement of a sermon. The text is usually a single verse out of the Bible, sometimes only a part of a verse. But we hear a good many sermons that seem to have very little connection with the text, and it may be in order to start the inquiry, What is the relation of the one to the other?

The original idea of preaching was the exposition of the Word. Our Savior, in his first sermon in the synagogue at Capernaum, read a prophecy from Isaiah, and gave an explanation and application of it. We don't believe that when the people went home that day, and somebody who was not present asked somebody who was, "What was the text?" he answered: "Somewhere in Isaiah, I think. I don't just remember where, or the words, but it was a splendid sermon." Our impression is that those Capernaum hearers never forgot the text. The "gracious words" of the preacher imprinted the inspired words of the prophet deeply and indelibly.

Now if a text is essential to a sermon, it ought to be more than a motto or a figure-head. The sermon ought to grow out of the text. It ought to be the expansion and application of the truth contained in it. The preacher selects an inspired statement. This is the authority he presents for what he is going to say. "Hear, ye people, the Word of the Lord," is the spirit of the announcement. And having thus claimed and secured attention by appealing to the highest authority in the universe, shall he abuse the confidence of his hearers by ventilating his own theories and fancies? Paul wrote to Timothy: "Preach the Word." Do you think that Timothy, in obeying this injunction, ever got up a sermon on Mephibosheth, text II. Samuel ix. 13: "And was lame on both his feet"? A famous preacher once used these words as a motto for a lecture on the utter failure of all men's efforts to walk uprightly. There was a fall, like that of this man's nurse when he was a child, and as a consequence all the sons of Adam are lame on both their feet. It was an ingenious way of introducing the doctrine of depravity. But who can believe that the story of the lame prince was recorded for any such purpose. The hearers of such a sermon might go away with a high appreciation of the ingenuity of the speaker, but not with deep and solemn impressions of the truth.

Yet in selecting a text, it is well to try to arrest the attention. There are texts that have been preached upon so often, the moment they are announced the hearer loses his interest. He says to himself: "Just the old story over again. I've heard it a hundred times, and I'll think of something else while he is talking." All the splendid texts in the Bible are not familiar to the average hearer. And it is easy for the student of the Word to find in it things new as well as old.

A fine illustration of this is Henry Melville's sermon on the Well of Bethlehem. (II. Samuel xxiii, 15 17.) There is here no clap-trap, no play upon words, but from a striking incident in David's life great practical lessons are drawn.

When the preacher stood up in St. Mary's Church at Cambridge to tell that large and intellectual audience how men should obey God, and instead of announcing as his text, "Thou shalt love the Lord with all thy heart," he read that story of the three warriors who loved David so, that when they heard him express a wish for water from the well of Bethlehem, they broke through the lines of the enemy and brought it at the peril of their lives, curiosity was awakened. "What is he going to make out of that story?" each one asked himself. And when, in the unfolding and the application, they saw that it was an inspired parable, the impression, no doubt, was deep and abiding. But the preacher makes a great mistake who selects a striking and unusual text, and then fails to bring out of it, fairly and clearly, some important truth.

The preaching of a text does not mean ringing the changes upon it, but unfolding it. It is, in a certain sense, the title-page of the sermon. And if the sermon falls below the expectation it awakens, there is a reaction of feeling on the part of the hearers. They go away not impressed by the truth, but criticising the preacher.

Some of us, when boys, were tempted by flaming handbills to pay for admission into some pretentious sideshow on general training day. How mean we felt when we found that the bills outside were far more artistic and interesting than the performance inside. So a man feels when a text is announced with a flourish, as if the preacher had struck a new bonanza in the Bible mine, and lo! the ore brought out is of the lowest grade.

The story of how Dean Swift preached a text is familiar. He was called upon to present the interests of a benevolent institution, and take up a collection. Having read the verse, "He that giveth to the poor, leudeth to the Lord," he said: "If you like the security, down with your dust." That was better than to overlay and obscure the text with commonplace platitudes for half an hour.

A talented, but eccentric friend, sometimes puts his text at the end of his sermon. He begins with a proposition, proves it, draws conclusions from it, builds a pyramid of statements and demonstration, until he arrives at a logical climax. The climax he finds a proof-text for, and that is the text of the sermon. He says: "Now, brethren, you see from what we have established in this discourse, that 'The soul that sinneth, it shall die,' as the Lord declares in Ezekiel xviii, 26." This brother preaches to his text, and not from it. But the impression made upon his hearers is that the Bible is not authority with him unless he can establish the truth of its statements by a process of reasoning. In this he enacts the part of an advocate and not the part of an ambassador. It is the preacher's business to tell men what our Lord says and not to show them that he had a right to say it. He should preach the Word, and not put it as a label upon his own speculations.

BLUFF CREEK CAMP MEETING.

The Bluff Creek Camp Meeting, announced in the ADVOCATE some weeks ago, was enterprised and taken into hand at too late a date and too busy a time to build a camp ground for this year; but the evangelical pastor, Dr. J. R. Whittington, determined to make a beginning; so he called brethren together, and they put up a commodious bush arbor, and seated it with temporary seats, and began at the time announced—Saturday night, October 18—and continued until Sunday, October 26—dropping out two rainy days—when we closed with the most encouraging results: twenty-four persons were received into the church, and about as many, or more, professed faith in the Savior. The last service was one not to be forgotten. Thirteen persons presented themselves for reception, some of whom were to be baptized, when quite a number of parents brought their children to be baptized, and Father Jones, pastor at Clinton, came forward and baptized the children, and then the adults; then the vows of membership were taken by the applicants, and we adjourned to meet again next year (D. V.) under more favorable surroundings. I feel safe in saying that a permanent camp ground at that place is only a question of time.

This camp ground—prospective—is most beautifully located in the southeast corner of East Feliciana parish, and ten miles southeast of Clinton, La., and within from six to ten miles of ten Methodist Churches, served by five different pastors. The proposition is for these five different pastoral charges to unite and build a grand union camp ground, which, I think, will be done another year. If so, you are hereby invited to attend, and preach in your native parish, and represent the ADVOCATE to the people of four parishes at one time and place. The following ministers were present, and took part in the services, viz: Bro. Whittington, the pastor; Bro. Jones, pastor at Clinton, La.; Bros. Carroll, Hodges, and Van Valkenburgh, Jr., local, and myself. To God be all the praise!

Books and Periodicals.

All books received will be acknowledged in this column. A fuller notice will depend upon the interests of our readers.

PERIODICALS.

—ST. NICHOLAS, for November, contains the initial chapters of stories by J. T. Trowbridge and Noah Brooks. These are favorite writers with our young people, and we know these stories will greatly delight them. There are many other good papers in this number, and the pictures are exquisite. Century Company, New York. Price, $3.

—Herbert Spencer leads off in POPULAR SCIENCE with an interesting article on the Origin of Music. Prof. I. C. Mendenhall writes on The Relation of Men of Science to the General Public; Arthur Kitson contributes a paper on The Logic of Free Trade and Protection; Prof. Lockyer writes The History of a Star, and Alfred R. Wallace discusses Human Selection. These are followed by other papers of interest. D. Appleton and Company, New York. Price, $5.

—The CENTURY, for this month, opens with an interesting paper on a little-known country entitled An American in Thibet, by W. W. Rockhill. A Legend of Old New York, by Anna E. King; Early Victories of the American Navy, by Edgar S. Maclay; The Printing of the Century, by Theodore L. DeVinne, and The First Emigrant Train to California, by Gen. John Bidwell, are all notable articles. Century Company, New York. Price, $4.

—The MISSIONARY REVIEW OF THE WORLD, for November, opens with a strong article by Secretary Dr. Ellinwood on the Duty of Christendom to the Jews. Dr. A. T. Pierson follows with a long and powerful paper on The Wonderful Story of Madagascar, in his series entitled The Miracles of Missions. The shorter papers are full of interest, and the translations from foreign missionary magazines highly instructive. The Intelligence and Correspondence Departments are full of good reading. The Editorial Notes are unusually full. Annual reports of more than a dozen missionary societies, and a monthly bulletin of latest news from the entire mission field, rounds out a number that can not fail to interest, inform and inspire the friends of missions everywhere. Published by Funk & Wagnalls, 18 and 20 Astor Place, New York. $2 per year; in clubs of ten, $1 50. Specimen numbers, 20 cents.

PAMPHLETS.

A New Theory of Baptism. By Rev. L. R. Downing. In this treatise the author argues that baptism is an antiquated canon of the Jewish Church, and its name is transferred to the cleansing agency of the Holy Spirit.

—Erudia—The Foreign Missionary to Our World. By Rev. William Allen Barbee and Smith, Nashville, Tenn. Price, $1. Some very good doctrine is given in the form of an allegory, which is, at the same time, very pleasant reading.

The mind, by a sort of natural magic, raises the ghost of a departed pleasure, and makes it appear without any dependence upon space or time. This almost omnipresence of an advantage, is a circumstance of value; it gives opportunity for use and repetition, and makes it so much the more own's own.

JESUS CONDEMNED.

Luke xxiii, 13-25.

GOLDEN TEXT.—For the transgression of my people was he stricken.—Isa. liii, 8.

TIME.—Midnight.

PLACE.—Court of Pilate, Jerusalem.

13. Called together the chief priests—We may infer from the greater fullness with which St. John relates what passed between our Lord and Pilate that hero, too, his acquaintance with the high priest gave him access to knowledge which others did not possess. We learn from him (I) that in his first conversation with the accusers Pilate endeavored to throw the onus of judging upon them, and was met by the ostentatious disavowal of any power to execute judgment (John xviii, 28-32); (2) that the single question which St. Matthew records was followed by a conversation in which our Lord declared that, though he was a king, it was not after the manner of the kingdoms of the world. (John xviii, 33-38.) The impression thus made on the mind of the governor explains the desire which he felt to effect, in some way or other, the release of the accused.

14. The I le emphatic: You bring a charge, I, after a public examination, find it to be baseless.

16. I will, therefore, chastise him—This was the point at which Pilate began to yield to the fatal vacillation which soon passed into guilt and made it afterward impossible for him to escape. He had just declared the prisoner absolutely innocent. To subject him, therefore, to the horrible punishment of scourging merely to gratify the pride of the Jews, and to humble him in their eyes, was an act of disgraceful illegality which he must have felt to be most unworthy of the high Roman sense of "justice." He was the unconscious fulfiller of prophecy. (Isa. liii, 5.) The restless eagerness of his various attempts to secure the acquittal of Jesus is brought out most forcibly by St. John.

17. The gospels are our sole authority for this concession, which is entirely in accordance with Roman policy.

18. Barabbas—The choice of Barabbas by the mob was not spontaneous; it was instigated by these priestly murderers. The guilt of the crucifixion rests mainly with the priests, because it was mainly due to their personal influence. At this stage of the trial Barabbas may have been led out, and the choice offered them as between "Jesus Bar-Abbas" and "Jesus which is called Christ" as they stood on the pavement side by side. Barabbas, St. John (xviii, 40) and St. Luke (xxiii, 19) and St. Mark (xv, 7) say that he had taken a prominent part with some insurgents in the city, and that he, with them, had committed murder in the insurrection. The last-recorded tumult of this kind was mentioned as connected with Pilate's appropriation of the Corban. It is so far probable that this was the tumult in which Barabbas had taken part; and the supposition that he did so has at least the merit of explaining how it was that he came to be the favorite hero of the priests and the people.

19. And for murder—Nothing is known of Bar-Abbas, but it has been conjectured from his name that he or his father belonged to the order of the Sanhedrists, who therefore desired his release. If he had been a follower of Judas of Galilee, or engaged in the riot against Pilate about the use of the Corban, he would enlist the sympathies of the people also. Who—The word implies "a man of such a kind," that, etc.

20. Spake again to them—Rather, called unto them again. He did not make them a second speech, but simply called out again his question as to their choice.

21. They cried—The word implies a continuous cry of increasing vehemence. The vox populi was in this instance vox diaboli. Crucify him, crucify him—This wild and terrible outcry was provoked by Pilate's unjust question to them how he should deal with Jesus. After this it was quite vain to say, "Why, what evil hath he done?" Yet even in yielding he can not refrain from irritating them with the expression, "your king." It was something more than a mere taunt. It was due to a flash of genuine conviction that the prisoner before him was greater and nobler than the greatest and noblest Jew he had ever seen.

22. The third time—We can only obtain from all the four evangelists, and especially from St. John, a full conception of the earnestness with which Pilate strove to escape from the necessity of what he felt to be a needless crime. He was evidently deeply impressed, and the impossibility of doing right must have come upon him as a terrible Nemesis for his past sins. It is very noteworthy that he took step after step to secure the acquittal of Jesus. 1. He emphatically and publicly announced his perfect innocence. 2. He sent him to Herod. 3. He made an offer to release him as a boon. 4. He tried to make scourging take the place of crucifixion. 5. He appealed to compassion. St. John shows still more clearly how in successive stages of the trial he sets aside (1) the vague general charge of being "an evil doer" (xviii, 30); (2) of being in any seditious sense "a king" (xviii, 39); (3) of any guilt in his religious claims (xix, 12). He only yields at last through fear (xix, 12), which makes him release a man guilty of the very crime for which he delivers Jesus to a slave's death. The fact that Pilate's patron Sejanus had probably by this time fallen, and that Tiberius was executing all connected with him, may have changed Pilate's fears. He knew that an accusation of high treason (under Lex Majestatis) was generally fatal.

23. The voices of them and of the chief priests prevailed—St. Luke here omits the flagellation (Matt. xxvii, 26) and the derision and mock homage of the soldiery; the scarlet sagum and crown of thorns; the fresh terror of Pilate on hearing that he called himself "the Son of God," and the deepening of that terror by the final questioning in the Pretorium; the "Behold your King!" the introduction of the name of Cæsar into the shouts of the multitude; Pilate's washing his hands; the last awful shout, "His blood be on us and our children;" and the clothing of Jesus again in his own garments. See Matt. xxvii; Mark xv; John xviii, 19. To suppose that there was a second scourging after the sentence is a mistake.

24. Gave sentence—The two technical formulæ for the sentence of death would be—to the prisoner, Ibis ad crucem, "Thou shalt go to the cross;" to the attendant soldier, I miles, expedi crucem, Go, soldier, get ready the cross.

The Silent Pastor.

The religious paper is a silent pastor. The editor does not ring the door-bell and wait for some one to ask him in, take his hat and to invite him into the parlor and to a seat. He does not meet each member of the household, shake hands and ask about the health of each and report how the folks are at home. He enters like an invisible spirit, or is received as a bundle from the postman, to be opened at pleasure, and examined by each one at any time, morning, noon or night. His communications and instructions are given to the whole family together, or to one or more at a time, in the parlor, the dining-room, the kitchen, or the bed-room. When the family have received all he has to communicate, and are so edified and pleased as to desire him to visit some distant friend, he will go to the post-office and into the mail, and visit another family and repeat everything to all that can hear or read.

Our silent pastor is not sensitive in regard to the reception and treatment he meets. He never hears any criticism, however loud and severe. He knows not whether he is kindly or rudely dealt with. He stays where any one puts him, and is ready to do his work when desired. If he is in fellowship with any one, and the child cries, or the bread is likely to burn, or the horse is to be fed, or the floor to be swept, or it is necessary to go to market, or church, or the cars, he waits patiently and is ready again to communicate when asked for.

What he has to communicate is very interesting and profitable. It has respect to Christian doctrine and duty, the criticism and meaning of the Scriptures, church history and Christian work, missions and Sunday-schools, temperance and the Sabbath, literature, education, art, science and government, vice and sin, and whatsoever is useful in this life and that which is to come. Every wise head of a family should welcome his visits. Whose shuts him out does his own soul an injury and denies his family knowledge, culture and the bread of life.

The silent pastor never goes alone. He taketh seven or more other spirits with him, generally wiser than himself. He can have his choice of silent co-pastors—Baxter and Doddridge, Chalmers and Whitefield, Alexander and Plumer, Cuyler and Hall, "C. E. B." and "Pansy," and others to fellowship to mention, as many as he chooses and such as suit him each week, with everything new at every visit. Verily, such a silent pastor and his silent co-laborers ought everywhere to be cordially welcomed, and other pastors should encourage him by every means in their power.—Herald and Presbyter.

THEATER SEED.—Moral teachers aside, the testimony of police and of criminal court judges and officers proves the theater to be the lock of strength of the demon of impurity. Generations of experience prove that the financial success of theatres is in exact proportion to their allowance on the stage of what should not be seen or heard by those who would be pure in heart.

As plain as the fiery handwriting once on the palace wall of a Babylonian monarch are the recorded warnings of a considerable number of actors and actresses that the theater is no place for those who would remain pure in thought and life.

Great actors and managers have also put themselves on record as unwilling that their own wives and children should attend theaters. When asked for counsel they have with equal emphasis advised young men and maidens not to fit themselves for the stage. For many and startling facts under this head, see a little book on theatres by Joseph Leeds, of Philadelphia. It should be in the library of every Sabbath-school and pastor and Christian worker. It is for sale at the Methodist Book Rooms. Still, notwithstanding these clouds of witnesses, the theater thrives.

It is no doubt correctly claimed that theatres could not be sustained without the patronage of those who profess to believe the Bible—persons who are members either of their churches or of their congregations and Sabbath-schools.—G. M. Powell, in Sunday School Journal.

THE MODEL MAN.—A live Christian takes abundance of exercise. "If the stars did not move," said Horace Bushnell, "they might rot in the sky." Assuredly, too many members in our churches are dry-rotted with utter inactivity—like some of the old frigates chained up to the dock in yonder navy-yard. One essential to a good working Christian is staying power. We have plenty who are ready to bustle about while the novelty lasts, or willing to do what they are bribed to; but "well doing" comes to nothing unless there be "patient continuance" in it through all weathers. Too much of the so-called Christian work in our land ends in a spasmodic spurt of enthusiasm. An able-bodied, able-headed, long-winded worker, who labors on, year in and year out, from sheer love of it, is a priceless treasure in any church. His inner life is hid with Christ; his outward life is an irresistible argument for Christianity, and a reservoir of blessings to the community. He is prayerful; he is patient; he is persevering; he is philanthropic; he is powerful with the indwelling of the Holy Spirit. These five P's constitute the model of the live Christian.

Live Prayers.

After a prayer meeting, at which a female had been among those who spoke aloud in prayer, a person slightingly observed, "As for that woman, she could pray all night."

"Yes," replied a devout friend, "and I do not doubt that she has often done so."

This was a first-rate reply. Of how few could it have been spoken? Yet those who are much in prayer alone are those who pray to the purpose in the assembly. You can tell the other sort, however ready their utterance. It is as per usual. It is parroty; too glib to be earnest, too professional to be deep. This kind of praying is a mist which does not wet you, a fire which does not warm you. You could sleep from "Our Father" to "Amen" under such a performance. Yet it is very good and proper. There is nothing the matter with it except that it is dead—dead as the woman's child, which neither of the two mothers cared to own in Solomon's court. O for more living children! we mean true, crying, struggling prayers. These can only come from those who in private wrestle and weep and prevail.

An occasional break-down is very refreshing. To observe a heart too full to express itself with the tongue is most arousing to the soul. O that some of our brethen would or could break down! They are too far gone in routine to be able to rise into the natural, much less into the spiritual. While such machines press like a nightmare on our prayer meetings, things can not much improve. O for deliverance!—C. H. Spurgeon.

Ripeness in Character.

One mark is beauty. Ripe fruit has its own perfect beauty. As the fruit ripens the sun tints it with surpassing loveliness and the colors deepen till the beauty of the fruit is equal to the beauty of the blossom, and in some respects superior. There is in ripe Christians the beauty of realized sanctification, which the Word of God knows by the name of "beauty of holiness."

Another mark of ripe fruit is tenderness. The young green fruit is hard and stone-like. The mature Christian is noted for tenderness of spirit.

Another mark of ripeness is sweetness. The unripe fruit is sour. As we grow in grace we are sure to grow in charity, sympathy and love. We shall, as we ripen in grace, have greater sweetness toward our fellow-Christians. Bitter-spirited Christians may know a great deal, but they are immature. Those who are quick to censure may be very acute in judgment, but they are as yet immature in heart. I know we who are young beginners in grace think ourselves qualified to reform the whole Christian church; we drag her before us, and condemn straightway. But when our virtues become more mature I trust we shall be more tolerant of infirmity, more hopeful for the people of God, and certainly less arrogant in our criticisms.

What is Scrofula

It is that impurity in the blood, which, accumulating in the glands of the neck, produces unsightly lumps or swellings; which causes painful running sores on the arms, legs, or feet; which develops ulcers in the eyes, ears, or nose, often causing blindness or deafness; which is the origin of pimples, cancerous growths, or many other manifestations usually ascribed to "humors." It is a more formidable enemy than consumption or cancer alone, for scrofula combines the worst possible features of both. Being the most ancient, it is the most general of all diseases or affections, for very few persons are entirely free from it.

How can it be cured? By taking Hood's Sarsaparilla, which, by the cures it has accomplished, often when other medicines have failed, has proven itself to be a potent and peculiar medicine for this disease. For all affections of the blood Hood's Sarsaparilla is unequalled, and some of the cures it has effected are really wonderful. If you suffer from scrofula in any of its various forms, be sure to give Hood's Sarsaparilla a trial.

DON'T GIVE UP

The use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla. One bottle may not cure "right off" a complaint of years; persist until a cure is effected. As a general rule, improvement follows shortly after beginning the use of this medicine. With many people, the effect is immediately noticeable; but some constitutions are less susceptible to medicinal influences than others, and the curative process may, therefore, in such cases, be less prompt. Perseverance in using this remedy is sure of its reward at last. Sooner or later, the most stubborn blood diseases yield to

Ayer's Sarsaparilla

"For several years, in the spring months, I used to be troubled with a drowsy, tired feeling, and a dull pain in the small of my back, so bad, at times, as to prevent my being able to walk, the least sudden motion causing me severe distress. Frequently, boils and rashes would break out on various parts of the body. By the advice of friends and my family physician, I began the use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla and continued it till the poison in my blood was thoroughly eradicated."—L. W. English, Montgomery City, Mo.

"My system was all run down; my skin rough and of yellowish hue. I tried various remedies, and while some of them gave me temporary relief, none of them did any permanent good. At last I began to take Ayer's Sarsaparilla, confining it exclusively for a considerable time, and am pleased to say that it completely Cured Me.

I presume my liver was very much out of order, and the blood impure in consequence. I feel that I cannot too highly recommend Ayer's Sarsaparilla to any one afflicted as I was."—Mrs. N. A. Smith, Glover, Vt.

"For years I suffered from scrofula and blood diseases. The doctors' prescriptions and several so-called blood-purifiers being of no avail, I was at last advised by a friend to try Ayer's Sarsaparilla. I did so, and now feel like a new man, being fully restored to health."—C. N. Frink, Decorah, Iowa.

Organ of the Louisiana, Mississippi and North Mississippi Conferences of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South.

Rev. C. W. CARTER, D. D., Editor.

THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 6, 1890.

Briefs.

Mr. Gladstone has made quite an elaborate speech at Dundee on the McKinley Tariff bill as it will affect England. He argues that while it may damage the English trade in one instance, it will encourage and help it in nineteen instances. The principal harm from the McKinley Tariff will be in the United States. He said, "The harm to English commerce will be fractional compared with that done to the people of the protected country."

The West London Mission has had a phenomenal success. It was started three years ago, "without a building, without a penny, and without a member." It now has 827 members and 251 on trial. The Methodist Times says: "In a part of London where three years ago we had no congregation at all we had, last Sunday night, at least, 5,000 persons in actual attendance, and probably an equal number who could not get in." One who is well acquainted with the work done, says: "The mission positively throbs with spiritual vitality." Oh, how we wish we could report such a work in progress in this great wicked city! "Is the Lord's hand shortened that it can not save?"

The Publishing Committee met in annual session, last week, to look over the Advocate affairs. They found matters in a better condition than they have been for a long time. The increase in the number of subscribers since last meeting has been very gratifying indeed. The standing of the Advocate in the business world is A 1. The committee made provision for additional editorial force just as soon as the finances will justify the appointment. If everybody will help in the collection of outstanding dues, and in the enlargement of the subscription lists, that time is not far in the future. The editor, publisher, business manager and committee are all more hopeful of the future than ever before.

The meeting of the committee was a most harmonious one. The annual address will be found in another column, and it speaks for itself.

The best endorsement of the editorial and business management of a paper is a steadily growing subscription list; an endorsement that means more than cheap talk or fluent resolutions. This paper has had such endorsement for the last three years, having added one thousand each year to the number of its subscribers. To secure this increase there has been no religious or business clap-trap resorted to. There has been no offer of premiums, such as chromos, sewing machines, new books or big dictionaries in order to induce persons to subscribe. The paper has presented itself on its merits alone, and it has steadily gone up from less than 4,500 subscribers in November, 1887, to 7,350 in November, 1890. If that is not endorsement of a good solid sort, then we don't know what endorsement is. Now, let the good work of endorsing go on, and the effect will be seen in a paper still more worthy of endorsement, for the more money we have the more merit we will show.

Notice.

The trustees of Millsaps College will meet in Jackson, Miss., Thursday, December 4, 1890, at half-past nine A. M.

Thos. J. Newell,
Secretary.

Annual Address.

The Publishing Committee of the New Orleans Christian Advocate send greetings and congratulation to the readers of these columns scattered abroad throughout Louisiana, Mississippi and other States. Our annual meeting, on October 29 of the current year, was marked by the excellent good feeling and delightful brotherly intercourse of the members. To do the best for the church through the instrumentality of our cherished Advocate was the sincere desire of all. We believe the Lord guided us to right conclusions. The field was carefully surveyed, and free, full conference had with the workers.

It was known abroad that the editor, Dr. C. W. Carter, would present his resignation. The committee recognized the grave responsibility and difficult task of filling his place. It was a happy fulfilment of their responsibility and a joyful relief to their task when they secured the continuance of Dr. Carter in the editorial chair. We have sincere pleasure, therefore, in announcing to you that the brother who has so well presided over the columns of this Advocate, for the four years now ending, will still greet you here and give to you the service of his strong, clear, fitting words to aid you in your Christian life and work. The committee, by unanimous vote, recognized the ability and fidelity of Dr. Carter in his editorial course, and pledged their co-operation in making the paper more useful and giving it wider circulation.

The publisher, Mr. J. G. Grant, submitted a very excellent report of the business affairs of the Advocate. The recent fire produced no stoppage in the issuance of the paper. All damage to house and material was covered by insurance and will be speedily repaired. This report states that three years ago the number of subscribers to this paper was 4,500, now it is 7,049—more than 3,000 gain—1,300 of this have come in this year. All current expenses are met. Full credit is given to the business manager, the Rev. D. L. Mitchel, who has been so laborious and efficient in his department, and whose valuable service is to be retained in the business office.

The committee carefully considered the question of employing an assistant editor. The editor, the publisher and the committee are all earnestly in favor of having such an assistant. The lack of means is the only thing in the way of engaging one. If the large balance due the Advocate on subscription were paid, or even nearly paid, this need would at once be supplied. With a man from Mississippi aiding Dr. Carter in the editorial work, and free to move out amongst the people, the pulse of the paper would be quickened, greater variety given to the forms of its work, and more personal intercourse between workers and readers. Other advantages would follow. If those who owe the Advocate for its weekly visits to them would pay up, not only could an assistant editor be employed, but the paper could be and would be enlarged so as to give more space for reading matter. The editor now uses all that is allowed by contract. Most readers forget that advertisement is required to meet the expense of a paper. Our friends will see at once that this is a co-operative enterprise, requiring the prompt action of subscribers to enable the workers to do their part. We are all engaged here in the endeavor to put a sound, religious and ecclesiastical literature into the homes and hands of our people. We can not overestimate the need or value of such a literature. Let us urge upon all concerned that this Advocate is less a necessity to those who produce it than to those who read it and to whom it should go. Its friends will be gratified at the increase of its circulation. Let our aim be 10,000 subscribers within the next year—paid-up subscribers. Why not? If proper steps are taken, and we will all work with energy, the end will be achieved.

W. T. J. Sullivan,
For Committee.

A Word with the Reader.

It has been known for some time that the editor intended to resign his position when the Publishing Committee held its annual meeting. The committee met last week, and the editor tendered his resignation. He did this because he conscientiously believed that some one else would do the work better than he was doing it. The committee looked at the matter from all possible standpoints and discussed the situation thoroughly, and finally requested the editor to withdraw his resignation and continue on in the work. Under such circumstances the editor did not feel that it would be the proper course for him to insist that his resignation be accepted, and he withdrew it. So he is continued in the editorship.

The editor thinks he has some appreciation of the good opinion the committee has of him, however undeserved that opinion may be, and he is very grateful for the resolution passed by a rising vote in the committee, that "we record our confidence in his ability and fidelity in his office and warmly appreciate the spiritual and literary tone of his work." But what suited him better than anything else was this: "We pledge him our best efforts to aid him in the great enterprise under his control." We are always thankful for help, and trust that all the readers of the Advocate will lend us their aid in sending out a paper worthy of our great church in Mississippi and Louisiana. We can not do this without the co-operation of our readers. We need them more than they need us. We need their sympathy. We need their special prayers. We need their help in extending the circulation of the paper. On this line everybody can do something. And when everybody does as well as can be done, then everybody will see a paper worthy of ourselves. The paper is yours, reader, to make or to mar.

The editor casts himself in confidence upon the constituency of the Advocate, and, with implicit faith in God, he has buckled on the harness for another term of service.

Confused.

There are some few things that we "can't get the hang of." We won't do like our brother of the "Great Central"—that is, speak "hypothetically," for our case is an actual fact, and it is the fact that confuses us. Here is the case: The Methodist preacher professes to be called of God to the work of the ministry. If he believes what he professes, then he must believe that God will give him the necessary furnishing to enable him to do that work. If he don't believe this, then he must believe that God is tyrannical, for he has called the preacher to do what he will not qualify him to do. It won't do to believe that God is a tyrant. If God has called him and placed within his reach the necessary furnishing, then he must believe that, if he is a diligent man, he can do whatever God wants him to do. Now, the object of the ministry is to do the work of a minister in such a manner that sinners may be saved. Then the man that is called of God can do this very thing. The call of God implies this much, or else God is unwise. But we can not conceive of an unwise God.

Now, here is where our confusion comes upon us. This man, who is called of God and furnished with qualifications necessary to enable him to preach the gospel to the salvation of sinners, takes it into his head that he must send off for an evangelist to do the work which God has called him to do. We confess that this action confuses us, and we find ourselves asking such questions as these: Has the preacher lost faith in his call? Has he lost his call? Why should a man who is called of God to save sinners call in another man to do his work? Is not the whole thing a confession of weakness? Does it not imply, "I can't do what God thinks I can do"? And does not that confession amount to an accusation that God is both unwise and unjust? Does it not exhibit more faith in the evangelist than in the Christ, who says to every called man, "I am with you always even unto the end"? What must God think of that servant who sends off for another man to come and do his work?

We confess that we are in a labyrinth! Will some one unroll the clew which we may take hold of and find our way out?

Work at Centenary College.

Mr. Editor: You ask what we are doing at Centenary. We are working like bees; but you are too far off to hear the hum of the hive. We are laying up in store, I trust, a good supply of precious things against the time to come. We are trying to teach the young men committed to our charge to know some things and to think of a great many things, and especially of "the one thing needful." All our nine professors and teachers have been busy in their departments, and are teaching, they say, with more satisfaction than ever before. We are trying to combine education with indoctrination. We strive to develop mind under the leavening and transforming influences of the gospel, so that all our students may not only learn classics and sciences, but also have the mind which was in Christ Jesus.

Our more than one hundred students are pretty evenly divided between the two literary societies—the Franklin and the Union. They take great interest in these societies; have their halls handsomely carpeted and beautifully lighted, and conduct their debates every Friday night with much better order than is sometimes had in the Congress of the United States, if what the newspapers say of Congress is true. These societies are invaluable adjuncts to the work of the college. Besides the college library, which contains several thousand valuable books, each of these societies has a library of its own.

The Young Men's Christian Association is well maintained, is largely attended by the students and is a great moral power among them. The Y. M. C. A. have, in addition to their comfortable room for worship, a well-fitted reading-room and a library of new and choice books gotten together in the last two years.

Our students are all required to attend church every Sunday morning by a law of the college—a law which, I am glad to say, is rarely ever violated. They also attend church at night voluntarily. Being good listeners, they, with the citizens of Jackson, who are almost all church-goers, make a congregation to whom it is a real pleasure to preach. (Even Christ, you know, could not work in some places.)

Our Sunday-school is a delightful one and is going on unto perfection. The students of the college voluntarily attend it largely. We have in it a class studying the Greek Testament, taught by Prof. Wiley, who is almost as familiar with the Greek in which Christ spoke as he is with his own native tongue. I look upon the Sunday-school as the flower of the church, the latest and highest formal development of Christianity. In its constituency, (the church including the children) in its purpose (to study solely the Word of God) and in its government (solely by the law of love) it is the most heavenly assembly to be found on the earth.

Most of our students are members of the church, and they all board in Christian families. Some of them lodge in the free rooms at the college, others board altogether in private houses; but they all eat at private tables at which ladies preside. Nothing is more apt to refine a man's manners than the habit of taking his meals at the table of a lady.

We have been looking to-day for a visit of the Press Association of Louisiana, and did not know but that we might have the pleasure of seeing your wise-looking face among them. Considerable preparation had been made to welcome and entertain them; but as rain began falling shortly after midnight, and has continued all day, I suppose the association did not leave Baton Rouge, and you may not have left your comfortable sanctum.

We have had no serious case of sickness so far. Altogether we have great cause to be grateful, and go forward with our work. Let the church pray for us and strengthen our hands. Our buildings are constantly undergoing improvements (slowly, for want of money). We hope and wait for the quarter of a million needed to make Centenary what she ought to be and what her friends desire to see her.

W. L. C. Hunnicutt.

The Lord Thinketh upon Me.

By J. H. A. Ahrens, D. D.

This is a charmingly divine forget-me-not. Intend to wear it in the button-hole of my wedding garment while I sojourn here below. Men may forget, forsake us, but our heavenly Father is more devoted to us than even a mother to her offspring. He assures: "I will not forget thee."

If we would think less of ourselves, think not more highly of ourselves than we ought to think, God would think more of us, would think better of us, would think well of us.

The heart shrinks from being forgotten. "Think of me!" we say at parting. "Remember me!" is the tearful refrain. It is so soothing to realize that here and there we occupy an honored place in the cogitations of some fellow-men. We deem it a great honor to the departed when a monument is being erected in commemoration of their worth.

God thinks of us even as fond parents think of their absent children. Letter succeeds letter. A visit is promised and made. In the Bible our heavenly Father gives us information, instruction, admonition, advice, warnings, encouragement. He even visits us; sups with us, and we with him.

God thinketh upon us, to provide for our wants. Did Samuel's mother think of her son, annually preparing suitable habiliments for him? Did Abraham think of his nephew when he hurried to his relief? Did Jesse think of his sons, enlisted under Saul's banners, when he sent David with edibles to the camp? Even so the Lord thinketh upon us. He thought of Israel in Egypt, and brought deliverance; thought of Daniel; and shut the lion's mouth; thought of Jacob, with a stone for a pillow, and cheered him with a vision; thought of Peter, Paul and Silas, and set them free.

So in our afflictions. The Lord thinketh upon us in our poverty, sickness, bereavement, distress. He arranges for comfort, for relief.

God thinketh upon us with solicitude and anxiety. Knows of our impending danger, threatening peril. Not less perturbed than affectionate parents whose sons are participants in their country's bloody fray. Not less concerned than the fisher's family, when a fierce storm is madly raging, while father is out at sea. Not less grieved than loving children, when the physician assures that mother's sickness is a serious one. He knows what fierce antagonism we encounter in working out our soul's salvation; knows what dread storms of temptations threaten discomfiture; knows what besetting sins may prove the "wooden horse" to our fathers of faith. What the Lord said of Ephraim, he says of everyone of his children: "I do earnestly remember him still; my bowels are troubled for him; I will surely have mercy upon him."

The aged are frequently afflicted with a feeling of loneliness. Forgotten! Solitary remnants of former decades. Friends departed; unknown; unappreciated by the present generation. The Lord thinketh upon you. Hear him: "Even to hoary hairs will I carry you." Though Job had to complain that even his familiar friends had forgotten him; in the Lord's cogitations he was vividly present.

Forgotten? Our name is written in the book of life. Forgotten? Anyone touching us toucheth the apple of our heavenly Father's eye. Forgotten? "Ask, and ye shall receive." Forgotten? We are heirs of God and joint-heirs with Jesus Christ.

The King of Holland has been declared incapable of governing on account of long-continued ill-health. The parliament made this declaration by a vote of 109 to 5. The council of state has been temporarily invested with regal powers. There are a few other kings "incapable of governing," but it has not yet been officially "declared."

Notes.

Let the preacher never forget, that he who has power with God also has power with men. That is, successful preaching is measured by power with God.

The Mississippi Convention decided against submitting the Constitution to the vote of the people. Is it a Constitution adopted by the people? If so, when did they adopt it? If not, is it a Constitution at all?

When a Bishop and cabinet find more trouble in providing for men than they find in filling appointments, it is time for the church to stop and do a little thinking. We have more big men than we have big appointments, it seems.—Alabama Advocate.

If these "big men" were, for several years to come, provided with big country circuits, and would look upon it as a "special providence," they would do the "biggest work for the church" they have ever done!

Don't forget the time of our Conference sessions: Louisiana, at Monroe, December 3; North Mississippi, at Grenada, December 10, and Mississippi, at Canton, December 17. Pray that God will make these sessions occasions of great spiritual awakening and converting power. Pray that the preachers may receive "power from on high" for the work of the ministry. Pray that the church work may be so mapped out that the coming year may be one filled with brilliant successes for the cause of our Lord.

The preacher will soon be going to Conference. He has, doubtless, done the best he could. He has richly earned his "allowance." Is he going to Conference with part of that "allowance" unpaid? Would it be honest in you to suffer him to go without all? You promised so much; if he receives less, have you kept your promise? If you have not kept your promise, you had better try some other religion than that which tries to satisfy Christ with only part payment of just debts! Such a religion won't take you one step towards the kingdom of righteousness!

Personal and Otherwise.

The revival that begins in the pulpit will travel to the pew.

Dr. R. A. Young has been superannuated. It is said he is preparing to take another trip to Europe.

Dr. David Gregg, of Boston, has been called to succeed Dr. Cuyler as pastor of Lafayette Avenue Church, New York.

Two Japanese preachers—Y. Yoshlokah, and M. Datto—were received on trial in the Pacific Conference at its last session.

We are sorry to learn that Bro. J. W. Malone, of Minter City, is quite sick with fever. We trust his illness will be of short duration.

If one-half our agents were as successful as the pastor of Black Hawk circuit, this paper would soon have ten thousand subscribers!

As it sometimes happens that a man's intuitions are nothing more than his prejudices, it won't do to pay too much respect to them.

Port Gibson, Miss., is to furnish the bricks to build the United State Court building in Monroe, La. What is the matter with the clay banks of Ouachita?

The Non-Partisan National Women's Christian Temperance Union are called to meet in national convention in Allegheny City, Pa., November 19, 20 and 21, 1890.

Bishop Granbery has reached home from his episcopal tour in Brazil, and reports our work in that great country as encouraging. He now resides at Ashland, Va.

The Pacific Methodist and the Los Angeles Christian Advocate have been consolidated into the San Francisco Christian Advocate. So says the Pacific Methodist, of October 23.

Rev. H. R. Singleton, of the Pacific Conference, has been transferred to the Mississippi Conference. We welcome Bro. Singleton back to Mississippi, and trust that his new move may promote the Master's cause.

Our Northern Methodist exchanges are characterizing Bishop Ninde as the St. John of their Episcopal Board. We have heard a prominent man in our church speak of Bishop Key, as "the John Fletcher of Southern Methodism."

Bro. Burroughs requests us to say that the twenty-six dollars raised at Okolona, Miss., on Millsaps College Day were contributed by the Sunday-school at that place. That is a Sunday-school that will do as an example in giving.

Rev. H. P. Walker, who was elected by the General Conference editor of the Pacific Methodist, has resigned, and the Book Committee elected Rev. J. W. Boswell, formerly assistant editor of the Nashville Advocate, in his place. Dr. Boswell is a good man for that place.

Dr. Woodrow, of the Presbyterian Church, seems to be a sort of second edition of "Banquo's ghost." He has been "downed" time after time, and yet will not stay down. His application for admission to Charleston Presbytery was promptly refused on the ground that he has not changed his views on evolution, and we believe he has appealed to a higher body. So we are to have the same thing over again.

The Northern Methodist press is overflowing with views, pro and con, on the question of admitting women to the legislative councils of the church. We believe a majority of the papers favor admitting the women. The New York Advocate seems to be the champion against the sisters. Dr. Buckley characterizes the proposed change as "unnecessary, unreasonable, unnatural and unscriptural." There is some fine writing being done on both sides; but if we may judge from the "straws flying about," we would say, the sisters are going to win.

Several weeks ago we published a lengthy account of the new air ship. Progress is being made in this important matter. The Mount Carmel Aeronautic Navigation Company has been organized with thirteen directors, representing Chicago, Grand Rapids, Columbus, New York and Birmingham, England. The directors are all millionaires, and so the company will have no lack of funds, and, as they have faith in the feasibility of the experiment, we may soon see flying machines in plenty "floating on the ambient air." When that comes to pass, good-by to the circuit rider. What shall we call him then?

Notice.

I shall be glad for all who are due the ADVOCATE in my charge to settle with me or the ADVOCATE office, as I shall leave for Conference on November 27, and desire at that meeting to close up the ADVOCATE accounts to date in my circuit.

Yours in the Lord,

R. M. BLOCKER.

RAYNE, La., Nov. 1, 1890.

No greater triumph in medicine or chemistry has been recorded than Hall's Hair Renewer to revivify and restore gray hair to the color of youth.

Literary Notes.

Mr. E. W. Kemble, who has earned a special reputation as an illustrator of Southern life, has made a series of peculiarly sympathetic illustrations for Richard Malcolm Johnson's new novel, "Widow Guthrie," which is to be published shortly by D. Appleton & Co.

A volume will shortly be issued by Albert & Scott, of Chicago, consisting of the three great essays on Friendship by Cicero, Bacon and Emerson. It will be printed and bound in an attractive style as a gift book, and will be a most appropriate token of friendship for the season.

The Baker & Taylor Co., 740 and 742 Broadway, New York, announce that they have purchased from Robt. Carter & Bro. the electrotype plates of the following books of Dr. Cuyler, which they will hereafter publish: God's Light on Dark Clouds, The Empty Crib, Pointed Papers for the Christian Life, Stray Arrows, Pierson's Crisis of Missions; Ryle's Expository Thoughts on the Gospels, 7 volumes; Morell's History of Modern Philosophy.

Mother, Home and Heaven; Golden Thoughts on; Edited by Rev. Theo. L. Cuyler, D. D. and others. 454 pages. Illustrated. Price $2 75. Gilt edge in a box, $3 50. Agents wanted. E. B. Treat, publisher, 5 Cooper Union, New York. This is among the choicest of the many beautiful gift books. It is appropriate at all times and places and suitable to every condition in life. By its popularity it has already reached a sale of 200,000 copies. In reviewing holiday books, the New York Herald says of it:

Of all the books of the season, not one has a name more beautiful or more suggestive than the one now before us. It is but fair to say, however, that the volume is not unworthy of the name it bears. It is not an original book, but it is better than original books usually are, for it is a collection of approved literary gems, of the choicest things, which have been spoken or written, in prose or in verse, on the choicest of all themes. Over four hundred authors have been laid under contribution, and the selections have been made with excellent taste.

Postal Card Reports.

—Rev. George W. Huff writes from French Settlement, La.: "Good service here last Sunday. The good Lord just came and blessed us and revived the church and gave us six accessions to the church. We then asked for our Conference claim, which was willingly paid. We are few in number here, but we are showing our faith by our works, all the same."

—Rev. G. E. Greene writes from Vernon, La.: "We have received six into the church since my last report, three by baptism, two by letter and one on profession of faith. Two new prayer meetings started. I talk for the ADVOCATE, and now and then get a subscriber. Forty dollars cash has been raised to repair Vernon Church, and more to come."

—Rev. J. R. Whittington writes: "The Bluff Creek Camp Meeting came to a close Sunday evening, October 26; and a grand meeting we had. These grounds are within four hundred yards of Bluff Creek Baptist Church, that was once one of the strongest Baptist communities in all this country; and I am told thirty years ago the Baptists here numbered ten to one Methodist; but to-day we number three to one. Let the grand old Methodist ship roll on, and, in the language of Wesley, 'whosoever will, let him come.' Ten Baptists—that is, members and of that persuasion—joined our church, and I am told that many more are on the fence. At no distant day this will be one of the best camp grounds in the Mississippi Conference. It is in the midst of a large country, in which there are 2,400 Methodists. Let all the praise be to Israel's God."

We are all free American citizens, enjoying our personal liberty; but most of us are in physical slavery, suffering from scrofula, salt rheum or some other form of impure blood. Hood's Sarsaparilla is a great blood purifier which gives physical liberty.

THE SUN.

FOR

1891.

Some people agree with THE SUN'S opinions about men and things, and some people don't; but everybody likes to get hold of the newspaper which is never dull and never afraid to speak its mind.

Democrats know that for twenty years THE SUN has fought in the front line for Democratic principles, never wavering or weakening in its loyalty to the true interests of the party it serves with fearless intelligence and disinterested vigor. At times opinions have differed as to the best means of accomplishing the common purpose; it is not THE SUN'S fault if it has been further into the millstone.

Eighteen hundred and ninety-one will be a great year in American politics, and everybody should read THE SUN.

Our Young People.

A VERY ODD GIRL.

In school she ranks above her mates,
And wins the highest prizes;
She bounds correctly all the States,
And tells what each one's size is.
In class she will not prompt a friend,
For she doesn't believe in telling;
She heeds the rules from end to end,
And never fails in spelling.
"She's just as odd as odd can be!"
Say all the school of Esther Lee.

She keeps her room as neat as wax,
And laughs at Peter's mockings;
She mends Priscilla's gloves and sacques,
And darns the family stockings;
She dusts the sitting-room for Kate,
She cares for baby brother;
She fashions balls and kites for Nate,
And runs for tired mother.
"She's just as odd as odd can be!"
Say all at home of Esther Lee.

For little crippled Mary Betts
She saves her brightest pennies;
She never, never sniks or frets
If she doesn't beat at tennis.
With happy words she is sure to greet
Children in lowly by-ways;
She guides unsteady, aged feet,
Across the bustling highways.
"She's just as odd as odd can be!"
Say all the town of Esther Lee.

A Note to the Children.

A juvenile missionary paper—The Little Worker—issued expressly for you by the North Georgia Woman's Missionary Society, is ready, waiting for you to send for it to come to see you. It is an eight-page paper, beautifully printed and illustrated, and you will be delighted to read its stories and pleasant letters. Send twenty-five cents without delay to Miss Sallie V. Stewart, Oxford, Ga., and you will receive your paper regularly. Do not put it off, but send for it at once. What a nice present to send to some little friend!

SUSIE C. STONE,
Rec. Sec. Ex. Com.

OXFORD, Ga., October 24, 1890.

A Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Mothers.

"Can you help me a few minutes, Marion?"

"I would like to, but I don't see how I can." The tone was not impatient, but hurried. "I have this essay to finish for the society this evening. I must go to our French history class in an hour, then to a guild meeting; and get back to my German lesson at five o'clock."

"No, you can't help me, dear. You looked worn out yourself. Never mind. If I tie up my head, perhaps, I can finish this.

"Through at last," said Marion, wearily, giving a finishing touch to "The Development of Religious Ideas among the Greeks," at the same time glancing quickly at the clock. Her attention was arrested by a strange sight. Her tired mother had fallen asleep over her sewing. That was not surprising, but the startled girl saw bending over her mother's pale face two angels, each looking earnestly at the sleeper.

"What made that weary look on this woman's face?" asked the stern, strange-looking angel of the weaker, sadder one. "Has God given her no daughters?"

"Yes," replied the other, "but they have no time to take care of their mother."

"No time!" cried the other. "What do they do with all the time I am letting them have?"

"Well," replied the Angel of Life, "I keep their hands and hearts full. They are affectionate daughters, much admired for their good works; but they do not know they are letting the one they love most slip from my arms into yours. Those grey hairs come from over-work, and anxiety to save extra money for the music and French lessons. Those pale cheeks faded while the girls were painting roses and pansies on the velvet or satin."

The dark angel frowned.

"Young ladies must be accomplished now," explained the other. "Those eyes grew dim sewing for the girls, to give them time to study ancient history and modern languages; those wrinkles came because the girls had not time to share the cares and worries of every-day life. That sigh comes because the mother feels neglected and lonely, while the girls are working for the women in India; that tired look comes from getting up so early, while the poor exhausted girls are trying to sleep back the late hours they gave to study or spent at the concert; those feet are so weary because of their ceaseless walk around the house all day."

"Surely the girls help, too?"

"What they can. But their feet get weary enough going around begging for the charity hospital and the church, and hunting up the poor and sick."

"No wonder," said the Angel of Death, "so many mothers call me. This is, indeed, sad—loving, industrious girls giving their mothers to my care as soon as selfish, wicked ones!"

"Ah, the hours are so crowded, "said Life, wearily." Girls who are cultured, or take an active part in life, have no time to take care of the mother who spent so much time in bringing them up."

"Then I must place my seal on her brow," said the Angel of Death, bending over the sleeping woman.

"No! no!" cried Marion, springing from her seat; "I will take care of her if you will only stay!"

"Daughter, you must have nightmare—wake up, dear. I fear you have missed your history class."

"Never mind, mama, I am not going to-day. I am rested now, and I will make those buttonholes while you curl up on the sofa and take a nap. I'll send word to the guild professor that I must be excused to-day, for I am going to see to supper myself, and make some of those muffins you like."

"But, dear, I dislike to take your time."

"Seeing you have never given me any time. Now, go to sleep, mama, dear, as I did, and don't worry about me. You are of more consequence than all the languages, or classes in the world."

So, after having been snugly tucked in a warm afghan, with a tender kiss from her daughter, usually too busy for such demonstration, Mrs. Henson fell into a sweet, restful sleep.

"I see we might have lost the best of mothers in our mad rush to be educated and useful in this hurrying, restless day and generation," Marion soliloquized, as she occasionally stole a glance at the sleeping mother. "After this, what time she does not need I shall devote to outside work and study. Until she gets well restored I will take charge of the house, and give up all societies except one—that I'll have by myself, if the other girls won't join Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Mothers."

And Marion kept her word. A few months later one remarked to her: "We miss your bright face so much, Miss Marion. You seem to have lost all your ambition to be highly educated. You are letting your sisters get ahead of you, I fear. How young your mother looks to have grown daughters! I never saw her looking so well."

Then Marion felt rewarded for being a member of what she calls the "S. P. C. M."—Sheltering Arms.

The Clergy of America take kindly to Life Insurance, and have been its firmest champions. They fight for it and thoroughly believe in it. There are many splendid financiers in the Church; that they are intelligent and thoughtful for their future goes without saying. All denominations seek the protection of Life Insurance, and are careful to select the company offering the greatest security and the most advantageous terms to policy-holders.

The Episcopal Diocese, of New York, has an Insurance Fund for all of its members, and the Mutual Life, which is the largest and strongest company in the world, with over $122,000,000 assets, has been officially selected by that body to issue all the insurance to these worthy people.

A Southern Department of this Company has been opened in New Orleans under the management of Mr. T. H. Bowles, with offices in Louisiana National Bank Building.

Simplicity and purity are the two wings by which a man is lifted up above all earthly things. Simplicity is in the intention; purity in the affection. Simplicity tends to God, purity apprehends and tastes him.—Thomas a Kempis.

Household.

Amusements in the Home.

Amusements may be, and ought to be, such as will aid in developing and up-building a child's manliness or womanliness. Again, they may be such as will prove an injury to the tastes and character of the child. Even the simplest forms of amusement may have in them the one or the other of these tendencies. A child's earlier playthings or games may have much to do with educating and training his eye and ear and hand and voice and bodily movements. They ought all to be watched, and shaped accordingly. This truth is a fundamental one in the kindergarten system, and a study of the methods of that system may be of service to a parent who would learn how to guide a child in his amusements in this direction.

Peculiarly is it important that a child's amusements should not have in them any element of chance, as tending to give him the idea that his attainments or progress in life will depend in any measure upon "luck." From his play with building-blocks or with jackstraws, up to his games of ball or of chess, every movement that a child is called on to make in the sphere of his amusements ought to be one in which his success or his failure is dependent on his skill or his lack of it. A child may be harmed for life by the conviction that his hope of success in the world rests on that "streak of good luck" which seemed to be his in the games of chance he played in boyhood. And a child may be helped for life by the character which was developed by him in his boyhood's games of skill. It was an illustration of this principle, when the Duke of Wellington pointed to the play-ground of Eton, and said: "It was there that the battle of Waterloo was won."—Sunday-School Times.

THE LITTLE CHILDREN THAT ARE GONE.—Why do they come, these little ones that enter our homes by the gateway of suffering, and that linger with us a few months, uttering no words, smiling in a mysterious silence, yet speaking all the time of the purity and sweetness of heaven? Why must they open the tenderest fountains of our natures only to leave them so soon, choked with the bitter tears of loss! It is impossible wholly to answer such questions of the tortured heart; but one can say, in general, that these little temporary wanderers from a celestial home come and go because of the great love of God. It is an inestimable blessing to have been the parent of a child that has the stamp of heaven upon its brow, to hold it in one's arms, to minister to it, to gaze fondly down into the little upturned face, and to rejoice in the unsullied beauty of its smiles, and then to give it back to God at his call, with the thought that in heaven, as upon earth, it is still our own child, a member of the household, still to be counted always as one of the children whom God hath given us. Such a love chastens and sanctifies the hearts of father and mother, carries them out beyond time and sense, and gives them a hold upon the unseen. As things of great value always cost, it is worth all the sorrow to have known this holy affection, and to have this treasure in heaven.—Chicago Advance.

AN IMPORTANT STUDY.—Women who have had any experience will understand the balancing and adjustment, the sifting out of the unnecessary, and the careful combination of simplicity and beauty, which must be done if the prosaic process of living is to be clothed upon with refinement. Every woman needs to make a study of her own situation; what she may have to begin with; what she can afford to buy; what she can do by her own handiwork to lift the atmosphere of the home above the work-day thoughts. Nerve-wear is steady from day to day, appetite becomes capricious, the hunger of health is lost, and the sauce of life is lacking. A bowl of flowers trembling with dew, in the center of the table, a fresh napkin under the neat slices of bread or enveloping the hot toast, the pretty blue or gray vinework on the china, gives a zest, takes off the roughness, renews hope and creates a feeling that life after all is a pleasant road.—Selected.

Effects of Eye-Strain.

The influence of the eye-sight upon intellectual work is more recognized each year by educators both in this country and Europe, and some of the most important discussions among both teachers and physicians bear upon this subject. One of the most lucid articles treating of the varied kinds of eye imperfections is "Eye-strain in connection with headaches, neuralgia and nervous disturbances," contributed to Babyhood by Dr. J. M. Mills, in the New York Opthalmic and Aural Institute. The most common causes of annoyance and suffering are far-sightedness, having its origin in the position of the principal focus of parallel rays of light behind the retina; near-sightedness, in which the parallel rays of light are brought to a focus in front of the retina; astigmatism, due to the irregular curvature of the cornea and insufficiency or weakness of the muscles of the eyeball. It is useful for both parents and teachers to recognize the seriousness of the symptoms of strain due to any of these forms of eye-imperfections. From far-sightedness come easy fatigue of the eye, aching sensation in the eyeballs, finally persistent and obstinate muscular irritation and burning pain. The eye-strain is felt more particularly at the end of the week. Near-sighted people suffer equal discomfort from working any length of time. Dr. Mills adds that near-sighted persons squint or blink in order to see at a distance, and that those "dreamy eyes 'that haunt me ever,' about which amorous swains become poetic, are usually near-sighted, the dreamy or staring appearance being due to the fact that they see imperfectly at a distance." Patients with astigmatism suffer very often and severely with headaches, dizziness, "flickering," and other nervous complaints. Those whose eyes are impaired by muscular weakness have headache, pain over the eyes, neuralgia, dizziness, nausea, and vague nervous disturbances. So serious is the effect of any imperfection in the eye that the examination of the eyes of children of school age would seem to be imperative. Many children have been rebuked for stupid neglect of and disinclination for study, when they are simply unable to endure the eye-strain. Many have been forced from intellectual labor to less congenial occupation through the neglect of eye imperfections. The seasonable remedy of the oculist is so practicable that its benefit should not be denied the poorest school-child.—Boston Journal.

METEORITES.—Meteorites are particularly interesting because they comprise the only material coming to us from outer space. In consequence of the striking phenomena resulting from their rapid passage through our atmosphere, making them appear like balls of fire visible at great distances, sometimes exploding with such violence as to be taken for earthquakes, their falls have been noticed and recorded since the earliest times. The accounts, however, were so imbued with superstitions, and so distorted by the terrified condition of the narrators, that in most cases the witnesses of the event were laughed at for their supposed delusions, and it was not until the beginning of the present century that men of science and people in general began to give credit to such reports.

The earliest authentic records of stones falling from the sky are to be found in the Chinese annals, which go back to 644 B. C., and between that time and 333 A. D., Biot has traced sixteen distinct occurrences. In Europe, a meteorite is said to have fallen in Crete as far back as 1478 B. C.; but Greek history can not be depended upon for events earlier than 700 B. C. A most probable fall, in 705 B. C., is mentioned by Plutarch; while Livy, in his History of Rome, gives an account of a shower of stones which fell on the Alban Mount about 652 B. C., and which so impressed the senate that they decreed a nine days' solemn festival.—Popular Science Monthly.

L. A. C. Hatfield Anger, do say consumption can be cured by Dr. Davis' Compound Syrup of Wild Cherry and Tar. My mother, years ago, contracting a terrible cough soon became unable to attend to her household duties. Prominent physicians pronounced it incurable consumption. We knew of Dr. Davis' Wild Cherry and Tar, and commenced giving it to her. Before two bottles had been taken an improvement was noticed, and by the time one dozen bottles had been consumed she was well, and has never been troubled since. We have recommended it to many and always have it in the house. For coughs, colds, croup, whooping-cough, asthma, bronchitis, it is without a rival. One dollar bottles hold two and a half times as much as 50c. bottles.

DR. KING'S

Royal Germetuer.

NEW ORLEANS, Sept. 2, 1890.

I have been for several years constantly subject to malarial fevers. The best medical treatment has failed to remove from my system the malarial poison that produced them. I have had to use an average of forty grains of quinine per week for years. The fevers would invariably return in a few days, if it was discontinued. The quinine was doing great harm to my nervous system, but I had to keep it up as my only hope. Recently I commenced using Dr. King's Royal Germetuer. It has done me more good than all the medicine I have ever taken. I have not had a fever since commencing its use, nor found it necessary to take a dose of quinine. It has toned my nerves, built up my strength and given me a buoyancy and healthfulness of feeling that I have not known for years. My experience justifies me in saying that this wonderful remedy is all that is claimed for it, if not more.

"Seeing is Believing."

And the best lamp ever made, like Aladdin's of old, a "wonderful lamp!" A lamp absolutely non-explosive and unbreakable, which gives a clear, soft, brilliant white light of 85 candle power! Purer and brighter than gas light, softer than electric light, more cheerful than either! That lamp is

"The Rochester."

And with it there is no smoke, no smell, no broken chimneys, no flickering, no sweating, no climbing up of the flame, no "tantrums" nor annoyance of any kind, and it never needs trimming. Its fonnts (oil reservoirs) being tough rolled seamless brass, with central draft, it is absolutely unbreakable, and as safe as a tallow candle.

Only five years old, and over two millions of these lamps in use. It must be a GOOD lamp to make such a telling success. Indeed it is, for lamps may come and lamps may go, but the "Rochester" shines on forever! We make over 2,000 artistic varieties,—Hanging and Table Lamps, Banquet, Study, Vase and Piano Lamps,—every kind, in Bronze, Porcelain, Brass, Nickel and Black Wrought Iron.

Ask the lamp dealer for it. Look for the trade-mark stamp: "THE ROCHESTER." If hasn't the genuine Rocheater and the style you want, or if no lamp-store is near, send us for free illustrated catalogue (and reduced price-list), and we will box and send you lamp safely by express, right to your door.

NEYLAND—Oh! the sadness and sorrow that was brought to the hearts of parents, relatives and loved ones by the sad Angel of Death in taking from our midst one of our noblest, one of our purest, one of our brightest angels of love, Miss SALLIE NEYLAND. Miss Sallie was the daughter of Mrs. E. A. and Mr. K. H Neyland, who reside in Wilkinson county, Miss. She was born September 11, 1869, and died June 17, 1890, aged twenty years nine months and six days.

Miss Sallie joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, at the age of eleven, and was converted at the age of fifteen. She lived a devoted Christian life up to her death—yes, she fought the good fight of faith, she finished her work; hence there is laid up for her "a crown of eternal life." Miss Sallie was not of that kind who served the Lord at church and abroad only; but her life was a constant walk with Christ, living a Christian at home as well as abroad. She proved her religion by her works; "hence she has rejoicing in herself, and not in another." Miss Sallie was one of the most cheerful girls that I ever knew. At all times she was cheerful and lively—yes, she constantly wore a smile on her face. To my mind all these are tokens of the joy, peace and happiness that is within the heart, which are the fruits of the ever-abiding Spirit of Christ.

Her ways were amiable, her disposition sweet and lovely. She was amiable with all that she knew. Amaranthine love had she for her dear lovers. She was pure and noble in all her ways; her aim being to ameliorate. She was an obedient, loving child to her parents. Hence possessing all these amiable qualities, it made her the joy of her parents, the favorite of her family, the light of her home. All that knew her loved her; consequently, there are many who mourn her death.

Some say that it is wrong to grieve after the dead who die in the Lord; but we are told that Christ wept at the grave of Lazarus. If Christ wept over the dead, then how can they, who are comparatively weak with Christ, restrain from weeping over their dear loved one. The consolation that they have who feel her loss the most is, "that all things work together for good to them that love and serve the Lord."

Miss Sallie was a bright and shining light on earth; but she is now a brighter and a more glittering light in heaven. But her light now shines on many of our pathways, guiding us to heaven. She is also to many a precious treasure in heaven; "hence their hearts are there also." The words of comfort that we give to parents, relatives and loved ones are these: Though she can not come back to them; yet—glorious thought!—they can go to her.

May the Lord help us all to meet her in the city of the New Jerusalem, the home of the pure, the good and the blest; there we shall be reunited in new bonds of love, to part never more.

UNO ILLANQUE AMAVIT.

BARRINTINE—Sister ELIZA C. BARRINTINE was born March 15, 1851, and died September 4, 1890. She was born of God some time in 1868; was married to J. M. Barrintine, December 20, 1869; joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in 1875, and proved a consistent member until the day of her death. She has left a devoted husband and seven children to mourn her departure; but in the depth of their sorrow they look forward to the meeting by and by. The husband and the two oldest children are consistent and zealous Christians, and we trust the younger children will cross over on the Lord's side as they come to the years of accountability.

I was with Sister Barrintine only a few hours before her death, and had prayers with her. There is not a shadow of doubt in my mind as to her having entered into rest. Amongst the last words that she spoke, while talking of her pastor's visit, she asked her husband, "Did he baptize the children?" Those little ones have since been baptized, and may God help the bereaved father and his two older daughters to train them for God and heaven, so that they may all "meet beyond the river!"

B. F. PHILLIPS.

REAMS—ELIZA RAYMOND REAMS, the subject of this notice, was born near Natchez, Miss., November 17, 1808. Her maiden name was Johns. The time of her marriage and conversion I have been unable to obtain. She was married to Richard Reams, of Iberville parish, before she became a member of the church, or was converted.

For more than fifty years she stood for Christ, battling by faith and living in hope of the future glory. She was a woman of great physical vigor and energy, and bore up well under the pressure of her fourscore and (nearly) three years. Sister Reams was one of the simplest-hearted and constant Christians it has been my pleasure to know. Humility was, perhaps, chiefest of her virtues. During her last illness she often expressed her desire to be buried by her friends with but little said, and nothing done which was not necessary to a decent Christian burial. In answer to a request that I be permitted to point out the Christian graces in her, and the power of grace to sustain a poor sinner, she replied, "Tell them I am nothing; it is the grace of God in me."

With all her courage, she shrank back, not from death, but from the struggle of death; and when feebleness extreme prevented her listening to a long Scripture lesson—as at first she loved to do—she would ask me to repeat "a verse to help" her, and "then pray that she might die easy." For weeks and weeks this was her daily prayer: to die—to die easy. She often feared she was impatient to go; but she was the embodiment of patience. She died on September 23, 1890; just as she had prayed to die. Her last exclamation was "Peace! peace! peace!" She literally "fell on sleep," and she still sleeps. In her sleep she ceased to breathe, and was followed to her grave by a retinue of those who loved her.

Many of our preachers who have labored at Plaquemines will recall Sister Reams as the especial friend of the preacher. A woman of fine intellect, of sterling integrity, of great concentration of purpose, of faith and great tenderness of heart has fallen in our midst! She died at the home of her daughter's friend, Mrs. Wood, in the city of Baton Rouge, La. Her friends who are "faithful until death" will meet her in the "Father's house."

J. A. PARKER.

HOWELL—BERRY JEHU HOWELL departed this life August 27, 1890. Bro. Howell was born in Holmes county, Miss., May 1, 1847; moved to Louisiana during the winter of 1868; professed Christ in 1870, and for many years has been a member of the Methodist Church. He died of consumption, in the prime of life, leaving a wife and seven children to mourn him and treasure up his memory in their hearts.

Two days before his death we held a solemn service by his bedside, preached and administered the sacrament to him. As we realized that never again would we drink the wine together until we drank of "the new wine" in heaven, our hearts received a great hush as in the presence of the Great Spirit, and the imprint of that Spirit will forever remain upon us. Bro. Howell was full of faith, was willing to go, "gladly leaving all below;" had a great joy—the joy of the Master; he realized that his Redeemer lived, and that through him he also should live. His father, mother, two sisters and two brothers had already preceded him and reached the golden strand. One brother and one sister are still here struggling, battling, racing. To them and to the widow and fatherless children we point to the God of battles—to him "who holdeth our crowns in his hands"—and pray they may not be left out, but in due time enter and take possession of the "inheritance, uncorruptible and undefiled, and that fadeth not away, reserved in heaven for you, who are kept by the power of God through faith unto salvation, ready to be revealed in the last time."

GEO. A. MANDEVILLE, P. C.

WATSON—The good Lord, in gathering up his jewels, has visited our Sabbath-school at Pleasant Valley Church, and cast a shade of sorrow over all. Our little band is severed, and we are left to mourn the loss of our beloved sister and teacher, Mrs. RALPH WATSON, a zealous and earnest worker, never tiring in deeds of kindness and love.

Resolved, That, as our all-wise Father has taken our beloved sister, we humbly bow in submission to his will. Her useful life was short indeed, but God had a higher place for her to fill, and she, no doubt, is now enjoying that perfect peace—the reward of the faithful.

Resolved, That we cherish the memory of our departed sister, and try to imitate her bright example, letting our light so shine that others may be constrained to follow.

Resolved, That we extend our sympathies to the bereaved husband, parents and relatives in their sad affliction, pointing them to heaven.

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be sent to our NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE for publication, and a copy sent to the bereaved family.

N. SMITH, for Com.

CALLAWAY—WILLIAM D. CALLAWAY was born March 29, 1852; died September 27, 1890. He joined the Methodist Church at Macedonia in Noxubee county, Miss., on the third Sunday in September, 1860, when he was only eight years old, in which he lived a consistent member until his death, which was a little more than thirty years. He was the son of the Rev. M. C. Callaway, Sr., and brother to the Rev. M. C. Callaway, Jr., of the Mississippi Conference (who is now deceased). Bro. Callaway was one of the most innocent men that I ever knew. He never did any harm to anyone, nor said any; hence when he died he left not an enemy behind, so far as I know.

In his last sickness (which was flux and congestion) he exhibited the greatest patience that I ever saw; never a murmur or complaint escaped his lips. He leaves a wife and four children to mourn their loss. May God's grace direct the little ones, so as to meet their father in heaven!

"American 'Nosology.'"

There can be no doubt as to the almost universal prevalence of Catarrh in this country. Even our speech has acquired a nasal twang. And this is not, as might be supposed, "The twang that spoiled the hymns, when Cromwell's army sang," but it is undoubtedly a catarrhal symptom. In most medical works at the present day the nose is very "prominent." The "fierce Catarrhs" continue their ravages. But, is nothing to be done? Is there no remedy? Let us see.

Goes to Hot Springs for Gout, Rheumatic Gout, Rheumatism, etc., etc.

DR. ALGERNON S. GARNETT, Surgeon (retired) U. S. Navy, Resident Physician, Hot Springs, Ark.:

"I have had excellent results from BUFFALO LITHIA WATER in GOUT, RHEUMATIC GOUT and RHEUMATISM both in my own person and in the treatment of patients for whom I have prescribed it. It is a prophylactic as well as a remedy in Nephritic Colic and forming Calculi, when due to a redundancy of Lithic Acid."

Dr. Wm. B. TOWLES, Professor of Anatomy and Materia Medica in the Medical Department of the University of Virginia. Former Resident Physician, Hot Springs, Va.:

"I feel no hesitancy whatever in saying that in GOUT, RHEUMATIC GOUT, RHEUMATISM, and in all diseases of URIC ACID DIATHESIS, I know of no remedy at all comparable to BUFFALO LITHIA WATER.

"Its effects are marked in causing a disappearance of Albumen. In a single case of Bright's Disease of the Kidneys I witnessed decided beneficial results from its use, and from its action in this case I should have great confidence in it as a remedy in certain stages of this disease."

The Late Dr. Wm. F. CARRINGTON, Resident Physician Hot Springs, Ark., Surgeon (retired) U. S. Navy, Surgeon Confederate States Navy, Medical Director Army of Northwestern Virginia:

"The BUFFALO LITHIA WATER, Spring No. 2, has signally demonstrated its remedial power in GOUT, RHEUMATIC GOUT, RHEUMATISM, URIC ACID GRAVEL, and other maladies dependent upon the URIC ACID DIATHESIS."

Dr. T. B. BUCHANAN, Resident Physician, Hot Springs, Arkansas:

"Send me five cases BUFFALO LITHIA WATER, Spring No. 2. I have made use of this Water for GOUT in my own person and prescribed it for patients similarly suffering with the most decided beneficial results. I take pleasure in advising GOUTY patients to these Springs."

GRANT'S FURNITURE STORE

NEW STORE, AT 28 and 30 Camp Street, NEW ORLEANS

BEAUTIFUL PARLOR GOODS.

I have one entire floor devoted to the display of these goods alone, and have over sixty different varieties to select from. Complete Suits anywhere from $35 to $650, and odd pieces—such as Sofas, Divans, Easy Chairs, Patent Rockers, Window and Reception Chairs—at as low prices in proportion as the Complete Suits. I have these goods in Cherry, Mahogany and Walnut, and can give you your choice of any of the following coverings: Crushed, Embossed, Plain and Silk Plushes, Hair Cloth, Mohair, Raw and Spun Silks, Satins, English Tapestries, French Valours, Petit Point, Brocatelle or Damasks. I make a specialty of these goods, have many of the patterns made specially for my own trade, and can offer a greater variety at lower prices than any other house in the South.

NEW STOCK

in all departments, and every grade of goods, from the cheapest to the most expensive, in endless variety. I have all the latest and most fashionable designs, and, as I have only purchased from factories whose goods I have been selling for the past six years, can and do guarantee every piece of Furniture that leaves my establishment.

LOW PRICES

are the order of the day, and I propose to sell strictly reliable goods at a lower price than has ever before been quoted in the South. My store has long been known as "The Cheapest Furniture House in New Orleans," and this season I intend to add to the reputation it has gained in this respect. I only ask a chance to save you money.

HANDSOME BEDROOM SUITS.

A very extensive assortment of these goods in every style; and whether you wish to pay $40 for a Complete Suit of twelve pieces, or from that price anywhere up to $1,000, I can sell you what you require. I have these goods in Black Walnut, Natural and Dark Cherry, and Natural and Dark Mahogany, or in imitation of any of these woods, and can furnish the very latest, neatest and most artistic designs.

I have also a large and carefully selected stock of Hall, Library, Dining-room and Kitchen Furniture; Reed, Rattan and Wicker Chairs, Rockers, Lounges and Cribs; Brackets, What-nots, Easels, Music Stands and Fancy Top Tables; Carpets, Carpet Strips, Matting, Shades, Curtains, Curtain Poles, and everything necessary to furnish a house completely throughout.

LARGE SALES.

I have a large city trade, and am shipping goods extensively to every Southern State. My country trade has increased very rapidly during the past year, and the facilities which my new store affords me for carrying a larger and better stock will enable me to still further extend it, and to give complete satisfaction to my customers.

Grant.

What is in a name? Everything in this case. Mention the name of Grant in connection with the furniture trade of New Orleans, and you have at once a history of the complete transformation that has been effected in the business from the time of big profits, slow sales and limited stocks until the present era of small profits, numerous sales and endless assortment.

Mr. Grant has, from the very first, acted upon the principle that it was better to make ten sales, with a small profit on each, than to hold his goods at a high price, and only effect two or three sales; better for him, as each sale introduced his goods and method of doing business, and better for the people, as they got the advantage of low prices, which enabled many to furnish their homes who could not otherwise have done so. Such an innovation as this, of course, met with considerable opposition from old, slow-going houses, who ridiculed it in every way; but, by adhering strictly to this principle, keeping a large stock of reliable goods, selling them quickly at a small profit, and fair, square dealing all round, Mr. Grant has overcome all opposition, and to-day stands at the head of the furniture trade of New Orleans.

In May, last, he had the misfortune to lose his entire stock of furniture by fire; at a time, too, when he was carrying a very large and complete line; but, with characteristic energy, immediately rented and stocked another store, and his business went on without interruption. He now occupies a new five-story building at 28 and 30 Camp St., one block from Canal St., which was specially constructed for him, and which is undoubtedly the finest furniture store in the city. His stock is very large, varied and handsome, embracing every style from the cheapest to the most expensive; and, as all the goods are from reliable factories, he can and does guarantee every article to be exactly as represented, and to give satisfaction in every respect.

Mr. Grant will, at all times, be pleased to have his friends from the country call upon him, whether they wish to purchase in large or small quantities, or do not wish to make any purchase whatever, and would ask them to make his place headquarters when in the city. For the accommodation of the ladies, he has fitted up a waiting-room with toilet, which is supplied with the latest magazines and an attendant to take charge of packages, and they are cordially invited to avail themselves of its advantages.

It is well known among successful merchants that liberal advertising is indispensable to the economical and successful working of their establishments.—Price Current.

by local applications, as they can not reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube gets inflamed, you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result; and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that we can not cure by taking Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

DOMESTIC.

The Republicans were overwhelmed in the elections held throughout the Union on the fourth. The returns indicate a Democratic majority of nearly eighty in the next House of Representatives. Louisiana returns a solid Democratic delegation. Pennsylvania, New Hampshire and Massachusetts have elected Democratic governors. The Democrats gained heavily throughout the North and West, while the South had no break in the line.

The twelfth of the series of census bulletins was issued on October 31 on the population of the United States. The population of the United States on June 1, 1890, as shown by the first count of persons and families, exclusive of white persons in the Indian Territory, Indians on reservations and Alaska, was 62,480,540. These figures may be slightly changed by later and more exact compilations, but such changes will not be material. In 1880 the population was 50,155,783. The absolute increase of the population in the ten years intervening was 12,324,757, and the percentage of increase was 24.57.

The corner-stone of the Woman's Temple, which is being erected by the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, was laid in Chicago, November 1. The exercises were opened at the Second Regiment armory by the singing of "America" by a trained choir. The building when completed is to be a superb structure in French Gothic style, costing $1,100,000. It will be thirteen stories high, surmounted by the figure of a woman, that stands with outstretched hands and upturned face, as if in prayer. The finances of the undertaking are on a firm basis, as $600,000 of stock has been sold, and the remaining amount will be raised by bonds.

There will be no general Federation of Locomotive Engineers with brakemen, firemen, conductors, and other railway employees. A majority report favoring federation presented at the Brotherhood convention in Pittsburg was defeated. Since the vote was taken the convention has spent considerable time discussing the matter, and finally decided not to federate.

The new Constitution of the State of Mississippi was adopted by the Constitutional Convention in session at Jackson, on November 1. Two of the delegates refused to sign. After the ceremony of signing was over, and a resolution of thanks had been passed complimenting President Calhoun upon his fair and impartial rulings during the convention, Judge Calhoun ascended the platform to deliver his farewell address, which was couched in eloquent and loyal words.

William O'Brien, M. P., and party arrived in New York on November 2. They were met down the bay by a large delegation of Irishmen on board a tugboat, which was chartered by the Irish societies of the City of New York.

The bill to disfranchise any member of the Choctaw Nation who has taken or may hereafter take the oath of allegiance to the government of the United States has passed both houses and has received the approval of the governor. It disqualifies all such persons from holding any office of trust or profit in the Choctaw Nation, or to sit as jurors in any of its courts.

The Grand Hotel in San Francisco was damaged by fire, on November 3. The loss amounts to $500,000. No lives lost.

An express train on the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western railroad, going forty miles an hour, ran into a freight train, three miles south of Syracuse, N. Y., on November 3. The fireman and engineer of each engine were killed in the collision, and many passengers were injured.

FOREIGN.

The French tariff bill, which is now before the Chamber of Deputies, gives to the President and the Cabinet full power to retaliate to a great extent as they choose upon articles exported to France to any country which discriminates against French products or in any way erects barriers against French trade. This clause is obviously modeled to meet the American meat inspection bill, and is intended as the French answer to that measure.

Mr. Gladstone's recent speeches in Scotland has caused a thrill throughout Great Britain, and evoked the admiration of the London Times. Those who have thought that the great Liberal leader was declining in mental vigor have had to confess their error. Never have his addresses been more forcible nor his line of argument better sustained. The speech at Dundee is considered the masterpiece of his Scottish campaign.

It is stated that on the first day of the coming session of Parliament, Queen Victoria, upon the recommendation of Lord Salisbury, will issue an act of grace granting a conditional discharge to all the men undergoing life sentence for participation in the earlier Fenian movement.

More than ordinary interest has been aroused throughout Canada in anticipation of the Dominion government's action with regard to the separate school question and the abolition of the French language as an official language in the courts and assemblies of the Manitoba province. Both were the subject of province legislation last year.

Cuban mail advices report that the McKinley tariff law has already had a baneful effect in Cuba. Forty of the smaller tobacco factories have been closed and a large number of operatives are idle.

Pope Leo XIII. in his latest encyclical to the bishops in Italy, urges Catholics to greater zeal in fighting agnosticism. The Pope concludes by saying, that two governments are impossible at Rome, and that Rome ought to be given back to the Pope if the world wished the Holy See to exercise as heretofore its influence for good.

Since the outbreak of the cholera in China there have been 38,325 cases and 25,911 deaths. The epidemic has almost subsided.

DONALD KENNEDY

Of Roxbury, Mass., says

Don't write to me when taking the first bottle of my Medical Discovery. I know how it makes you feel, but it's all right. There are certain cases where the Discovery takes hold sharp, but it is the diseased spot in you it has taken hold of, and that's what you want. The Discovery has a search warrant for every humor, from backache to scrofula, inside and outside, and, of course, it makes a disturbance in your poor body, but the fight is short, you are better by the second bottle; if not, then tell me about it, and I will advise. I will, however, in the future, as in the past, answer any letter from a nursing mother.

Sincerely yours,

The One-Man Power.

(Editorial.)

The "Kelley case" has given occasion to a good many secular papers, and not a few religious papers, to inveigh against the polity of our church, and to proclaim the despotic power of our Bishops. Bishop Hargrove has become the target for a number of poisoned arrows; but he is eminently qualified to take care of himself. This holding up our church polity to the world as a monster who is devouring thousands of innocent people, and trampling thousands more into the dust of ecclesiastical servitude, shows an ignorance that is truly pitiable in this day of general knowledge and enlightenment. That a newspaper should pretend to know affairs, and yet publish what some of them have published in the last few weeks in regard to our church and her Bishops, discloses a density of ignorance that is really alarming in a public journal. One would suppose that the Southern Methodist Church of to-day was worse than the Roman Church under the mansgement of the Inquisition, and her Bishops greater tyrants than any who ever ruled a barbarous State of the oldon time.

Like every other organized body, our church has its code of laws. This code was revised last May in St. Louis, and has been published to the world. This code was revised by the General Conference—a body composed of an equal number of laymen and preachers. There are but few legislative bodies of other churches that can show as large a representation of laymen. Our church laws are not made by the preachers alone, for the laymen have an equal voice and vote. Our Bishops have nothing to do with making our laws. They simply preside over the law-makers, and keep order while the people and preachers enact the laws. But after the law is made, there must be some administrator, or else the law is a nullity. This administrator, in some cases, is the Bishop; in other cases, the presiding elder or pastor. Each office has its special laws, with its special officer to administer the law pertaining to the office. The Bishop's office and duties are defined clearly by this code of laws, in making which he had no voice or vote. The church, in her legislative capacity, makes the law, and this very same body of men elects the Bishop, and gives him a solemn charge to be faithful in the performance of his duties in administering the law. Now, is faithfulness to this charge an act of tyranny? When the Bishop, in the face of violent opposition, stands up and administers it, is he to be written down as a tyrant? It is not so in the civil government. Every officer of the State takes an oath that he will faithfully administer the law of the State, and when he does so, do the newspapers, who know anything of the law and its administration, write down the officer as a tyrant? Of course not. He has done what he pledged himself to do. So our Bishops simply do what the church elected them to do, and what they promised to do when they were inducted into office. If the law is bad, that is not the Bishop's fault. That is the fault of the church. The Bishop, like the civil officer, must administer the law as he finds it. He can not mend it, nor can he change it. To denominate a Bishop a tyrant because he administers the law as he finds it, is the silliest kind of nonsense, and shows either that there is ignorance of our church polity, or something worse. "The one-man power," which some of our sister churches take so much delight in parading before the world as the chief characteristic of our church, exists only in the imagination. No man in our church—and, as far as we know, no man in any other church—is hedged in by so much law as our Bishop. If one of our Bishops had done, by a law of the church, as the mayor of this city did in regard to the Sunday law, he would have been arrested and tried, and turned out of office in short order.

No, there is no "one-man power" in the Southern Methodist Church. The church makes the laws, creates the offices, and elects the officers, and they are responsible to the church; and she calls everyone of them, at stated times, to give an account of his stewardship. Bishop Hargrove, in the Kelley case, administered the law as he understands it. For one, we think he understands it correctly; but if we thought otherwise, we would not abuse him and call him a tyrant, because his administration seemed to work a hardship. The Bishop and the presiding elder and the preacher in charge, while charged with the administration of the law, are themselves so hedged that they can not do anything without it, and they are answerable for the faithful discharge of their trusts. If some people would take a little pains to gain a little knowledge, they would make fewer ridiculous mistakes.

Letter No. 31.

THE VALLEY OF JORDAN—GILGAL—A NIGHT IN JERICHO—ANCIENT JERICHO—ELISHA'S SPRING—THE VALLEY OF CHERITH AND CAVE OF ELIJAH—THE ROAD FROM JERICHO TO JERUSALEM.

The valley of Jordan, through which that double-channeled river flows, is eight or ten miles in width. On the south it ends at the margin of the Dead Sea, while to the north it stretches away as far as the eye can reach, skirted on the right and left with mountains, and with an Indian-summer-like haze resting upon it. Of the character of the east bank, I can not speak; but the plain on the west shore, reaching to the mountains of Judea, is as level almost as a table, and could, with little attention, be made as beautiful with varied vegetation as when the Israelitish spies, sent to reconnoitre the country, looked with delighted eyes upon the scene of living green. It is now a hard, dry expanse, covered with coarse, sedge-like grass; but the spots cultivated in the neighborhood of Jericho show unmistakably what it can be made to do, and what it really is to-day under the surface.

Gilgal is about two miles from the Jordan. Nothing is left but a heap of stones of the place that figured so prominently in Jewish history. Here, after crossing the Jordan, the Israelites made themselves holy unto the Lord, and it is remarkable to notice how often, in after days, they would return to this spot. After battles and campaigns and great national experiences, after victories and defeats, Gilgal would be fallen back upon or sought after. Very much like Jacob was led back to Bethel for a renewal of spiritual life, so to the place where, as a nation, they had given themselves to God in solemn covenant, the Israelites would return again and again. Well for all believers to turn the face and heart—not frequently, but continually—to Gilgal. I can see why Samuel retained it as one of his judging-places. It is remarkable that even to this day the idea of holiness is connected with the spot by even the Arabs. I was informed that when they wish to get the whole truth from a man, they ask him if he is willing to swear by the tree that grows at Gilgal.

Jericho is a small mud village, with two or three modern houses for the comfort of travelers. Here I passed the night. Wearied with the long trip, and parched with thirst, I sat under a grape arbor thinking of the history of the place, when my dragoman approached with several bunches of grapes of such huge size and such rich color, that I instantly thought of the circumstance of the spies and the grapes of Eshcol, which so amazed the Jews. The night at Jericho will not be soon forgotten. It was a night of almost breathless calm in August; the whole valley of Jordan was a bed, upon which the day had lain for hours, and left all heated. The very moonlight, which flooded the country, fell like the weight of additional covering. How we panted, like David, for water from the deep well of Bethlehem! But that was too far, and so was Elisha's Spring, which is over a mile from modern Jericho. Some Bedouins were beating a drum a half mile away, which performance they kept up until nearly midnight, every monotonous stroke coming through the still night air, and falling with undiminished force upon the suffering ear. In the midst of this night of discomfort and wakefulness there was a sight that I obtained while walking amid the fruit trees of the orchard that served to steady me and keep me patient. It was the sight of the mountains of temptation lying in the moonlight, one or two miles away, toward Jerusalem! How it all rushed over me that Christ, the Holy One, dwelt in that desolate region without food or drink or companionship for forty days and nights, and did it unmurmuringly. Is it not wonderful that we should ever count our lot or surroundings hard in the face of the suffering life lived by the Son of God?

Nothing seems to be left of the town in which Zaccheus resided as a rich and despised publican. The sycamore tree, as well as the man who climbed into its branches to see Jesus, is gone. Bartimæus, the blind beggar at the gate, has become dust, and so has the gate by which he sat. The road itself, along which the multitude poured that day, is to-day a faint pathway, and frequently lost sight of amid the stones of the field and the rubbish of the village. However, it matters but little, seeing that the truths of that day are preserved. We can stand the pulpit being knocked to pieces if the great saving sermon has been preached; and you can take the framing of the picture, if you leave me the picture itself. The great lesson of that day—Christ's love for, and kindly attitude to, the poor and rich alike—remains with us, if Jericho does not. Time has destroyed the poor Jericho pulpit, but heaven holds the preacher, and immortal souls and eternity have the sermon.

Ancient Jericho is nearer the mountains than the modern town of that name. The ruins have the magnitude of little hills. I noticed, however, that they touched the mountain, and at once filled an objection to this being the exact site, for the reason that the Bible says the children of Israel marched around Jericho a number of times, and evidently at some distance from the walls. According to these ruins, there would be no room for them to pass between the city and the mountain. There can be no doubt, however, that the site is near by, if not a part of the ruins we see. What a resounding crash went along the side of these mountains, and up these gorges, when the walls, on the last day of circular marching, fell down flat! In the victory was found the element of future defeat. One man carefully brought it forth. Is it not strange that the two articles secretly taken from Jericho represent the especial weaknesses of the two sexes? The guide points out to you, with great confidence, the ruins of the house of Rahab, because, as he said, the promise to her was that the stones of her house should remain standing; "and here," says the guide, "is the only ruin on which one stone is piled upon the other; therefore, this is the house of Rahab." His logic was equal to his scriptural accuracy, and correspondingly convincing.

Elisha's Spring is close by, and gushes out at the foot of the mountain by a small palm of Gilead, overshadowed partly. The flow is so abundant that it could easily be made to irrigate the plain between the river Jordan and the mountains. Already below the mouth it has been divided into a number of channels, several of which I crossed, and found them all rushing along with the accent of rapidity and abundance. To-day the fountain is shallow; but if the stones and debris of former walls around it were removed, it could be made a pool fifteen or twenty feet square, and six or eight deep. Then, indeed, if an axe flew off the helve into the spring, the owner might well cry out, as did one of the young men to Elisha: "Alas, master! for it was borrowed." I noticed the remains of an ancient wall that once encircled it, possessing about the same dimensions I have named. Truly, all Scripture statements of places and things can bear examination. The water of this spring is sweet, cool, and refreshing. When Elisha healed this fountain, he did it effectually.

The valley of Achor, where Achan was stoned, is in this neighborhood. What trouble one man can bring upon a large body of people! What farreaching results attend a sinful act! One man sins—then what? Israel defeated, thousands slain, Joshua on his face, and twelve tribes mourning. How truly could the solemn words of Joshua, uttered here, be spoken now in many places to certain individuals, "You have troubled Israel this day!"

The valley of Cherith enters the plain near the Jericho road. One or two miles up the valley is shown the cave of Elijah, where he was fed by the ravens while hiding from Ahab. The cavern is situated high up on the precipitous side of a mountain. It is a good hiding-place, even among the bare rocks; but if in former times these heights and slopes were covered with forests, it would have been next to impossible to have discovered the prophet. The brook of which he drank winds along the valley several hundred feet beneath the cave. Its course can easily be traced by a narrow line of green shrubs that overarch it in its progress to the plain. As I viewed the place I could not but recall the life of hardship through which this man of God was called to pass. Elisha was of a softer make, and kept a servant. Both, I notice, were accepted of God. Nevertheless, when the time came for the transfiguration of Him who came to minister, and not to be ministered unto, it was the toil-worn Moses, and the toil-worn Elijah, and not Elisha, that stood in the company of the Father and the Son, talking about the coming death at Jerusalem, and the completion of the plan of salvation.

The Jericho road truly, as the gospel says, ascends up to Jerusalem. For the greater part of the way it is a steady ascent. The expression, "go up to Jerusalem," so often recurring in the gospel, is not carelessly nor meaninglessly used. The traveler, approaching the capital of Judah from any direction, "ascends," because of this superior elevation of Jerusalem, being nearly three thousand feet above the level of the sea. Jericho and Jerusalem, in a straight line, are not more than ten miles apart; but following the windings of the road, the distance is considerably greater. So it is a long road, and a steep road, and a toilsome road, and in summer a hot road. Many must have been the resting-places of the Savior and his disciples when they ascended to Jerusalem by this highway. The road possesses to the Christian a most tender and sacred interest, because Christ walked along it; and, in addition, his last journey on earth was here made. Although millions have trod the stony highway, yet will it stand forever and inseparably connected with the Savior. I could not but regret to see that the Turkish government is building a new road, which leaves the old Jericho road at many points. This new road was commenced last year, and is now nearly completed. A great part of it pursues the same ancient course, and when it deflects, there, on the right or left, is seen the old Jericho road, a solemn, heart-moving relic of the sacred past. His feet, you say, walked there! All along this road the figure of Christ would rise up before my mind. The "face steadfastly set to go to Jerusalem" was before me. I could see the group of disciples and the faithful women of Galilee around him, and following him. What a mystery he was to some of them as they saw him toiling along the road on foot, when only the day before they saw him heal the blind Bartimæus! What conversations and teachings fell from the gracious lips on this last journey! The Light of the world was nearing the hour of sunset, if they had known it. They thought he was going up to raise Lazarus from the dead, and so he was; but he was also going up the toilsome, exhausting road of Jericho to die, himself, at Jerusalem. And yet who so patient and gentle and uncomplaining as he on this journey to the most dreadful death known to man!

We passed the inn, or rather the building, that stands on the site of the inn made immortal by the parable or history of the Good Samaritan. Passing into the court-yard, we found it well filled with recumbent camels and resting Arabs. I seated myself on a rock near the gate, and read, while our animals rested awhile from the intense heat of the day that beat down with the force of a furnace upon the treeless road and rocky hill-sides of this country. That part of the Scriptures is doubly enjoyed here which commences, "A certain man went down to Jericho." How thankful I am for the picture the Lord draws of a man who, when he started to do a benevolent or kind thing, went to the end of it, leaving nothing undone, because believing not in half measures! "Take care of him; and whatsoever thou spendest more, when I come again, I will repay thee." Most of us think our duty done when we put the traveler in the inn. Let the landlord do the rest. Some of us go two pence farther in kindness, and say: "Let the next traveler contribute something; let the landlord tell each passer-by, and raise a purse." All hail to the man that stops not and turns not back in a good work, but says, in substance: "If anything more is needed, let him have it. Behold, I will pay for all!" Such a man was Paul. Hear him writing to Philemon about Onesimus, "If he oweth thee ought, put that on mine account; I Paul have written it with mine own hand, I will repay it!"

Two hours after we ascended Mt. Olivet by the upper road, so often trod by the Master, and descended, looking, with the soul in the eyes, at the city outspread beneath us, which had received his tears and, later on, drank up his blood.

B. CARRADINE.

Revival at Natchez, Miss.

On last Sunday evening we closed our protracted meeting. From the beginning the signs of a revival were encouraging, large crowds attending the services during the week of prayer preceding the regular services of the revival. On Monday, October 13, Rev. George S. Inge arrived, and remained with us three weeks, preaching with earnestness and power. We had two services daily, which were well attended. Those of the morning were for the benefit of the church members and Christian workers; and many of these services were very precious. Some of our business men left their work to attend. The evening services were directed to those out of the church, and to sinners in the church. Notwithstanding Bro. Inge's fearless strictures on popular sins, the congregations were always large and attentive. During these services the church has been greatly revived, and its membership increased. Jefferson Street has received fifty-five, with some more to follow. Wesley Chapel has received about twelve, and the Baptist Church one, with, perhaps, more to follow; while at the Presbyterian Church about forty-five have joined.

We did not get any "Law and Order League" as a result of the revival, but the barbers of the city have discontinued Sunday work, and petitions are now in circulation to have the Sunday law enforced; and the town authorities, we hope, are waking up to their duty.

But, Mr. Editor, the revival is not over. The churches are in a better condition for work, and there is more fellowship among them than for some time before; and Rev. G. R. Pearson will be with us at the Presbyterian Church, Friday night. So we hope for a still greater work of grace in our town.

Perhaps we shall have another report to make to the ADVOCATE before Conference.

W. E. BALLARD.

NATCHEZ, MISS., Nov. 6, 1890.

Non Sum Qualis Eram.

Consciousness of a fact must be the ultimate ground on which the basis of its proof rests. There is no escape from this maxim in psychology; for all chains of evidences, no matter how elongated, must finally link to the ultimatum. "I know I know," says the child; "I know I know," echoes the sage. Beyond this none can go, even though he be an angel from heaven. Say, if you dare, this is false, and your very assertion proves its truthfulness. Then the conscious soul must know its phases, if known at all. Every change, every image is mirrored in just proportion and clear outline. This is a fundamental truth in that extensive and general field of human knowledge known as philosophy, and as old as Aristotle. Strange, though it seems, that a principle like this, so well known to the Grecians and schoolmen, and their successors in philosophic studies was never, so far as I know, applied by any as a test in matter purely spiritual (I mean the touch of spirit to spirit) until John Wesley's genius apprehended its full value, and his zeal fearlessly declared its incalculable worth in one's religious experience. And it is marvelous, indeed, to one enjoying the riches of spiritual communion, and with the many "knows" of Bible staring him in the face, how any reader of divine truth could be ignorant of a thing so plain. No doubt the apostles, fathers and early Christians were perfectly familiar with this privilege of everyone begotten of the Father and born of the Spirit. Many a lonely desert monastery and forest retreat became a very Pisgah, because of this living witness in the soul's innermost shrine. But the mist of ages beclouded it, and it was entirely lost for a time, or so mingled with other doctrines, as to lose its significance. Under God, Methodism inscribed it as the chief insignia on her banner, and went forth to conquer the world. No experience of the soul, however, no matter how urgently its fancied professor may advocate his claim thereto, can be accepted as true, unless this state is clearly portrayed in the Bible. Every false religion that has blighted and cursed humanity has had its hypocritical advocates claiming a conscious experience of divine acceptance. But the two witnesses, the written Word and the conscious state, are infallible when taken together. Moreover, the doctrine must be proven by a clear, general tenor of scriptural interpretation, and not by wrested and broken excerpts. Proof texts are good, but their real meaning surely follows the trend of the lesson whence they are taken. Upon these two basal principles stands the regenerated child of God, and can boldly declare to schismatics and gainsayers, "I am not such as I was;" for having passed from death to life, every conscious faculty and divine revelation attests the truth. Cleansed from all sin, the soul rejoices in its blissful state.

S. J. DAVIES.

Literary Notes.

Worthington Company announce as their new volume in their International Library, "The Pastor's Daughter," by W. Heimburg, translated by Mrs. J. W. Davis with photogravure illustrations. It is an intensely interesting and touching story, presents powerful sketches of character skillfully contrasted and has a peculiar charm of its own. From the outset it arouses the reader's sympathy. It is particularly well illustrated.

The last paper of Dr. Holmes' "Over the Teacups" appears in the Atlantic, for November. In concluding it, he addresses the public in person, and gives a brief sketch of the preparation and appearance of "The Autocrat," "The Professor," and "The Poet," and also adds some words to his correspondents. He closes by saying that now that the teacups have left the table, an occasional evening call is all that his readers must look for. "Over the Teacups" will soon be published in book form by Houghton, Mifflin & Co.

"In Darkest England, and the Way Out," the great book of the season in England, by General Booth, the chief officer of the Salvation Army, and one that has created a profound sensation and enlisted the deepest interest, will be published in the United States, from the plates received direct from London, by Messrs. Funk & Wagnalls, New York. In this volume is sounded a note clear and loud that will reverberate round the world. It proposes a marvelous undertaking, involving an outlay of $5,000,000, towards which amount, it is reported, large sums are pouring in from all quarters to its treasury. The book will contain several hundred pages, cloth, and be sold at $1 50. Messrs. Funk & Wagnalls announce that it will soon be ready. The first large edition issued in London was all sold within three hours after publication.

An Elegant Gilt Book; Golden Thoughts on Mother, Home and Heaven. Edited by Rev. Theo. L. Cuyler, D. D., and others. From an examination of its merits we heartily endorse the sentiment of Wm. M. Taylor, D. D., Pastor of Broadway Tabernacle, expressed in a personal letter to the publishor, E. B. Treat, 5 Cooper Union, N. Y.

"This book is as valuable in its contents as it is beautiful in its external appearance. There is something here for almost every experience, and the lessons for earth are all made to point towards the rewards of heaven. The book, as a whole, is worthy of all acceptation, and is especially timely in an age when the glory of the home is so frequently forgotten in the glitter of what is called society."

Price, $2 75. Gilt edge, in a box, $3 50. Two hundred thousand have been printed to meet the demand. Teachers, ladies and agents wanted to introduce it.

LULLABY.

BY STUART LIVINGSTON.

O faint and far the angels are
Calling my babe to thee;
O faint and low their voices flow
In a ceaseless melody.
Far away down from the distant skies,
Where the old moon, wanted and dying, lies
In the midst of a silver sea,
O slumber quick, for thou must not go,
Because thy mother loves thee so.

And still they call, and their voices all
Are bidding thee come away
To where they sing of a radiant King,
Whose robe is the light of day;
And they whisper a tale of a land afar,
Where the sunlight dies at the golden bar,
And to light it there needeth not ever a star,
For the Lord is the light, they say.
O slumber sweet, and thou will not know,
For thy mother can not let thee go.

O sleep, my babe, for I have prayed
The Christ to let thee stay,
And now on high, from out the sky,
The voices die away.
The voices are still that were calling to thee,
And the angels have passed o'er that shadowy sea
That beats on the shore of eternity
In the light of an endless day.
Then sleep, my babe, and thou shalt not go,
For the good Christ knoweth I love thee so.

Letter from Brazil.

Bro. E. P. Mackie has kindly placed at our disposal the following letter from our missionary, Miss Sallie Phillips, and we gladly give it to our readers. We ask the ADVOCATE children to read it. It is addressed to the children of the Seashore Sunday-school, but all the children will be interested in it.

COLLEGIO PIRACICABANA,
OCTOBER 4, 1890.

Mr. E. P. Mackie, New Orleans, La.—

Esteemed Brother: Your charming letter was duly received after its voyage of one month over the blue waters of the Atlantic, and was highly appreciated by us all. Thank you, thank you all, both for the letter and your contribution. And now for your prayers, we can not thank you sufficiently.

The letter with its cheery news of your work for missions, and more especially ours, brought us thrills of joy. The money that your Sunday-school will send us from their own collections will remain in our hearts a permanent, happy reminiscence of the Seashore Camp Ground Sunday-school. The laudable gift comes just in the nick of time to help us build a Sunday-school room to our little church here for the children. Last spring the Board graciously sent us a kindergarten teacher for the "College," the college with which I am connected. We have always felt the need of a kindergarten department in connection with our Sunday-school, and since Mrs. Breisford, the kindergartenar cama, we wish to raise funds for this purpose. So your kind and generous gift will be used for the "children of Brazil" by assisting to erect a Sunday-school room for the children here at our church in Piracicaba, Brazil. I shall have our pastor, Bro. Dickie, to tell the children here all about it, and how our little boys and girls there, no doubt, have denied themselves sweetmeats, etc., to send them this money in order that they may become learned in the gospel of our dear Lord and Master Jesus Christ. What a beautiful work this is for the children at home to do for the poor little ones in heathen lands! In all our mission work here our chief hopes are in the children. Through the hearts of the children we can, the Lord being willing, revolutionize this country for Christ. Ah, thank you one and all for this money.

Then you have prayed for us. Oh, how precious, precious are the prayers of little children! Can we, missionaries, ever become discouraged, weary again, when we know that the dear little children at home are praying for us? God bless you all, dear children, for your sweet prayers, and when life seems clouded and dark, we will remember your care for us, and take courage.

Please send the contribution when you are ready to Mrs. D. H. McGavock, Cor. Sec. W. B. M., Nashville, Tenn., for me; stating to her why you send it, and how I propose using it in the work here.

And now to know that you are so much interested in our work here in Brazil, I will endeavor to send you bits of news occasionally from Piracicaba. First, now, I will give you a description of our town and college. The former is situated as you, perhaps, already know, in southern Brazil, on a river of the same name; and if you do not know its location, look it out in the map, for I am anxious that we become well acquainted. The population is from 6,000 to 8,000 inhabitants, and quite cosmopolitan. Many European nationalities are represented here, but not yet has the Chinaman or Japanese put in his appearance. The town is quite healthy, but, like all other Brazilian towns, has numerous beggars, and its leper district. Mrs. Breisford, the president of the Flower Mission workers here, does a work for these poor lepers. They make bouquets; on each one a pretty white card, with a verse of Scripture written on it, is tied. These are placed by the band in reaching distance of the lepers. Then they stand in speaking distance to sing, read, pray and discourse upon the gospel with the lepers. This little town, walled in by mountains, as it is, reminds one of the descriptions of Nazareth where Jesus was reared. The many lepers, the wretched and poor, the Oriental customs of living and dressing, and then our missionary work here reminds us all forcibly of the days of Christ and his ministry. Then, too, we have rebuffs, and the finger of scorn pointed at us. The people appreciate our fine school, but not our religion.

Well, our college—it is the largest and most attractive looking square in the place. It is built of red brick, and its unpainted outside appearance insures one of solid comfort within the massive walls. It is the only two-story house in the city. The people here build after the old Roman style of architecture—low and flat. The house is commodious; our school department and dwelling all being under the same roof. We have a goodly number of boarders now, and there are two little girls who belong to the college. These children, of course, we consider as our own special property and govern them accordingly. They are sweet little girls, and are both Christians. To-morrow a dear little boarder girl here joins our church. She is my special pet, and calls me her college mama. Some time I will have her to write to you all. She is a wealthy little girl, and wishes now to go to the States with me when I return.

We have a flower garden, a kitchen garden and an orchard of tropical fruits. Oranges, bananas, ameixas (Japan plums) lemons and pineapples are common with us. Our fruits are life-giving elements in this enervating atmosphere—in fact, we would fare sadly without them. The turkey-buzzard keeps vigilant watch over the back premises of all Brazilian cities; they are the scavengers of South America. One of the ladies here calls them the "Board of Health." I rather like this ugly black bird which takes possession of our yard, fights the fowls, contends with the dog over his dinner, walks complacently near you, and feels at home everywhere. It is punishable by law to kill one, so valuable are they esteemed for their scavengeristic propensities. They are very black, slender in form, and unlike our North American buzzard—in fact, they are not odious looking. They often hover over the roofs of houses in groups, or pose themselves so gracefully that they look at a little distance like beautiful statuary. Now, I will say that the houses in Brazil have no chimneys, as the people do not appreciate fires, though it gets very cold in this latitude. I wear heavier clothing than when at home. Shawls, wraps are indispensable. The mornings and nights are very cool, while mid day is very, very warm. The sun shines with a majestic splendor and penetrating heat which are unknown at home. The sunsets are grand and beautiful, and the rotundity of the earth here is plainly visible at the sunset hour. Scenery in Brazil is intensely interesting, though I have seen so little. All vegetation, as you know, is luxuriant and gorgeous; still I do not think the flowers or forests so lovely, so interesting as those of our own beautiful southern Louisiana. There is an enchanting water cascade in the river here, which thunders away at all times, reminding one faintly of the mighty Falls of Niagara. The town is an old one, and its buildings mostly dilapidated. A peculiar fact is, that all over the vast country of Brazil the Catholic churches are crumbling into ruins; and we missionaries almost feel it an omen of the decay of Romanism in this country. Already there are many other forms of beliefs springing up, particularly so since the declaration of the Republic. Idolatry in the Catholic creed is carried on here far beyond the conception of the average reader at home. It is, indeed, appalling.

There are five lady missionaries here in the college and three American ministers (from our church) here in the town. Of the schools, our work, etc., I will write another time, as I see this letter has turned out to be lengthy. Before closing, I must tell you that now I am just convalescent and still very weak from a distressing illness, during which I was twenty days in bed. But now I think my health will improve as the spring weather advances. We are having spring now, but all the seasons here are similar in the flora of the country, etc. With kind regards from all our workers here to you, I will close by signing myself as,

Your own missionary,

SALLIE M. PHILLIPS.

P. S.—Mr. Mackie, though addressing this letter to you, I have written it partly to the children also. Please let me know if it proved of interest to them.

S. M. P.

Public Education.

"Caddo" says: "He and I agree on the question of public schools, but he (I) does not know it." In this "Caddo" is certainly wrong. We do (perhaps) agree as to what public schools ought to be, but there are a great many things about our public schools as now run with which I do not agree.

As to the "Christian people taking hold of the public-school system," I do not see just where they will take hold of it, seeing the politicians have it by both ends and at the middle. "Caddo" says: "I wrote strictly in behalf of the children, and not of State institutions of Louisiana as against our private and denominational colleges."

Here is the real point of difference. These "State institutions" are necessarily against our "private and denominational colleges," and unless "Caddo" can point out some way to put "our private and denominational colleges" on an equal footing with these State schools, which plead "free tuition" as an advantage over them ("private and denominational colleges"), his illuminations fail to enlighten. If "Caddo" will examine the report of the superintendent of education, he will find out several things, e. g.: That the free school fund of Louisiana is as effective and as far-reaching as that of the other States of the Union; perhaps, a trifle over the average. That $165,000 is a small proportion of the school fund available for 1889. That the distribution of the school fund is largely against common-school education, being appropriated to colleges and universities beyond the reach of the poor. That the "good moral character" required by the law does not prevent drunkards and swearers and gamblers from being teachers.

If the funds available for school purposes were given to school work, and kept out of college and university work, the fund, as it is, would be amply sufficient to run our schools from six to ten months in the year. To write of "public schools" in Louisiana, is to write of "State institutions as against private and denominational colleges," because these "State institutions" are a part of the system and consume thousands and tens of thousands of dollars which go against all private schools of high grade or low, and subtracts from the number and efficiency of the school as differentiated from the college.

Bro. Lewis' theory may be good, but it won't work. Under our present system, "the work of every school" can not "be perfect within itself." Neither funds nor teachers will permit it. The State has undertaken too much. The effect of it is to better educate the educated and let the illiterate go. This is wrong.

ST. BERNARD.

The Sabbath and the Columbian Exposition.

The churches have very generally expressed their convictions on the subject of the opening of the World's Columbian Exposition on the Sabbath. There is still room and need for a memorial representing especially the civil and business life of the nation.

The National Reform Association has organized a "Citizens' and Business Men's Protest," and has secured letters of concurrence from distinguished officers of the national government, from judges of the courts, from presidents and faculties of colleges and universities, and from many thousands of business firms.

All citizens who are willing to join in this effort are requested immediately to prepare a letter to the commission, using their own business letter heads, and simply saying: "We join," or, "This firm joins in the Citizens' Protest against the opening of the Columbian Exposition on the Sabbath." Induce other citizens and business men to do the same. Send on the letters as rapidly as possible; but keep up the work until you hear that a decision has been reached. Send the letters to the National Reform Association, 1520 Chestnut street, Philadelphia. At the proper time they will be presented to the commission by a deputation of business men representing, if possible, every State in the Union.

The following is the protest:

BUSINESS MEN'S PROTEST.

To the National Commissioners of the Columbian Exposition—

Gentlemen: The undersigned, citizens of the United States, request you to provide that the Exposition in your charge shall not be opened on the Sabbath, and that no labor shall be performed on that day in the preparation of the buildings and the grounds, for the following reasons:

1. Because we believe it is the will of the Creator that one day out of seven of man's time he devoted to rest and to worship.

2. Because regard for the institution of the Sabbath is deeply imbedded in the life and institutions of the American people, as is witnessed by the laws of the States, the usages of her courts and Legislatures, and the prevailing practice of her people.

3 Because such action will be in accordance with all the best precedents in our history—the Centennial Exhibition, the important local expositions of Pittsburg, Cincinnati, St. Louis, and Detroit; and the American departments in the expositions at Vienna and Paris, the closing of which last on the Sabbath was recommended in a special letter of great interest from the hand of Secretary Blaine.

4. Because the coming Exposition ought to represent American institutions, and the life of the American people, fairly and truthfully to the world, and an exposition which disregards the Sabbath would be false and misleading as to the true character of our institutions.

5 Because the opposite course will make the Exposition a powerful lever to subvert American institutions in this respect, to overthrow the laws and change the usages of our government, and to alter the currents of our social life, to the injury of morals and religion.

6. Because the right to the Sabbath rest, which is one of the most important and precious rights of man, would be invaded during the whole course of the Exposition in the case of multitudes of employees and others.

7. Because for these reasons, an exposition which disregards the Sabbath will be regarded with disfavor by great multitudes of Christian citizens who will be constrained to withhold their sympathy and co-operation.

8. Because the laws of the State of Illinois forbid common labor on the Sabbath, and it is not right or wise that a great national enterprise should set itself in opposition to the laws of the State on whose soil it is held.

Enter Your Protest at Once!

MR. EDITOR: On Monday, October 27, the New Orleans Evangelical Ministers' Union unanimously voted to communicate at once with the directors of the World's Fair at Chicago, urging them to have the doors of the Exposition closed on the Sabbath day. By the same vote it was also agreed that we urge all Christian bodies of every name throughout our State to join us in this request. 'We devoutly hope that our Christian people are not unmindful of the great national peril which threatens us. It is solemnly proposed to make the central feature of this Exposition a shameless scene of Sabbath desecration. In opposition to such savagery a friend writes: "The fight is on, and the hosts of hell are pressing hard to gain this tremendous vantage ground, and they will gain it, and hold it, unless the friends of the Sabbath rouse themselves and rally with unwonted enthusiasm." Let protests be circulated everywhere, and let the voices of the millions of our people be lifted up so loud that those who are intrusted with the management of the fair shall be compelled to hear! Remember the curse of Meroz, who came not to the help of the Lord against the mighty, and let us bestir ourselves.

R. W. MERRILL,
Committee.

The Scripture Its Own Witness.

We live at a time when skepticism against the church is countenanced and aided by skepticism within the church. When unbelievers assail the rock of revelation, there are those who counsel a surrender, which, they undertake to maintain, is the only way of victory, or even of safety. The large claims heretofore made for the Bible, they tell us, can not be sustained. If we would retain man's reverence for it, we must concede something to the demands of criticism. To which we reply, There is no such thing as retaining reverence for a book, the most important parts of which are regarded as literary forgeries, crammed with mythical fictions. A Bible so regarded has sunk below the reverence of a rational being. If we are to concede so much to the unbelievers, there is nothing worth saving. We have received the Scriptures as the Word of God. If it no longer witnesses for him, of what value is it to any except the archæologists?

But it is only necessary to read, to study, to "search the Scriptures," to become assured that they are no "cunningly devised fables," nor accidently preserved waifs of ancient literature. Mr. Gladstone has recently quoted a saying of John Bright, that he would stake faith in the Scriptures on the Book of Psalms alone. And Mr. Gladstone himself has shown in a forcible essay that the internal evidence of the Psalms is against the critical hypothesis that makes them the production of the period after the captivity. He finds none of the characteristics that ought to appear in psalms of the Maccabean era. They bear the traces of an earlier date corresponding with the ascribed authorship of David, Solomon, Asaph, and even of Moses. Similarly, Prof. Wm. Henry Green, D. D., in the Old and New Testament Student, has argued with his usual ability and full consideration of the evidence, that the titles of the Psalms are authentic testimonies of authorship. And he concludes with the pertinent remark, that "if David wrote any of the Psalms attributed to him, however few, the entire hypothesis of the history of Israel's religion framed by the Kuenen and Wellhausen school of critics vanishes into smoke."

Thus it is that the Bible is its own witness. And its testimony is yielded not only to the scholarly investigator, but is abundantly revealed to the humble reader. Whoever will give his days and his nights, not to Homer, as the Roman poet recommended, but to the Scriptures, especially of the New Testament, will have a profound and increasing confidence in them and reverence for their divinity. The gospel is its own witness; in a higher sense, to everyone that believes it. The faith that looks through the written to the incarnate Word, and sees in him the revealer of the Father and the way of life, has an unassailable assurance that the written Word is, indeed, the Word of God. If doubts and objections are raised, it is not wise to be impatient for an answer. Study the Word, drink more and more deeply into its truths, and breathe the air of its inspiration, and the soul will rise superior to doubts and cavils. In the serene atmosphere of divine communion, in the conscious reception of that knowledge of God which is life eternal, doubts are disconntenanced, difficulties vanish, and hostile opinions are abashed.

Our confidence is so strong in the capacity of the Bible to vindicate itself, that if men would only give to the study of the book the time given to reading about it, we should have no fear of the result. "The Word was made flesh and tabernacled among us," says John the Evangelist, "and we beheld his glory." The certainty that in the Scriptures God reveals himself, makes it certain that faithful attention to this revelation can not fail to discover and be impressed by the manifestation of the divinity. "To the law and the testimony" The Word testifies of its Author, and utters his will and proclaims his mercy.—Watchman.

New Prospect Camp Meeting.

Praise the Lord for camp meetings! Monday, October 27, brought to a close the eleventh meeting at New Prospect. Eternity alone can tell all the good these meetings have done; but it is so encouraging every year to hear some testify how they had found Jesus at some previous camp meeting held there. The meeting just past will bear its record of good work done for the Master, and the angel of the Lord has written many new names in the Lamb's Book of Life. Bros. Thompson, Nicolson, Cooper and Roberts were some of the brave soldiers of the cross who were with us to help battle against the powers of darkness. The beautiful angel of charity was there, and when sympathy was needed, it was not expressed in words only, but in a donation of money to a man whose house was burned while attending the meeting. Nearly two hundred dollars were raised for different purposes. The number of tents is increasing, and more interest manifesting itself each year. One of the greatest blessings of these camp meetings is the grove prayer meeting. It is held in the evening, just before the night service; and, with prayer in our hearts and songs on our lips, we are better prepared to work for our Savior. During the meeting a number of children joined the church, and became little followers of Jesus. While some souls found Christ, there were some who went away with the burden of sin still upon them. May these camp meetings continue, and may the Lord bless all connected with this work!

Church Dedication.

The third Sunday in October was a happy day for our congregation at Pelahatchie, Miss. Under the ministry of Bro. N. M. Clark, the house was put up; but in an unfinished condition it remained until this year. With the assistance of $125 from our Conference Extension Board, and the untiring energy of some faithful woman, we were ready, on the date mentioned, for dedication. Rev. C. G. Andrews, D. D., was with us, preaching three sermons, performing the entire service to the delight and spiritual benefit of our congregation. A beautiful pulpit and altar, the work of the Meridian Furniture Factory; a handsome communion service—in few words, a complete house, and not a dollar due on the day of dedication. Five hundred dollars spent on it this year.

Forest and Morton charge will balance accounts at Conference. We expect to have a parsonage at this place. This is a work where kindness to preacher and family lasts all the year.

Before-Conference Talk.

As there is much speculation rife in church circles all over Mississippi and Louisiana in regard to preachers and appointments for the next year, we command to our readers the following short article clipped from the Wesleyan Christian Advocate, of last week:

Perhaps it is natural and to be expected that appointments should be discussed just before the sessions of the Conferences. Ministers and their families, thousands of laymen and their families are concerned in stationing the preachers. To be indifferent would hardly be less than criminal; yet he who thinks seriously will see that much of this talk is hurtful to good consecrated ministers and churches loyal to our economy. Rumors are passed from one preacher to another that a certain preacher will go to a certain appointment. The rumor reaches the laity, and if the certain preacher is not wanted, effort is forthwith made to elbow him off and he is written down as a trickster—place-seeker, etc. "Slates" without the endorsement of a Bishop are not always the harmless things some people think they are.

The secular press, too, while doing much for the church, does sometimes to injure good men by paragraphs appearing just before Conference. About this season one may expect to find in the secular press a statement that Dr. Somebody will likely be sent to the most prominent church (naming it) in such a city. If the prominent members of the prominent church do not wish the Doctor, they begin at once to engineer to prevent his coming; or if the church now served by the Doctor wish to retain him, they begin work, and so trouble comes. The unoffending Doctor is sacrificed to the reporter's fondness for a sensational item—sometimes to his ignorance of our Methodist way of doing things. The strange part of the affair is that the preachers have such facility of faith in these rumors.

What can be done about it? To convert reporters from the errors of their ways is not a promising task. So the sensational paragraph will come like the fruit—in its season. About all one can do is to preach and practice the positive virtue of slowness of heart to believe until the appointments are settled by those whose business it is to settle such things. This will not insure against mistakes (they are unavoidable by fallible men) but it will guarantee to us the fewest number of serious errors in the assignment of the workers.

From the Work.

ITEMS FROM ALEXANDRIA DISTRICT.

I would like to give some facts of men and means which have been at work on the Alexandria district the last four years, if I could do so without seeming "puffy." Since the last session of the "Red River Conference" and the report from "Post Oak circuit," I have waited and watched with prayerful anxiety the development of this district into, at least, as grand proportions as any other in the interior of the State. Within the last four years we have built eight thousand dollars' worth of churches on four different charges—Evergreen, Lecompte and Boyce, Alexandria and Colfax, while throughout the entire district there has been a financial growth under the efficient management of our wonderful presiding elder, who has fully sustained the reputation of a true "blue-grass Kentuckian." Never during the four years has he failed to be on time at every quarterly meeting.

Tennessee also deserves mention for the son of her soil, B. F. White, who has been so abundant in labors at the hub of the district—Alexandria. In addition to a beautiful new church built this year, he has awakened an interest in education, the extent of which none can tell. We have already a splendid school in Alexandria, now under the control of the District Conference, in the hands of fifteen efficient managers, who can and, we hope, will perpetuate this first effort among us as Methodists in this district. There is also a committee of seventy-two earnest men preparing a very courteous and, we hope, successful invitation to Centenary College to remove from Jackson and settle among us at this place, which, for beauty, health and access, can not be surpassed anywhere in this State. There is a whisper current of one hundred and fifty thousand dollars under the lifted cap of Alexandria's bow as she offers the invitation to Centenary.

Not only this financial and educational work is upon us; but the Lord has done great things for us in the conversion and adding to the church many members of the oldest and most influential families of the State, who have been justified by faith and now have "peace with God."

BOOKS.

THE CHRISTIAN MINISTRY—A BOOK FOR THE MASSES. By Rev. S. W. Cole, of the Missouri Conference. Barbee and Smith, Nashville, Tenn. Price, fifty cents.

This little book is largely a reprint of articles published in the reviews and church papers. The author divides his subject into The Institution of the Ministry, The Work of the Ministry, The Endowment of the Ministry—and he discusses each of these points with clearness and force. Under the last head the author enters thoroughly upon the discussion of the tithe law and its present obligation.

PERIODICALS.

—OUR LITTLE ONES, for this month, is full of good things which the little ones will enjoy. Russell Publishing Company, Boston. Price, $1 50.

—The HOMILETIC MAGAZINE has sermonic outlines, expository papers and practical homiletics. E. B. Treat, New York.

—The BOOK BUYER, for the current month, has a fine summary of foreign and American literature. Charles Scribner's Sons, New York. Price, $1.

—KINDERGARTEN has a good table of contents in which are discussed various principles of that growing system. Alice B. Stockham and Co., Chicago. Price, $1 50.

—The GOSPEL IN ALL LANDS, for November, devotes its pages to Missionary Work in South America. This is a well-edited missionary monthly, published by the Methodist Episcopal Church. Hunt and Eaton, New York. Price, $1 50.

—BABYLAND is edited by the editors of Wide Awake, and is the finest monthly for the "wee folks" that we know anything of. The publishers have brought us under obligations for the bound copy of 1890. D. Lothrop Company, Boston. Price, fifty cents a year.

—The FORUM, for November, has an able corps of writers. President Walker, Dr. Eggleston, Prof. Winchell, Dr. Washington Gladden, Rev. A. D. Mayo, W. S. Lilly are among the contributors. And among the subjects discussed we find these: Democracy and Wealth; Formative Influences; Recent Views about Glaciers; The Embattled Farmers, The Progress of the Negro, and The Probabilities of Agriculture. Forum Publishing Company, New York. Price, $5.

Obituaries of less than thirty-five lines of six words each, will be published free of charge. For all over thirty-five lines, five cents for each additional line will be charged, and the money must invariably accompany the manuscript. When parties desire extra copies of the ADVOCATE containing the obituaries of their friends, they must send with the order the sum of five cents for each extra copy ordered.

HEARD—JESSE HOLIWAY HEARD died at the residence of his son-in-law's, Mr. L. D. Spear, August 15, 1890, aged seventy-one years nine months and three days.

He was born in Greene county, Ga., November 18, 1818; joined the church at the Haston Camp Meeting in 1839; was married to Miss Mary S. Hewell, of Newton county, Ga., in 1843; moved to Alabama the year of his marriage; to Mississippi in 1844, and to Calcasieu parish, La., in 1859, where he resided till his death.

He was a consistent member of the church from the time he first joined. It had long been his custom to read his Bible through, at least, once a year. He was a useful member of society; a father to the fatherless and a friend to the friendless. No unfed beggar ever went from his door, nor weary traveler turned off without lodging. He was strong in the faith of his Lord, and had often expressed his readiness to depart this life. Many a time, while in conversation with this writer, has he spoken of the glory that awaited him, and would say, "I'm tired of this life, and want to live with my Redeemer."

His sickness was of short duration and without pain. He had seemed to realize for some weeks that his time was about out. The day before his death he said to the writer, "I feel perfectly resigned to the will of God, to go or stay." He became unconscious a few hours before his death. The room was crowded with throbbing hearts and tearful eyes, awaiting the final moment. A smile seemed to appear on the pale face, the sunken eyes were turned heavenward. Without the least struggle or slightest sign of pain the last breath was drawn, and amid the sobs and tears of wife, children, grandchildren and friends, and the shouts of angels, his soul was borne, quietly and peacefully, home. "O death, where is thy sting? O grave, where is thy victory?"

DEATON—CLARA WENTWORTH DEATON, daughter of G. W and M. A. Deaton, was born November 5, 1871. At the age of thirteen she made a public profession of religion and joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in whose communion she lived a devoted Christian till she "fell on sleep," which occurred October 7, 1890. Her spiritual development continued until it could have been said that in her character and life there was an exemplification of the characteristics of true Christian womanhood; her lady-like deportment, love for the church; love for her Bible, which found expression in the discharge of duty, and in attending upon the ordinances of the church.

She was highly cultivated for a lady of her age. Well were the hours of her life spent! While at college, roaming through the ever-green fields of literature, and traversing the intricate paths of the sciences, in pursuit of knowledge, she neglected not that higher cultivation and education—the heart. The faculties of her well-trained mind were employed in honoring God, in preparing her heart as a receptacle for the Holy Spirit. It can well be said of her that she not only knew about God, but she knew God. As Paul declared, "I know whom I have believed."

Thus has ended the short, but beautiful life of the brightest and best spirits of our community and church. But God takes the best. She was his. In her death, through Christ, she has accomplished a greater work than she could have done had she lived; for in life she showed how a young Christian could live, and in death how one could die. So weep not, bereaved parents, brother and sisters. "She is not dead, but sleepeth."

H. L. VAUGHN, Pastor.

HOOTER—Near Phœnix, Miss., on Tuesday night, October 7, at eleven o'clock, aged fifteen months, FREDDIE, little son of Mr. and Mrs John Hooter, winged his flight to the sweet realms beyond the stars, to the blessed mansions where Christ says, "Suffer little children to come unto me, and forbid them not."

Yes, he has gone from our midst like a beautiful dream, too bright, too beautiful to last; yet the sweetness and purity of his life will rest like a halo of glory from the "Godhead," caught round the hearts of his parents and loved ones, shedding a holy calm, like a sweet benediction, drawing them nearer to God, and their loved one in whose hearts he will forever dwell.

L. J. ABEL.

CLARK—Mrs. MARY A. CLARK, sister of Budd and J. A. Swayze, after a severe and protracted illness, died at the residence of the former, which was her home, August 25, 1890. From youth she had been afflicted from various causes, each year adding, it seemed, some new torture, until her last days were passed in intense pain; but, buoyant in spirit, and hopeful, her sufferings were borne with unusual cheerfulness. Only the day before she was called to her last, long rest she was seen, when not in pain, talking and laughing with those around her. Kind-hearted and true, no one appealed to her generosity in vain, and, though in her feeble health she was, physically, unable to nurse the sick, she was always ready to administer to their wants, but often to her disadvantage.

She was a consistent member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, for about forty-nine years, having joined under the ministry of Rev. A. Shanks in 1841.

The host of her friends and relatives deplore her loss; yet we can but feel resigned, knowing that death relieved her of all pain, and believing from her last words—"Lord, I am ready"—that her last day on earth was but her birthday in heaven.

Farewell, my loving sister, farewell! it makes my heart ache to know that we will meet no more on earth, but, by the help of our Redeemer, will in the sweet by-and-by, where, I believe, "on the beautiful banks of that crystal sea" you will be waiting to welcome me home.

L. A. S.

CRUTHIRDS—Mrs. HESTER A. CRUTHIRDS was born near Tuscaloosa, Ala., April 3, 1832, and moved to Mississippi with her mother and brothers (Mrs. Brown and sons) about 1840. She was married to Mr. B. Cruthirds, July 31, 1856, and died of congestion, at her home, near Pittsboro, Miss., September 8, 1890.

Sister Cruthirds was a devout Christian. She joined the Methodist Protestant Church when young, but afterward joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in which she lived till translated to the church triumphant. She faithfully discharged her Christian duties in attending upon the ordinances of the church and helping to support its institutions. She was the preacher's friend, and knew how to make him comfortable when at her home; and not only so to the preacher—she was always ready to lend a helping hand to suffering humanity. She cared much for the sick, and did what she could for their relief. She not only loved her friends and neighbors; she loved her Lord and Savior, remembering his commandments to do them; knowing he hath said, "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these my brethren, ye have done it unto me."

She believed much in prayer, and for years held family prayer in her house. May the good Lord bless her husband, little grandchildren, and other bereft ones! May her influence and example lead them to heaven, where they will meet to part no more!

J. M. MASSEY, P. C.

EVANS—On September 20, 1890, a gloom of saddest sorrow was cast over Steen's Creek and the surrounding country on receiving the sad intelligence of the sudden death of Bro. ED. E. EVANS, which occurred at Adkinson, seven miles north of Jackson, from loss of blood, his left arm being caught in a gin and so mangled that his life was lost before a physician could be procured.

He was born in Rankin county, July 30, 1857; joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, at Wesley, August, 1879, under the administration of Bro. P. A. Johnston. He lived a consistent Christian until the day of his death. "Bro. Ed," as we called him, was a good boy, quiet and unassuming, a favorite among his associates. These characteristics were fully developed in manhood. He was loved and respected by all who knew him. He was a model young man and liberal with the means God had blessed him with. Though he had moved to an adjoining county, he still contributed his annual dues to his church.

He was an honored member of the fraternity of Free Masons. We buried him, with masonic honors, by the side of his honored parents, Dr. H. G. and Nancy Evans, at Wesleyana.

He leaves one own brother, a half-brother, four half-sisters and a large circle of friends to mourn for him.

JAS. F. ROBINSON, P. C.

BAKER—BESSIE WALLACE, youngest child of Dr. J. W. and Maggie J. Baker, was born in Franklin parish, La., January 5, 1886, and died of congestion, September 26, 1890.

Little black-eyed Bessie, with her rosy cheeks, sweet smiles and amiable disposition, was much loved, not only by her devoted parents, little brothers and sisters and pastor, but by all who knew her. What a surprise and what a shock her sudden death was to all! How sad that such an attractive and promising bud should be blighted ere it had bloomed and spread its full fragrance around! But the Shepherd had need of this lamb, and lovingly took her to his fold. The family is again divided, a little one having crossed the dark river before. One by one the crossing is made.

Bereaved ones, make the right crossing, and there will be a glorious reunion beyond the last river.

H. ARMSTRONG.

DEAR—HARDY DEAR was born near Columbia, Marion county, Miss., and died at Poplarville, Miss., Saturday evening, September 20, 1890, aged sixty-nine years.

Of our dear old friend there is nothing we can say that would be too good. A good man, a good citizen—kind, thoughtful, patient—he was a Christian. Those who knew him well knew what an honest, pure and noble character his was. For such as he does the blessing come, for, "therefore, there remaineth a rest for the people of God." He told one of his children, just before death came, that he wanted to go to Jesus, and there be at rest.

To those bereaved ones, who will miss so much the father's and husband's presence, we say that he has only gone before, and is with our other loved ones on that far shore, "where bright angels' feet have trod," and "where, beyond whose voices, there is peace."

A FRIEND.

AVERA—Born and lived in Greene county, Miss., to thirty years of age, and after three weeks of intense suffering and pain, near twelve o'clock, on the night of September 27, 1890, the spirit of HARDY O. AVERA, left its tenement of clay and went home to God who gave it.

All was done by faithful physicians to stay the disease, but to no avail. 'Tis said, "Death loves a shining mark;" and it claimed him for its victim.

The writer was intimately acquainted with him, as he boarded in the family a part of 1889. He served as sheriff of his county for four years, to the satisfaction of his constituents. In the fall of 1889 was a candidate for the office of representative, but was defeated by unfair schemes.

There were several children, of whom he seemed to be a favorite brother; was an affectionate son and a devoted husband. He desired so much to live; but often said during his sickness, "The Lord's will be done, and not mine;" and would add, "The Lord is strengthening me." Some time before he died he talked, sung and prayed, and just before the last summons came he told the family to kiss him good-by; that he wanted them to meet him in heaven.

May God comfort the bereaved loved ones, and help them to feel that "all things work together for good to them that love God."

W. P. MEADOR.

WARD—WILLIAM RAPP WARD, son of D. W. and Annie E. Ward, was born in Franklin parish, La., September 5, 1886, and died August 21, 1890.

"Truly, death loves a shining mark;" for this bright little one possessed a mind far above his tender years, and was the light of the household and the joy of his devoted parents. The little one left his home to go a few miles distant to visit his grandfather, was there taken sick, and died after a very brief illness. Our good Lord did not prolong the period of his suffering. Before the bloom of health faded from his cheek, the messenger from the Master did his work.

Yes, dear little Rapp is gone, and a pall of gloom has settled over the once bright and cheerful home. The blithesome voice that made sunshine and happiness in the hearts of all is hushed; the little busy feet will tread no more these earthly walks—but how joyfully they now walk the golden streets! The blessed Savior had need of him, and graciously called him to the mansions above before the sorrows and trials of life came upon him.

F. R. M.

McCRAW—W. T. McCRAW died September 26, 1890, near Nittayuma, Miss. Bro. McCraw was born December 4, 1840; was married to Sister Martha E. Carlisle, July 18, 1866. Bro. McCraw had been feeble for several months, but able to attend to his duties till about thirty-six hours before his death; when he had a chill and fever, running into that fatal disease, malarial hematuria.

Bro. McCraw was not only a good husband, but father, neighbor, citizen and a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, about twenty-three years. It was always a pleasure to me to meet Bro. McCraw at home, at church or abroad. He was one of the pillars of Bethel Church; he was a good steward and Sunday-school superintendent; also a worker in prayer meetings for the past few months. He has gone to rest. May the blessings of God rest on the family and many bereaved connections and friends! is my prayer.

J. C. ELLIS P. C.

McLAURIN—At the fourth quarterly meeting of Fayette circuit, Vicksburg district, Mississippi Conference, held at Harrison, on September 27, 1890, the following preamble and resolutions were offered and unanimously adopted:

Whereas, God, in his wise providence, has taken from our midst our beloved brother, the Rev. L. B. McLAURIN, we esteem it our duty to bear witness to Bro. McLaurin's worth and of the long, useful services that he has rendered to the circuit by his ministry.

Resolved, That, while we mourn the loss of our brother, yet we bow in humble submission to the will of God.

Resolved, That we, the members of the Quarterly Conference of Fayette circuit, extend to the bereaved family our tenderest sympathy, praying that the grace of God may be sufficient in this their time of need.

R. BRADLEY, for Com.

COCKERHAM—WESLEY, only child of J. W. Cockerham, Jr., and Luella E. Harrison, after comforting the hearts of fond parents for nearly eight short months, left the earthly home sad and lonely and went up to join the blood-washed throng of little children around the throne of God in heaven, who are singing, "Glory, glory, glory be to God on high." May father and mother meet their precious little boy again!

J. F. WYNN.

What is Scrofula

It is that impurity in the blood, which, accumulating in the glands of the neck, produces unsightly lumps or swellings; which causes painful running sores on the arms, legs, or feet; which developes ulcers in the eyes, ears, or nose, often causing blindness or deafness; which is the origin of pimples, cancerous growths, or many other manifestations usually ascribed to "humors." It is a more formidable enemy than consumption or cancer alone, for scrofula combines the worst possible features of both. Being the most ancient, it is the most general of all diseases or affections, for very few persons are entirely free from it.

How can it be cured? By taking Hood's Sarsaparilla, which, by the cures it has accomplished, often when other medicines have failed, has proved itself to be a potent and peculiar medicine for this disease. For all affections of the blood Hood's Sarsaparilla is unequalled, and some of the cures it has effected are really wonderful. If you suffer from scrofula in any of its various forms, be sure to give Hood's Sarsaparilla a trial.

BRONCHITIS

Is an inflammation of the bronchial tubes—the air-passages leading into the lungs. Few other complaints are so prevalent, or call for more prompt and energetic action. As neglect or delay may result seriously, effective remedies should always be at hand. Apply at once a mustard poultice to the upper part of the chest, and, for internal treatment, take frequent doses of

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral

C. O. Lepper, Druggist, Fort Wayne, Ind., writes: "My little sister, four years of age, was so ill from bronchitis that we had almost given up hope of her recovery. Our family physician, a skilful man and of large experience, pronounced it useless to give her any more medicine, saying he had done all it was possible to do, and we must prepare for the worst. As a last resort, we determined to try Ayer's Cherry Pectoral, and I can truly say, with most happy results. After taking a few doses she seemed to breathe easier, and, within a week, was out of danger. We continued giving the Pectoral until satisfied she was entirely well. This indisputable evidence of the great merit of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral has given me unbounded confidence in the preparation, and I recommend it to my customers, knowing it cannot disappoint them."

"Ayer's Cherry Pectoral cured me of a bad cough and my partner of bronchitis. I know of numerous cases in which this preparation has proved very beneficial in families of so that the medicine is known among them as 'the consoler of the afflicted.'"—Jaime Roig Vidal, San Cristobal, San Domingo.

"A short time ago, I was taken with a severe attack of bronchitis. The remedies ordinarily used in such cases failed to give me relief. Almost in despair of ever finding anything to cure me, I bought a bottle of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral, and was helped from the first dose. I had not finished one bottle before the disease left me, and my throat and lungs were as sound as ever."—Geo. B. Hunter, Altoona, Pa.

Briefs.

It is wonderful how high a man may rise. It is more wonderful how low the same man may fall. For years Bismarck was the arbiter of Europe. Kings and queens waited in breathless anxiety to hear his word of authority. He seemed to hold destiny itself in his hand. If the dispatches are to be credited, this ruler of empires has fallen, oh, how low! The dispatches of last week said, "Prince Bismarck has made arrangements to start a brewery at Friedrichsruhe." From the ruler of Europe to the head of a brewery!

The population of the country is 62,480,540. This is an increase during the decade of 12,324,757, and the percentage of increase is 24.57. From 1870 to 1880 the increase was 11,517,412, and the percentage was 30.08. This decrease is explained by the fact that the census of 1870 was grossly deficient in the Southern States. Considering the enormous immigration, that deficiency must have been very great to account for such a decrease in the rate of percentage. What if the present census shall turn out to be deficient, too?

The fifty largest cities in our country, beginning with New York, which has a population of 1,573,501, and ending with Camden, whose population is 58,274, have a population of 11,284,633. This is an increase in ten years of 3,533,918. This is a remarkble gain. It shows that the growth of the cities is nearly thirty per cent. of the entire growth of the decade. This growth of population in cities, when there is almost unlimited areas of fine country waiting for population, is a most significant fact, and one that is complicating more and more the great problem now agitating the mind of the church, as to how to reach the people with the gospel. One thing is clearly pointed out by this fact, and that is, that the churches must concentrate their best men and largest moneys upon the work in the cities. In view of this startling fact, the churches can not afford to fool away time and waste opportunities by experimenting with weak men and little doles of money. The cities need the best men that can be found and the largest bank checks that can be procured.

The more we read about the Salvation Army the more our astonishment grows. We are accustomed to boast of the greatness of Methodism after a century's existence and growth, but we can't compare with the Salvation Army, if the following is true:

In the last Review of Reviews Mr. Stead contrasts the present position of the Salvation Army with what it was at its beginning, by stating the following facts: Twenty-five years ago the Salvation Army consisted of one man and his wife, without money, without influential friends, without even a place of worship they could call their own. To-day the Salvation Army, built up out of the poorest members of the community, has 9,000 officers, who carry on operations at 2,864 centres of population scattered all over the world, and who raise every year for carrying on the Salvation war no less a sum than £750,000. Three-quarters of a million sterling per annum is four per cent. upon a capital of £18,750,000. Suppose the revenue does not fall off—and hitherto it has steadily increased—eighteen millions may be regarded as the cash value of the endowment created by the Army out of nothing in twenty-five years.

It is practically impossible to comply with the desire of the Publishing Committee to employ a Mississippi editor, or to make a larger or more interesting paper, unless the subscribers in arrears promptly pay what they owe.

Every dollar received for subscription and advertisements will be used to improve the paper. Let everyone indebted to this paper either remit the amount to the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE, or hand it to the preacher in charge before the meeting of Annual Conference.

Moss Point and Scranton.

We had the opportunity and privilege of visiting these thriving towns last week. Moss Point is situated at the junction of the Pascagoula and Escatawpa rivers, and is noted for its large lumber business. There are seven large mills, with a yearly output of nearly one hundred millions feet of lumber, and four planing mills, a foundry, a wagon-spoke factory and other industries which furnish employment and support to about four thousand people. There are several schools and churches. Our church there has been served for the past two years by Bro. Carley. He has a good, comfortable parsonage, and he says the people have treated him and his family exceedingly cleverly. We preached on Saturday night to a little company, and on Sunday night to a house full. Here we had the privilege of meeting again Father Griffin, who has passed into his ninety-first year. He gave us some delightful reminiscences of some of the first Methodist preachers in Mississippi, making special mention of Thomas Griffin, Miles Harper, Lorenzo Dow, Sellers, Hamil, and some few others. A remark of Thomas Griffin deserves to be started on a fresh mission. He was preaching on "Dram-drinking Methodists," and in the course of his sermon he said, "If one of these dram-drinking Methodists should die by the roadside, a turkey-buzzard would consult the dignity of his bill a good while before he would touch the carcass." Let all dram-drinking readers of the ADVOCATE take a note of that.

The town of Scranton, which has a population of about one thousand, is situated on the East Pascagoula river, at the crossing of the Louisville and Nashville railroad. It is improving quite rapidly. There are several lumber mills, factories, ship-yards, besides a large fish and oyster trade. Schools and churches and newspapers supply the educational and religious wants of the people. Our church is served by Bro. George H. Thompson. Our visit was a dedication occasion. The house has been built several years, but, owing to a small debt, had never been dedicated to the worship of God. The editor preached about Jacob at Bethel, and then formally consecrated the house to religious worship.

All along this coast "the problem" confronts the church. A population gathered from every quarter, and representing every phase of religion and irreligion, and this population increasing in numbers every year, will give Bishop Galloway and his cabinet an opportunity to display ecclesiastical statesmanship.

Our "Familienfreund."

The recent fire at 112 Camp street has not interrupted the publication of our German paper, Der Familienfreund. The conflagration has simply precipitated necessary improvements. There are many Germans at the various stations and circuits. They should be won for Jesus and our church. Give them our paper as an initiatory step leading to such happy result. The paper costs but one dollar per year.

J. B. A. AHRENS.

The Elections.

The result of the recent elections has brought everybody "up a-standing." The Democrats were "hoping against hope," the Republicans were nursing a "sure confidence of victory," and everybody else was watching to "see which way the cat would jump," without the least suspicion as to the proper direction to look. The Democrats have been astonished, the Republicans have been astounded, and everybody else has been seized with a "spell of the wonders."

The result is little less than a political revolution, the Democrats having well-nigh swept the country. The complexion of the Lower House of Congress has been completely changed. In the present House the Republicans have a small majority, but in the next house this small Republican majority has been changed into a large Democratic majority. Pennsylvania, New Hampshire, Massachusetts, Michigan, Wisconsin, Iowa and Nebraska have elected Democratic governors. Out of forty-four States thirty-four have gone Democratic. As quite a number of once Republican States have elected Democratic Legislatures, the probability now is that the Democrats will before long have a majority in the Senate as well as in the House. Quite a number of prominent Republicans now in Congress have been defeated in the race for re-election. Among these are Cannon and Rowell, of Illinois; Gear, of Iowa; McKinley and Smyser, of Ohio, and Dunnell, of Minnesota.

The causes of this political upheaval are said to be the reckless expenditure of money by the party in power, the McKinley tariff law recently enacted, and the "Force bill," which passed the House and now lies in the Senate. Evidently the masses have become dissatisfied with the course of things political and determined to have a change—and they have it.

A Good Reader.

Good reading is an art or accomplishment that is very rare. Even among persons who read a great deal, it is not as common as it should. Preachers read a great deal in public, and yet the majority of them are poor readers. There is no reason why this should be, but it is. The Clarion-Ledger, of Jackson, Miss., gives the following account of a fine specimen of good reading, sustained, too, for hours:

A finer piece of reading has seldom been listened to in the Hall of the House of Representatives than that on Saturday last, the reading of the new Constitution by Mr. H. Denio. The document contained sixty-two pages. The reading commenced at eleven o'clock A. M., and was continued, with but little interruption, until 1:35, when a recess was had for one hour. From 2:35 until six o'clock the reading was continued. About six hours was consumed, yet this gentleman's voice never failed him. And the delegates sitting in remote parts of the hall, as well as those in the galleries, never failed to hear distinctly every word that was read.

The American Committee for the relief of famine in Ireland has withdrawn its appeal to the American people, because the English government has at last promised some relief in providing work for the starving.

The Original Package Law.

Judge Caldwell, of the United States Circuit Court, has given an important decision on the "original package" question in Iowa, and his decision sustains the validity of the act of Congress known as the Wilson bill. The gist of the opinion is, that the act of Congress reduces the original package to the rank of domestic liquor, and thus subjects it to the operation and effect of the laws of the State, and as the State law was prohibitory and had been declared constitutional by the proper tribunal, it governs the original package. The Judge said:

The law of Congress protects the interstate transportation of liquor until its arrival in the State where transit is to end, and no longer. Upon its arrival in the State, the act of Congress declares that it shall be subject to the laws of the State. It is said the Supreme Court declared these laws to be unconstitutional in so far as they prohibited the sale of liquors by the importer or his agent in original packages, and that Congress could not, in the language of the learned counsel, "vivify a dead statute."

There are two answers to this contention. The first is, the act of Congress relegates the original package of liquor on its arrival in the State to the laws of the State, passed in the exercise of its police powers, and there is not now, and never has been, any question as to the validity of those laws. It is not the laws of the State, but the original package that is dead. The obvious design and intention of Congress was to withdraw at once the protecting shield of interstate commerce from the original packages of liquor the moment they entered the State where their transit was to end by placing them on the footing of liquor produced in the State, and declaring them to be subject to the same laws. This is what the Supreme Court, as I construe their opinion, had said Congress might do, and it is what it did do in language that admits of no evasion or discussion.

This seems to be the true interpretation of the act, and if so, is of great importance in States having prohibitory laws.

Scripture History Verified.

The discoveries made by explorations in the Holy Land, and other places connected with the history of the Israelites, are continually verifying the Scripture record. When Dr. Carradine started east, we charged him to verify the statement made about the Israelites hearing the curses and blessings pronounced from Mount Ebal and Mount Gerizim. The distance between these two points is considerable and the valley is fifteen hundred feet deep. Dr. Carradine said he had tested the matter as well as he could, and that there was no difficulty in his hearing the guide from the top of either mount while he stood in the valley below. From an exchange we clip the following test of the same matter:

A singular experiment has just been made in Palestine for the purpose of testing the accuracy of Dr. Colenso's statement that the people of Israel, after they had crossed the Jordan and were assembled in the valley between Mount Ebal and Mount Gerizim, in obedience to the command Moses had given them, could not possibly have heard the curses and blessings from the heights, as told in Deut. xxvii. Several friends who were on the spot determined to put themselves into the positions occupied by the children of Israel, and, accordingly, providing themselves with Bibles, two Scotchmen ascended Mount Ebal and two Welshmen went up Mount Gerizim, which are both about 3,000 feet above the level of the sea, while the rest of the party remained in the fertile valley below, which is about 1,500 feet deep. Then one of the Scotchmen, taking upon himself the part of the Levite of old, proceeded to read the curses, while his Welsh friends from Mount Gerizim replied with the blessings. Both of them were distinctly heard in the valley, and the party standing there reverently responded with the amens.

Thus we see the truth of God's Word is being vindicated and verified by the events of history of the present day. "Forever, O Lord, thy Word is settled in heaven." "The Word of the Lord endureth forever. And this is the Word which by the gospel is preached unto you."

Millsaps College Notes.

The Millsaps College Day reports are still coming in, as the following additions to our list will show:

Inka	$167 30
Inka Sunday-school	7 45
Marvin circuit	19 80
Newport	10 00
Houston	8 40
Gloster	25 00
Yazoo circuit	7 85
Prairie	29 25
South Warren	7 50
Kossuth	50
Canton	3 00
Macon	3 00
Sparta circuit	7 00
Leakesville	5 00
Winchester	7 00
Anguilla	10 00

Including $281 75 from Macon and $351 55 from Relling Fork, at which places the collection was taken up on the first Sunday in October, and has been already reported, the amount reported up to date from eighty-two churches is $3,645 27 in cash and notes.

Many other charges have, doubtless, observed the day: but have not yet sent in their reports. It is very important that reports and remittances be sent in at once.

Don't wait, brethren, until Conference to make these reports; but let us have them at once.

The work moves on encouragingly, and nothing is needed but that our people appreciate their individual responsibility and measure up to the demands of the hour.

That in many hearts this responsibility is felt is shown by cases of which the following is an example, and which is here given as worthy of being followed. Some time ago a loyal Methodist woman wrote to the agent that she had not had an opportunity of contributing to the cause, and asked that some blank notes be sent to her. To-day a letter has been received from her containing a postal order and a note for $10 each, and also $5 from each of two friends, who through her influence had become interested in the enterprise.

We have reached a crisis in our church life in Mississippi, and the time is quickly slipping away from us. The demand of the hour is for action. Let us be up and doing. The future will vindicate the wisdom and piety of this work.

A. F. WATKINS.

The German socialists held a congress recently at Halle, and the proceedings, speeches, etc., have rather surprised the world. There was no display of temper, no denunciation of religion, but a deliberate and calm expression of opinion in regard to the principles adopted for the guidance of the socialists. Bismarck's repressive laws having expired, and the young Emperor having put the socialists on their good behavior by his conciliatory attempts to improve the condition of the working classes, the good effects of the imperial policy have shown themselves in the proceedings of this congress. Henceforth, doubtless, the socialistic agitation will be conducted in a constitutional manner. So much comes of a wise governmental policy. Verily, the world is moving.

After years of contention the Mormons have at last concluded to give up polygamy. As they were brought to this conclusion only at the end of severe applications of law, too much dependence can not be placed in their professions. It is a good thing that the long contest is apparently ended. We hope ended for all time.

Notes.

The Fifty-second Congress, it is said, will contain at least thirty-eight straight-out Alliance men, and twelve others who are pledged to the Alliance.

Chancellors Caprivi, of Germany, and Crispi, of Italy, have held a conference, and the world is assured that an indefinitely long period of peace will ensue.

Mr. Moody will open a series of meetings in Chicago, Nov. 23, in connection with his Bible Institute work. He invites the attendance of all interested in Bible study and Christian work.

The three master minds of Europe to-day are Von Moltke, Bismarck and Gladstone, and these men are all past fourscore years. Does intellectual activity tend to prolong life? We believe it does.

In Switzerland the people have been called upon to vote on this question, "Shall or shall not the Federal government insure its citizens in the event of sickness or accident?" That is a far-reaching question, if decided affirmatively.

We have received No. 2 of our Sunday-school Workers' Series. It is, The Primary Class, by Miss Anna Johnson. This is a good tract on this important subject. These tracts are published by the Sunday-school Committee of our church at a nominal price, and we believe they will accomplish good.

The Lottery has received an unexpected blow from the United States Express Company. That company has issued orders peremptory to its agents to receive no money, tickets or lists of drawing from the Lottery, or in any way to aid in the transaction of lottery business. The cordon is being drawn and tightened around our pet monster!

The story of Von Moltke's life is worthy of study. He has just celebrated his ninetieth birthday. He toiled and traveled and studied assiduously, but was sixty years old before his opportunity came, and was sixty-six before his name came to be known at all; but at seventy-one he was universally recognized as the greatest military strategist of the age. There is no genius equal to pluck and persistence.

We call the attention of the brethren in the Mississippi Conference to Bro. Chambers' notice on the fifth page in regard to statistical blanks. Be sure and get the right ones and make them out in as legible hand as possible, and hand them in on the first day of the session. This is a most important matter, not only to the statistical secretary, but to the whole church. Accuracy in statistics is very desirable. We hope the brethren of North Mississippi and Louisiana will regard this as an exhortation to them also. "A word to the wise" ought to be enough.

Several fairs have been held recently in Mississippi and Louisiana, and the people have attended in very respectable numbers. The display of agricultural products, specimens of handicraft and exhibitions of improved breeds of stock has been very fine. The one drawback to all these fairs, as far as we have read accounts of them, is the gambling and horse-racing that seems to be an invariable attendant. Can not gambling grow fast enough among us, that the whole people of a given section must lend their countenance and support to it? It would be refreshing to read of a fair where this vice was uncompromisingly shut out.

The preamble to the new Constitution of Mississippi, we are glad to record, has a distinct recognition of the Divine Being. It reads as follows:

We, the people of Mississippi, in convention assembled, grateful to Almighty God and invoking his blessing on our work, do ordain and establish this Constitution.

God recognized, and "his blessing" asked upon the operation of the new Constitution, is gratifying to the Christian patriots all over the country. We repeat the prayer, that God's blessing may be upon the great State in all her efforts to advance a Christian civilization.

The Times-Democrat, last week, assorted editorially that the anti-lottery sentiment is on the wane: We do not know through what sort of glasses the T.-D. looks; but if the starting and publishing with continued and growing success of anti-lottery papers is a sign that the sentiment is weakening, then we don't know how to read signs. We believe the sentiment against the Lottery is growing in power every day. It is not as noisy as it was, but that is rather a token of strength than of weakness. Of one thing we can assure our readers, and that is, that the Times-Democrat is not rated as a disinterested party on the Lottery question. It is just in the position to endeavor to make the "worse appear the better reason."

Personal and Otherwise.

The Appeal and Avalanche, of Memphis, have been consolidated.

Rev. J. L. Futrell has been transferred from the Indian Mission Conference to the Columbia Conference, and stationed at Grant's Pass.

Dr. J. M. Sherwood, who for several years has been one of the editors of the Missionary Review of the World, died a few weeks ago, aged seventy-seven years.

A private letter from Dr. Carradine says he has received twenty people into the church since he took charge of Centenary, and that his congregation measures up to fifteen hundred persons.

Henry M. Sage has given another $200,000 to Cornell University. This makes $1,000,000 he has given to that institution. The last gift is for the establishment of a department of philosophy.

Henry M. Stanley, the great African explorer, arrived in this country on the sixth. He will make a lecturing tour, and thus give the people "the latest from the Dark Continent." He is accompanied by his wife.

Prof. J. M. Sullivan, of Centenary College, gave us a call last week. He represents the work at the college as progressing well. The number of students is increasing continually, and everything promises a successful session.

The Young Men's Christian Association of this city held an interesting union meeting last Sunday evening in the First Baptist Church, and evangelistic services have been held in their rooms, 10 Camp street, during the week.

Rev. E. B. Foust has been several days in the city having a pair of legs fitted. He lost one leg in the army and one this past spring. The State of Louisiana has made provision for supplying Confederate soldiers who have lost one leg, but not two. Bro. Foust is in good health and fine spirits. He has preached some during the summer. When he gets his new legs he expects to be able to get about very well.

We have been requested to publish complimentary resolutions of a brother who has finished his four years' term. If we should begin such publications, whereunto would it grow, seeing there are, perhaps, more than a hundred preachers in our Conferences who have finished, and are all worthy of compliment, and would all naturally expect us to publish the same in regard to themselves? Please excuse us from this.

Statistics of Mississippi Conference.

Dear Brethren: Please get the blanks ordered by the last General Conference. Reports can not be made on the old blanks. Please hand your reports to the statistical secretary as soon as you arrive at Conference. If it is in any way doubtful as to your being there on December 17, please forward your report, so that it can be recorded.

Your brother,

Postal Card Reports.

—Rev. H. R. Caldwell reports from Providence circuit, Brookhaven district: "Mississippi Conference Education Day observed by the Sunday-schools of the circuit, resulting in cash collection of twenty-two dollars."

—Rev. T. S. Randle writes from Lake Providence, La.: "I am hopeful of getting all my collections in full. I believe I have accomplished some good this year. Have had some accessions. I believe this people have advanced in the missionary cause."

—Rev. H. P. Crow writes from Gantown circuit: "I have held all of my meetings; had a glorious time; two hundred and fifty conversions and one hundred and ninety-four accessions to the church; building two new houses worth $1,000 each; new leaven in the church; new family altars; new Sunday-school organized, the revival has been great. God has been with us in power. Think collections will be full this year."

—Rev. T. B. White writes: "Mansfield has been blessed with a fine meeting. Quite a number of our ministerial brethren were with us and preached in demonstration of the Spirit and with power. Many of our members entered heartily into the work. Our dear Bro. Manly was with us three weeks and preached a pure and blessed gospel to the edification of the people, and by his spirit endeared himself to us. Three joined, several professed conversion, several the blessing of 'perfect love.'"

—Rev. J. T. Sawyer writes: "The protracted meeting in progress for some days at Felicity Church closed Friday night. We report a most enjoyable and spiritually profitable time. The attendance from beginning to end was large, and much good has been done. The preaching by Revs. Frank N. Parker, J. B. A. Ahrens, Charles F. Evans, Thomas Carter and Henry S. Johns was practical, evangelical, and in the power of the Spirit. We rejoice in a church in splendid financial and spiritual condition."

—Rev. J. S. Parker writes from Newton Station, Miss.: "We are closing up our work for the year on this charge well. The Ladies' Aid Society have beautified the parsonage by painting it inside and out. We have now one of the best and most comfortable parsonages in our Conference. We have raised in cash and notes $635 for Millsaps College. Children's Day was observed here. Have received thirty-five into the church. All our Conference collections will be paid up in full. We have a kind and good people to labor among, and one of the most delightful charges in the Mississippi Conference."

—Rev. H. L. Norton reports from East Baton Rouge circuit: "We have just closed our sixth protracted meeting with good results. Bros. Wiley Brown and H. B. Trevillion were present and did most of the preaching. We have had some most gracious meetings in East Baton Rouge during the year. About fifty have been added to the church and quite a number have been converted. The general state of the church, spiritually, is steadily advancing; prayer meetings are being organized at every possible or convenient place; family altars are being erected, and the good work goes on. Finance is a little backward, but coming up slowly. We hope to be able to carry up full reports to the Annual Conference. The blessing of the Lord rests upon the good people of East Baton Rouge."

A Remarkable Offer.

For several years a well-known Boston business house has made persons keeping poultry, few or many remarkable offers of premiums payable in gold, some as high as fifty dollars to the first and not less than five dollars to any winner of a premium. The best thing about those offers, was that the premiums have always been promptly paid as agreed in gold coin. Fifty dollar premiums do not "grow on every bush," as the old saying is, and we have no doubt to many who competed for them, the amount received came in handy to help pay the necessary bills of a hard winter, or if not, buy some luxury that the family absolutely needed, but otherwise could not afford. The same firm, I. S. Johnson & Co., 22 Custom House St., Boston, Mass., authorize us to state that they have prepared an offer of similar premiums this year, with one very important improvement, and that is, so that the first winner stands a fair chance with others of getting one hundred and fifty dollars in gold premiums. Why! that is as good as fifty dollars per month for the three winter months. It's worth trying for, any way. Johnson & Co. will send full particulars free to any person sending them their address on a postal card. These premium offers are made in connection with the use of Sheridan's Condition Powder to make hens lay.

Religion will always make the bitter waters of Marah wholesome and palatable, but we must not think it continually will turn water into wine, because it once did.—Warburton.

THE SUN.

FOR

1891.

Some people agree with THE SUN'S opinions about men and things, and some people don't; but everybody likes to get hold of the newspaper which is never dull and never afraid to speak its mind.

Democrats know that for twenty years THE SUN has fought in the front line for Democratic principles, never wavering or weakening in its loyalty to the true interests of the party it serves with fearless intelligence and disinterested vigor. At times opinions have differed as to the best means of accomplishing the common purpose; it is not THE SUN'S fault if it has seen further into the millstone.

Eighteen hundred and ninety-one will be a great year in American politics, and everybody should read THE SUN.

TO A SAD LITTLE GIRL.

You say you are ugly, and you are afraid
That nobody loves you, sad little maid;
For people whisper, with lip a-curl,
As you pass by, "What an ugly girl!"
Ah, well, my dear, if you mope and fret,
Your ugly face will be uglier yet.
Let me tell you the secret without delay
Of growing beautiful day by day.
'Tis a secret old as the world is old,
But worth in itself a mine of gold:
Beauty of soul is beauty of face,
For inward sweetness makes outward grace.

There is the secret, simple and true;
Now prove what its wisdom can do for you.
Fill up your heart with thoughts most sweet,
Bidding all others at once retreat,
And these sweet thoughts will grow like seeds,
And bloom into beautiful words and deeds,
And soon, very soon, they will leave their trace
Of loveliness on your ugly face:
The lines will be softer on cheek and brow,
Bright smiles will shine where tears are now,
Your eyes will sparkle, and some blest power
Will make you lovelier every hour.
Just try it, my dear; begin to-day
To do kind things in the kindest way—
To kindly think and to kindly speak,
To be sweet-tempered, gentle and meek.
Then never again shall you need be afraid
That nobody loves you, sad little maid.
Opinions will change, with a pleasant whirl,
And all will think, "What a charming girl!"

How Estelle Ran Away.

"I'm going to run away!"

"All right. You get your hat, and I'll put up a lunch for you."

Estelle Seelye was just ten years old, and was, as she said, disgusted with washing dishes, feeding chickens, and cleaning potatoes, and the day before she had decided to run away, leave her home, and go—she hadn't thought where. She thought she would tell her mother to surprise her, and was greatly astonished herself when her mother promptly gave her permission, and even went so far as to put half a pie in her basket. "For," she said, "I expect you will be gone some time, and I'll put enough for two days."

"I'm going to stay always and always," was the reply, given in a trembling voice.

She tied on her hat, and Mrs. Seelye kissed her, and asked her if she "wouldn't come and see her some time."

Estelle almost broke down, but pride came to her aid, and she answered, "I may come back to see you, but I'll never come to stay;" and picking up her basket, she trudged off down the road, not once looking back.

About a mile from the low-roofed farm-house stood an old, old forest, like the "primeval forest" in "Evangeline," where the wind is always sighing and shadows are always sombre even in the brightest day.

Having wandered thus far, Estelle thought she would go in under the trees and rest awhile. The moss was thick and soft on the trunk of a fallen tree, and as she sat down and thought of the home she had left, and her mother's sorrowful look as she kissed her good-by, and the blind chicken that had to have particular care and that ate from her hand, and the little pigs, and the—oh, dear, she hadn't said good-by to papa! And a curious feeling of loneliness and almost homesickness came over her. As she took a bit from her basket to eat, she could hardly keep her tears back; and all the while the soft, sweet summer wind sighed and whispered through the tall tree-tops, the feathery ferns waved and nodded at her, and every one of them seemed to point toward home. The birds seemed to be in greater number than ever before, though she had visited that place many times and gathered the flowers that grew in such abundance around her. She sat thinking of all these things, but always her thoughts would turn toward home. She gathered a large bouquet, and played in the brook that babbled noisily over the pebbly bottom, making sweet music that floated away on the fragrant air and lost itself in the passing breeze. Tired of play, she returned at last to the old log, and sitting down on a stone close beside it, leaned her head against the mossy pillow, and soon, very soon, dropped asleep, and in her dreams went wandering on and on, this time in search of home instead of away from it; but though she walked and walked, this way and that, no home could be found, and with a flood of tears she awoke, to find that "the shades of night were falling," and the curtain of darkness had already enveloped the woods.

At home, all was confusion, and anxiety was written on Mrs. Seelye's face. She had not expected that her little girl would stay away longer than the dinner hour; but that had passed, and the tea hour also, and no signs of the straw hat coming over the hill. At last, weary of watching, she went to the barn to tell father that she feared Estelle was lost. She was gone some time, and when she returned to her post at the window, she found Estelle quietly seated in the big rocking-chair, holding her hat in her hands, and gazing out into the gathering gloom.

Mrs. Seelye stopped in astonishment on seeing her, and was still more surprised when she said, without turning around;

"I've been down in the big wood all day, mother, and—and I'm so tired, I—I—guess I'll go to bed."

"But I thought you had run away and weren't coming back?"

"I didn't think it was so far, mother."

Nothing was said about her run-away trip, but her mother noticed that the dishes were done without a murmur, and the chickens were fed with more regularity, and she hunted eggs without being reminded every time. Not till long after that day did Estelle tell her mother of her startling dream when asleep in the old woods.

There is an old legend that speaks of the whispering in the trees as angels going to and fro, and when the trees are still, the angels are listening. Do you think some angel whispered to her that some time she might be without a home, and in her dream showed her how desolate a homeless wanderer is?—Zion's Herald.

That Little Tickling

In your throat, which makes you cough once in a while and keeps you constantly clearing your throat, arises from catarrh, and as catarrh is a constitutional disease the ordinary cough medicines all fail to hit the spot. What you need is a constitutional remedy like Hood's Sarsaparilla. Many people who have taken this medicine for scrofula, dyspepsia, loss of appetite, and other troubles, have been surprised that it should cure this troublesome cough. But to know the actual cause of the cough is to solve the mystery. Many cases of consumption can be traced back to the neglect of some such slight affection as this. Consumption can be controlled in its early stages, and the effect of Hood's Sarsaparilla in purifying the blood, building up the general health, and expelling the scrofulous taint which is the cause of catarrh and consumption, has restored to perfect health many persons on whom this dreaded disease seemed to have a firm hold.

A Steamer's Powerful Search-Light.

The steamer Connecticut, of the Providence and Stonington Steamship Line, has been equipped with a new Huntington search-light. Men have been employed on the big boat for the last few months constructing the light and getting it in running order. They accomplished their task only a few days ago, and now the big Connecticut can forge its way through Long Island Sound during nights, when fog dims the eyes of the ever-watchful pilot, without much fear of collision. The wonder is how the Long Island steamers ever managed to do without the search-light.

The search-light is situated on top of the pilot-house, and is played on any quarter desired by the pilot within. At his will, he can throw the powerful light toward the sky or water, and all by the means of a little wheel with a switch. On a very dark night objects at a distance of two miles away can be seen quite plainly. When fog is dense the light is thrown a distance of half a mile. The light is located on top of the pilot-house, is connected with the regular incandescent system of the boat. By means of a weight that may be operated by a magnet the steam fog-horn of the vessel is brought under the control of the electric current.

In the pilot-house there are four switches controlling the current that runs to the search-light and the fog-horn, and by means of these switches the pilot can start the search-light so that it will flash at regular intervals automatically; or it may be made to burn steadily; or it may be made to flash automatically at the instant the fog-horn begins to bellow, and cease to flash when the bellow ceases; or the horn may automatically bellow alternately with the flashing of the light; or the flashing and bellowing may be done alternately or simultaneously by hand. No such use of electricity was ever made before.—Providence Journal.

PAPER PILLOWS.—Those who are interested in industrial and benevolent enterprises will care to know that the making of paper pillows is attracting much notice in England. They are easily made. Tear the paper into very small pieces, not bigger than the finger nail, and then put them into a pillow-sack of drilling or light ticking. They are very cool for hot climates and are said to be much superior to feather pillows. The newspapers are printing appeals for them for hospitals. Newspaper is not nice for use, as there is a disagreeable odor from printer's ink, but brown and white paper and old envelopes are the best. As they are torn stuff them into an old pillow-case until a sufficient quantity is had. The easiest way is to tear or cut the paper in strips about half an inch wide and then tear across. The finer it is the lighter it makes the pillows.—Illustrated Christian Weekly.

A NEW ELECTRICAL DEVICE.—Another electrical device has been brought out to afford communication between trains in motion and to prevent accidents. Batteries and the necessary connections are placed on each engine, a central conductor being laid parallel with the rails. Should two trains approach within a certain distance of each other an alarm is sounded within each cab with an electric gong, and a steam whistle is set blowing. The engine drivers can stop the train and communicate by telephone. This communication can be effected when the trains are either running or still. An automatic signal is also given if the switch is misplaced or a bridge burned or washed away. Additional batteries are placed at the stations along the road, and these work the alarm should those placed on the engine become broken.

Asthma can't be cured? Oh! yes it can. Dr Davis' Compound Syrup of Wild Cherry and Tar will do it. I know it because it gave me relief. Every winter I was troubled with asthma, especially if the weather was damp, suffering severely. I took about six bottles of Davis' Wild Cherry and Tar, and am completely cured. It is the remedy for asthma. CHAS. HEINES, 506½ Chippewa Street, New Orleans, La.

Dr. Davis' Compound Syrup of Wild Cherry and Tar is a sure and speedy cure for coughs, colds, catarrh, bronchitis and consumption, and gives immediate relief in cases of croup and whooping-cough. Try it. One dollar bottles hold two and a half times as much as a 50c. bottle.

Diarrhœa, Dysentery, Cholera, Flux.

Good News for Housekeepers.

Light is breaking for the worn-out housekeepers in our large cities and small towns. We copy from the Times-Democrat, of November 5:

Fifty prominent families of Evanston are about to try an experiment which will be watched with interest by housekeepers all over the country. One of Mr. Bellamy's ideas, somewhat modified, is to be put to a practical test.

A month or two ago there was incorporated, under the State laws, an association to be known as the Evanston Co-operative Housekeeping Association. The plucky charter members were the following ladies: Mrs. Birney J. Moore, Mrs. John B. Kirk, Mrs. Marshall M. Kirkman, Mrs. Hugh A. White, Mrs. John Quinlan, Mrs. Chas. Deering and Mrs. Wm. Holabird. These ladies, under the spirited leadership of Mrs. B. J. Moore as president, have at last secured the fifty families necessary to raise the $5,000 which will be put into a co-operative housekeeping plant, including a kitchen and laundry. Each family has subscribed for four shares of capital stock at $25 a share.

The ladies have secured a substantial brick building at No. 711 Davis street, in the central part of Evanston, and this is now in the throes of a general reconstruction inside—an aggravated case of house cleaning. Large flues are being built preparatory to putting in the ranges, and the laundry apparatus necessary to do the cooking and washing of fifty healthy families. Branwell, Dean & Co., of Chicago, are fitting up the kitchen, and the Troy Laundry Company will put in the laundry plant with all the modern appliances.

Since the plan was first talked of the ladies of the association have had thirty-three applications for the position of steward, coming from men in all parts of the country. This is a sure sign that the movement is popular among a certain class at least. The ladies have finally settled this important question by securing the services of Mr. H. L. Grau, formerly in the employ of a co-operative establishment in Paris, and more recently steward of a hotel at Spring Lake, Mich.

The viands are to be prepared in the co-operative kitchen, under the supervision of the chef. When ready they will be placed in a tin receiver, the amount varying in accordance with the needs of each family. These tin receivers are made to fit into a Norwegian kitchen, a contrivance in the shape of a galvanized iron box, the hollow sides of which are filled with boiling water, thus keeping the food hot while it is carried in delivery wagons to the various houses. From the tin dishes the soups and steaks and sauces and all the other good things will be transferred to each lady's own china, which will be washed at home as before.

The raw materials for food are to be bought at wholesale. There will be a considerable saving, too, in fuel and gas, for the expense of one large kitchen is not going to be one-tenth as much as that of fifty small ones. The wages of twelve cooks and assistants, together with rent and delivery service, the ladies have figured at $571 a month, or about $2 64 per week for each family's kitchen service. The officers of the association, therefore, confidently promise to set a table that will be up to the standard set by the average wealthy family of Evanston for $4 per week for each adult; a slight reduction will be made for children. A card of prices will be prepared after the style of a restaurant bill of fare, so that each family can vary the cost and make-up of its meals to any desired extent.

The co-operative laundry, the other half of the scheme, promises even more remarkable results. Through it the ladies are promised a total relief from washday. For the low price of 25 cents per dozen pieces, counting shirts, collars, cuffs and children's dresses all alike, the terrible day known as "Blue Monday" is to be wiped from the Evanston calendar.

The number of stockholders will be limited to fifty, and there will be no extension of the number, for the plant is constructed for only that number of families. The fact that the people—among the most prominent in Evanston—do not consider this as merely an experiment, is evidenced by the fact that they are putting $5,000 into the machinery and general equipment. Mrs. Moore, the president of the association, has received letters from as far East as Buffalo and as far West as Omaha, all inquiring about the progress of the movement, and uniformly expressing the sentiment, "If you succeed, we are going to try it too." The ladies expect to have their Thanksgiving dinner served under the new regime.

by local applications, as they can not reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube gets inflamed, you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result; and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that we can not cure by taking Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

MALARIA

DR. KING'S

Royal Germetuer.

NEW ORLEANS, Sept. 2, 1890.

I have been for several years constantly subject to malarial fevers. The best medical treatment has failed to remove from my system the malarial poison that produced them. I have had to use an average of forty grains of quinine per week for years. The fevers would invariably return in a few days, if it was discontinued. The quinine was doing great harm to my nervous system, but I had to keep it up as my only hope. Recently I commenced using Dr. King's Royal Germetuer. It has done me more good than all the medicine I have ever taken. I have not had a fever since commencing its use, nor found it necessary to take a dose of quinine. It has toned my nerves, built up my strength and given me a buoyancy and healthfulness of feeling that I have not known for years. My experience justifies me in saying that this wonderful remedy is all that is claimed for it, if not more.

Luke xxiii, 33-47.

GOLDEN TEXT.—The Lord hath laid on him the iniquity of us all—Isa. liii, 6.

TIME.—Friday, April—A. D. 30.

PLACE.—Calvary has never been positively identified.

PARALLEL PASSAGES.—Matt. xxvii, 33-54; Mark xxii, 16-39; John xix, 17-30.

34. Father, forgive them—These words were probably uttered at the terrible moment when the Sufferer was outstretched upon the cross and the nails were being driven through the palms of the hands. We must surely suppose that the prayer was uttered not only for the Roman soldiers, who were the mere instruments of the executors, but for all his enemies. It was in accordance with his own teaching, and his children have learned it from him. So we must think of this great Sufferer, racked with pain, despised of men, forsaken by his disciples: yet not a murmur falls from his lips, not a bitter word—nothing but this prayer of love and pity—that God would forgive their great sin!

35. Beholding—The word implies that they gazed as at a solemn spectacle. Isa. xxii, 17; Z ch. xii, 10. They seem as a body to have been far less active in insult than the others. If he be Christ, the chosen of God—Literally: If this man (contemptuously) be the Christ of God, the chosen. How the universal derision of what appeared to be such abject failure and humiliation enhances our estimate of the faith of the dying robber!

36. And the soldiers—The soldiers were engaged in their mid-day meal at the foot of the cross, and offered our Lord the sour wine served out to them with their rations. Their words of mockery are reported by St. Luke alone. Offering him vinegar—Not even the prayer for their forgiveness had touched the hearts of the soldiers. But still they knew not what they did, and did but follow their nature, in the path in which others led the way. Possibly, too, rude as their natures were, there was a touch of rough kindliness mingling in their mockery, as shown in the offer of the vinegar, or sour wine, which they had brought for their own use; unless, indeed, we suppose the refinement of cruelty, which held it before the eyes of the Sufferer, but did not, as afterwards, convey it to his lips.

37. If thou be the King of the Jews—As the title over thy cross asserts. The soldiers would delight in these taunts, because, like the ancients generally, they detested all Jews. Tumults of the most violent kind often arose from the brutal insolence of hatred which they showed to the conquered nation.

38. An superscription also in letters of Greek, and Latin, and Hebrew—The inscription was written in all these languages, which were the most common, that all might see the reason why he was put to death: in Greek for the Hellenistic Jews; in Latin, that being the language of the government under which he was crucified; and in Hebrew, that being the language of the place in which this deed of darkness was committed. But, by the good providence of God, the inscription itself exculpated him, and proved the Jews to be rebels against and murderers of their King. See on Matt. xxvii, 37. It is not to be wondered at that they wished Pilate to alter this inscription (John xix), as it was a record of their infamy. This is the King of the Jews—The superscription is given differently by each evangelist. St. Luke, perhaps, gives the peculiarly scornful Latin form, Rex Judæorum hic est. The other evangelists give: This is Jesus, the King of the Jews (Matt. xxvii, 37); the King of the Jews (Mark xv, 26); Jesus of Nazareth, the King of the Jews (John xix, 19). Although no serious or sensible writer would dream of talking about "a discrepancy" here, it is very probable that the differences arise from the different forms assumed by the title in the three languages. It will be seen that St. Matthew's is an accurate combination of the three, not one of which was an accusation. It is only while the priests were deriding Christ that it began to dawn on them that Pilate, even in angrily yielding to their violent persistence, had avenged himself in a way which they could not resent, by a deadly insult against them and their nation. This was their King, and this was how they had treated him.

39. One of the malefactors—In St. Matthew and St. Mark we are told that both robbers "reviled" him. Here, then, we might suppose that there was an irreconcilable discrepancy. But though the evangelists seem to be on the very verge of mutual contradiction, no single instance of a positive contradiction can be adduced from their independent pages. The reason of this is partly that they wrote the simple truth, and partly that they wrote under divine guidance. The explanation of the apparent contradiction lies in the Greek words used. The two first Synoptists tell us that both robbers, during an early part of the hours of crucifixion, reproached Jesus; but we learn from St. Luke that only one of them used injurious and insulting language to him. If they were followers of Barabbas or Judas of Galilee they would recognize no Messiahship but that of the sword, and they might in their very despair and agony join in the reproaches leveled by all classes alike at one who might seem to them to have thrown away a great opportunity. It was quite common for men on the cross to talk to the multitude, and even to make harangues, but Jesus, amid this universal roar of execration or reproach from mob, priests, soldiers, and even these wretched fellow-sufferers, hung on the cross in meek and awful silence.

40. But the other, answering, rebuked him—The legends connected with the penitent thief are not without interest. Dysmas, or Titus, as they name him, had once before looked on the face of the Christ. He had been one of a band of robbers that attacked the holy travelers in their flight from Bethlehem, and had then pleaded for their lives. The virgin mother had blessed him. The child Christ has foretold his sufferings and his repentance. Now, as he gazed on the face of the divine Sufferer, he recognized the features of the infant Jesus. Dost not thou fear God—Rather, Dost not thou even fear God.

41. This man hath done nothing amiss—The confident assertion may have rested on previous knowledge of our Lord's life and character, or on some report that had reached him on his way to Golgotha, or on Pilate's confession that he found no fault in him.

42. Lord, remember me when thou comest into thy kingdom—More accurately, in thy kingdom. There is something singularly touching in the trust implied in the form of the appeal. He asks for no special boon; no place on the right hand or on the left; no room in the King' palace. He is content not to be forgotten, certain that if the King remember him at all, it will be with thoughts of tenderness and pity. We must not lose sight of the faith which can alone have dictated this intense appeal to One who hung mute upon the cross amid universal derision. The faith of the penitent thief looked forward not merely to a kingdom of the Christ, but to a kingdom beyond the grave, since he could see the Sovereign of that kingdom in one who was at the point of death.

43. To-day—An unexpected boon—for the crucified often lingered in agony for more than two days. In paradise—Para de isos is derived from the Persian word Pardes, meaning a king's garden or pleasaunce. It is used (1) for the Garden of Eden (Gen. ii, 8, etc.); and (2) for that region of hades (sheol) in which the spirits of the blest await the general Resurrection. What the Lord said in answer to the penitent's prayer was in part a contrast to it, in part its most complete fulfilment. Not in the far-off "coming," but that very day; not "remembered" only, but in the closest companionship; not in the tumult of the battle which his thoughts had connected with the kingdom, but in a fair garden with its green lawns and still waters, its trees of Knowledge and of Life. No picture could meet the cravings of the tortured robber more completely than that; none probably could be more different from his expectations.

44. It was about the sixth hour—That is, mid-day. Over all the earth—Rather, over all the land. There is no reason to believe that the darkness was over all the world. As the moon was full it could not be an eclipse. No marvel of the kind is mentioned by either Jewish or Roman historians. On the other hand, Christian writers such as Tertullian and Origen, speak confidently of it, nor was it likely that writers more or less independent of each other, like the evangelists, should have stated what had not happened.

45. And the sun was darkened—That it could not have been due to an eclipse is certain, for the paschal moon was at the full. The vail of the temple was rent in the midst.—The vail intended must be what is called the Parocheth, or inner vail, which hung between the holy place and the holy of holies. It was very heavy, and splendid with embroidery. The obvious significance of the portent was the departure of the Shechinah or presence of God from his now deserted temple. This particular event is (naturally) not mentioned by the Jews, but we may have reference to it in various omens of coming wrath which they say occurred "forty years" before the destruction of the temple.

46. And when Jesus had cried with a loud voice, he said—Rather, And crying with a loud voice, Jesus said. St. Luke here omits the Eli, Eli, lama sabachthani, and the effect of that cry on the multitude: the "I thirst," which was the sole word of physical suffering wrung from him in all his agonies; and the one word in which he expressed the sense that his work was finished. Father, into thy hands I commend my spirit—These words have been among the dying utterances of St. Polycarp, St. Augustine, St. Bernard, John Huss, Jerome of Prague, Luther, Melanchthon, and Columbus. He gave up the ghost—None of the evangelists use the words "He died," but "He breathed forth," and "He sent forth" or "gave up his spirit;" probably because they wish to indicate the truth stated in John x, 18, that he gave up his life "because he willed, when he willed, how he willed."

47. The centurion—Who commanded the quarternion of soldiers. It is remarkable that St. Luke gives us several instances of "good centurions." This was a righteous man—This remark might have been drawn forth by the silent majesty and holiness of the Sufferer. After the earthquake he may have added, "Truly this man was a Son of God!" Matt. xvii, 54. The latter phrase sounds at first incongruous on the lips of a heathen, though "Son of God" is found as a title of Augustus in some inscriptions. But the centurion had twice heard our Lord pray to "his Father," and even Pilate had been overpowered by the awful dread lest he should be something more than man.

The Salvation Army.

"Think of the doctors, now dead and gone, who have knit their brows over the sick." Yes, and think too, of the patients, the Chronic cases, the "given over" ones, those over whom the brows were knit in vain. The chronic diseases exhaust the resources of the physician, and the strength of the sufferer, who, given over as a hopeless case, has only to wait for death, the physician being able only to palliate his sufferings, or give temporary relief. The impression is becoming general, however, that there is a remedy for many of these chronic and "hopeless" cases, and that it is the Compound Oxygen Treatment of DRS. STARKEY & PALEN. But read for yourself what the Compound Oxygen Treatment has accomplished in chronic cases and the testimonials from patients given over by physicians. Read what Judge Kelley, Mrs. Livermore, and numerous others, have said about it. You will find it in our brochure, sent free, 200 pages, a Treatise on Compound Oxygen. It will give you records of many, very many cases and cures, with testimonials. Of course, there are worthless imitations, either under the same or different names, but all alike claiming to possess the properties of Compound Oxygen. None genuine but that manufactured by DRS. STARKEY & PALEN. 1529 Arch St., Philadelphia, Pa., or 120 Sutter St., San Francisco, Cal.

Four women, all told

The first told how much easier it was to wash with Pearline. She saved half her labor, and the work was better done.

The second told how much longer the clothes lasted, since she'd used Pearline. The rubbing that wore them out wasn't necessary.

The next told how many things she did with it; she washed the kitchen floor, or the finest china—the most delicate lace, or the coarsest fabric. Whatever she did with it, she saved money by it.

The fourth told of the harmlessness of Pearline. She had used it for ten years, and she knew nothing that was washable could be hurt by it.

These are only four out of millions who use Pearline, but the others say the same things and more. Try it yourself; then you can tell about it.

Beware Peddlers and some unscrupulous grocers will tell you "this is as good as" or "the same as Pearline." IT'S FALSE—Pearline is never peddled, and if your grocer sends you something in place of Pearline, do the honest thing—send it back.

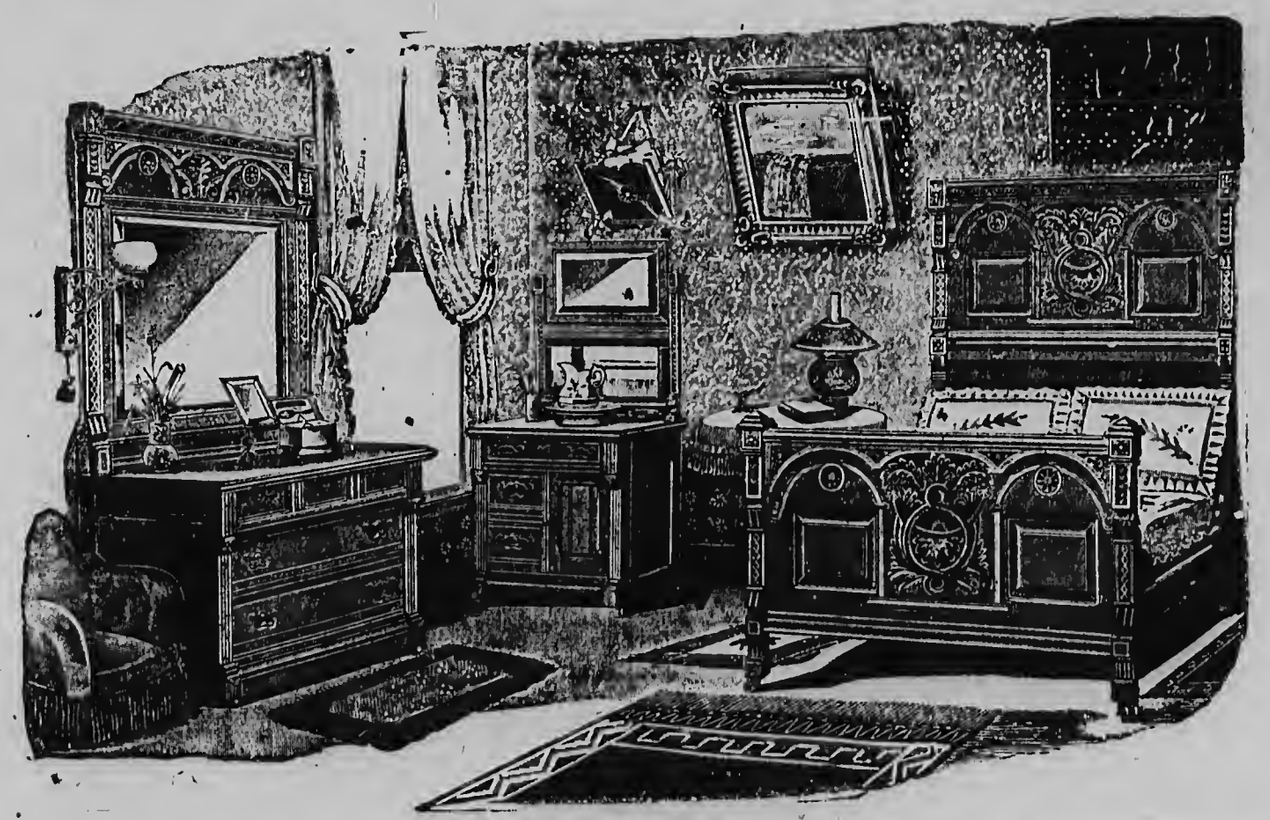
Complete Suits anywhere from $35 to $650, and odd pieces—such as Sofas, Divans, Easy Chairs, Patent Rockers, Window and Reception Chairs—at as low prices in proportion as the Complete Suits. I have these goods in Cherry, Mahogany and Walnut, and can give you your choice of any of the following coverings: Crushed, Embossed, Plain and Silk Plushes, Hair Cloth, Mohair, Raw and Spun Silks, Satins, English Tapestries, French Velours, Petit Point, Brocatelle or Damasks. I make a specialty of these goods, have many of the patterns made specially for my own trade, and can offer a greater variety at lower prices than any other house in the South.

NEW STOCK

In all departments, and every grade of goods, from the cheapest to the most expensive, in endless variety. I have all the latest and most fashionable designs, and, as I have only purchased from factories whose goods I have been selling for the past six years, can and do guarantee every piece of Furniture that leaves my establishment.



LOW PRICES

are the order of the day, and I propose to sell strictly reliable goods at a lower price than has ever before been quoted in the South. My store has long been known as "The Cheapest Furniture House in New Orleans," and this season I intend to add to the reputation it has gained in this respect. I only ask a chance to save you money.

HANDSOME BEDROOM SUITS.

A very extensive assortment of these goods in every style; and whether you wish to pay $40 for a Complete Suit of twelve pieces, or from that price anywhere up to $1,000, I can sell you what you require. I have these goods in Black Walnut, Natural and Dark Cherry, and Natural and Dark Mahogany, or in imitation of any of these woods, and can furnish the very latest, neatest and most artistic designs.

I have also a large and carefully selected stock of Hall, Library, Dining-room and Kitchen Furniture; Reed, Rattan and Wicker Chairs, Rockers, Lounges and Cribs; Brackets, What-nots, Easels, Music Stands and Fancy Top Tables; Carpets, Carpet Strips, Matting, Shades, Curtains, Curtain Poles, and everything necessary to furnish a house completely throughout.

LARGE SALES.

I have a large city trade, and am shipping goods extensively to every Southern State. My country trade has increased very rapidly during the past year, and the facilities which my new store affords me for carrying a larger and better stock will enable me to still further extend it, and to give complete satisfaction to my customers.

Highest of all in Leavening Power.—U. S. Gov't Report, Aug. 17, 1889.

Royal Baking Powder

ABSOLUTELY PURE

The Clergy of America take kindly to Life Insurance, and have been its firmest champions. They fight for it and thoroughly believe in it. There are many splendid financiers in the Church; that they are intelligent and thoughtful for their future goes without saying. All denominations seek the protection of Life Insurance, and are careful to select the company offering the greatest security and the most advantageous terms to policy-holders.

The Episcopal Diocese, of New York, has an Insurance Fund for all of its members, and the Mutual Life, which is the largest and strongest company in the world, with over $122,000,000 assets, has been officially selected by that body to issue all the insurance to these worthy people.

A Southern Department of this Company has been opened in New Orleans under the management of Mr. T. H. Bowles, with offices in Louisiana National Bank Building.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

DOMESTIC.

Mr. O'Brien, M. P., in his speech at a reception given to him and companion at Philadelphia, on November 7, said that American generosity had made the British blush; non-resident landlords and law-makers were the cause of Ireland's woe.

Some time since it was said that President Harrison would call an extra session of Congress early in November. Since the defeat of the party of the administration nothing has been heard of this extra session, and all information concurs in the belief that it will not be called at all.

The latest estimates of standing of the House give the Eastern States 52 Democrats and 42 Republicans, the West 67 Democrats and 49 Republicans, and the South 116 Democrats and 5 Republicans, or 96 Republicans to 235 Democrats.

Florida is to have a fitting monument to the illustrious of the Confederate dead. The Ladies' Confederate Monument Association, of Pensacola, on November 5, let the contract for a monument of Virginia granite, to be erected in Pensacola.

Fire in Shreveport, La., on November 7, entailed a loss in buildings and stocks of about a quarter of a million of dollars.

Maj.-Gen. Schofield, commanding the United States Army, in his annual report to the Secretary of War, says of the Indian question: "All that is now requisite for the final peaceful settlement of the great Indian problem is wise, just and humane treatment of the Indians upon their reservations, and the presence or proximity of such a military force as will deter the young and restless among them from attempting to imitate the heroic deeds of their ancestors, to the recital of which they still listen during their periodical festivities."

An overwhelming majority in the House does not give the Democrats the power to enact new legislation nor to undo what the last Congress has done. However strictly the result of this election may be construed as a reproval of that Congress for its action on important measures, the Senate and the President stand in the way of the enforcement of a strictly Democratic policy.

The third anniversary of the execution of the Chicago anarchists was celebrated on November 9, by sympathetic speeches and a parade of sorrowing friends in that city.

The New York Stock Exchange opened in confusion on the tenth instant. Every bid was taken and stocks declined rapidly. Prices in many instances were far below the quotations of years, and for awhile a panicky feeling prevailed. The excitement was largely due to the nervous state of apprehension that exists on the foreign stock exchanges.

A meeting of physicians was held in this city, on the tenth instant, to organize a Homeopathic Hospital Association. A ladies' auxiliary is to be formed later.

FOREIGN.

While the Irish National League is said to be in financial straits, the landlords' organization is not so much better off. The receipts of the Property Defense Association have been very slender of late, perhaps in view of the hopeless character of the struggle against the League. This Property Defense Association has its headquarters in Dublin, and employs a force of men to assist boycotted farmers, landlords, sheriffs, etc.

A gang of counterfeiters of coin, who have been operating in frontier towns on the line between Saxony and Austria, have been arrested. An investigation of their case has resulted in implicating a number of hitherto-respected residents of the various towns in the criminal proceedings. The profits of the gang are said to have been enormous.

The Liverpool Journal of Commerce states that the Duke of Westminster, one of the wealthiest men in England, has associated himself with Stanley in a company formed for the purpose of developing the resources of various regions in West Africa.

If the Liberal party had carried a general election in Great Britain, there could hardly be more rejoicing than there has been last week over the result of the elections in America. The industrial classes everywhere are elated, and commerce shares in the general exchange of greetings.

Archdeacon Farrar has inspected the shelters, refuges, etc., organized by Gen. Booth, of the Salvation Army, as a nucleus for the great enterprise of redeeming the English masses, and has been deeply impressed with the thoroughness and practicability of the scheme.

The German chancellor—Von Caprivi—who visited Italy last week, met Signor Crispi, the Italian prime minister, in Milan. In an address to the German residents in Milan, Von Caprivi said the interviews had cemented and perfected the standing of the triple alliance; that there had never been such a calm of international politics as at present, and that he was confident peace would be maintained for a long time to come.

A dispatch from Rome states that the Pope has been solicited through Cardinal Rampolla, in behalf of the British government, to prohibit Catholics in America from contributing to the funds of the Irish National League on the ground that the funds are used for unlawful and immoral purposes.

The recent pastoral letter from the Irish archbishop condemning the boycotting and plan of campaign was issued in compliance with peremptory orders from the Pope himself, who desired proof of the absolute submission of the Irish episcopate to the decision of the curia. This is practically a contradiction of the report that the Irish bishops are determined to support the League.

Life is misery to thousands of people who have the taint of scrofula in their blood. There is no other remedy equal to Hood's Sarsaparilla for scrofula, salt rheum and every form of blood disease. It is reasonably sure to benefit all who try it.

DONALD KENNEDY

Of Roxbury, Mass., says

Don't write to me when taking the first bottle of my Medical Discovery. I know how it makes you feel, but it's all right. There are certain cases where the Discovery takes hold sharp, but it is the diseased spot in you it has taken hold of, and that's what you want. The Discovery has a search warrant for every humor, from backache to scrofula, inside and outside, and, of course, it makes a disturbance in your poor body, but the fight is short, you are better by the second bottle; if not, then tell me about it, and I will advise. I will, however, in the future, as in the past, answer any letter from a nursing mother.

Sincerely yours,

Letter No. 32.

A TRIP TO BETHLEHEM—POOL OF GIHON—ELIJAH'S IMPRESS—RACHEL'S TOMB—THE WISE MEN OF THE EAST—BETHLEHEM—THE CHURCH OF THE NATIVITY—THE TURKISH SOLDIER—WOMAN'S PLACE IN CHURCH—WELL OF BETHLEHEM—FIELD IN WHICH RUTH GLEANED—THE FIELD OF THE SHEPHERDS.

I selected an afternoon for a trip on horseback to Bethlehem. Leaving the Jaffa Gate the road turns south, and passes by the edge of the lower pool of Gihon. Here Nathan crowned Solomon king, and the people gave such a confirming shout that the noise rolled like a tidal wave down the valley of Hinnom, and struck with awful distinctness upon the ears of Adonijah, who, with his companions and followers, gathered at the well of Enrogel, plotting to overthrow the government of David, his father.

The pool to-day has nothing but its size left to hint of its former glory. It is dry and empty, and a solitary donkey was cropping the thistles that are now growing in the bottom. How hard it was for the fancy to make this desolate place appear as it did that morning when the wisest of kings, and one of the most faithful of prophets, and a vast multitude, with the Cherethites and the Pelethites, stood on its margin, with cultivated gardens around them, and battlemented walls crowded with people, and fluttering with pennons above them! Surely God allows these wonderful contrasts in the same place to teach us how pitiful and short-lived is this world's glory!

Upon the summit of a hill, near a Greek monastery, I was shown the print of Elijah's form in a rock, upon which he stretched himself as he fled from Jezebel. When a large church perpetrates such a preposterous lie as this, who wonders at the godlessness of the people at large? Truly, the native worshiper is fed on falsehood, and falsehoods from a thousand to fifteen hundred years old. Think of a lie a thousand years old, and still being told! They call them traditions, out of politeness; but it takes a great deal of politeness, or self-restraint, or unilluminated ignorance, to swallow the statements made to you here on all sides, on the authority of the Greek and Roman Catholic Churches.

The tomb of Rachel is on the roadside, near to Bethlehem. The general opinion is that this is the true site. I notice that Samuel mentions the place to Saul in I. Samuel x, 2. The place called Zelzah is hard by the sepulcher, and can be seen from the Bethlehem road. The scriptural account of the death of the comely young wife of Jacob is simply and touchingly given in Genesis xxxv, 16–20. "And it came to pass," says the eighteenth verse, that "as her soul was in departing (for she died), that she called his name Ben-oni: but his father called him Benjamin." Whose heart has not been melted at the untimely end of the beautiful Rachel? The name Ben-oni meant "the son of my sorrow;" but, as falling from her dying lips, it meant much more. She was one of that class of women who never had the man she loved altogether to herself. A less comely sister obtains him before she does by a trick of the tricky Laban. Then come the domestic plots to wean Jacob from her. After that the sorrow of barrenness, and then the sore experience of angry words from the husband. Then come the early death, the giving up of husband and children and life in the very bloom of her young womanhood. "Call him Ben-oni," she said, and died. And the word sounds like the sigh of a disappointed, heart-broken woman. Nor is this all, for the life denied at so many points is still seen in death, for Leah sleeps by the side of Jacob at Machpelah, while Rachel lies alone in her grave in the fields near to Bethlehem. Who that remembers her, as she first appears, as the lovely young shepherdess of her father's flock, blushing under Jacob's kiss and admiration, could have foretold so brief and sad a life? I never think of Rachel without associating her with another young woman who died in similar circumstances at Shiloh, at the news of her husband's death, and the taking of the ark of God. "Cheer up, they said to her, for thou hast borne a son; but she answered not," says the Word of God. "And she named the child Ichabod, saying, the glory is departed from Israel, for the ark of God is taken."

As I entered the tomb of Rachel, I found it filled with women from the neighborhood, who had come to observe the day in her honor. Certainly there must be a subtle, sympathetic drawing felt by the female heart toward this young mother in Israel, whose dust lies at our feet.

Along this road, over which we are traveling, the wise men from the East came; and over the hills in front of us shone the star guiding them to the young Child. Then were the wise men glad when they saw the star. How sweet are the restored blessings of God! They had lost the star in formal Jerusalem. Along this road came rushing once the servants of Herod, with the cruelest mission ever known on earth. Think of it!—a commission to kill all the children under two years of age in a town. Then was there heard the voice of weeping! What a scene, above all conception and description, of shrieking mothers and dying children! He that has seen a mother's grief at the death of a child must multiply this by the mothers of Bethlehem, and by the suddenness and horribleness of the wholesale murder. "They would not be comforted," says the Bible about these mothers. Can't you hear the cry breaking out afresh from the different homes?

Bethlehem is at last reached, after having been seen on its hill-side several miles away. The houses are ordinary, the streets narrow, the children dirty, and the inhabitants poor. Little shops, with wide-open doors, revealed numbers of men sitting on the ground, hard at work at their trades, the principal of which is the manufacture of mother-of-pearl trinkets, to be bought by travelers as souvenirs of the Holy Land. Bethlehem looks little like the city of David, much less like a place where the Son of God was born. But the Bible explains it in a sentence, "He humbled himself."

We entered the Church of the Nativity, built over the reputed place or cave of our Lord's birth, although the Scripture says nothing about a cave. Like all the rest of the churches of the East, this one of the Nativity looked dingy and unattractive, and was, as usual, lined with beggars at the door, lying on the floor, or seated against the wall. There are two holy places to which you are pointed. One the place of the birth, and the other the spot where the manger stood. They also show you a marble fountain in the corner, out of which the Virgin drank, they tell you, while she was here; as if Mary had stayed some months and years in a stable. As the eye glances at the strikingly modern marble font, or reservoir, the sickening feeling that arises from a palpable lie seizes upon you, and you turn away disgusted. The room has a number of dimly burning tapers, and lamps turned low down, so that you can scarcely see two yards before you. Until the eye gets accustomed somewhat to the darkness, you are almost afraid to take a step. The Greek and Roman Catholic Churches are peculiarly fond of darkness when they show their sacred relics and holy places. Aside from the desire to impress a certain class of people, are not these churches really afraid to turn on the daylight upon these places? What revelations the sunlight would make! what hoary falsehoods would have to take instantaneous flight!

As I stood by noticing the people coming in and kissing the reputed spot of the nativity, my eye, growing more accustomed to the dimness of the place, took on the outline of a Turkish soldier standing, with gun by his side, close by. My question as to why he was there, brought out the reply that he was stationed on the place to keep peace between the Greeks and Roman Catholics; that a bitter strife and enmity existed between the churches, and that only a few years before a dispute arose about the hanging of a curtain in this very room, when a fight arose, and sixteen lives were lost. Hence the Turkish guard. This is the type of Christianity that the Turks and Arabians see in this country. Can anyone wonder that they are willing to remain Mohammedans? While standing thinking upon these things, a Greek priest came in suddenly with a censer, and began to throw the perfumed smoke most vigorously into the niche where they say our Lord was born. Having finished this, he went next to the recess of the manger, and filled that with incense; after which performance he departed with the air of a man who had saved a world!

My next visit was to the church upstairs, where the Greeks were holding religious service. Priests, men and boys were in one end of the room, chanting in the most discordant and monotonous manner. The females stood at the other end of the room, and were not allowed to approach nearer for fear of their defiling the altar. With a burning pity I looked upon the faces of these mothers, who, with their daughters, young and old, were thus banished, while strapping boys and hard-looking men went carelessly in and out of the sacred place. These women were far better-looking and nicer-looking than the men, and seemed much more interested in the service. So the wonder grew over the custom that shut the woman out and shut the man in the holy place of this church. But let me not forget to mention that after a while one of the priests went out with a censer, and, passing in front of the women, waved smoke in their faces. I suppose it was partly to fumigate them. Anyhow, it was something; their existence was thus recognized, and they were, doubtless, made happy and grateful for small favors in absence of larger ones. A little perfumed smoke, the rattle of a censer, is good enough, the Greek Church thinks, for a woman. The error up-stairs locks hands with the error down-stairs. And God, in his amazing mercy, allows this monstrosity, that covers the reputed site, to stand untouched by the thunderbolts of his power. The heart stands in the midst of all the senseless mummery of this place, and says, with Mary of old, "They have taken away my Lord, and I know not where they have laid him."

Of course, I visited the well of Bethlehem, or David's Well, as it is called, situated on the edge of the town. Here he drank often as a barefooted shepherd-lad, and in remembrance of its cooling draughts, said on the hard-fought field of battle, "Oh, that one would give me drink of the water of the well of Bethlehem, that is at the gate." What devotion to David and courage is seen in the consequent act of the three mighty men, and what loftiness of spirit in the king as he poured the water upon the ground! God forbid that he should drink water that cost blood, and the blood of such men! The mouth of this well is to-day almost even with the surface of the ground, and, looking in, I found that it was dry! Alas! for the fountains of this world, for which we so ardently sigh, and over which such struggles take place. They all run dry. There is but one fountain—satisfying, unchanging, eternal. It is spoken of in John vii, 37, and again in John iv, 14.

In the distance I looked at the fields where David kept his father's sheep, and, as he watched them, studied also, night after night, the flock of stars that wandered over the heavenly fields, guided by the heavenly Shepherd. Over them he patiently followed the call of simple duties, until the great call of God to a broader sphere came to him. No thrusting himself forward, no wire-working for position; but a calm waiting on the will and providence of God.

Two other interesting places are pointed out in the same quarter. One, the field of Boaz, where gleaned the beautiful Ruth. One line written by Keats, which I read when a boy, and which has ever since clung to me in connection with the fair young exile from the land of Moab—

"She stood in tears amid the alien corn."

She had given up home, kindred and country for the sake of another. The blue mountains of her native land she could see in the distance beyond the Dead Sea, from the fields in which she gleaned. Who wonders at the attitude, look and sorrow depicted in that eloquent line?

The other attractive point is the field where the shepherds were watching their flocks by night when the angels descended and proclaimed the glad tidings of the Savior's birth. As I looked at the grassy slope, now brown under the burning sun of summer, there was nothing to show that it had once been dyed with the rich colors of heaven, stirred with angel wings, and full of echoes of the eternal world. It looks like any other field, with its gentle declivity, quiet surroundings, and absence of life; but, nevertheless, no other field ever had a more glorious announcement made over it than the shepherds' field near Bethlehem. I have often thought of the feelings of the shepherds after, as the Bible says, "the angels had gone away into heaven." The praising, the singing, the angels themselves—gone away into heaven! Can't you see the shepherds gazing after them into the empty blue vault as the disciples gazed after Christ? The stars was the shut door to the shepherds, the cloud to the disciples. "Gone away into heaven!" Has the reader sounded the depths of these words? The light gone, the beauty and glory gone, the loved one gone into heaven—and you left in the field.

"Gone away into heaven!" But, thank God! they left the Savior. He was at Bethlehem that night, he is by the side of the reader now, and, having him as a present helper and comforter, we can stand the loss of all things until we, too, shall go away into heaven.

Some Facts.

MR. EDITOR: With sincere respect for Bishop Keener, as our senior chief pastor, I write this article.

1. It is a "fact" that a Methodist college is soon to be built in Mississippi.

2. It is a "fact" that Centenary College will lose nearly all its Mississippi patronage thereby.

3. It is a "fact" that from the loss of this patronage, and the remoteness of Centenary from the mass of Louisianians, that it will fail, and the property become valueless very soon.

4. It is a "fact" that we now probably have an opportunity of selling the property to the State.

5. It is a "fact" that if we do not sell before the close of the next session of our Legislature, the only opportunity of selling at all is probably forever gone, and we be compelled to turn our magnificent buildings over to the owls and bats.

6. It is a "fact" that we, since the war, with Mississippi and Louisiana Methodism a unit, working for it, have never had more than 137 pupils enrolled at a session, and that for only one term, and more than half of that number preps.

7. It is a "fact" Alexandria is within about twenty miles of the geographical center of Louisiana.

8. It is a "fact" that Alexandria is as healthy as any town or city in the State.

9. It is a "fact" that within six months she will have direct railroad connection with almost the entire State.

10. It is a "fact" that we are informed by a responsible, pious, successful young minister of our Conference, that a party will probably give a large endowment to Centenary, if it be removed to some central and accessible place in Louisiana.

11. It is a "fact" that a high official in our church believes that the Mississippi Conferences will give the Louisiana Conference all their title and claim in Centenary College, if it be removed to such a place as Alexandria.

12. It is a "fact" that we have choice between two valuable and eligible sites, of twenty or more acres, for a college campus.

13. It is a "fact" that by the time the Legislature meets, and passes an act of purchase for Centenary, a good agent can raise fifty, or more, thousand dollars for the erection of the college at Alexandria.

14. It is a "fact" that, by so doing, we will hold on to the same "rope," only to lengthen and strengthen it for better work.

15. It is a "fact" that, by this plan, we will better subserve our State's educational, financial and religious interest, than we can with Centenary where it is.

16. It is a "fact" that if the State purchase Centenary as an addenda to the asylum, she will, after the first year, save per year, at least, seventy thousand dollars.

17. It is a "fact" that Centenary College and appurtenances belong to the Louisiana and Mississippi Conferences conjointly, and that any member of either of the Conferences has a perfect right to lay plans and urge their adoption, which, he may think, will tend to subserve the objects and interests for which it was established.

18. It is a "fact," growing out of all the above facts, that such agitation can not but benefit Centenary in the end.

19. It is a "fact" that right here in our own District Conference, Dr. Hunnicutt raised about thirteen hundred dollars toward the endowment of Centenary, showing that the agitation of this plan had not interfered with his success.

20. It is a "fact" that it was only after being advised by one in high place in our ministry, and others of high standing in our Conference, that I called a committee of citizens together for the purpose of laying plans to bid for the location of Centenary at Alexandria.

21. It is a "fact" that the circular letters and subscription were sent by us to only two persons outside this parish. Now, I leave my brethren to decide as to my rashness in moving in a matter of such great moment. If there be a possibility of injury to Centenary by the building of Millsaps, and a possibility of counteracting that evil, it should arouse each and every one of us to planning and working for that end.

22. It is a "fact" that we be brethren in Christ Jesus the Lord, and are jointly trying to further the great interests of our Master's kingdom here on earth; and to succeed, we must have no jealousy, no malice, no uncharitableness, no quarrelings, no disputings, no acrimony, but love, charity, brotherly kindness, patience, forbearance, etc.; and thus, as one man, with one mind and heart, prayerfully, diligently, perseveringly, humbly, earnestly, bravely, industriously work together in Christ, through Christ, and for Christ. All this I pray for, as an experience for myself and for all my brethren in Christ, of every grade and order in the church of God. May God's best blessings rest on Centenary, its Board of Trustees, with their president, the faculty, alumni and students, now and forever! Amen!

B. F. WHITE.

We feel constrained, as the lawyers say, to "traverse" some of Bro. White's facts.

2. Is simply an inference from No. 1, and can not be a fact at this present time.

3. Is an inference from No. 2—that is, an inference from an inference, and, of course, is not a fact.

4 and 5. Facts based upon the use of the word "probably" can hardly be considered real facts.

6. The fact stated here loses its value to Bro. White's side of the question, when it is known that the largest number of students in Centenary College was during last session. That shows the college is growing in favor.

10. The adroitness in this statement is remarkable; but a careful reading shows the fact to be the reception of the information, and not the endowment. The word "probably" qualifies the "giving of a large endowment."

11. The fact of a "high official's" belief does not amount to anything, for several "high officials" may believe the other way.

13. This is only a possible fact. The history of colleges is against its realization in the time specified.

14. There are several contingencies here, and these do not always evolve into facts, but sometimes into failures.

15. How can an untried experiment be a fact?

16. This is mere opinion. If correct, why should the church sell a college to turn $70,000 a year into the State treasury?

17. The first part is a fact. The second part is no fact at all. No member of a Conference has a right to lay plans to sell a Conference college, and publish those plans to the world without specific authority from the Conferences who own the college. If this principle of action obtained to any extent, there would be no security in anything.

18. We doubt somewhat this fact. If, however, this "agitation" has been gotten up to "benefit Centenary," then what must the friends of the new enterprise think of the agitators?

19. If we recollect aright, Dr. Hunnicutt's visit to the Alexandria District Conference was prior to the publication of this scheme, and, therefore, this fact has no force.

21. The last clause in which the word "possibility" is used throws additional doubt upon facts Nos. 2 and 3.

22. This we heartily believe; but let us work within the limits of proper authority.

So some of the above facts are inferences, some opinions, and some too general to be valuable. The killing of Centenary by Millsaps, in Nos. 2 and 3, dwindles down to a "possibility of injury" in No. 21. The "large endowment" turns out to be a probability founded upon the opinion of a "responsible, pious, successful young minister of our Conference." Some old ministers have had just such opinions; but they never materialized in dollars for endowment. Inferences and opinions and general facts do not build colleges. We want "facts" more solid than Bro. White has given before we give our adhesion to his scheme. EDITOR.

Millsaps College Notes.

The agent spent last Sunday in Columbus, where the college cause was presented, and a collection amounting to $202 25 was taken up.

One of the most gratifying reports of the observance of Millsaps College Day was that from the Industrial Institute and College, at Columbus, where the Sunday-school class of Miss Edwina Burnley contributed $25, and that of Miss Calaway $13, for the establishment of a Methodist college for boys in Mississippi. The young ladies deserve the thanks of every Methodist boy in the State.

A young lady, whose name I withhold, contributed to the college endowment fund $50, in memory of a brother who died a year ago. What more appropriate or beautiful memorial could be offered of the loved one who no longer tarry with us here! It is more lasting than a marble shaft, for it lives and works, and in its life and usefulness is a worthy symbol of that life to which we look beyond the grave.

The following additions are to be made to our list of reports of Millsaps College Day observance:

Winchester circuit (additional)	$ 50
Union circuit	1 05
Fayette circuit	6 10
Walnut Grove circuit	1 55
West Jackson Church	6 15
West Jackson Sunday-school	8 56
Black Hawk circuit (additional)	8 50
Abbeville circuit	6 75
Meadville circuit	27 85
Burtonton circuit	25 00
Bovina Sunday-school	3 00
Columbus	75
Utica	18 65
Lake Sunday-school	2 00
Benton	7 70
Wilson circuit	20 00
Neshoba circuit	10 00
Friendship Church	5 00
Grenada circuit (additional)	2 85

Rev. Harry Bradford, in sending his excellent report from the Meadville circuit, says: "Our people are poor, and this amount represents interest and labor. Some of our subscribers are young ladies, who will have to pick cotton to get the money with which to pay their subscriptions." That statement ought to make a rich and stingy Methodist blush—and contribute.

The interest which the poor, and those in moderate circumstances, are taking in the establishment of the college, will make Millsaps College pre-eminently the people's college, and present liberality is a prophecy of future patronage.

Let me emphasize the necessity of prompt reports and remittances. The difference between now and the Conference session, in time, is not much; but in effect upon our report to the Board of Trustees, on December 4, and to the Conferences, it is a great deal. Report at once, if possible.

THE STARS.

What are their years? The night's unfathomed deep
Rings back no answer, gives no glimmering key;
And still unknown, and beautiful, they keep
The silent courses of Eternity.

What are their memories of Creation's days,
When startled Chaos, from its kingdom hurled,
First knew its Master, and with glad amaze
They sang the birth-song of our trembling world?

What have they looked on since, with patient eyes,
While million years uncounted rolled away?
Who claims antiquity for man that dies,
Before such records of the past as they?

Can they to man his mystery explain,
The why, the whence, of his uncertain state?
Unlock the riddle that he reads in vain,
And clear the tangled problem of his fate?

Can they a fashion to the future give,
And tell the whither of man's anxious quest?
Make life a less than weariness to live,
Or slay the hazardest his wild unrest?

Oh stars! what midnight message do ye bear,
To minds grown weary with the years' increase?
The wistful eyes that watch you shining there,
Look out of troubled hearts that know not peace.

Growth in Sin.

II. Timothy III, 13: "But evil men and impostors shall wax worse and worse, deceiving, and being deceived."

There is no doctrine taught in the Bible more distinctly or frequently, whether by direct statement, or by individual or national examples, than the doctrine of man's depravity, and morbid proneness to evil. If further proof were needed, all history and universal personal experience might be called to the witness-stand to confirm the scriptural statements that man is very far gone from original righteousness. This universal depravity, however, does not preclude the possibility of individual peculiarities. Children are often, we observe, born with peculiarities that distinguish them from others. Some are naturally quick in temper, perception, speech and act; others just the opposite of all this. All observant parents have recognized these idiosyncrasies in their domestic administration; they must do so to govern wisely. But so far as habits effect character, little children have no habits and no established character. Character is the growth of years, and as we form our habits, we also make our characters. At twenty, or forty, or sixty, whatever we are, we have made ourselves; we are our own workmanship. If we have good characters in the sight of God and man, we have made them ourselves, by self-denial, by well-doing, by the help of God through his Word, Spirit, and ordinances of his house. If our characters are bad in the sight of God and man, we have made them so by sinful indulgence, by neglecting all the helps of God's Word, the leadings of his Spirit, and the ordinances of his house, and by the evil associations we have sought and cultivated. All this is so in the just execution of the general and imperative law, "Whatsoever we sow, that also shall we reap." We grow better, or worse, as the years go by. This is most reasonable, for like causes will produce like effects like themselves.

Our habits, that make our characters, are of gradual growth, whether good or bad. These habits imperceptibly form, like the dawn that breaks upon and gradually brightens into perfect day, or the twilight that steals upon us until darkness closes round us. We are not aware of the full establishment and power of these habits until we attempt to break from their thraldom, and breast their strong current.

Let us note the slow and imperceptible growth of some of these habits that make our characters and determine our destiny. A young person is tempted to conceal something they don't care to have known, to escape from some embarrassment; or, further, some desirable aim, to utter an untruth. They do it with hesitation and reluctance—they are sorry it seems necessary to do it; but they yield, but have no idea of repeating the offense. But the temptation returns. Perhaps the first attempt was a success, and this time may turn out as well; so they falsify again. Each time the temptation returns it finds them something weaker from the strength they lost by yielding. They are on the down grade, and ere they are aware, they are common liars. Having lost all confidence and respect, they sink into the contempt they deserve.

Another, because some special little emergency has arisen, demanding a small sum of money, shrinks from asking a little advance which, if he deserves it, he could easily obtain, and resorts to the "till," and borrows without asking for the loan. He intends to pay it back—perhaps does so; but he has found an easy and convenient way of obtaining money in seasons of real or imaginary need. This thing is done again and again. He spends more freely, and by and by it's inconvenient to return it. The debt swells; he can't hide it; he must make false entries; he must force balances. When these expedients fail he must forge a check, or seize a large sum, and shamefully fly from the iron grasp of the law. And so the tippler, and so the profane swearer, and so, too, the Sabbath breaker. They all begin in the most modest and gradual way. The departure from the right course was slight, like the switch of the railroad. The departure was only the thickness of a knife blade, but soon it was rolling off at right angles. Now, could the young borrower have looked ahead, and seen himself a degraded thief, flying from justice, pursued, arrested, handcuffed, in jail, condemned to five or ten years of hard, shameful labor in the penitentiary—the dreadful vision would have appalled and held him back from crime; and the tippler who yielded and drank the fatal cup, took the first step that leads to the last, have seen himself a bloated, disgusting sot, ruined in fortune, health, character and hope, he would have held back as from the sting of an adder.

But a different sort of an example will as well illustrate the growth of sin. A young man hears the Word of God; he believes it divine; he feels its power; he is almost persuaded to turn unto God and live; but the tempter whispers to his unregenerate heart: "Not now—a more convenient season will come." He fears piety will hinder some scheme of gain, some sensual pleasure, or some ambitious hope. He rejects the gospel, grieves and resists the Holy Spirit, hardens his heart, sears his conscience, and persists in the broad, forbidden way. He lives without Christ; he dies without hope. He had no idea it would be so; he never intended to be lost; he meant, all the time, some good day to turn and live. Alas! for his weak resolves and vainer hopes, he is lost, forever lost. Thus it is men "wax worse and worse." They become deceivers or seducers. Their example seduces many to follow their steps that lead down to death. Growing worse, their bad example crevasses and spreads out into outspoken and bitter opposition, denying the claim of the Bible, and ridiculing piety. These men learn to walk in the counsel of the ungodly, to stand in the way of sinners, and to sit down in the seat of the scornful. These men are at last self-deceived, "and believe a lie." They say, in contradiction of God, that by and by is a better season to seek God than "now." He believes that the broad way is the best way, the way of success and happiness. He refuses to believe that the ways of wisdom "are ways of pleasantness, and all her paths are peace." He follows the multitude to do evil, "sows to the flesh, and reaps corruption." Why has God shown us the evil and ruin of sins? Only that he might warn and deter us from the way of death. Let us be warned, and let us flee from the wrath to come. J. B. W.

To the Pastors of the M. E. Church, South, in Louisiana and Mississippi.

Dear Brethren: Please permit me to remind you of the resolution that was passed by each of your respective Conferences in reference to the Bible cause, and to urge that a collection be taken for the same in each charge before the close of the Conference year.

Money for the good work in which the American Bible Society is engaged is greatly needed, both in the home and foreign fields, and certainly every Christian who is brought to understand the nature, magnitude and needs of the noble work will contribute something to it if in his power to do so. Let us have a collection from every congregation, and let those whom God has blessed with an abundance of this world's goods, send us individual contributions. Surely money expended in sending the Word of God into the homes of the poor and the benighted of earth will be "as bread cast upon the waters."

Contributions can be sent either to the undersigned, at 163 Camp street, New Orleans, or to Mr. William Faulke, Bible House, Astor Place, New York.

THE LAND WHICH JESUS LOVED.—On all there lies a light that fades not, but grows richer and more radiant with the ages. Zion has heard the sublimest of the prophets say unto her, "The God reigneth." The mountains of Judah have been touched by the beautiful feet of him who brought good tidings and published peace. The ways that converge upon the city have been consecrated by pilgrim's songs, that are songs of cheer and hope for pilgrims of all lands and times. The city is embalmed in the most glorious sacred poetry of the world, so humanly universal, so divinely immortal, that once man has learned to use it he can never cease to sing. And the land transfigured by these meanings and memories is mightier in spiritual than physical influences; the hands by which it shapes men are moral and religious rather than material and fateful. Its plastic energies are born not of nature, but of spirit, and are to the susceptible soul as the inspiration of God, but to the insusceptible soul they are not, or are hardened into institutions and traditions that can neither maintain nor communicate life.—Fairbairn's Studies of Christ.

Mississippi Items.

The Postal Telegraph and Cable Company are about to open an office in Meridian.

Gov. Stone has appointed Dr. W. F. Dyer, of Meridian, a member of the State Board of Health; vice, Dr. F. W. Dancey, deceased.

The Seventh Congressional District Farmers' Alliance was organized recently in Jackson, with T. J. Millsaps, of Copiah as president.

The steamer Addie Faison struck a snag in the Talehatchie river, about one hundred miles above Greenwood, and sank in a few minutes. No lives lost.

The Board of Aldermen of Brookhaven have contracted for a handsome two-story brick school-house. Architect Tedford is to begin the work December 1.

The mayor and aldermen of Water Valley have contracted with the Thompson-Houston Electric Company to furnish that flourishing city with electric lights for fifteen years.

The postmaster at Water Valley, a recent appointment, tried it awhile and then resigned, confessing himself incompetent. If all incompetents would resign, it would be a good thing.

A fever of peculiarly fatal type has prevailed for some time in a portion of Lafayette county. The local physicians have not been able to cope with the disease, one man losing five out of eight children in two months.

A member of the Board of Aldermen of Port Gibson, who is a druggist and bookseller, has resigned, because the new Constitution prohibits persons engaged in selling school books from holding office.

The cotton and woolen factory at Carrollton is one of the largest and finest in the South. Mr. A. E. Randle, of Washington City, has recently become the proprietor, and it is expected that the property will be greatly enhanced in value.

A new manufacturing company, under the name of The Tombigbee Iron Works, has been organized at Aberdeen with a paid-up capital of $50,000, with authority to increase to $250,000. The buildings are to be erected at once, and the foundry will begin operations about February 1.

The Convention has labored under many and untold difficulties, and been much embarrassed in its work, often running counter to public sentiment, and meeting opposition in various forms. Much of the work the Clarion Ledger has not endorsed, while some of the sections are great improvements on the old Constitution, and are an honor to the State.

The members have been most assiduous in the performance of their labors, and if they have erred in their judgments, let us believe they have done so unwittingly.

The Constitution is now the law of the land, and further antagonism towards it can do no possible good. If there are mistakes in it, the people can discover and correct them by amendments.

Captious criticism should not be indulged in by anyone. Read, study and understand the Constitution today promulgated, before condemning it further.—Clarion Ledger.

The Convention was in session eighty-three days at an expense of $700 a day. "Still," says the Clarion-Ledger, "it has saved some money by reducing the sessions of the Legislature and decreasing the county elections."

Woman's Paradise.

From the Independent, we quote part of an article on this subject by Thomas DeQuincy:

Nineteen times out of twenty I have remarked that the true paradise of a female life in all ranks not too elevated for constant intercourse with the children, is by no means the years of courtship, nor the earliest period of marriage, but that sequestered chamber of her experience in which a mother is left alone through the day, with servants, perhaps, in a distant part of the house, and (God be thanked!) chiefly, where there are no servants at all; in which she is attended by one sole companion, her little first-born angel, as yet clinging to her robe, imperfectly able to walk, still more imperfect in its prattling, and innocent thoughts, clinging to her, haunting her wherever she goes as her shadow, catching from her eye total inspiration of its little palpitating heart, and sending to hers a thrill of secret pleasure so often as its little fingers fasten on her own. Left alone from morning to night with this one companion, or even with three still wearing the graces of infancy—buds of various stages upon the self-same tree—a woman, if she has the great blessing of approaching such a luxury of paradise, is moving, too often not aware that she is moving, through the divinest section of her life. As evening sets in, the husband through all walks of life, from the highest professional down to that of common labor, returns home to vary her modes of conversation by such thoughts and interests as are more consonant with his more extensive capacities of intellect. But by that time her child (or her children) will be reposing on the little couch, and in the morning, duly as the sun ascends in power, she sees before her a long, long day of perfect pleasure in this society which evening will bring to her, but which is interwoven with every fiber of her sensibilities. This condition of noiseless, quiet love is that, above all, which God blesses and smiles upon.

Louisiana Notes.

Up to November 5 the shipment of cotton from Ruston was 5,032 bales against 4,755 last year.

The Lake Charles American reports a treo in that flourishing little city bearing fine specimens of lemons.

The Baton Rouge people are rejoicing in the luxury of street cars, a belt line having been recently completed.

The parish-seat of Bossier has been removed from Bellevue to New Benton, in accordance with the decision of the Supreme Court.

Alexandria almost sees its way clear to water-works and electric lights, as negotiations are pending for both with a hopeful indication of success.

The Levee Board of the Fifth Louisiana District recently sold 144,000 acres of land in Concordia parish to Boston capitalists. Pretty big sale, that!

The City Council of Alexandria has instructed its railroad committee to assist the Kansas City, Watkins and Gulf road in obtaining the right of way through the parish of Rapides.

A destructive fire occurred in Shreveport, the seventeenth instant. A quarter of a block of the most important business center was destroyed, involving a loss of nearly $350,000, but covered by insurance.

Monroe is determined to keep ahead. An effort is being made, and from appearances will be successful, to inaugurate a cotton factory mill. Prominent citizens have taken hold of the enterprise and are working it up thoroughly.

The North Louisiana Agricultural Society holds its monthly meeting at the experimental station at Calhoun. These monthly meetings of the society are said to be of great benefit, educating and stimulating the people to new life and industry on their farms.

The pastor at Lake Charles writes: "Am closing up my fourth year in peace and prosperity. Have just been presented with a Conference suit entire." We rejoice with Bro. Daves in his "peace and prosperity." No two words express more than those two.

The charter of the Louisiana Midland Railroad Company has been filed in New Iberia. The capital to be $1,500,000 in $50 shares. The road to run westward through Iberia parish to the Vermillion Bayou at or near Abbeville, thence to the vicinity of Orange, and north through Avoyelles and other parishes.—Lake Charles Echo.

The last report of the Louisiana Department of Agriculture says the corn crop is twelve to fifteen per cent. below last year, and the indications are that the cotton crop will be one-fifth less than last year. The rice crop has been good and of excellent quality, and the outlook for a splendid crop of sugar and syrup is very flattering.

The Secretary of War has approved the following apportionments made by the Board of Engineers for the various levee districts: Upper Mississippi, $100,000; Lower Mississippi, $200,000; Upper White river basin, $80,000; Lower White river basin, $100,000; Tensas front in Louisiana; $226,000; Atchafalaya basin, $112,500; Pontchartrain district, $69,500.

A Kansas syndicate proposes to buy up several large plantations in Concordia parish on the line of the New Orleans and Northwestern railway, and cut them up into small holdings and colonize white farmers upon them. Truck farms in that locality would supply early vegetables to a large part of the Northwest and would, doubtless, be a paying investment.

From the Work.

FULTON AND SMITHVILLE CIRCUIT, NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

The Conference year is almost gone. This pastor can truly say, "The lines have fallen to him in pleasant places." Indeed, the Lord has led us into "a large place." Almost two years ago we began praying God to sweep over this work with his Holy Spirit and give us glorious victories in Christ's name. We have surely enjoyed rich benedictions from our Father's fullness. In the two years more than 325 have joined our church, with great forward and upward movements on all moral questions. This year we have had 175 accessions, and much general upbuilding of our church. We are disposed to give God the glory; but, as our Great Father works through his own divinely appointed means, we wish to refer with due respect and appreciation to some of our beloved brethren who assisted us through revival meetings. First, at Amory, Miss., commencing June 8, we had Bro. Joe Jones to conduct a meeting of eight days, resulting in great good. Forty joined our church and many joined other churches. This work permeated the entire community. My neighboring churches caught the spirit, and the good work went on. Bros. C. M. Threadgill, K. M. Harrison and H. P. Crow did much good for my work. May God's favors ever be upon them!

Our Sunday-School Periodicals for 1891.

Our Publishing House at Nashville is at work on our Sunday-school Magazine, Visitor, Quarterlies, and Lesson Papers for 1891. With the new year each of these periodicals will put on a new dress, and greet us with a fresh, morning face.

The Magazine will be kept up to its present high level. It is now recognized, far and near, as one of the best expository publications on the International Lessons to be found either at home or abroad. Many teachers outside of our connection are subscribers to it, and surely all our teachers ought to take it. Its explanatory and practical comments on the lesson texts are invaluable to the Sunday-school teacher.

Our Senior Quarterly is a cheaper publication, with more condensed comments on the lessons, and contains all the lessons for three months of the year, together with opening and closing exercises for the schools, and other matter relevant to each Sabbath's work for the quarter.

Our Intermediate Quarterly is similar to the Senior, with such changes as are needed to suit it to the classes for which it is designed.

Our Sunday-School Visitor is published in three editions: weekly, semi-monthly, and monthly. It would be hard to find a more attractive, interesting, and instructive paper for the young than the Visitor. If it were distributed weekly in all our schools, we make no doubt that it would much increase our Sunday-school attendance. We judge from the statistics that but few of our schools, if any, are without our lessons, but only one of every seven of our children get the Visitor. This is a great mistake in our Sunday-school management. In ordering your supplies for 1891, do not omit the Visitor.

We will not fill our space with the prices of our Sunday-school periodicals. Suffice it to say that they are as cheap as can be found, and as good as can be found. They are prepared by authority of our church, and are, in all respects, adapted to our use and wants. We urge every superintendent that may read this, to see that his school is well supplied with these periodicals the coming year.

Ideal Man the Product of the Divine Spirit.

Ideal man may be defined as perfect human character presented before the mind as a model for imitation. This ideal may exist in the mind as a mere conception, or discovered in the history of man as a realized fact.

The proposition suggested by the caption of this article is, Ideal Man, whether existing in the mind as a conception, or seen in the history of men, is always the product of the Divine Spirit.

Man ever strives for something more than he holds in possession, and character is formed upon ideals presented on the lettered page, or upon this recognized in living men. The most potent forces which enter our life are the forces which spring from personal examples and contact. As George Eliot says, "Ideas are often poor ghosts; our sun-tilled eyes can not discern them. They pass athwart us in their vapor and can not make themselves felt. But sometimes they are made flesh; they breathe upon us with warm breath; they touch us with soft responsive hands; they look at us with sad, sincere eyes, and speak to us in appealing tones. They are clothed in a living human soul, with all its conflicts, its faith, its love. Then their presence is a power. Then they shake us like a passion, and we are drawn after them with a gentle compulsion, as flame is drawn to flame."

Thus it is well said, "If the Almighty designed ever to give a perfect and final system of instruction to mankind, it could be done only by placing in this world a perfect human nature. If mankind are to advance intelligently in excellence, they must have a perfect model before them."

Every man has his ideals, but your ideal should be worthy of self in your relationship to God and man. In the search for a worthy ideal, it is absolutely important that it be one of individual character. There is nothing inciting to high achievement in the sentiment, more a poetic fancy than a sedate philosophy, which presents at the close of centuries of sorrow and weariness a perfect race, wrought out, or evolved from our humanity, while in the meantime the individual passes to death and corruption. Our sighs and tears are to produce an ideal man; he is to be the fruit of ages of sin and suffering, and our only recompense is to be found in the contemplation of the future prodigy. Nature revolts against this fancy. The past is not a jungle through which is heard the gibberish of savages, but through it walk the forms of the good and great; the future is not a desolation to be skirted at last by a fringe of light, but the theatre for individual men under sublime possibilities.

As a revelation to the mind, and as realized in actual life, the ideal man is the workmanship of God. The order in which this revelation occurs is important. It seems to be, first, man in a perfect world; second, man formed in the person of Christ Jesus; third, man, new created, and growing in meekness for a perfect life; fourth, perfect man, with perfect attainments, within a new heaven and a new earth. These are the products of the Divine Spirit.

The ideal man is the Adam of Eden, made a little lower than God, after his image and likeness. In order of time, the ideal man is, first a history, then a prophecy and a promise.

There is a golden age of the past. All history teaches this, and our civilization tracks us back inevitably to that period. There was a perfect age, whose lord was a perfect man. The first conception of the perfect man is in Adam; the second one is found in the person of the second Adam.

Jesus is the archetype, the exemplar, the light of men. All ages, every class, and men of every degree of culture, find in him the absolutely perfect man. In the galaxy of the greatly good, he is not a star, a little brighter than the rest, but a sun in whose light the stars grow dim. No living race could have produced a man so widely in advance of them. The Jewish civilization at the period of his birth was barren of greatness. The Greeks at his age had lost their manliness. The mother of Pythagoras, Socrates and Plato had become barren. Rome could not have produced such a one as the man of Galilee. The ideal man came not from beneath, but from above.

Before each man is presented the ideal man, and to each one comes the promise of the Divine Spirit. The individual is not a mere stopping-stone across which the race moves toward perfection and triumph; each man in Christ Jesus is a new creation. What magnificent possibilities lie before each son of Adam, who turns the eye towards him, and submits himself to the Lord of Glory!—W. L. Nourse, D. D., in Presbyterian Quarterly, Chester, S. C.

A Card.

Having had the misfortune a few months ago to lose my horse, I wrote several of the brethren, members of my Conference, asking them to state my misfortune to their people and give them an opportunity to assist me in procuring another.

One brother wrote me that there were so many things to meet that he could not ask his people to help me. Another sent me a message to the effect that later he would remember me. Another, Bro. J. W. Bell, of Iuka station, responded at once with $3 50. Bro. J. T. Moody, of Kosciusko station, also responded with $5. I take this method of expressing my thanks to those two brethren and their good people for their kind remembrance. Long may they live to do good, and then when their labor of love is ended receive a crown of rejoicing! With the contributions herein mentioned, and local help, I have received about $50, one-half the cost of a horse.

A Novel Church.

We have seen many different sorts of churches; we have read of them from the stately and magnificent temple of Solomon to the "old log meeting-house;" but a "church on wheels" is something "new under the sun," or, rather, "on the rails." An exchange furnishes this description of a new kind of church:

A novel creation has just been completed by the Pullman works—the only church on wheels in the world. It is constructed according to the ideas of the Rev. William D. Walker, Episcopal Bishop of the diocese of North Dakota, and is intended for use in the small villages along the railroads in that section of the country. From each side, midway the two extremes, is a slight projection, Gothic in form, which rises to the height of what is known as the second deck. This, Bishop Walker says, is for the purpose of giving the car more the appearance of a church. The car is sixty feet long and ten feet wide. Its interior is finished in oak, after the Gothic style. At one end is a room devoted to the Bishop's use. The main body of the car contains a chancel, altar, lectern, baptismal font, a Bishop's chair, and a cabinet organ. There are seats for seventy people. "I first conceived the idea," said Bishop Walker, "about six years ago, when I began my labors in the diocese of North Dakota. There are a number of little towns now practically barred from church privileges. It is for these people that the church on wheels has been constructed. It is not possible to assign a missionary or a rector to these towns. They are too small to support one."

What will our Episcopal friends not essay in the way of church building?

Books and Periodicals.

All books received will be acknowledged in this column. A fuller notice will depend upon the interests of our readers.

BOOKS.

CIVIL AND RELIGIOUS FORCES. By William Riley Halstead. Cranston and Stowe, Cincinnati. Price, seventy-five cents.

This is a thoughtful book on a most important subject. The author discusses, in an able manner, the forces, civil and religious, as they have a bearing upon society in this country. The public schools, political parties, politicians and preachers, American law, all these come along in the discussion, and the author has produced a book that will do its part toward helping to better things in the future.

PERIODICALS.

—The WOMAN'S MISSIONARY ADVOCATE, for November, is full of good missionary reading, and is the cheapest monthly we know. Woman's Board of Missions, Methodist Episcopal Church, South, Nashville, Tenn. Price, fifty cents.

The November HOME-MAKER is exceptionally good. The different departments which make up this admirable monthly are all full. If you desire a real home periodical, we can recommend this. Home-Maker Company, New York. Price, $2.

Marriages.

HAMMOND—YERGER.—At the residence of J. M. Taylor, Water Valley, Miss., October 30, 1890, by Rev. J. M. Wyatt, Mr. Charles H. Hammond to Miss Ruth S. Yerger, of Natchez, Miss.

LYNCH—RAPP.—At the residence of the bride's mother, Mrs. R. G. Rapp, in Franklin parish, November 5, 1890, by Rev. A. W. Moore, Mr. Robert B. Lynch, of Tensas parish, and Miss Minnie O. Rapp.

REAMES—INSLEE.—In the Methodist Church, Arbroth, La., November 6, 1890, by Rev. R. F. Patterson, of East Baton Rouge, Mr. Theo. J. Reames to Miss Eugenie M. Inslee, both of West Baton Rouge parish. No cards.

SIMMONS—SHEPPARD.—At the parsonage, Homer, La., November 9, 1890, Mr. J. H. Simmons, Jr., to Miss Mattie, daughter of Rev. J. L. P. Sheppard, of the Louisiana Conference.

Obituaries.

Obituaries of less than thirty-five lines of six words each, will be published free of charge. For all over thirty-five lines, five cents for each additional line will be charged, and the money must invariably accompany the manuscript. When parties desire extra copies of the ADVOCATE containing the obituaries of their friends, they must send with the order the sum of five cents for each extra copy ordered.

LEWIS—Bro. G. M. LEWIS was born in Hinds county, Miss., November 22, 1843, and spent the most of his short and useful life in Clinton, Miss., within three miles of the place of his nativity.

On Friday night, October 18, about nine o'clock, while looking after some out-door affairs he was most brutally assassinated by a a fiendish negro man. He was shot within ten steps of his wife, who had gone with him to the cistern. She turned to go into the house, and had scarcely reached the door when the murderer did his work of death. After the report of the gun, he groaned and fell to the ground, filled with slugs of lead and buckshot. Sister Lewis hastened to his side; but, alas! when she reached him, his pure spirit had flown to the beautiful mansions above. By the death of this good man the church has sustained a great loss, and Clinton has lost one of her best citizens. In the year 1871, shortly after his marriage to Miss Hattie Elliot, he joined the Methodist Church under the ministry of Bro. W. E. Ballard, in which he lived till he was transferred to the church triumphant. He was powerfully converted during a meeting conducted by Bro. T. L. Mellen, who was then his pastor. His heart being wholly changed, his life was completely reformed. He broke off old habits and gave up old associates. He ever after his conversion sought the companionship of the good, and endeavored to walk in the paths of true holiness. He was for several years both steward and Sunday-school superintendent. He was devoted to his church, and was always true to his pastor, ever ready to sympathize with him in trouble and to help him if in need. The Methodist itinerant always found a cordial welcome at his home. As a citizen, he was respected and honored. At the time of his death he was at the head of the city government. In his home-life he was gentle, kind and loving. He was an affectionate, devoted husband and a doting, indulgent father. His home was truly a home of love, and, like a true husband, he was always happiest when in the bosom of his own family.

Our dear brother was not allowed to die in the presence of his family, in the way that death ordinarily comes to men. He was not permitted to cross almost over the stream and to talk back to the friends and loved ones who remain on this side of the river, but fell at the flash of the assassin's gun, all alone in the darkness of the night. While the manner in which his life was destroyed was harrowing to the living, and especially to his family, yet to him it was a quick and painless transit from earth to glory. With one mighty stroke the angel of death broke open the prison-house of the soul, and the pure spirit of our brother, robed in spotless white, winged its flight to the home of the pure and good; and while loved ones shrieked out their agonies over his mutilated body, his soul reposed on the bosom of infinite love.

Just now we can not see the wisdom of God in so permitting his death; but when the dark, raglug cloud-capped storm is hushed to sleep, and the tempest-lashed sea quietod, we will see the smiling face of our heavenly Father behind this dark and now mysterious providence.

Bro. Lewis leaves behind a sister and a brother, a wife and two children, with many friends, to mourn his death. May the God of love comfort them all with his grace, and help them to so live that when life's journey is ended, they may enter in through the gates into the city, and join our loved ones in ascribing endless praises to Father, Son and Holy Ghost.

L. S. JONES.

HANKS—Mrs. ANNIE C. HANKS was born January 21, 1816; joinod the church at the age of fourteen years, and died August 22, 1890.

Sister Hanks was a great sufferer, being confined to bed for eight years. Her faith was firm to the end. Her body was emaciated, but her mind was clear. It was a mystery to herself and to many why she was detained on earth so long in her sufferings, while she was ready and willing to depart. But God doeth all things well.

Her acquaintanees had one thing proven to them: that faith may be maintained for years amidst pains and destitution. BENJ. S. RAYNER.

SMITH—ANNIE ELIZABETH SMITH, infant daughter of Dr. J. Mell Smith and Lizzie Smith, was born in Yalabusha county, Miss., July 20, 1890, and died September 24, 1890. She was one of a pair of twins, around whom the affections of the entire family were entwined. Remember, bereaved ones, that the Savior said, "Of such is the kingdom of God." G. W. G.

GILLIAM—From his home, at Gilliam's Landing, Jefferson county, Miss., on August 21, 1890, Bro. ARGYLE C. GILLIAM was called to glorious rest and reward in heaven. He was born in Southampton county, Va., November 27, 1825, and came to Mississippi in 1846. Since that time, with the exception of about five years spent in Issaquena county, two in Warren and three in Claiborne, he has lived in Jefferson county. He was first married to Miss Lucy M. Everett, of Southampton, Va., who died September 6, 1862. On June 2t, 1865, he married Miss Laura A. Perkins, of Claiborne county, Miss., who still survives. Three children of the first and five of the second marriage are living. Those of the former are all blessed with happy families. In his youth Bro. Gilliam was disposed to lead a moral and exemplary life. At about twenty years of age he was converted and joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, of which he was steward at Rodney when he died. Liberality, humility, steadfastness and consecration characterized his life. In all his last illness, which began about the eleventh of June preceding his death, he felt no fear of death. His affliction was strange, yet not severely painful. At first it was similar to pneumonia, but soon there was an affection of the heart, and a consequent dropsical swelling which gradually and fatally extended from the feet upward. Ever and anon there was the audible panting struggle for breath. As the tide of death rose, it was apparent to all that our brother was in "the swelling of Jordan." The "footmen" had not "wearied" him. He could "contend with horsemen." Hear the notes of triumph. As friends met and sang with him, his prayers and praises ascended to God. His faith inspired words of comfort for his bereaved family and sealed their future blessing upon them. As the shadows of death fell his hands grew dark under its blight. Supposing his tender wife might desire to conceal this from him, he inquired if she did, and added: "I know I am dying. Glory! glory! hallelujah!" The quiet of a peaceful sleep ensued after all, and he fell asleep in Jesus.

The priceless heritage of his consecrated life, in example and in benediction upon children's children, is left to the bereaved ones. May they all join him finally in heaven!

CHEVIS—HENRY BASCOM CHEVIS, a son of J. W. Chevis, who was a physician and a minister in the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, was born in St. Landry (now Acadia) parish, La., August 3, 1859, and died in Rayne, La., on October 3, 1890.

Bro. Harry (as we called him) was one of the best young men I ever knew. In every respect he was a perfect Christian gentlemen. His character, as such, was unimpeachable. He joined the Methodist Church when a boy, and was converted most thoroughly and led a deeply consecrated life. He was soon made a steward, Sunday-school superintendent and a class leader, which positions he held until the blessed Lord called him to his great reward. At the time of his death, and for the preceding year, he was a recording steward in his charge. His soul was world-wide in his Christian charity and missionary spirit. He was one of the best friends to his pastor, and a more self-sacrificing man for Christ and his church I have not known. In addition to all he did for the church, it was his habit to give a tenth of his income to the Lord. It way my pleasure to have been his pastor nearly two years, and I always felt when any church work was assigned him that it would be done.

Bro. Harry was a man of solid piety. He loved God and had great faith in his providence. In a word, he was everything that any man could expect of a Christian gentleman. But our dear Harry has gone! We shall mourn after him and love him. He leaves his brother, Willie, and his sisters, Gennie, Laura and Lula, and a large family connection and a great many friends to join his father and mother and others in heaven. Farewell, dear Harry, until we meet you in heaven! R. M. BLOCKER.

CARTER—Died at Cherry Creek, September 9, 1890, Mrs. CARTER, after an illness of some months.

IDA MAY PLEHN was born March 12, 1857, at Geneseo, Ill. Her parents moved to Rock Island when she was nine years old. She received the advantages of the superior schools of the city, which fitted her for teaching at the age of sixteen in the school of Rock Island, where she continued for eight years, resigning her position to attend the Normal University, Lebanon, O., where she graduated with honors in two years. After receiving her diploma at this university, she was employed as principal teacher in the Corning School, Kansas, where she taught two years, and then resigned, much against the wishes of the patrons, in 1886. On August 5, of the same year, she was married to Prof. J. T. Carter, and came to Mississippi. They taught one year at Guntown, and then located at Cherry Creek.

Ida May was converted when eleven years old; professed sanctification and united with the Methodist Episcopal Church at seventeen years of age. Her life was beautiful, living what she professed. She was loved by all, and, we might say, almost worshiped by her pupils. As a teacher, Ida May had no superiors.

She leaves a husband, a son two and a half years old, a widowed mother and a brother to mourn her loss.

R. C. M.

MCDONALD—MARY EMMA MCDONALD, daughter of A. B. and T. F. Huntor, and wife of P. J. McDonald, was born May 5, 1866; joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in 1880, and died October 13, 1890.

Sister McDonald was a dutiful child, a gentle mother, a loving wife and a faithful Christian. She leaves a husband, two children and many friends to grieve at her departure. Her Christian life was consistent, and her death a most triumphant one. She has entered into the inheritance of the church triumphant. Her joy is now complete. To loved ones I would say, Mourn not as those who hope not.

P. A. JOHNSTON.

PURVIS—J. B. PURVIS, son of Rev. J. W. and Mrs. Appie Purvis, was born May 5, 1872, and died at home, in Free Run, Yazoo county, Miss., October 8, 1890, aged eighteen years five months and three days.

Jamie had been the main hope and stay of his mother and two sisters for several years past. It seemed to be his highest ambition to do everything that would make them happy. It may truly be said of him, "He will be missed at home." None knew him but to love him. He had a kind word for everybody. His most intimate friend says he never knew him to do anything that would not be commendable in a Christian. None speak of him in any other but the highest terms of love and friendship. He has left no enemies behind. An enviable record this is for anyone to leave.

Jamie was making his arrangements to go to college and prepare himself for a wider sphere of usefulness; but the angel of death came, and said, "Not so; come, enter the university of the skies, where God will be your teacher and the angels your companions."

He died of hematuria after an illness of five days, which he bore with Christian fortitude. He leaves a mother, two sisters and a brother to mourn his loss. We deeply sympathize with the bereaved ones, and commend them to him who came to heal the broken-hearted.

T. B. REAGAN.

TATOM—Little LONIE TATOM was the daughter of J. F. and Mary F. Tatom, of Clinton, Miss. She died aged nine years and nine months.

She was a bright, but not precocious, child, of fine fiber and delicate structure, and had been a great sufferer for one so young. She was taken with hematuria on Tuesday, October 7, and died on Friday, at five o'clock P. M. Her disease was acute and severe. Realizing her condition, she was not slow in making preparation for a final adieu. She sent for her playmates, and as they came in to bid her goodby she said, "Jesus says, 'Suffer little children to come unto me.' Tell my dear old grandma and grandpa goodby." She said: "Mother, bury me at Terry, among the pretty flowers. Lay a white wreath on my bosom, plant a geranium at my head and a rose at my feet"—selecting her own cemetery, as she was the first to go of seven children. Thus she talked on for two or three hours, sending sweet messages and good-bys to loved ones till that sweet voice was hushed in death. "Little Lonie, she wears the crown without the conflict."

May the Lord sanctify her bright deathbed to all who witnessed it, and draw all her loved ones to heaven!

J. L. T.

FUNCHES—Rev. WESLEY W. FUNCHES was born on Leaf river, Perry county, Miss., June 17, 1821, and, after having lived sixty-nine years three months and twenty days, died in peace at his home near Crystal Springs, Miss., October 7, 1890.

His parents removed from South Carolina to Mississippi in 1818, and then settled in the county where our brother was born. Bro. Funches was baptized in infancy, reared in the Methodist Church, and took upon himself the vows of the church in 1842. Soon after his formal recognition as a member of the church he was appointed class leader. He was baptized by Rev. Wylie Ledbetter, and licensed to exhort in 1852 by Rev. L. Ereanbrack, and was licensed to preach in 1853. He was ordained deacon at Brandon in 1857 by Bishop Early, and elder by Bishop Andrew, at Kosciusko, in 1863. He was happily married to Miss S. C. Hennington, near Crystal Springs, Miss., January 20, 1847. Of the fifteen children born to him nine survive him—five sons and four daughters. These sons and daughters and their widowed mother live to mourn the loss and revere the memory of the loved father and husband.

Bro. Funches was a good and true man. He was a man of good mind, and by reading had made himself acquainted with the doctrines and polity of his church, and was familiar with the teachings of the Holy Bible. He had a good name. As a local preacher, he stood well. He was loved and honored by his brethren. He had lived to purpose, and was ready to die. His house was in order. He, no doubt, rests in peace. He was buried in the old Hennington Cemetery, near Crystal Springs, October 8. Our "brother shall rise again."

R. D. NORSWORTHY.

LANE—JOHN FREEMAN LANE, aged forty-seven years, died of consumption, October 12, 1890. He was long a member of the church. May his soul rest in peace!

PUBLIC SAFETY DEMANDS

That only honest and reliable medicines should be placed upon the market. It cannot, therefore, be stated too emphatically, nor repeated too often, that all who are in need of a genuine Blood-purifier should be sure and ask for

Ayer's Sarsaparilla

Sarsaparilla. Your life, or that of some one near and dear to you, may depend on the use of this well-approved remedy in preference to any other preparation of similar name. It is compounded of Honduras sarsaparilla (the variety most rich in curative properties), stillingia, mandrake, yellow dock, and the iodides. The process of manufacture is original, skilful, scrupulously clean, and such as to secure the very best medicinal qualities of each ingredient. This medicine is not boiled nor heated, and is, therefore, not a decoction; but it is a compound extract, obtained by a method exclusively our own, of the best and most powerful alteratives, tonics, and diuretics known to pharmacy. For the last forty years, Ayer's has been the standard blood-purifier of the world—no other approaching it in popular confidence or universal demand. Its formula is approved by the leading physicians and druggists. Being pure and highly concentrated, it is the most economical of any possible blood medicine. Every purchaser of Sarsaparilla should insist upon having this preparation and see that each bottle bears the well-known name of

Sarsaparilla

J. C. Ayer & Co.,
Lowell, Mass.

In every quarter of the globe Ayer's Sarsaparilla is proved to be the best remedy for all diseases of the blood. Lowell druggists unite in testifying to the superior excellence of this medicine and to its great popularity in the city of its manufacture.

ORGAN OF THE LOUISIANA, MISSISSIPPI AND NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCES OF THE METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH, SOUTH.

Rev. C. W. CARTER, D. D., Editor.

THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 20, 1890.

Briefs.

If the pastors will put forth a strong effort, we can yet run up our subscription list to eight thousand by Conference. One brother sent in sixteen new subscribers last Monday, which is certainly encouraging. Suppose the pastors should secure two new subscribers apiece; that would do it! Will not the brethren also do their best in the way of collecting past dues? In this matter we are compelled to rely almost entirely on the preachers. The fact is, we can't get along without them. Brethren, help us in this matter. Make a special effort to collect all that is due us on your several works and bring the amount to Conference. If we had in hand what is now due, we would show you a thing or two about the first of January that would delight your whole being.

Last week in this city was organized the Homeopathic Hospital Association. While there have been practitioners of this system for many years in our city, there has been no public hospital where patients could be treated. Now an association has been formed for the purpose of establishing a homeopathic hospital, and the time is not far distant when all who believe in this practice will have an opportunity of witnessing its benefits exerted upon the community through such a hospital. The homeopaths are evidently making themselves felt in other sections of our country. They have 16 colleges, 30 journals, 34 general and 32 special hospitals and 12,000 practitioners. One-half of these practitioners are converts from the old school. We are glad to note the organization of this association.

And now comes the Adams Express Company, and through its Board of Managers gives the Lottery an awful whack in the face. The following dispatch, of November 12, must sound like a funeral knell to the Lotterites:

The Board of Managers of the Adams Express Company to-day held their first meeting since the passage of the United States Anti-Lottery act.

The Board was unanimously of the opinion that the provisions of such law were as morally obligatory upon the company as they are legally binding upon the postal authorities.

The attention of the Board was called to the fact that the postoffice department had issued regulations to all its subordinates as to the manner in which they should effectuate the provisions and the intent of the act, and the Board adopted a resolution making such regulations applicable to the employees of the company in like manner, as if such employees had been specifically named therein.

It is gratifying to the friends of morality that these great companies see the harm the Lottery is doing, and have determined that they will no longer help in its iniquitous gambling traffic.

The merits of the Australian ballot system over those of any other system seem to be such as ought to bring it into universal favor and use. The Times-Democrat says of it:

That the new system is not absolutely perfect is admitted, but it has two beneficial effects which will be appreciated by all. It renders it absolutely impossible to bribe voters, and it puts it beyond the power of employers to bulldoze their hands and compel them to support any particular ticket. Bribery is out of the question. It is impossible to know how anyone votes, or to get anywhere near the voter at the polls. The secrecy of the ballot, which is the aim of the elective system in this country, is thoroughly preserved. A candidate may, if he wishes, give a voter $5 to vote for him, but he can by no possibility know whether the man keeps his word, and, under such circumstances, he is not likely to pay out much money.

A Great Project.

General Booth, the head of the Salvation Army, has published a book which he calls, "In Darkest England, and the Way Out." In this book this extraordinary man absolutely proposes the extraordinary plan of abolishing British pauperism and its dreadful results. For many years Gen. Booth has directed the movements of the Salvation Army in its evangelistic work, and in England these movements have been successful in rescuing thousands of people from sin and the slums. Though successful beyond any of his contemporaries, and having in twenty-five years brought the Salvation Army to the front as the greatest power of modern times to reach the lower classes with the gospel of Christ, he has reached the conclusion that evangelistic work alone will not suffice for the salvation of the millions of earth who are borne down and kept down by poverty and sin. He says that he has discovered that these people have bodies to be saved as well as souls, and that "we must rescue the man as an indivisible whole." "What is the use," asks he, "of preaching the gospel to men whose whole attention is concentrated upon a mad, desperate struggle to keep themselves alive?" "If these people," he continues, "are to believe in Jesus Christ, become the servants of God and escape the miseries of the wrath to come, they must be helped out of their present social miseries."

These are the reasons General Booth gives for the adoption and promulgation of his mighty plan for the rescue of these "lowest lost ones." The plan starts out with the idea that every human being who is willing to work has a right to food and lodging, and there is to be organized three institutions—the city colony, the farm colony and the foreign colony; the first being a preparatory school for the second, and the second being a training ground for the third. The Army has for some time been working for the relief of the poor through its food and shelter depots, and to carry out the present plan workshops will be established in conuection with these depots, and applicants for food and lodging will be expected to pay in work for what they receive instead of paying in money. In connection with these workshops labor registers will be opened and every effort made to secure permanent employment for those able and willing to work. But as there will remain a large number of the destitute who are not fitted to re-enter the body of self-supporting workmen, these will be sent to the farm colony. Here they will be taught all the work of the farm, experts being employed as teachers. In return for their labor they will receive food, lodging and clothing. When they have become useful and steady workmen, employment will be found for them at home through registration offices, or they will be shipped to foreign colonies which represent the culmination of the scheme. In the foreign colony each one on his arrival will be made the owner of a house and farm by simply paying his passage and outfit from its produce.

General Booth sums up the whole scheme in these words:

The project, in its entirety, may be compared to a great machine, foundationed in the lowest slums and purlieus of our great towns and cities, drawing up into its embrace the depraved and destitute of all classes; receiving thieves, harlots, paupers, drunkards, prodigals all alike, on the simple conditions of their being willing to work and to conform to discipline.

The whole things looks Utopian; but it shows, at least, that a great religious organization has determined to spend its strength in the service of social reform. This determination is of itself a long step forward, and may end in revolutionizing the social order of the world. The people in England believe in Gen. Booth, because they have seen the enormous good he has brought to the lower classes by his previous efforts, and men of all classes and all religions are beginning to respond to his call for money to put the plan in operation. Archdeacon Farrar preached a sermon in Westminster Abbey in behalf of the scheme. The Prince of Wales commends it. The President of the Wesleyan Conference, the Bishops of Bath and Wells, and Rochester and Manchester, and Mr. Gladstone have approved it. The chairman of Brighton railway has sent a check for £1,200, and a retired actor said he would be one of one hundred to give £1,000 each. From these indications we have no doubt Gen. Booth will get all the money he wants to put his plan to operating. And, then, the whole world will look on this man, who has been reproached and insulted for a quarter of a century as a religious fanatic, working to solve a problem which has been more than a match for the wisdom of all the ages past. It is a sublime project, and every Christian on earth ought to pray for its success.

Advocate Dots.

The Publishing Committee were all present at their late annual meeting. A new editor was made out the old one—not that he is an old man. The committee—all nine of them—by a rising vote, commended the ability and fidelity of the former editor, and pledged themselves to hearty co-operation with the new editor.

The editor desires enlargement, so as to make room in the paper for more reading matter. We hope his expressed wish may soon be granted.

The ADVOCATE has increased its circulation at the rate of one thousand annually for the last three years. If any Conference organ has played a livelier march during the same time, we have not heard of it.

Some friends of Millsaps College thought the former editor had leaned too much to Centenary College; and some friends of Centenary thought he had leaned too much to Millsaps. How different things seem from our standpoint and yours. But our editor, both former and latter, is a straight man. He doesn't lean at all.

Both editor and publisher want an assistant editor—say, from Mississippi—who shall spend much time in the field, working and writing for the paper.

The publisher, Bro. Grant, says pay up promptly the outstanding dues to the ADVOCATE, and he will be able to employ an assistant editor at a good salary.

Several thousand dollars are due the ADVOCATE in the patronizing territory. Will not all our brethren make earnest efforts to secure the payment of this amount, as much of it as possible by the approaching sessions of Conference, so that we can have the desired enlargement and increase of editorial force?

The Publishing Committee "relegated" the position of corresponding editor to a "state of innocuous desuetude"—wiped it out. It was well nigh innocuous before, on account of the writing it did not do.

Now, brethren, write for the ADVOCATE. We all have an equal showing with that defunct functuary, the corresponding editor. If you come upon a bright, new idea, give it to us in a crisp, lively article; but remember that "brevity is the soul of wit." Give us Monday morning reports, if you have had a good Sunday; or monthly reports, if you have made a good round; or quarterly reports, if your "beloved presiding elder" was at his post, and "preached with his usual acceptability."

I may as well make report of my presiding elder now—Dr. W. T. J. Sullivan. He has an immense district, and can't give us all a Saturday and Sunday call every time. But he is always on hand, always sunshiny, tried, strong and true.

And here I may as well make an omitted report of a former presiding elder beloved. Some one, it was said, being asked what he thought of this presiding elder, replied, "He is the most simultaneous preacher I ever saw, and preaches with more animosity and perseverance." He also was an able gospel preacher, and the brethren rejoiced in his coming and his counsels. And are they not all good and true men—these fathers of the church?

Besides writing, let us work zealously for the ADVOCATE. As the excellent annual address says: "Let our aim be 10,000 subscribers within the next year—paid-up subscribers. Why not?"

T. C. WIER.

Hospitality.

This is a beautiful word, and it stands for a beautiful grace—the love of strangers. The exercise of hospitality is the act of receiving strangers into our homes and giving them suitable entertainment. The word "stranger" may be taken in the sense of visitor, anyone sojourning with us, who is not a member of our family. Hence the command, "Be not forgetful to entertain strangers."

This practice may be traced back to the early origin of human society. It was held in the highest estimation and enjoined as a religious duty in the earliest periods of Bible history. By the practice of this grace Abraham and Lot "entertained angels unawares." This grace is also sanctioned by the gospel. We are to be "given to hospitality." A bishop or pastor is to be "a lover of hospitality." And, in all cases, we are to "use hospitality one to another without grudging."

The practice of this grace is sure to be remunerative to us. In this, as in every form of beneficence, "it is more blessed to give than to receive." Especially is this true when we extend the hospitalities of our homes to ministers of the gospel. In ancient times it was a blessing to be permitted to entertain a prophet of God. Elijah was entertained by a widow during the great famine, and he proved a blessing to her and to her home. In Luke iv, 25, 26, Jesus thus speaks of this event: "Many widows were in Israel in the days of Elias, when heaven was shut up three years and six months, when great famine was throughout all the land; but unto none of them was Elias sent, save unto Sarepta, a city of Sidon, unto a woman that was a widow." There was a "great woman" in Israel in the days of Elisha who constrained him to turn into her house and eat bread when he passed that way. Perceiving that he was "a man of God," she moved her husband to "make a little chamber on the wall," and to "set for him there a bed and a table and a stool and a candlestick." And the old prophet was often entertained in that home. One of the most pleasing aspects of the life of Jesus was his relations with the little family of Bethany, where he so frequently sojourned. And what a blessing he always brought to that home! In "that great day," when our Lord shall separate the righteous from the wicked, "as a shepherd divideth his sheep from his goats," it will be counted an inestimable blessing for him to say to us, "I was a stranger and ye took me in." "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these my brethren, ye have done it unto me."

Hospitality is one of the essential characteristics of a well-regulated Christian home. When extended to ministers of the gospel it brings to bear upon children the best possible influences. Among the most pleasant memories of my childhood are those of the men of God who so frequently visited my father's house. Their personal influence, their godly conversation and their prayers were among the most potent factors of my early religious training. And I have diligently sought to bring around my own hearthstone as much of the same influence as possible. Methodist people have been proverbial for hospitality and for singing. May they never lose either the art of singing or the grace of hospitality!

I knew a man who had been brought up a Methodist. In middle life he assayed to become a Christian. He had married a well-to-do widow, with several children, and lived in a commodious house on an ample estate near a thriving town. He gave as his reason for not joining the Methodist Church, that every Methodist preacher in the land would call him brother, and that his house would become a regular stopping-place for them. The children of that household grew up and caused a separation of husband and wife, and he died an alien from that home. A little of the influence of the Methodist ministry about there might have been salutary.

In contrast with the foregoing, I wish to mention one of the many pleasant exhibitions of the grace of hospitality that I meet with among the people whom I serve. The time was drawing nigh for me to go to one of the towns on my district to hold a quarterly meeting. One of the stewards addressed me a pleasant note, stating that they desired to have me as their guest during my stay there, and that he would meet me at the depot if I would let him know on what train I would come. It may be the result of the thoughtful arrangement of the pastor, or it may be the natural expression of the generous nature of that steward. No matter; the note always comes a week or ten days before my quarterly meeting there, and consequently when I go to that place I am never embarrassed, never have to go to the hotel, and am never in doubt as to my perfect welcome to his home. May I not claim for him, and others like him, the promise of my Master, "He that receiveth you receiveth me, and he that receiveth me receiveth him that sent me"?

The grace of hospitality is one of the means of the furtherance of the gospel. Without it the work of the ministry would be greatly retarded. "Now if Timotheus come, see that he may be with you without fear."

W. B. LEWIS.

Mr. Stead, once editor of the Pall Mall Gazette, and now editor of The Review of the Reviews, gives his estimate of the character of Gen. Booth, of the Salvation Army, in a recent number of his Review. He says:

A journalistic career of twenty years has brought me into close quarters with an immense number of the ablest men and women of our time, and I have no hesitation whatever in saying that in the whole sweep of my acquaintance I have not met more than half-a-dozen men—British, European, or American—crowned or uncrowned, prelates, statesmen, soldiers, or workers, whom I would rank as the superiors in force, capacity, and initiative with Gen. Booth, Mrs. Booth, and their eldest son. Whether or not Gen. Booth be, as Lord Wolseley declared, the greatest organizing genius of our time, he and his family constitute the most remarkable group of men and women that I know.

Programme for Week of Prayer and Self-Denial.

WOMAN'S MISSIONARY SOCIETY, M. E. CHURCH, SOUTH.

Once more the Woman's Missionary Society is called to the observance of the Week of Prayer and Self-denial, the time chosen being the week in November, including the National Thanksgiving Day.

Auxiliaries should have daily meetings if practicable. Any who may be denied the privilege of attending the public services can set apart an hour, when in the quiet of the "closet" they may "make known their requests" in behalf of this cause and those laboring for its promotion. Let all be earnest and devout, expecting "great things" from our God, who is "able to do exceeding abundantly above all that we ask or think."

Offerings may be made from day to day, or the whole amount—the result of the week's self-denial—may be put into the collection taken at the closing service on Sunday. These offerings must be reported as the result of this season of self-denial, and sent through the regular channel to the general treasury.

Pastors are earnestly requested to call attention to these services, and to lend their aid in having them properly observed.

By reference to the Woman's Missionary Advocate, the names of missionaries employed in different fields will be found. Let them be prayed for by name.

MONDAY.

Open with a "praise" service, thanking God for "open doors, for obstacles removed, for workers raised up, for blessings vouchsafed, and funds provided."

Pray for an outpouring of the Holy Spirit on these meetings; pray that the women of the church, and all who call themselves Christians, may realize their obligation to help give the glad tidings of salvation to all nations. Pray for all work projected by the Woman's Board at home and abroad. Make special petition in behalf of the Scarritt Training-school, that means may be secured to erect the buildings, and so equip this institution that it will be a perpetual benediction to those young women who long to know how to work for the Master in the way best calculated to insure good results.

TUESDAY.

Pray for all missionaries, especially those of the Woman's Board of Missions, that life and health be preserved, and their consecration to God's service be such as to commend the gospel they teach to others. Pray for converts, "that their spiritual tone may be raised and their spiritual life deepened, so that their home life will commend Christianity, and win their countrywomen to Christ," for children in schools and for a blessing on the "Word" as read and preached. Pray that more laborers may be raised up to take up the expanding work in the various fields.

WEDNESDAY.

China.—"All the ends of the world shall turn unto the Lord, for the kingdom is the Lord's."

Prayer for the work in "our oldest, most difficult, and most important field," that our missionaries at Shanghai, Suchow, and Nanslang may each be blessed in her individual work.

THURSDAY.

Brazil.—"As truly as I live, all the earth shall be filled with the glory of the Lord."

Prayer for the schools in Rio and Piracicaba, that they may continue to prosper under the supervision of our faithful missionaries, and become "nurseries" out of which shall come many who shall be as trees planted by the rivers of waters, bringing forth fruit in their season.

FRIDAY.

Mexico and Mexican Border.—"Yea, all kings shall fall down before him: all nations shall serve him."

Prayer for the work recently opened at Chihuahua and San Luis Potosi; that those to whom this work is committed be endued with wisdom to lay the foundations with such skill and judgment as to insure success. Prayer for the continued prosperity of the schools at Laredo and Saltillo. May they be as "cities set on a hill," whose light shall flood the surrounding country with the "light of life!"

SATURDAY.

Indian Territory.—"The people which sat in darkness saw great light."

Prayer for the work at Anadarko which was adopted by the Board in May; that God will own the efforts made to give a pure gospel to our "brother in red."

SUNDAY.

Have a public meeting with appropriate services. Request that prayer be made in all the churches for the work of the Woman's Missionary Society. At this service offerings may be gathered. May they be in proportion to the mercies and blessings received by those who make them!

Notes.

Hugh Price Hughes says: "Most Christians are as blind and deaf now to the spiritual need of the masses, as were the religious classes in the days of Isaiah."

A distinguished divine is reported as having said: "It does not make so much difference whether you enjoy religion, but whether other people enjoy your religion." And what an enjoyable thing true religion is, in another!

Make a catalogue of the causes which disintegrated and destroyed past civilizations, and you have precisely those things which Christ came to destroy. Write down the things which tend to national perpetuity, and you have made a transcript of the morals of Christianity.—Interior.

IT IS practically impossible to comply with the desire of the Publishing Committee to employ a Mississippi editor, or to make a larger or more interesting paper, unless the subscribers in arrears promptly pay what they owe.

Every dollar received for subscription and advertisements will be used to improve the paper. Let everyone indebted to this paper either remit the amount to the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE, or hand it to the preacher in charge before the meeting of Annual Conference.

The election proved fatal to 37 out of 60 chairmen of committees in the House of Representatives, and in some instances four or five members are left at home. Of the Committee on Elections, five are defeated. Of the Judiciary Committee, only one Republican has escaped. Of those who voted for the Force bill, 87 were defeated.

A Womanly Response.

MR. EDITOR: You may consider the Woman's Missionary Society of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, at Okolona (station), Aberdeen district, North Mississippi Conference, as one of the pastoral charges willing and glad to accede to your proposition, viz: to pay ten dollars annually towards the support of a missionary from this Conference. We are so weak, that we deem it a privilege to find anything that we can do. The money will be at your command, to go when and where you may direct.

Respectfully,

MRS. T. J. DENTON, Pres.
MRS. LAURA WALLER, Sec.

OKOLONA, Miss., November 11, 1890.

Lyonnaise Potatoes.

Cut into cubes, enough cold boiled potatoes to make a pint. Season with salt and pepper; put into a frying pan, with 1 tablespoonful of lard; add 1 tablespoonful minced onion and a little chopped parsely; cover and cook three minutes; stir occasionally, to prevent browning. You will relish this dish for breakfast, provided your digestion is all right. If the stomach and bowels are disordered, take Ayer's Pills. They are the most valuable corrective that can be used.

Attention.

Rates to the Louisiana Annual Conference at Monroe, December 3, are as follows:

Southern Pacific road—Full fare to Chencyville going, and one-third from Cheneyville returning.

L., N. O. and T. road—Full fare coming and one-third returning.

Queen and Crescent road—Full fare coming, and one-third fare returning.

Steamboats—"The Ouachita Consolidated Line" will give round-trip from New Orleans at $12, and other points in proportion.

Please remember that a certificate that you have paid full fare coming should be obtained from the agent of whom you purchase tickets, and of the agent of each line.

Parties from New Orleans and Baton Rouge, coming on the L., N. O. and T. railroad, can purchase tickets to Monroe, and the certificate of agent will be honored by the agent at Monroe, and one-third fare tickets returning sold. Those living at other points, however, will purchase tickets to Vicksburg, and there of Queen and Crescent to Monroe. Those living on the Southern Pacific will purchase tickets to Cheneyville on terms already indicated for that road, and at Cheneyville buy round-trip tickets to Shreveport, and there get ticket of the Queen and Crescent to Monroe.

Remember that you must get a certificate that you have paid full fare from every agent of whom you purchase a ticket, except on the Texas Pacific. Over this road you purchase a round-trip ticket.

Round-trip tickets over the Texas Pacific will be on sale December 1 and 2, and will continue good until the tenth. On the other routes certificates may be issued as early as November 27, and reduced rate be given to the twelfth.

—Rev. T. L. Mellen, P. E., writes: "D. C. Rawls, Leakesville circuit, Mississippi Conference, reports $5 for Millsaps College Day; R. A. Breland, of Winchester circuit, $7; John W. Tinnin, for Union circuit, $1 05, and Rev. A. C. Flowers, for Clarke circuit, reports no collection."

—Rev. George H. Thompson writes from Scranton, Miss.: "I am finishing up my first year in the ministry and the happiest year of my life—although beset by some of the severest trials of my life. God has been gracious. The church membership has increased thirty-three per cent., and finances have improved."

—Rev. J. L. P. Sheppard writes from Homer, La.: "We will have a full report from Homer; have added considerable to the parsonage property in the way of necessary out-buildings, etc., since you were here. We have had 47 accessions this year, something over 100 in past two years; but much remains to be done."

North Mississippi Conference.

NOTICE!

Members attending the Conference at Grenada, December 10, will pay full fare going, and take a receipt from agent when purchasing ticket. This, when signed by the secretary of the Conference, will entitle the holder to return at one cent a mile. Members must obtain a receipt for every ticket purchased. Tickets good to December 20.

AN ELEGANT GIFT BOOK: Golden Thoughts on Mother, Home and Heaven. Edited by Rev. Theo. L. Cuyler, D. D., and others. From an examination of its merits we heartily endorse the sentiment of William M. Taylor, D. D., pastor of Broadway Tabernacle, expressed in a personal letter to the publisher, E. B. Treat, 5 Cooper Union, N. Y.

"This book is as valuable in its contents as it is beautiful in its external appearance. There is something here for almost every experience, and the lessons for earth are all made to point toward the rewards of heaven. The book, as a whole, is worthy of all acceptation, and is especially timely in an age when the glory of the home is so frequently forgotten in the glitter of what is called society."

Price, $2 75. Gilt edge in a box, $3 50. Two hundred thousand have been printed to meet the demand. Teachers, ladies and agents wanted to introduce it.

Statistics of Mississippi Conference.

Dear Brethren: Please get the blanks ordered by the last General Conference. Reports can not be made on the old blanks. Please hand your reports to the statistical secretary as soon as you arrive at Conference. If it is in any way doubtful as to your being there on December 17, please forward your report, so that it can be recorded.

Your brother,

JOHN W. CHAMBERS.

The President's Thanksgiving Proclamation.

The following is the proclamation by the President of the United States:

A PROCLAMATION

By the grace and favor of Almighty God, the people of this nation have been led to the closing days of the passing year, which has been full of the blessings of peace and the comforts of plenty. Bountiful compensation has come to us for the work of our minds and of our hands in every department of human industry.

Now, therefore, I, Benjamin Harrison, President of the United States of America, do hereby appoint Thursday, the twenty-seventh day of the present month of November, to be observed as a day of thanksgiving and prayer, and I do invite the people upon that day to cease from their labors, to meet in their accustomed house of worship, and to join in rendering gratitude and praise to our beneficent Creator for the rich blessings he has granted us as a nation and invoking the continuance of his protection and grace for the future.

I commend to my fellow-citizens the privilege of remembering the poor, the homeless and the sorrowing. Let us endeavor to merit the promised recompense of charity and the gracious acceptance of our praise. In testimony whereof, I have hereunto set my hand and caused the seal of the United States to be affixed.

Done at the city of Washington, this eighth day of November, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and ninety, and of the Independence of the United States the one hundred and fifteenth.

THE SUN.

FOR

1891.

Some people agree with THE SUN'S opinions about men and things, and some people don't; but everybody likes to get hold of the newspaper which is never dull and never afraid to speak its mind.

Democrats know that for twenty years THE SUN has fought in the front line for Democratic principles, never wavering or weakening in its loyalty to the true interests of the party it serves with fearless intelligence and disinterested vigor. At times opinions have differed as to the best means of accomplishing the common purpose; it is not THE SUN'S fault if it has seen further into the millstone.

Eighteen hundred and ninety-one will be a great year in American politics, and everybody should read THE SUN.

Our Young People.

A CRADLE SONG.

Oh, rare like honey-dew that drips,
By love distilled from baby's lips!
And sweet the breath that from them flows
Laden with odors of the rose.
Sleep, darling, snugly folded lie
A rosebud in its mossy cup—
Sleep, baby, sleep!

Away from earth her spirit seems
To wander in the land of dreams:
But what within that realm she sees
Is part of nature's mysteries;
The secrets of her deep repose
The baby never may disclose—
Sleep, baby, sleep!

The hush of evening, deep and calm,
Descends to earth with tender balm;
The blossoms fair their petals close,
And nod and sink to soft repose;
Sleep, darling, till the dawn, and then
Bring glory to the world again—
Sleep, baby, sleep!

—Harper's Young People.

"The Thank-You Game."

"What in the world is that?" asked the young folks of Don and Dorry, and their host and hostess candidly admitted that they hadn't the slightest idea what it was. They never had heard of it before.

"Well, then how can we play it?" insisted the little spokespeople.

"I don't know," answered Dorry, looking in a puzzled way at the door.

"All join hands and form a circle!" cried a voice.

Everyone arose and soon the circle stood expectant.

"Your dear great-great fairy godmother is coming to see you," continued the voice. "She is slightly deaf, but you must not mind that. She brings her white gnome with her, and don't let him know your names, or he will get you into trouble."

"No, no, no!" cried the circle, wildly.

A slight stirring was heard in the hall, the doors opened and in walked the fairy godmother and her white gnome.

She was a tall, much bent old woman, in a ruffled cap, peaked hat and a long red cloak. He (the gnome) wore red trousers and red sleeves. The rest of his body was dressed in a white pillow-case, with arm-holes cut in it. It was gathered at his belt; gathered also by a red ribbon tied around the throat; the corners of the pillow-case tied with narrow ribbon formed his ears, and there was a white bandage over the eyes and a round opening for his mouth. The godmother dragged in a large sack and the gnome bore a stick with bells at the end.

"Let me into the ring, dears," squeaked the fairy godmother.

"Let me into the ring, dears," growled the white gnome.

The circle obeyed.

"Now, my dears," squeaked the fairy godmother, "I've brought you a bagful of lovely things, but, you must know, I am under an enchantment. All I can do is to let you each take out a gift when your turn comes, but when you send me a 'Thank-you' don't let my white gnome know who it is, for if he guesses your name you must put the gift back without opening the paper. But if he guesses the wrong name, then you may keep the gift. So now begin, one at a time. Keep the magic circle moving until my gnome knocks three times."

Around went the circle, eager with fun and expectation. Suddenly the blinded gnome pounded three times with his stick, and then pointed it straight in front of him jingling the little bells. Tommy Budd was the happy youth pointed out.

"Help yourself, my dear," squeaked the fairy godmother, as she held the sack toward him. He plunged his arm into the opening and brought out a neat paper parcel.

"Hey! What did you say, dear?" she squeaked. "Take hold of the stick."

Tommy seized the end of the stick, and said, in a hoarse tone:

"Thank you, ma'am."

"That's John Stevens," the gnome growled. "Put it back! put it back!"

But it wasn't John Stevens, and so Tommy kept the parcel.

The circle moved again. The gnome knocks three times, and this time the stick pointed to Dorry. She tried to be polite, and direct her neighbor's hand to it; but the godmother would not hear of that.

"Help yourself, child," she squeaked, and Dorry did. The paper parcel which she drew from the sack was so tempting and pretty, all tied with ribbon, that she really tried very hard to disguise her "Thank you," but the gnome was too sharp for her.

"No, no!" he growled; "that's Dorothy Reed. Put it back! put it back!"

And poor Dorry dropped the parcel into the bag again.

So the merry game went on; some escaped detection and saved their gifts; some were detected and lost them: but the god mother would not suffer those who had parcels to try again, and, therefore, in the course of the game, those who failed at first succeeded after a while.

"That is a splendid game!" declared some. "Grand!" cried others. "Fine," "first rate," "glorious," "capital," "as good as Christmas," said the rest. Then they opened their parcels and there was great rejoicing.—St. Nicholas.

Beginning to Talk.

Among a party of friends the other day conversation turned upon the amusing mistakes often made by children in their use of words, and the following are some of the true stories told which it is believed have never before been in print:

A little girl who often heard an old lady speak of her "jints" aching, was told that it might be all right for Grandma A. to pronounce the word jint because she was old-fashioned, but it was inexcusable for any young person to do it. Some time after she electrified the household one day by the announcement that there was to be a joint eight feet tall at the circus, and she wanted to go and see him.

Little Ruth (two-and-a-half) while at a neighbor's with her mother was shown a squirrel in a cage, and told that it had been caught in a tree which stood near the door. After going home she gave the other members of the family a very animated account of the little bird she had seen. Well, had she not a logical mind? She knew that birds lived in trees or were kept in cages, and reasoned that this must be one.

Her brother, just beginning to talk, was one day given some bright flowers. He took them, his eyes sparkling with pleasure, and, shyly said, "Please," showing that he remembered the lessons in politeness he had received, though his vocabulary was a little mixed.—N. Y. Advocate.

WHAT BOYS SHOULD BE.—First, be true, be genuine. No education is worth anything that does not include this. A man had better not know how to read—he had better never learn a letter of the alphabet, and be true and genuine in intention and in action, rather than be learned in all sciences and in all languages, to be at the same time false in heart and counterfeit in life. Above all things, teach the boys that truth is more than riches, more than culture, more than earthly power or position. Second, be unselfish. To care for the feelings and comforts of others. To be polite. To be just in all dealings with others. To be generous, noble and manly. This will include a genuine reverence for the aged and things sacred. Third, be self-reliant and self-helpful even from early childhood. To be industrious always, and self-supporting at the earliest proper age. Teach them that all honest work is honorable, and that an idle, useless life of dependence on others is disgraceful. When a boy has learned these three things, when he has made these ideas a part of his being—however young he may be, however poor or however rich—he has learned some of the most important things he ought to know when he becomes a man. With these three properly mastered it will be easy to find all the rest.—Mail and Express.

A Bee Line.

In taking a serious step you need encouragement. You knew where you want to go well enough, but are puzzled how to get there. In a case like that, suppose you happen upon a lot of people who have made exactly the same journey you contemplate; won't they be an assurance to you? Well here's precisely the same case:

You are sick and you need to recover. A bee line to that end is what you want. A 200-page book, free to you, will give you the name and addresses of men and women who have recovered from dangerous illness by the use of Drs. Starkey & Palen's Compound Oxygen Treatment. This treatment has been used in over 55,000 cases, by physicians in their practice and by individuals independently.

It is a grand specific in cases of asthma, catarrh, consumption, hay fever, headache, neuralgia, rheumatism, bronchitis, and all complaints of a chronic nature. 200 pages of testimonials, each concluding with the name and address. You will know exactly where to find every gratified man and woman who has so heartily indorsed the Compound Oxygen Treatment.

Return mail will bring you the book without charge if you will send your name and address to Drs. Starkey & Palen, 1529 Arch Street, Philadelphia, Pa., or 120 Sutter St., San Francisco, Cal.

Household.

A Boys' Paradise.

The father mentioned in the following incident belongs to the large class of people who believe that "boys can be poked away anywhere," and in planning his new house no provision was made for the room which his young sons were to occupy. Fortunately, the lads had a grandmother who knew that an attractive room, all their own, has wonderful power to keep boys indoors in the evening, and the way in which she converted the father to her belief is thus described:

"David," she said to her son, "who is that large chamber for with the bay-window and two mantle-pieces?"

"For company, mother," was the reply.

"What company? I didn't know you expected any," said the shrewd old lady.

"O, for anyone who happens along. By and by Emma will leave school, and have company, you know. James' wife and Cousin Hepsy come down twice a year to shop, and always stop here a night or two."

"But your own boys come here to sleep three hundred and sixty-five nights in a year, and have a thousand times the claim on you that any 'company' has."

"Yes."

"What arrangements have you made for them?"

And the father repeated the remark that he has made to his easy wife so often: "Boys didn't care, they cuddle down and sleep anywhere."

"But these boys must not sleep 'anywhere' after the new house is done. Unless you divide that long spare chamber into moderate-sized ones, and give one of them to the lads, I shall settle them in the room you have planned for me, and make my home with Catharine. She has plenty of room, and is always urging me to come to her. I will not crowd your sons out of a room."

David Lane loved his mother; so the result was that the long "spare chamber" was finished so as to meet the wants of the boys.

Two happier boys never lived than these two when the time came for furnishing and ornamenting that room. Grandma took the matter into her own hands, and said they should have everything to their mind, so long as they kept within bounds.

"Now, what do you want in your room, boys?" she asked, when the house was nearly done.

"In the first place, we don't want any carpet, because somebody would be always telling us not to kick holes in it. We don't want black walnut furniture, nor a big looking-glass, nor china vases, nor anything grand that scratches or tears or breaks," Morton said.

"Well, say what you do want, then," said their grandmother.

"Well, grandma, we want an oiled floor, and two of your great braided mats; and an open fireplace, with your brass andirons from the garret; and a big hearth, where we can pop corn and roast nuts; and we want bright wall-paper, with pictures of the country; and two little iron bedsteads, with blue spreads; four chairs, painted blue; a glass case for our stuffed birds; shelves for our books, and lots of hooks to hang our bows and arrows, violin, French horn, boxing-gloves, bats and Indian clubs on. These, with the old sitting-room lounge and the old easy-chairs, will make us the most comfortable boys in the world."

Before the month closed, the "Boys' Paradise" was complete, and a score of wise fathers and mothers, with several scores of less wise boys and girls, had been invited to see it. No one now complains of the Lane boys for hooting from the top of the stone walls, or howling about the streets by nights; and their mother says their music and their company do not disturb her half so much as the anxiety as to where they were by night used to do.—Selected.

We the undersigned, do testify that we have used Dr. Davis' Compound Syrup of Wild Cherry and Tar for years, for all throat and lung troubles, with the greatest benefit. For coughs and colds it never fails. When taken according to directions, it cures our children of croup and whooping-cough, and for serious lung troubles it always gives relief.

Scientific.

Some Uncommon Metals.

There are quite a number of metals which are very sparingly distributed over the earth, and which few people have ever seen, but which have some exceedingly useful applications in the arts, and, in small quantities, are in almost constant use. Hydrogen, the lightest of all the elements, was discovered by Cavendish in 1766, and is considered by the best authorities to be a gaseous metal, just as mercury is a liquid metal at ordinary temperatures. Very few persons have ever seen solid hydrogen. Mercury becomes solid at 40 degrees, but, according to Professor Pictet, hydrogen gas requires a temperature of—140 degrees, and pressure of over two tons to the square inch, before it liquifies even. By suddenly removing the pressure from this liquified hydrogen, the cold produced by its evaporation is so great that a part of it solidifies into a state resembling metallic grains, which remain visible for several minutes. Its metallic nature is also rendered probable by its directly uniting with a metal resembling platinum, and known as palladium, to form a sort of alloy. The weight of a single molecule of hydrogen has been calculated not to be greater than one ten-thousand-millionth of a gramme, and a cubic centimeter of the gas contains at least twenty-one trillions of such molecules. Although these figures are quite incomprehensible to the human mind, they must be approximately correct, and represent actual and existing magnitudes.

Lithium is a quite rare mineral, which occurs in some varieties of mica, and also in small quantities in the waters of certain mineral springs. It is considered to possess a distinct medicinal value by some physicians, and is probably taken into the system, at least, as we have detected it by spectroscopic analysis in the blood of a person who had been drinking a strong lithia water.

Barium is a metal closely allied to calcium, the metallic base of lime. It is never used in the metallic state, but the sulphate of barium is quite extensively used—either honestly or dishonestly—as a substitute for white lead in paint. It is cheaper than white lead, and is not changed in color by the sulphur compounds often present in the air, but possesses less covering power than lead, and is less permanent in other ways. The peroxide of barium is used in the preparation of peroxide of hydrogen, and the phosphorescent sulphide of barium is a constituent of some varieties of luminous paints. The green fire used in pyrotechny is also due to the presence of this metal in the form of a nitrate.

Selenium is not a metal, but belongs to the sulphur group of elements. We must mention, however, the wonderful property by which its electrical conductivity varies according to the amount of light falling upon it, just as the chemical relations of silver are altered by the same means. By this power Professor Bell was enabled to construct an optical telephone, and actually transmitted words and sentences between two distant points which were not connected in any way except by a beam of light, which faithfully carried the vibrations of his voice to a selenium disk, by which they were transformed into electric energy and reproduced in an ordinary telephone. Whether we shall ever see our friends at a distance, as we now talk with them, is exceedingly problematical; but if we ever do so, it will, doubtless, be through this mysterious connection between light, electricity and the element selenium.—Popular Science News.

INTERESTING NOTES AS TO TREES.—There are 413 species of trees to be found in the United States and Territories, 16 of which, when perfectly seasoned, will sink in water. The heaviest of these is the black ironwood, found only in Southern Florida, which is more than 30 per cent. heavier than water. Of the other 15, the best known is the lignum vitæ and the mangrove. Texas and New Mexico lands, full of queer creeping, crawling, walking and inanimate things, are the homes of a species of oak which is about 1¼ times heavier than water, and which when green will sink almost as quick as a bar of iron. It grows only in mountain regions, and has been found west as far as the Colorado desert, where it grows at an elevation of 10,000 feet. All the species heavier than water belong to tropical Florida or in the arid West or Southwest.

DR. KING'S

Royal Germetuer.

NEW ORLEANS, Sept. 2, 1890.

I have been for several years constantly subject to malarial fevers. The best medical treatment has failed to remove from my system the malarial poison that produced them. I have had to use an average of forty grains of quinine per week for years. The fevers would invariably return in a few days, if it was discontinued. The quinine was doing great harm to my nervous system, but I had to keep it up as my only hope. Recently I commenced using Dr. King's Royal Germetuer. It has done me more good than all the medicine I have ever taken. I have not had a fever since commencing its use, nor found it necessary to take a dose of quinine. It has toned my nerves, built up my strength and given me a buoyancy and healthfulness of feeling that I have not known for years. My experience justifies me in saying that this wonderful remedy is all that is claimed for it, if not more.

LESSON IX.—November 30.

JESUS RISEN.

Luke xxiv, 1-12.

GOLDEN TEXT.—Now is Christ risen from the dead, and become the first fruits of them that slept.—1 Cor. xv, 20.

TIME.—Sunday morning, April, A. D. 30.

PLACE.—The tomb in the garden, and its neighborhood.

PARALLEL PASSAGES.—Matt. xxviii, 1-10; Mark xvi, 2-11; John xx, 1-18.

1. First day....very early in the morning—The original has a more poetic form, "In the deep dawn," agreeing with "while it was yet dark." St. Mark, "When the Sabbath was over;" St. Matthew gives, "In the end of the Sabbath;" St. Matthew's addition, "As it began to dawn," brings his narrative into harmony with St. Luke's. The order of facts appears to have been as follows: (1) Mary Magdalene and the other Mary, the mother of James the Little, watched the burial just before the Sabbath began on the evening of the day of the crucifixion. (2) They stayed at home during the twenty-four hours of the Sabbath. (3) On the evening of that day (the Sabbath-rest being over) they bought spices for the embalmment. (4) At the earliest dawn, say about four A. M. on the day following, they set out to make their way to the sepulcher, and they reached it when the sun had risen.

2. They found the stone rolled away—On their way they had considered how they should get over this difficulty, since the stone was "very great." From St. Mark's expression, "looking up," we infer that the tomb was slightly elevated; and from St. John's "lifted," that the first aperture of the tomb was horizontal. St. Matthew also tells us of the angel and the earthquake.

3. Found not the body—Even advanced skeptics admit this circumstance as indisputable, nor has one of them been able to invent the most remotely plausible explanation of the fact by natural causes.

4. Much perplexed—The word means "utterly at a loss." Two men—From this it must be inferred that these holy women were not the same as those who are spoken of in Matt. xxviii, 2, and Mark xvi, 1. In shining garments—Literally, flashing as with lightning, which recalls the expression of Matt. xxviii, 3.

5. The expression "the living" is probably used on the lips of the angels with something of its true mystic depth. It is in vain that we see "Him that liveth" in dead works, dead formulæ, dead or dying institutions. The eternal life that is in Christ is not to be found by looking into the graves of the past in the world's history or in those of our individual life. In both cases it is better to rise, as on the "stepping-stones" of our dead selves, to "higher things. The ground of the rebuke lies in the designation applied to our Lord, "the living one" (absolutely). He who hath life in himself, and of whom it is elsewhere said, that God raised him up; "having loosed the pains of death, because it was not possible that he should be holden of it."

6. Remember how he spake—Chap. ix, 22 (comp. ix, 44); Matthew and Mark have also a mention of Galilee in this place; but it is an announcement to the women that they should see Jesus there. St. Luke omits all notices of the appearances of our Lord in Galilee, in accordance with his usual disregard to geographical details, and, possibly, as a matter which would have no special interest for Gentile readers.

7. Sinful men—The Gentiles.

9. Returned from the sepulcher—From John xx, 2, we infer that Mary of Magdala had, in the first instance, run from the sepulcher to tell Peter and John of the removal of the stone, and had therefore not seen the first vision of angels. The apparent contradiction in Mark xvi, 8, obviously means that they said not one word on the subject to any one except the apostles, to whom they were expressly told to announce it.

11. As idle tales—The strong word used implies mere nonsensical talk. The one Greek word which is thus rendered occurs nowhere else in the New Testament. It is applied strictly to the trifling, half-idiotic babble of dotage.

12. Then arose Peter—The fact of Peter's visit to the sepulcher is common to St. Luke and St. John, but the former does not mention the companionship of the beloved disciple. It should be, but Peter arose. The "but" implies his readiness to believe. The presence of John, though omitted here, is implied in verse 24. Peter, impulsive man, sprang to his feet and ran to the sepulcher. John has told us (Luke does not) that he also ran; that he outran Peter and arrived first, but did not go into the sepulcher. Peter, true to his instincts, did go in, and saw the linen which enwrapped his remains carefully laid away, but no body there. The linen clothes—othonia, a very general term, and perhaps including the linen bands in which the body had been swathed in spices. Laid by themselves—Important as incidentally refuting the story disseminated by the Jews. Such a stealing of the body was on every ground impossible under the conditions, and had it been even possible could only have been hurried and perilous work. Yet this absurd Jewish fiction was repeated and amplified twelve centuries later in the blasphemous Toldoth Jeshu. Departed, wondering in himself—The surprise, the alarm, the perplexed force of those evidences which so absolutely convinced them of the miracle which they had never contemplated. The stunning blow of the crucifixion had made them forget the prophecies of Jesus, which even at the time they had been unable to receive with any comprehension or conviction.

The Bible from a Poet's Standpoint.

Joaquin Miller is more of a poet than a philosopher or theologian, and his opinion of the Bible from the poetic standpoint will carry more weight than if he looked at it from the usual view-point. Here is what he says in a recent magazine:

"'And the earth was without form, and void; and darkness was upon the face of the deep. And the Spirit of God moved upon the face of the waters. And God said, Let there be light; and there was light.' How many paragraphs, pages, books, would a modern author devote to telling this? Mark you, I am looking at this in quite a worldly way. It is the boast of too many of us that these words are, to our thinking, entirely the work of a man. As for myself, I can only say, 'If so, O for another such man!' The present writer was required to address the Jews in their synagogue here recently on the subject of poetry. He searched for poetry in many pages, waded through modern books, and kept going back, back, back, till the very fountain-head was reached. And here, and here only, in his humble opinion, did he find poetry in all its largeness and splendor of thought and utterance.

"Were I to undertake to write down the alphabet—the very first lesson in the appreciation—of poetry, I should begin with the first lesson given to man at his birth. I should begin with the first lesson of God, the very first: 'And God said, Let there be light; and there was light.'"—Golden Rule.

Hints to Church Members.

1. Religious life needs culture. Nourish it by the study of the Bible, by prayer, and by the faithful performance of Christian duty.

2. Make it a rule to attend at least one devotional meeting a week, besides the Sabbath services.

3. Connect yourself actively with some department of church work.

4. Consecrate to Christ's service some definite proportion of your income.

5. Keep yourself informed as to the progress of Christ's kingdom throughout the world.

6. Remember the Sabbath day to keep it holy.

7. Cultivate, so far as you can, the acquaintance of your fellow-members of this household of faith.

8. In your business and your recreations, let your light shine. While in the world, be not of it.

9. Welcome strangers and introduce them.

10. Strive daily to grow in grace, in knowledge, and a spirit of obedience to Christ. Remember constantly, "Ye are not your own."

Deafness Can't be Cured

by local applications, as they can not reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube gets inflamed, you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result; and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that we can not cure by taking Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

GOD'S CRADLE SONGS.—Two texts of Scripture there are, which, put together, I think are the most wonderful in the Bible. They do suggest a child lying in the cradle, and a loving face is bent over it, and a sweet voice is murmuring above its head. But I marvel with inexpressible surprise and adoration when I find who the Singer is and who is the child. The first verse is found in Isaiah lxv, 13: "As one whom his mother comforteth, so will I comfort you." The other verse I find in Zephaniah iii, 17: "The Lord thy God in the midst of thee is mighty; he will save, he will rejoice over thee with joy, he will rest in his love; he will joy over thee with singing." Oh, I have thought again and again, in my history, of this picture; and I am not too proud to say my eyes have filled with tears of emotion as I have tried to comprehend how the eternal Jehovah seems to sing beside one who loves him, as I remember my mother used to sing restful songs of comfort beside our bed on the old Sabbath nights?—*C. Royal Baking Powder

ABSOLUTELY PURE

The Clergy of America take kindly to Life Insurance, and have been its firmest champions. They fight for it and thoroughly believe in it. There are many splendid financiers in the Church; that they are intelligent and thoughtful for their future goes without saying. All denominations seek the protection of Life Insurance, and are careful to select the company offering the greatest security and the most advantageous terms to policy-holders.

The Episcopal Diocese, of New York, has an Insurance Fund for all of its members, and the Mutual Life, which is the largest and strongest company in the world, with over $122,000,000 assets, has been officially selected by that body to issue all the insurance to these worthy people.

A Southern Department of this Company has been opened in New Orleans under the management of Mr. T. H. Bowles, with offices in Louisiana National Bank Building.

In many cases it is very hard to fix the bounds of good and evil, because these part, as day and night, which are separated by twilight.—Whichcot.

A Chance to Make Money.

I bought one of Griffith's machines for plating with gold, silver or nickel, and it works to perfection. No sooner did people hear of it than I had more spoons, knives, forks and jewelry than I could plate in a month. The first week I cleared $31.30, the first month $167.85, and I think by July first I will have $1,000 cash, and give my farm considerable attention, too. My daughter made $27 10 in four days. Any person can get one of these machines by sending $3 to W. H. Griffith & Co., Zanesville, Ohio, or can obtain circulars by addressing them. You can learn to use the machine in one hour. As this is my first lucky streak, I give my experience, hoping others may be benefited as much as I have been. Yours truly,

M. O. MOREHEAD.

Twice a Week for a Dollar a Year.

Subscribers to THE WEEKLY REPUBLIC, of St. Louis, the leading Democratic paper of the country, will get two papers every week during November and December. One six-page sheet will be mailed Tuesday, and one Friday, so that the readers of THE WEEKLY REPUBLIC will get the news of the week from one to five days earlier than heretofore, and part of the news earlier than by any weekly paper, no matter where printed or what day issued. Notwithstanding the heavy expense involved, there will be no change in the subscription price of THE WEEKLY REPUBLIC, which will remain ONE DOLLAR A YEAR, with the usual commission to agents. Address all orders, THE REPUBLIC, St. Louis, Mo.

Notice.

All contributions and communications intended for the Transit and Building Fund Society of Bishop William Taylor's Self-Supporting Missions, should be sent to Richard Grant, treasurer, 181 Hudson St., New York.

Excursion to the Dayton, Tenn., Land Sale.

For the grand sale of lots and lands at Dayton, Tenn., December 3, 4 and 5, agents Queen & Crescent Route will sell tickets to Dayton and return at low excursion rates, good ten days from date of sale. Dayton is now a city of 5,000, situated on the Queen & Crescent Route, in the beautiful Tennessee Valley, surrounded by an inexhaustible supply of coal, iron and timber. Two furnaces are now in full blast, and behind in orders. Two flour mills, pump works, planing mill, brick works, and other industries. Ample accommodation at the hotels for all who come. Full particulars on application to agents Queen & Crescent Route.

It is well known among successful merchants that liberal advertising is indispensable to the economical and successful working of their establishments.—Price Current.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

DOMESTIC.

Allan G. Thurman, the "Old Roman" of Ohio Democracy, was seventy-seven years old on last Friday, and the anniversary of the event was celebrated at Columbus by a thousand guests from all sections of the country. Conspicuous among the number, mostly Democrats, was ex-President Cleveland.

The annual convention of the W. C. T. U. was opened in Atlanta, Ga., on November 14. Numerous resolutions in sympathy with the aims of the Union sent their delegates as tangible evidence of their feeling.

A summary of the reports of the secretaries of the Missionary Committee of the Methodist Episcopal Church shows that of the $1 026,309 received for missions during the year $460,170 was expended in the United States. There is a membership of 16,000 and $1,000,000 of property in the missions of Germany; 7,000 members in Switzerland; 15,000 in Sweden; 8,000 and a property of $500,000 in Norway, and a membership of 56,000 in the great Indian missions.

In the annual address of the Secretary of War, it is said, "No civilized nation to-day has more just cause than ours to look well to the condition of its coast defenses, and none, since the Civil War, has so wholly neglected them." The military schools are considered an important adjunct of the service, while the State National guardsmen receive complimentary mention.

Inventors, business men, officials of the United States Patent Office, and others, are making arrangements to celebrate in Washington City in April the centennial of the inauguration of the American patent system, which was established in 1790.

At a meeting held in Lincoln, Neb., on November 16, presided over by Gov. Thayer, steps were taken for the immediate relief of the destitute in the western part of the State, and a substantial fund raised. The commission appointed by the governor reported that twelve counties are included in the drouth-stricken district, and that an appropriation of $100,000 would be required to prevent actual suffering.

The corner-stone of a cold storage exchange was laid at Chicago during the past week. The exchange has a capital of $3,000,000, and is intended to handle the fruit, dairy and produce auction business. The warehouses will be the largest of their kind in the world and will contain forty stores and a hundred offices outside of the storage rooms.

It was recently announced that a Boston syndicate had purchased 144,000 acres of land in Concordia parish, La., belonging to the Fifth District Levee Board. The price paid was $50,000, and by being placed on the tax rolls the property will yield the State $6,000 besides. All this money will be applied to the levees.

Nearly a quarter of a million dollars was transferred, on November 17, from San Francisco to New York under the privileges extended by Secretary Windom in order to relieve the money market. The total amount so transferred and made immediately available is $1,200,000.

The Executive Committee of the Mississippi River Improvement Association met in Memphis, Tenn., on November 17. A resolution was adopted indorsing the bill introduced into the last Congress appropriating $9,000,000 for the purpose of levee construction in the Mississippi Valley from Cairo to the head of the passes. A committee was appointed to visit Washington during the coming session of Congress for the purpose of inducing that body to take up the bill at an early date.

FOREIGN.

Gen. Sanchez, at the head of the insurgents in Honduras, forced President Bogran to evacuate the capital on November 13; on the next day the revolutionary forces were utterly routed by the army which the President had rapidly gathered; on November 15 Gen. Sanchez and his chief officers were captured, and were soon after executed.

Baron Wissmann, the German commissioner to East Africa, started for Zanzibar on November 13. He declares that he does not intend to renew hostilities with the natives, but will organize the country and establish a civilized form of government. He proposes to create a provincial police force to maintain order.

The St. James' Gazette says that the negotiations between Great Britain and France for a settlement of the Newfoundland fishery question are progressing. The basis of the negotiations is that France shall surrender to Great Britain the French shore of Newfoundland, and shall be compensated therefor by the concession of one British West African colony, probably Gamba. In addition, New Foundland will renounce the halt act.

The experiments of Prof. Koch, of Berlin, with his newly discovered remedy, which he claims is a sure cure for consumption of the tubercular variety, are watched with deep interest by American physicians. As yet, the medical journals have published nothing concerning the nature of his discovery, and the American physicians, having only the newspaper accounts to base their opinions upon, have refrained from expressing themselves freely on the probable merits of the discovery. Many medical men, including a number of English and American physicians, have been studying the process under Dr. Levy in small wards in a private hospital where Prof. Koch first achieved striking results with small means.

If that lady at the lecture the other night only knew how nicely Hall's Hair Renewer would remove dandruff and improve the hair she would buy a bottle.

The more we fear crosses, the more reason have we to think that we need them. We ought to judge of the violence of our disease by the violence of the remedies which our Spiritual Physician prescribed for us.—Fenelon.

Old and rheumatic people can't afford to be without Salvation Oil. It kills pain. 25 cents.

DONALD KENNEDY

Of Roxbury, Mass., says

Don't write to me when taking the first bottle of my Medical Discovery. I know how it makes you feel, but it's all right. There are certain cases where the Discovery takes hold sharp, but it is the diseased spot in you it has taken hold of, and that's what you want. The Discovery has a search warrant for every humor, from backache to scrofula, inside and outside, and, of course, it makes a disturbance in your poor body, but the fight is short, you are better by the second bottle; if not, then tell me about it, and I will advise. I will, however, in the future, as in the past, answer any letter from a nursing mother.

Sincerely yours,

DONALD KENNEDY,

ROXBURY, MASS.

WILBOR'S

COMPOUND OF PURE COD LIVER OIL AND PHOSPHATES

For the Cure of Consumption, Coughs, Colds, Bronchitis, Debility, Wasting Diseases, Asthma, Influenza, Scrofulous Humors

PHOSPHATES OF LIME, SODA, IRON.

BLOOD NERVE BRAIN

ALMOST as palatable as cream. It can be taken with pleasure by delicate persons and children, who after using it, are very fond of it. It assimilates with the food, increases the flesh and appetite, builds up the nervous system, restores energy to mind and body, creates new, rich and pure blood: in fact, rejuvenates the whole system. This preparation is far superior to all other preparations of Cod Liver Oil; it has many imitators, but no equals. The genuine following its use are its best recommendations. Beware as you value your health, and get the genuine. Manufactured by DR. ALY'S B WILBOR, CHEMIST, Boston, Mass.

Centenary College

JACKSON, LA.

Jackson, La., is near Ethel, on the Valley R. R., 113 miles north of New Orleans. The location is beautiful and healthful, the buildings are elegant and ample, and the Faculty is complete and able. The sale of intoxicating drinks is forbidden by law within five miles of the College. Its endowment fund is being rapidly increased, and the college has entered upon a new career of prosperity.

Special attention will be given to the health, morals and biblical instruction of the students.

For terms, Catalogue, or other information apply to Prof. G. H. Wiley, Jackson, La., or to W. L. C. Hunnicutt, President.

Mansfield Female College

Conservatory of Music and Art.

MANSFIELD, LA.

One of the most popular and flourishing institutions of the South. The Sixty-seventh Session opens September 10, 1889, and the Spring Term begins January 23, 1891, with an able and experienced faculty. Curriculum comprehensive, instruction thorough. Advantages in Music unsurpassed, as in the best conservatories. The pianos are new and of the best make. The Technikon and the Technikphone are used to facilitate the work in the music department, placing this department beyond competition. Departments of Fine Arts and Industrial Arts under specialists.

The location is unsurpassed for beauty and attractiveness, and the school is celebrated for the remarkable record for good health maintained. The climate is the best in which to educate, and the place is the safest for girls. The main building is of brick, massive and commodious, with a large and well-shaded campus. Rooms large, well furnished, warmed and ventilated. Ample provision for the table of the best the market affords. All necessary comfort secured. Expenses very low and the school very economical. A new building with a large audience hall is in contemplation, and extensive improvements are in progress to make this the grandest institution in the State.

For catalogue and particulars address

Thanksgiving Day Musings.

BY J. B. A. AHRENS, D. D.

Ingratitude is disboneaty. Unwilling to meet undeniable obligation. Would hesitate to do business with parties whom I had discovered to be ingrates. If "Thank you!" were more frequently heard, many hearts and homes would be happier.

True gratitude has a triune constituency: Realization of undeserved good received; oral acknowledgment of said receipt; effort put forth to make suitable return. Of the Israelites the Lord complains, "My people doth not consider." Instead of giving thanks to God, many murmur and lament. Notwithstanding occasional afflictions, the Lord has been good to us far beyond our desert. Reasons abundant, to "make a joyful noise unto the Lord, to enter into his gates with thanksgiving."

There are numerous impellants to thanksgiving. I mention a few:

1. It is a solemn duty to give thanks to God. In him we live, move, and have our being. We owe it to him that our lot has fallen to us in pleasant places. He has crowned us with glory and honor. The enumeration of his benefactions wholesome exercise. But where begin? where end? I mention a few: Honorable parents, early religious instruction, renewal of heart, growth in grace, many answers to prayer, indwelling of the Holy Spirit.

2. To give thanks unto God is an enjoyable practice. It is more blessed to give than to receive; more blessed to give thanks for benefactions than the receipt of same. To offer thanks is gratifying to God; but I ween that it is a greater gratification to the party offering it. The realization and oral acknowledgment of the fact that we are the Lord's beneficiaries transfuse the soul with celestial beatitude. It is a reflection, precious beyond degree, that God regards us with solicitous interest, studies our wants, and bountifully supplies them! Offering thanks dispels all gloom. If we would bask in the sunshine of contentment, we must be truly grateful for blessings received.

3. Offering thanks causes mortification and remorse in the ungrateful, not unfrequently culminating in amendment. Ere long the witnesses of our gratitude witness in themselves incipiency and development of gratitude. Gratitude engenders gratitude.

Offering thanks is a heavenly employment. Even as love is greater than faith and hope—the former not being confined to terrestrial conditions—so the offer of thanks excels prayer and intercession. No individual wants; hence no prayer: no waywardness of loved ones; hence no intercession in heaven. But never will occasion cease, here and hereafter, to extol, laud, glorify, praise, thank our heavenly Benefactor.

Numerous were the sacrifices required of the Israelites of old. But only one of them has been finally and fully abolished, namely: the sin-offering. After that on Calvary "there remaineth no more sacrifice for sins."

"Christ bore, that we might never bear,
His Father's righteous ire."

Jesus paid it all. But the various other sacrifices have not been abolished; only changed in form. Numerous were the different thank-offerings. The principal involved holds good to this day. Even now the Lord demands sacrifices, living sacrifices—our hearts and our bodies.

It may be necessary here to state that the receipt of abundant divine benefactions is not an invariable proof of God's approval, nor that afflictions are proof positive of divine disapproval. It's true:

"Afflictions ne'er from the ground arise;
But oftimes Heaven's choicest benedictions
Assume such dark disguise."

Well says the apostle, "Whom the Lord loveth he chasteneth." In the meantime fret not thyself because of the apparent prosperity of the evil-doers. Envy them not the temporary enjoyment of a superabundance. Soon they may have to lift up their eyes, being in torment, deeming a drop of water a great boon. Hence, be grateful for weal and woe, bearing in mind that what we denominate weal may prove to be woe, and vice versa.

The annual injunction of our country's Chief Executive on a given day to repair to our places of worship for purposes of national thanksgiving, is matter of profound gratification. It emphasizes, as nothing else could do more successfully, that we are, indeed, a Christian people who are vastly indebted to God for innumerable proofs of his paternal devotion and care. Think of our abundant crops, cheapness of edibles; absence of epidemic diseases, war, devastating floods, hurricanes; income sufficient for all honest, earnest toilers. "Forget not all his benefits."

The reader will not be alarmed if, in conclusion, I shall present a "skeleton" of—a Thanksgiving sermon:

Text: "What shall I render unto the Lord for all his benefits towards me?" We consider:

I. The numerous divine benefits.

1. Temporal benefits or blessings. (a) Continuance of our mortal existence. (b) Health. (c) Genial surroundings. (d) Pecuniary competency. (e) Friendship and love on the part of our fellow-men.

2. Spiritual blessings. (a) Faithful pastors. (b) A pure gospel. (c) Edifying religious services. (d) Answers to prayer. Comfort in sorrow.

II. What we should render to the Lord for all his benefits.

1. Cordial thanks. "Be thankful unto him, and bless his name."

2. Benefit the needy. The favors shown even to the least of Christ's disciples, he computes as having been shown him personally.

3. Entire consecration. Being bought with a price, we are not our own. We are the Lord's. We are the Lord's entirely, and for all time.

Catherine Booth—Salvation Army.

BY J. J. WHEAT, D. D.

An article was copied into the CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE, some two numbers since, in regard to Mrs. Booth; her husband, General Booth, and the work accomplished by them. Some months ago I saw the statement that the "Army," as they call it, numbered one million of followers, and the collections for Christian work were three million and a half dollars per annum, and that its missions and workers were spread over most of Europe and much of the United States, and were entering foreign fields. And all this the fruit of but twenty-five years!

I learned that Mrs. Booth, marrying, at twenty-six years of age, Mr. Booth, a preacher among the Primitive Methodists of England, was really the founder of the great movement, its ruling spirit and greatest preacher. And meeting with a stray number of the Methodist Guardian, published at Toronto, I saw an advertisement of two books of sermons by Mrs. Booth. It seemed to me that these two small books, costing seventy-five cents each, would contain, if not much, at least, something that would be deeply interesting and profitable to one who longed to know the best way of preaching. A woman who was the chief agent in a great religious awakening that was attracting wide attention in the secular, as well as religious, press of this country and Europe, was surely, woman preacher though she was, like Dinah Evans, the wonderful preacher, and "one of the most pure-minded and holy women that ever adorned the church of Christ on earth"—a teacher sent from God. For surely no man or woman could do such things except God be with him. I wanted to hear her. I obtained the books—one called "Aggressive Christianity," and the other "Godliness." I saw from the books themselves that the sermons were preached to the nobility and gentry, and others of London, by special request, while her husband, with his assistants, was preaching to the neglected and heathen classes in the slums and dark alleys of the great metropolis. The books thrilled and aroused me; they were the utterances of one filled with the Holy Ghost, abounding in prayer and simple faith, and glowing with apostolic fervor and fire. No books of their class ever benefited me more. They are pointed and direct, simple and red-hot, and breathing the spirit of the Master. They seemed a revival of the methods and spirit of the apostles and the early days of Methodism, and of all great revival movements. I was struck with this in the sermons. Although a street preacher, a revivalist of the intensest type, accustomed to the street, with its roughs and rude, low fellows, there is not a trace of slang, no low wit or buffoonery, sarcasm or abuse; but the style is chaste and pure, sweet and elevated, tender and loving, and any congregation could have heard every word without offense, and the books could be read by any father in his family.

She tells how her husband became a street preacher. They noticed that great numbers of people did not attend church at all, and were practically heathens; but the great commission was, "Preach the gospel to every creature" in all the world. And they saw by confining themselves to the pulpit great numbers would never hear the Word, and what would become of the "every creature" in the commission? and what would become of them thus neglecting their fellow-men? And so they went on to the streets to compel them to come in.

She tells, in a most touching way, how she came to be a preacher herself; how she resisted the call of the Spirit, making promises to God to obey; but when the time came, would fall, shrinking back from the publicity and scandal of such an unseemly thing; but, after years of resistance, she yielded, and, though a woman of rare natural gifts and high culture, and of a modest, timid soul, she became a preacher, as a secular paper states it, of "rare fervor, eloquence and power."

It is pathetic to hear her tell how, when busied with household duties, and the care of her children in the intervals of work, and sometimes with a child at the breast, she made notes of the sermon she was to preach, often on the street, kneeling in the dirt, and, by the voice of song and prayer, quieting the surging and rude crowd, that she might tell them of him who died for them.

I felt, on beginning to read the sermons, the common opposition to women preaching; but, on finishing them, I thought it was as certain that Catherine Booth was called to preach as I am, or anyone I know.

She gave the great mission a military form and discipline, prescribing a simple uniform and gradation of workers with military titles. Total abstinence of all intoxicating drinks was enjoined upon all who joined, and the women and the girls were to renounce all jewelry and gay attire, and dress in simple manner. It is said the "Army" has accomplished most when under the immediate leadership of Mrs. Booth.

She died a few weeks ago, and her funeral, it was said, was attended by forty thousand people.

Recently General Booth has issued "In Darkest England, and the Way Out," and the whole edition was sold in three hours.

At first the work of these people met with great opposition; the Methodists thrust them out; they were persecuted, and met with the usual apostolic treatment of hooting, pelting, violence, and sometimes imprisonment; but so great and palpable have been the results, especially on the lower classes—though by no means confined to them—that "the Prince of Wales, Mr. Gladstone, dignitaries of the Established Church, and heads of the dissenters have borne enthusiastic testimony to the power and usefulness and influence of the Booths;" and a great secular daily says, speaking of this work, that it is a "great encouragement and confirmation of the belief that there is a revitalizing spirit in Christianity."

The books alluded to above were advertised by John Young, Yonge street, Toronto; but on forwarding the address through Bro. Bachman, the colporteur of the North Mississippi Conference, Kosciusko, Miss., I received them through the Publishing House at Nashville; price, I believe, seventy-five cents each.

Who Shall Be Greatest?

The discussion as to official precedence carries us back to a very early period of the church's history. It first arose between Christ and the forerunner, the former demanding baptism at John's hands, and asserting that a greater than he had not arisen among men; and the latter, in rare self-deprecation, saying of the former, "He must increase, but I must decrease." It was revived by the disciples a little later, who disputed among themselves as to who should have the pre-eminence, the meek Master intervening with the object-lesson of a little child, and saying, "Whosoever shall humble himself as this little child, the same is greatest in the kingdom of heaven;" and later it was the subject of excited colloquy at the Passover supper, and, indeed, became at different periods so infectious in that quiet body that even James and John, the two most noted for conservatism, headed a discreditable intrigue to get possession of the chief places. One would have supposed that the spectacle of the Most High become the most lowly, and always before them as "one that serveth," would have cured them of this unholy lust; but, on the contrary, we find that few things demanded more of his time in discourse, and parable, and even heated rebuke; while, at the close of his ministry, he is discovered in a last heroic effort to reform them from this principal error, engaged in the menial office of washing and wiping their feet. But if all other teaching had been vain, the spectacle of his shame and sorrow on Calvary seems to have convicted them, and from this time we hear nothing of self-preferment among the original twelve, at least. Henceforth, to be "counted worthy to suffer shame for the name of Jesus" was a distinction which, more than any other, they coveted. Even the chief of the apostles esteemed himself to be "less than the least of all saints." There is little doubt but that James and John, the erstwhile aspiring sons of Zebedee, courted the later distinction, which was awarded to them, of being the first martyred and the most martyred. Peter, who was self-assertive by temperament, chose to die, like his Lord, the shameful death of the cross; only lest he might be brought into comparison with him, he stipulated for a double portion of obloquy by requesting that his head be placed downward. Now they are ambitious of bonds and imprisonments; they seek to be promoted to "deserts and caves of the earth;" they are willing "to become all things to all men, that they may win some," and to die all deaths for the sake of him "who both died and rose again." Said the most honorable of the number: "I think that God hath set forth us the apostles last, as it were appointed to death: for we are made a spectacle to the world, and to angels and men. . . . We are honorable, but we are despised. . . . Being reviled, we bless; being persecuted, we suffer it; being defamed, we intreat. We are made as the filth of the world, and are the offscouring of all things unto this day." Perhaps it was well that he added the three last words to this surprising statement, for there seems to have come a great falling away about that date. In fact, the apostle, even before this time, noted the decline himself, and in the same connection uttered some especially severe warnings. Before the end of the second century it was more popular far to be in the succession of the apostles than to be in the succession of the martyrs, and you may search in vain through the annals of the Christian discipleship, of a later age, for such an utterance as, "When I am weak, then I am strong;" or, "When I am small, then I am great."

And most regrettably there seems to be no improvement in our own day. The apostles of our time, who are willing to decrease, that they may increase; to take root downward, that they may bear fruit upward, are very few, indeed. The idea that most apostles of our time have of suffering shame for the sake of the most honorable name in the universe, is to live in a palace, sumptuously clad and fed, and to preach in a temple to a congregation of princes. So many seek the office with such vehemence that the office has no time to stop and explain that it is not lost. Having heard that there is always room in the upper story, these modern apostles rashly conclude, and in spite of both reason and religion, that there is none in the lower. The one principle of self-sacrifice, which was enough for one apostle in St. Paul's time, has grown to be seven in this favored age—that is to say, "five loaves and two fishes," as some gruesome and, perhaps, hungry critic has put it. It will sometimes happen, indeed, that the whole college of the apostles, in some well-to-do corner of the Lord's heritage, will resolve themselves into a debating society of the whole, and fall into a heated wrangle over the burning question of, "Who shall be greatest?" Not seldom even in this boasted age two of "the sons of thunder," in excess of animability, will fall into each other's arms, and, after a brief, whispered delay, come forth from the fervors of the caressing exercise, exclaiming in tones of mingled confidence and admiration, "You take the place on the left hand, and I will sink into cushioned supineness on the right." Not a few there are, "even to this day," who can profess that they have "become all things to all men, that they might, by all means, win the best place."

And the Lord's people love to have it so, and do all that they can to promote the spirit of self-seeking in the sons of Levi. "Send us our money's worth," exclaims a rich church located somewhere near the spot at which the longitude of self-indulgence intersects the equator of worldliness; and, after a brief period of stillness, pending which young Titus has had time to balance his fondness for Cincinnatian repose against his penchant for hurling himself into gory breaches, and the circumambient quiet is broken by the cry, "I am ready to be offered." "Send us a strong man," writes a metropolitan Board to the metropolitan who is anxious, above all things, to do his duty and please everybody; but he will require to be a very active person, if he is not run down by the provincial Hercules, who, from as many quarters of the horizon as the starlight ascends, swarm towards the exposed citadel. Indeed, rather than that the cause should suffer by any such distressful conjuncture as a failure of home supply, we know of rich churches who would even consent to be served by a gifted apostle from the "regions beyond," if one of suitable dimensions could be found who, among his other gifts, did not include the fatal gift of insusceptibility to a bribe, and of more than one apostle in the direct Petrine succession who would consent to hold several offices of emolument rather than that Zion's finances should suffer travail. "But whereunto will this thing grow?" we may exclaim as we contemplate both this somewhat diffusive effusion, and the evil which it is designed in feeble measure to discipline, while, in a final effort of objurgation, we consign the whole, for the present, to all that accusive force and thunder of invective which we know may, upon occasion, reside in an interrogation point (?). Yours suppositively,

J. M. B.

Bro. White's Reply.

MR. EDITOR: It is a fact that Christ died for sinners; it is a fact that enlightened unregenerate sinners will be lost. The first is a fact accomplished; the second is a fact made true by the first. You understood this when you were "traversing" such parts of my article as suited you. You have "voluntarily assumed" to "traverse" my article, thus presuming that the Bishop was incompetent. You ought to have more respect for him. The fact that you tacitly acknowledge the truth of my 1st, 7th, 8th, 9th and 12th; then altogether misapprehend my 16th in its point and purpose, takes all the force out of your back-and-forth, high-stepping "traverse." Your sentence, "Let us work within the limits of proper authority," in this controversy, can only apply to those who deny the right of any person, in or out of the church, to suggest and defend plans for the good of the church in any and all its interests. We have suggested a plan to save and perpetuate Centenary. We have the same "rope," and wish to hold on to it as long as the battle for truth goes on. If agitation will injure Centenary, then why broaden the influence of the agitation? My little agitation was very circumscribed, and could have done very little harm, if evil be in it at all, which I do not believe. Let's preserve Centenary, at all hazards. By the grace of God we will, and others willing, we, who suggest the plan, will only work in, through and for Christ, in this vastly important matter. Sincerely,

B. F. WHITE.

ANSWER.

Bro. White says that we presumed that Bishop Keener was incompetent to answer his "facts." That is the first time we have ever been publicly accused of presumption of that sort. Instead of looking at the editor as such a presumptious fellow, he looks to others as one who has rushed in between the Bishop and Bro. White to save the latter from utter destruction, for we know the Bishop will never strike a man that is down.

"You ought to have more respect for him." We have so much respect for Bishop Keener that we would never concoct and publish to the world a plan to sell out a college of whose Board of Trustees he is president, without laying the whole plan before him and asking his views.

We do not believe that a member of the Conference has the right to do what Bro. White has done without Conference authorization. The "high official" who gave his endorsement to it would repudiate this principle of action in a hundred cases where he would approve in one case. EDITOR.

Millsaps College Notes.

The circular letters sent out by the agent are meeting with a prompt and willing response. Remittances are coming in in a way that is highly gratifying, and many of the letters contain words of good-will, hope and confidence. If our friends will make an effort to respond at once, we will be able to report to the meeting of the Board that the amount upon which the consideration of location was conditioned has been collected, and that we can now proceed to this important and interesting question.

The raising of $8 10 by the church in Jackson, La., on Millsaps College Day, is gratifying, and shows that that liberal people appreciate the advantages of a Christian education.

There have been but few additional reports this week of the observance of Millsaps College Day, and I would urge all, who have not done so, to report their collections at once, so that mention can be made of them in these columns. The following are the week's reports:

Jackson, La.	$ 8 10
Water Holes Sunday-school	2 35
Ellisville Church	4 20
Liberty Church (additional)	75
Brookhaven	41 35
Santee Sunday-school	10 00

A few pastors have lists of subscribers who have not yet converted their subscriptions into notes. Upon these I would urge the importance of collecting and forwarding these notes at once. A. F. WATKINS.

Church Dedication.

Last February a cyclone passed through the northern part of Kemper county. It swept away the old log church known as Spring Hill, which had stood since about 1839. From that church had gone out J. W. McLaurin, V. D. Skipper, J. M. Morse, and W. W. Morse—all honored members of the Mississippi Conference. At once the faithful preacher in charge, W. G. Backus, and the Building Committee went to work to provide another building. They succeeded. Yesterday, November 23, in the presence of a crowded congregation, I had the honor and pleasure to dedicate, according to our ritual, a beautiful little building, painted and completed in all respects, except the chancel-rail, and that will soon be supplied. The glory of the new house surpasses the glory of the former. A ready response secured the balance due on the house and all Conference assessments. This house cost $600. T. L. MELLEN, P. E.

The prohibitionists polled nearly 50,000 more votes this year than in 1888. Good growth in two years!

A SONG OF THE THANKFUL TIME.

BY ROSE HARTWICK THORPE.

We think of Thanksgiving at seeding time—
In the swelling, unfolding, budding time,
When the heart of Nature and hearts of men
Rejoice in the Earth grown young again.
We dream of the harvest, of field and vine,
And granaries full, at Thanksgiving time.

We think of Thanksgiving in growing time—
In the time of flowers, and the vintage prime;
When the palms of the year's strong hands are filled
With fruitage, with grain and with sweets distilled,
When the dream of hope is a truth sublime,
Then our hearts make room for the thankful time.

We think of Thanksgiving in harvest time—
In the yielding, gathering, golden time;
When the sky is fringed with a hazy mist,
And the blushing maples by frost-lips kissed;
When the barns are full with the harvest cheer,
And the crowning, thankful day draws near.

We think of Thanksgiving at resting time—
The circle completed is but a chime
In the song of life, in the lives of men;
We harvest the toil of our years, and then
We wait at the gate of the King's highway,
For the dawn of our soul's Thanksgiving Day.

Letter from Mexico.

MR. EDITOR: Since last I wrote you, our Bishop Haygood has been with us, and held our Conference, accompanied by Dr. John, and a new missionary to reinforce us. It is needless to say we gave them a heart-warm welcome. Though some of us have to move, I think all agree in the belief that our Bishop has a firm will and tender heart, and, in all he did, had an eye single to the advancement of Christ's kingdom in this sin-cursed land. We shall look anxiously for his return among us. His words of sympathy were as balm to our hearts, and his interest in our work made us his obedient subjects.

Mr. Weems has the Mexico district for his work, and we move next week to the Mission House, Avenida Balderas No. 3, where we will have all our work together, as the school is in the same house; also the printing office and editor's office. I began work today in earnest, and Mr. Weems is busy arranging our new place of worship. It is only a room in a dwelling, which we will use until you collect sufficient to build the church our friends have contributed for. There is a little experience connected with the new place to be opened this week. One of our stewards and the native preacher, with Mr. Weems, had been searching for a suitable place away from all Protestant Churches, when the two natives went to the home of the Bible woman quite discouraged. She proposed that they all kneel together and pray for the guidance of the Holy Spirit to the right place. They rose from their knees, and in ten minutes found the place that has been selected. When they enquired for the owner of the house, they hardly dared hope he would allow them to use it to preach in. They found him a liberal, and willing to let them have the house. So you see our little praying band helps us out of many difficulties.

I will here state that our Missionary Society met last Friday, and, after singing some of our good old songs, there was, first, a prayer of thanksgiving by the Bible woman, "because," she said, "the Lord had heard their petitions, and given the light of his Holy Spirit to our Bishop." They then prayed for his safe journey home. We collected from our poor sisters one dollar and a half, which, I think, pretty good for these poor people.

Now, we want a Bible woman for the new church. I hope some good friend will undertake to support one. One of the preachers in the Mississippi Conference proposes to take and educate one of our Mexican girls for mission work; and if all arrangements are perfected, I will take her with me in the spring, when I go for my daughter. This is, indeed, good mission work; and I trust the good brother may win through this girl many stars in his crown of rejoicing. Pray for us and poor Mexico. S. G. WEEMS.

Remember the Orphans.

MR. EDITOR: I beg leave, through your columns, to ask the pastors of all Protestant Churches in Mississippi where Thanksgiving services may be observed, to remember the Natchez Protestant Orphan Asylum by a special collection before the close of service. In many churches this has become a custom, and for several years past it has been a substantial and timely help to the institution.

The contributions on last Thanksgiving supported fifty orphans through the winter months. The President and Governor exhort us in their proclamations to remember the poor; the Word of God makes it a duty; and our own inclination should make it a pleasure to aid this noble charity by a thank-offering. Send amounts to Mrs. Mary R. Fleming, treasurer, Natchez, Miss. J. L. POWER.

Mississippi Items.

Local politics seem to be warming up in Meridian. There are four candidates for mayor of that city.

It is currently reported that a new national bank is about to be organized and put in operation in Columbus.

The Mississippi Synod held its annual session in the First Presbyterian Church, in Columbus, this past week.

The twentieth annual session of the Mississippi State Grange will convene in Hickory, on Tuesday, December 9.

Scranton is moving in such important matters as an ice factory and waterworks, with strong probability of success.

The Yokona Cotton Mills, at Water Valley, have recently added 500 spindles, and the capacity is to be increased in other ways.

Eighteen passenger trains ran daily into Meridian during the Sam Jones' meeting, all loaded with people anxious to see and hear the inimitable Sam.

During his recent meeting in Meridian, Sam Jones raised $2,200 for East Mississippi Female College. He could hardly have raised money for a worthier object.

The Democrats of Vicksburg have nominated a straight-out ticket for municipal officers; the first of the kind for many years, and a lively canvass is expected.

In a case decided in the circuit court in Aberdeen, the saloon men seem to have gained a victory over the antis. It was a case in which petition and counter-petition were involved.

Judge North, of the Sixth Judicial District, has resigned on account of ill-health, resignation to take effect December 18. The counties composing the district are Adams, Amite, Franklin, Jefferson, Lawrence, Pike and Wilkinson.

J. J. Green, of Jackson, after three years' study and experiment, has invented a successful ramie decorticator. This will be a great thing for the people of the South, as the ramie fiber is very valuable in the manufacture of various cloths.

The new chancellor, Hon. Claude Pintard, at Port Gibson, the other day, announced a sensible opinion, when he said he was "averse to emancipating minors unless it was clearly shown that their being emancipated would facilitate them in earning their living." That is sound to the core.

The Democrat-Star makes a strong plea for a national bank at Scranton, by a brief recital of the immense trade done in that little city on the Pascagoula. One hundred millions feet of lumber, three-quarters of a million barrels of charcoal, two hundred tons of fish per year, and thousands of acres of turpentine orchards make no small trade. We hope Bro. Mayer will get his bank.

The following is the vote for Congressmen in Mississippi, as far as we can obtain it: J. R. Allen, 2,786; no opposition. J. C. Kyle, 7,636; opponent, G. W. Buchanon, 3,949. T. C. Catchings, 8,689; opponent, J. Hill, 2,767. Clarke Lewis, 6,498; oppouent, W. D. Frazee, 1,572. J. H. Beeman, 6,306; no opposition. T. R. Stockdale, 9,340; opponent, H. C. Griffin, 3,768. C. E. Hooker, 6,284; opponent, J. M. Matthews, 2,028. It is said to be the smallest vote ever cast.

The hum of the trowel and hammer and saw can be heard all over town. A building boom is on that is giving employment to many hands.—Water Valley Progress.

The same paper says:

The Water Valley public school, the pride and pet of our people, under the efficient management of Prof. L. J. Corbley and his efficient corps of assistants, is in a most prosperous condition. The enrollment of scholars is unusually large, and everything about the school seems to be moving right ahead without any friction, and with the regularity of clock-work.

Good Endorsement.

Whereas, We have heard that the publication of an article in the Post-Dispatch, of our city, on November 3, relating to Dr. B. Carradine, our pastor, was incorrectly copied by a New Orleans daily paper, thereby leaving an erroneous impression on the minds of the readers of said daily paper, that there was a misunderstanding and disagreement between himself and the Centenary Church; therefore, be it

Resolved, That we, the Board of Stewards of Centenary Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in a Board meeting, called for this purpose, unanimously, do most emphatically state that there is not the slightest pretext for any reflections upon our pastor and his relations to us, his congregation, and furthermore, we venture the assertion that in all Southern Methodism there exists no stronger love for, and endorsement of, a pastor by his people than we, as an official Board and church membership, entertain for our pastor, Dr. B. Carradine.

Louisiana Notes.

The membership of the Farmers' Alliance in Louisiana is estimated at 40,000, and growing continually.

The rice crop of Calcasieu parish this year will bring $1,000,000. Besides this, it has a very large timber trade.

The total receipts of cotton at the compress at Monroe up to November 12, were 12,000 bales—a decided increase over last year.

T. W. Poole, State Commissioner of Immigration, states that within the last five months 800 Western and 2,500 foreign immigrants have entered Louisiana.

The Monroe Grocery Company, Limited, has been organized with a capital stock of $100,000. The stockholders are among the wealthiest and most influential citizens of the Ouachita Valley.

The Federal building at Opelousas will be constructed of pressed brick, ornamented with stone, galvanized iron and terra cotta. It will present an elegant and substantial appearance.

The Secretary of War has approved the plans and locations of the bridges over the Red and Ouachita rivers, and the work will now be pushed forward. These bridges are on the Houston Central Arkansas and Northern railroad.

Since the completion of the New Orleans and Northwestern railroad to that point, Rayville has entered upon an era of improvement. A $1,200 school-house has been completed, and the foundations of a $7,000 jail have been laid.

The citizens of Baton Rouge are moving just now on several important lines of industrial enterprise. Committees have been appointed to take steps to secure the location of the proposed government fire arms' works at that place, to investigate the cost and plan of putting up a cotton compress, to organize a mercantile Board of Trade and a fire and marine insurance company.

An Appeal.

One month yet, and the Bishop and his cabinet will enter upon the responsible duty of arranging the work and the workers. The editor says it will be a hard task to get the right men in the right place on the coast. And so it will be. But let us have them, cost what it may. I think I may safely assert that the Methodist Church is the only Protestant Church making any real progress along the line of the Louisville and Nashville railroad; and it is sure this progress is not what it ought to be. In fact, the progress seems to be negative in some places. In the district occupied by five Methodist preachers, the Baptist have one, the Presbyterian one, the Episcopal one, and the Lutheran one. If the planting of Protestantism here is left so much to the Methodist Church, how carefully and zealously we ought to work. With a population gathered from all parts of the globe, representing every phase of religion and irreligion, entertaining conglomerated ideas of social customs, you can conceive our difficult problem. We must have good men. I mean no insinuations against the men we have here; but if they are the right men in the right place, let them stay there. This work needs men of the deepest piety, whose moral scruples enter almost into fanaticism; men who have moral courage to stand by their convictions, and a disposition to administer discipline. They must be men of "gifts and graces," who deliver not dissertations on truth, but who make applications of truth. Give us men who wear well; and when we have gotten them, let us help them. The habit of making almost yearly changes along the coast has not been without evil effect. Let our men become familiar with the work, know more of the people, and appreciate the various ideas of social life—in short, become acquainted with the peculiar features of the work.

Won't the Domestic Mission Board help to gain this end, if necessary? And will not some big-hearted laymen help build better houses of worship? We need them. Let us pray God to be our chief Bishop.

Conference Notice.

I will have, at the sessions of the North Mississippi and Mississippi Conferences, a good stock of the publications of our Publishing House, and other useful books, including Bibles and Testaments of various styles. But, in order to supply all demands, I would respectfully request preachers and others who may desire any special books to notify me in due time; especially the young preachers will please inform me as to what books in the course of study they will want to procure at their Conference session. Address me at once at Kosciusko, Miss.

G. W. BACHMAN.

A Parenthesis in the Experience and Observation of a New Presiding Elder.

Within the bounds of the Meridian district are living about two hundred members of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, whose names are not enrolled where they reside. At Buckatunna are some who are registered at State Line, or elsewhere. At Shubuta is, at least, one whose name is recorded on the Union circuit. At Lauderdale are some unregistered. At Meridian are many whose names are at Wesley Chapel (Natchez), Wesson, Ellisville, Marion, or way over in Alabama or Georgia. Nearly all of them are ready to be lost or stolen, having already strayed. And, strange to say, some preachers encourage this slack-twisted, undisciplinary, unmethodistic way of living. "Although he does not live in the bounds of my circuit, he contributes to my support," is the excuse offered. That preacher will feel bad when that member backsslides and is lost.

Nine churches out of ten in this district have no chancel or altar-rail. The Waynesboro Church did have one, but a former pastor (not the present one) had it removed as useless. Whenever the sacrament is to be administered, the slovenly process of dragging benches into position for a temporary chancel or altar-rail must be resorted to, and the solemnity of the sacrament marred. No Methodist Church is complete without a chancel. This evil must be remedied and the railings provided.

So few of the trustees take the ADVOCATE that a published notice calling for written reports does no good, even when there are twenty-seven trustees on one circuit.

Some years ago, in the western part of the State, a member of our church called at a parsonage to get his dinner and save a hotel bill. The larder was empty. The preacher went out and borrowed a dollar and provided a dinner. Some days afterwards a steward called on the brother for quarterage, and met with a prompt refusal because the preacher lived better than he did. Recently I have heard of his match in the person of another church member, who, after paying twenty-five cents on Conference assessments, refused to pay anything to the preacher because he had paid his own traveling expenses to the District Conference! And yet these two men were not twins, and neither were they paupers. Was either a Christian?

The American Sabbath Union.

The American Sabbath Union earnestly repeats its requests for petitions from all classes of citizens to the World's Columbian Commission for closing the Exposition and omitting all work in it, and for it, on the Sabbath. It is neither too soon nor too late to press this vital question upon the commissioners. Every petition ought to be in Chicago ready for their next meeting on the eighteenth day of this month of November; whether action should be taken then, or deferred. If postponed, let the petitions still come on.

We have already received nearly four hundred petitions, representing many hundreds of thousands of citizens, either over their own signature, or by the organized bodies with which they are connected. The churches and religious bodies have spoken out decisively. Business men of the highest standing in Hartford, Lowell, Lynn, Binghamton, Philadelphia, New York and other cities are coming nobly to the rescue. Now, let the stream of influence flow on, widening and deepening toward the great city of the West. We shall be happy to receive and present all memorials and petitions that are sent us, and to advocate them by our representatives before the commission. Address

From the Work.

ALEXANDRIA, LA.

My quadrennium is about finished, and it is proper I should report on this, my last year at Alexandria. We have a new and handsome church finished; paid for and good title. Its seating capacity is 400; with vestibule in front, and Sabbath-school room in rear, large enough to seat 60 pupils. It is of Gothic architecture, and has stained glass windows. We have 87 members on our church roll (an increase of 27 this year). Thirty-three of the eighty-seven are grown men. We have family altars, and a real bona fide prayer meeting led and served by the members. I leave this charge in better condition than I have left any charge for years. We have a well-established District Conference High School, which has fifty pupils in attendance, and is doing earnest, honest work for the Master. The people of this place and vicinity are anxious to perpetuate the existence and good work of Centenary College by having it move its domicile here, and evince the same by donating nice grounds, and promise a handsome sum of money for the work. I hope to bring up my collections as usual.

WIND AT WINONA.

Friday night, November 14, will long be remembered as the night of the great wind at Winona. Without previous warning, and without ceremony, it came. From dark until nine o'clock it kept coming. It was a wind that blew us much good at the parsonage. A turkey, some hams, sugar, flour, canned goods, fruits, squirrels, some dry goods, etc., constituted the debris left by the wind. A number of friends gathered in the parlor, and spent a pleasant evening with us. Such occasions gladden the heart of the itinerant, and help his family in bearing the crosses incident to an itinerant's life. Bro. Thomas and his family were with us for a few hours, and helped us to enjoy the evening. May God bless the givers! T. W. LEWIS.

PROVIDENCE CIRCUIT, MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

We are closing up the Conference year hopefully; have a small net gain to report. There has been, and now is, some sickness among my people. On November 3, Bro. Frank Bridges, a father in Israel, who had passed his fourscore years, quietly fell on sleep, and to-day Sister Adaline Beasly, a precious, good woman, is going through the valley, but says Jesus is with her. Our people die well. May the Lord comfort the bereaved ones!

H. R. CALDWELL.

Woman's Work.

In order to know exactly the condition of the Woman's Missionary Society within the Woodville district (Mississippi Conference), I ask most earnestly that each preacher of the district send me a postal giving the name and postoffice of the president of each auxiliary and of each juvenile society within his pastoral charge.

The pastors of those charges in which no work is being done under the direction of the Woman's Missionary Society, will confer upon me a great favor by writing me the names of devout women belonging to their churches through whom I can organize auxiliaries.

To the women of our district, whose hearts are prompting them to labor in this part of the Master's vineyard, but who see no way whereby they can make even the small sum necessary, I would relate an incident. Recently, as I rode through a village in Georgia, my companion said (in reply to my question, "What church is that?"), "That is the Baptist Church, and the cotton field around it is the church field." Her explanation was that the Sunday-school had cultivated this land which belonged to the church, and after picking and selling the crop of cotton had used the money for missions. "This year," she continued, "the land is rented, and the rent money is to be used for missions."

This little narrative "set me a-thinking," and I repeat it here, hoping that it will prove to be a fruitful seed dropped into good ground. We may not all have land around our churches and stock laws which render fences unnecessary, but is not this cotton-growing for the Lord's work a type, and a suggestive one?

Thanksgiving Season.

Again has come around the annual occasion for thanksgiving. This beautiful custom is one that appeals to the best impulses of the human heart. There is no more befitting and ennobling exercise of the spirit than that of true gratitude and thankfulness. The tendency of life's activities leads us to lay too much stress upon the self-reliant and self-sufficient feelings. The struggle for life tends to harden the heart, and although men are dependent on each other, the fact that this dependence is reciprocal cancels in many breasts the obligation for the feeling of gratitude.

But when we come to reflect upon our dependent relation to God, no such consideration comes in to neutralize our sense of gratitude. There is nothing that we have done or can do for him that can free us from the duty of reverent thankfulness. The benefits are all one-sided, and the only thing we have to offer in return is the thankfulness of grateful hearts.

In the things which come to our minds as objects calling for thankfulness the thoughts of men generally turn first to those material blessings which God confers upon us. Abundant crops, prosperity in industries, good health are among the things that first occur to us. It is proper that we should recognize that these things come from God's hands. We can not do better than regard them as evidences of God's kindness toward us, and as occasions for praise and thanksgiving.

Still there is another class of mercies which call for consideration, and which, if we possess them, are even more direct revelations of God's merciful disposition toward us. The blessings we refer to are spiritual ones. If we have made any acquisitions in graces of heart; if our lives show forth more strength of purpose, more patience of spirit, more maturity of wisdom, it is because these graces have been conferred upon us by God. They are not our own attainments. They are not the unaided result of our own efforts. True, we determine whether they shall be ours or not by our own actions, but we only decide whether we will receive them or not. Just as we decide whether we wish a crop or not by sowing the seed and cultivating it, so do we decide whether we desire to receive the graces of spiritual life by the attitude we take toward God. But, after all, whatever grace we possess comes from him. And we owe him gratitude and thanks for these spiritual attainments even more than we do for our outward possessions. For they are more truly ours than outward possessions. Riches may take wings and fly away. Causes over which we have no control may turn the tide of external success. But our heart-riches are ours so long as we care to keep them. No turn of fortune can tear them from us. We may cast them aside; we may in our perversity of heart discard them for things of lower value, but they can not be taken away from us so long as we wish them.

We are given to regard too lightly these attainments of our spiritual life. In summing up the gains that come to us from life's activities, we are disposed to stop when we have enumerated the outward returns of wealth, of fame, of power. We pay but little regard to the spiritual discipline that we have reached through our efforts. We do not ask ourselves, How much patience have I gained; how much sweetness of spirit has my struggle brought me; how much greater breadth and purity of purpose has my effort produced in my soul? Such considerations as these occupy too little place in our thoughts, both while in the midst of our struggles, and when we come to sum up their results.

Yet nothing is surer than that God's purpose in placing us in a world of activity, surrounded by circumstances that incite us to labor and action, is to develop spiritual powers and graces in us. He estimates the value of our efforts not by our external achievements, but by our inward attainments. And if our spiritual requirements are the chief thing in his sight, so, too, should they be in ours. And while offering up our thanks for God's gifts, do not let us forget that whatever we have of wisdom, of peace, of pure affection, of ennobling purpose, is from his hand and calls for our gratitude even more than do his material blessings.—Methodist Recorder.

If industry is no more than habit, 'tis at least an excellent one. If you ask me which is the real hereditary sin of human nature, do you imagine I shall answer pride, or luxury, or ambition, or egotism? No—I shall answer indolence. What conquers indolence will conquer all the rest. Indeed, all good principles must stagnate without mental activity.—Zimmerman.

BOOKS.

IN DARKEST ENGLAND, AND THE WAY OUT. By General Booth. Funk and Wagnalls, New York. Price, $1 50.

Lord Wolseley, the head of the British Army, has said that General Booth is the most consummate organizer of modern times; and Mr. Stead, the editor of the Review of Reviews, says that this book is an "epoch-making book." It is having remarkable sales in England, the first large edition having been sold out in three hours after it was placed upon the market. In this book General Booth gives the details of his daring plan for the rescue of the millions from pauperism. We gave, in last week's editorial, a concise account of the plan. To our mind this is the most stupendous undertaking any man ever essayed, and yet thousands of people believe it will be a success, and are giving money by the thousand pounds to carry it out. The first part of this book—his description of the condition of the perishing—is enough to give one the horrors; the picture is so dark, and yet so true. The second part details the plan for relief.

BIBLE STUDIES. INTERNATIONAL SABBATH-SCHOOL LESSONS, 1891. By George F. Pentecost, D. D. A. S. Barnes & Co., New York. Price, postpaid, $1.

The increasing popularity and usefulness of the "Studies" on the International Sunday-School Lessons may be explained by the following, which appeared in the Christian at Work: "Dr. Pentecost's concise, vigorous style, clear insight and wide experience, are brought to bear in these 'Studies' in such a way that every lesson is placed in a new, interesting and helpful light before each teacher and scholar."

HINTS ON CHILD-TRAINING. By H. Clay Trumbull, D. D., editor of Sunday-School Times. John D. Wattles, Philadelphia. Price, postpaid, $1.

This book is the result of a life-time experience and study in the sphere of the home training, and is well worth a careful perusal. The author's name is a guarantee for the contents of the book. If you want to make a valuable Christmas present to a young father and mother, this is most suitable.

PERIODICALS.

—The MISSIONARY REPORTER, for November, is an improvement on previous numbers, and this is high praise. Every Methodist should read this missionary monthly. Barbee and Smith, Nashville. Price, fifty cents.

—The PULPIT has six sermons well worth reading. It is published at Buffalo, New York. Price, $1.

—DEMOREST, for December, is already on our table, filled to the brim with things in season. W. Jennings Demorest, New York. Price, $2.

—The AMERICAN LAW REGISTER, for October, is received. D. B. Canfield Company, Philadelphia. Price, $5 a year.

Obituaries of less than thirty-five lines of six words each, will be published free of charge. For all over thirty-five lines, five cents for each additional line will be charged, and the money must invariably accompany the manuscript. When parties desire extra copies of the ADVOCATE containing the obituaries of their friends, they must send with the order the sum of five cents for each extra copy ordered.

YOUNG—Mrs. TABITHA YOUNG died near Prudhomme, La., on October 21, 1890, at the age of sixty-two years three months and eight days. She was a daughter of Samuel Lyons and widow of Joe Young. She was born and raised in Plaquemine Brulee.

Sister Young was nearly all her life a member of the Methodist Church, and lived a devout Christian character. She was a woman of faith and prayer. Her home was ever the preacher's home when in her neighborhood. For the last three years she was a great sufferer, and died after several days of severe pain; but her death was one of great victory in the faith of Jesus.

Sister Sadora Way, who was with her in all her late suffering, says that she was quite happy, and expressed a willingness to go. Aunt Tabitha, as called by all who knew her, will be greatly missed; but we praise the Lord that she has gone home to God. She leaves many friends, as well as a large family relation and several children, to mourn her loss. May our blessed Savior take care of them and help them all to meet her in heaven!

Her pastor, R. M. BLOCKER.

HANEGEAN—JAMES MADISON HANEGEAN was born in West Carroll parish, La., May 16, 1860, and died in Harriston, Miss., September 2, 1890. He was married to Miss Jessie Clements, May 27, 1886; moved to East Carroll parish several years ago, and entered the mercantile business—bid fair to succeed when disease attacked the physical man, and for a year and a half he was a great sufferer, and had to give up business.

He joined the Methodist Church in the nineteenth year of his age; but, moving into a community some distance from a church, he neglected his religious duties. At last he saw the great need of divine help, and turned to God, who accepted him. He realized that all was well; said he was not afraid to die; said to his wife he hated to leave her and their little boy; requested her to meet him in heaven. While he suffered greatly, he was resigned and willing to do and suffer God's will. He died without a struggle. May God sustain the bereaved wife!

T. S. R.

GREENLEE—In the old churchyard of Fayette, Miss., the golden autumn sunshine is flooding a newly made grave. Beneath the sod lies the form of Dr. W. R. GREENLEE, of Harriston, Jefferson county, Miss., who a few short weeks ago was walking our streets full of life and hope and joy. Those busy, helpful hands are now folded forever over that quiet breast. That active brain plans no more for the comfort of the lovely wife and dearly loved little daughter. The fire is out on the hearthstone of a once happy home, and those he loved are sitting desolate, longing for the sound of a step and a voice that will be heard no more.

A member of the Methodist Church, a Christian gentleman, a sympathizing physician, a devoted husband and loving father, has passed away to that world where there shall be no more sickness and no more death. May God comfort his loved ones, and fulfill his promise to the widow and the fatherless!

E. C. C.

BURTON—Rev. REUBEN BURTON, M. D., of Montrose, Miss., was born in South Carolina, February 25, 1823. He was raised by Christian parents, and at the age of twenty-five he commenced the study of medicine, and when fully prepared commenced practicing, and practiced fifteen years. In December, 1852, he was married to Miss Ellen Thompson, and lived happily with her. They were given six children. Three died when young; three are yet living. The youngest, who is a son, is a minister and a member of the Mississippi Conference, stationed at Natchez. The Doctor joined the Methodist Church when young, and made a loyal member. In 1875 he made known to the church that it was his duty to preach. The church, on receiving this information, proceeded at once to license him. His interest in the church began to grow, and he ceased the practice of medicine almost entirely. In 1879 he was asked to travel as colporteur for the American Bible Society, and, after considering the matter, he agreed to do so. For ten years prior to his death he was engaged in that work, traveling in the heat and in the cold, distributing Bibles among people that had none. He traveled over the counties of Jones, Smith, Rankin, Jasper, Newton, Neshoba, and others, teaching privately, and publicly preaching in church-houses, school-houses, and under arbors, and anywhere the people wanted preaching. On examining his reports, I find he has visited 10,848 homes. Wonderful indeed! Eternity only will reveal the good accomplished. I also see he has traveled 9,439 miles and distributed 5,408 Bibles. Few men, probably, have done the good that Dr. Burton has.

He was kind to everybody and charitable, always willing to give of his means to support the church, and to build houses of worship where they were needed.

I have been intimately associated with the Doctor about one year. He assisted me in a meeting that embraced the fifth Sunday in August, and preached with great power; and from this meeting he started to Rankin county to enter upon his work, and to take in the Shiloh Camp Meeting. At the camp meeting he was taken very ill. (This was about September 28.) He improved some and started home, and after several days arrived. The doctor was called in, and, on examination, said he had swamp fever. Dr. Burton was now confined to his room. He grew worse, and, after the expiration of thirteen days, died October 18, 1890. Thus his mission was complete after living sixty-nine years seven months and twenty-one days.

He leaves a wife and three children to mourn their loss, and many friends. But their loss is his gain. He said, "I have fought the good fight;" and just before he expired he raised his hand, presenting it to Mr. C. F. Neill, his son-in-law, and said, "Farewell," and passed over the river to his reward.

B. H. RAWLS, P. C.

RAWLS—Mrs. FANNIE N. RAWLS (nee Newell) was born in Alalia county, Miss., July 17, 1853; married to Dr. S. P. Rawls, May 23, 1880; joined the Methodist Church about 1875, and died in great peace in Durant, Miss., August 23, 1890.

Sister Rawls was a great sufferer for several years before her death. She went to Colorado, but derived no permanent benefit from its salubrious climate and healing waters. Realizing her true condition, she requested her husband to bring her home, so that she could spend her last days with her good mother and other loved ones. It was quite natural that she should desire to live and to share with her husband the responsibility of raising their children. But for a month before the end came, she was perfectly resigned to the will of God. It was a real benediction to hear her talk of her bright prospects of heaven.

She kept the Bible by her side, and read it with increasing interest as long as she had strength to hold it; then had others read for her. For several days before her death she seemed to be in the suburbs of heaven. Her death was a glorious victory. She was ready, and her happy spirit left the world with a shout of triumph. An affectionate wife, fond mother, loving daughter and sister has been called to the Christian's reward. May the bereaved loved ones meet her in heaven!

J. T. MOODY.

PIERCE—HOSEA HUGH PIERCE was born January 23, 1862; died at his mother's home, Mrs. S. A. McWhorter's, seven miles north of Kosciusko, Miss., July 14, 1890. He was married, December 26, 1888, to Miss Sallie Kate Glass. She lived about two months after marriage. Bro. Pierce professed faith in Christ when about fifteen years of age, and at once united with the Methodist Episcopal Church, South (giving his name to the church and his heart to God).

He was a good man in all the relations of life; a good husband, neighbor and friend; agreeable, sweet-spirited, always ready to help the needy. My last visit to see him, when mother, friends and relatives were around him, thinking that he could not live but a short time, he said: "I am not afraid to die. If it is God's will to take me, I am willing to go. Mother, do not weep for your boy. Meet me in heaven. Pray that my brothers may live as I have lived, and die as I will die. I trust that I have lived a life of good example to them."

We sorrow for him, but not as those who have no hope; for we know that he has gone to a better land. Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord!

M. T. BOSWELL.

BRONNON—Mrs. FANNIE S. BRONNON (maiden name, Button), after a long and painful illness, departed this life, September 6, 1890. She was born in Wilkinson county, Miss., 1850; joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, 1860, in Wilkinson county; died at her home, in said county, as above mentioned. She was a devoted Christian wife and mother, and leaves a bereaved husband and three precious children. Their loss is her eternal gain. The church at Moss Hill has lost one of its best members, and the community a true friend. She expressed a preparation and willingness to die, for it would be to her eternal gain.

E. A. FLOWERS.

SPILLER—The following resolutions were adopted by the Sunday-school at Port Vincent:

Whereas, With humble and submissive spirits, we recognize the power and will of the heavenly Father, who, in the mysterious decrees of his divine wisdom, hath passed the command of death upon all; yet it is with hearts fraught with the deepest sadness that we are called upon to chronicle the early departure of our dear friend, EMMIE SPILLER, which event occurred on October 22, 1890, taking from our midst and our Sunday-school one of its most beloved teachers and earnest workers; therefore, be it

Resolved, That we, as a Sunday-school, do most deeply deplore the early death of our dear friend and teacher, severing, as it does, the companionship of one so loved; cutting short a life that was so full of zeal for Christ and devoted to his cause.

Resolved, That we cherish the memory of Emmie, emulating her character, feeling that the church has lost one of its most useful and consecrated members. Oh! how we will miss her. The Sunday-school will miss her. May we so live to make ourselves worthy to meet her in heaven!

Resolved, That our deepest sympathies are extended to the bereaved family in their crushing grief. Her presence so needed to father, sister, and brothers is gone. She was indeed the comforting, central light to the now darkened home. May the graces of her pure life and devoted heart rise up to cheer their shadowed day, living in the assurance that they shall meet again! Oh! how comforting, that in the realization of the other life children, mother and father shall gather again, in sweet reunion, and where partings are no more.

LINNIE SUTCLEFF, for Com.

MCREE—SAMUEL PENDLETON MCREE, eldest son of S. P. and Laura T. McRee, of Caseyville, Miss., was born May 22, 1871, and died October 11, 1890.

"Little Pen," as he was called, joined the church in April, 1881, under the ministry of Rev. H. R. Caldwell, at the early age of ten years. From the early period of life, when he gave himself up to the church, his loved ones had great hopes of future usefulness and honor in the service of God; but, alas! like many such hopes, they vanished in a moment, in the bloom of his youth. Little Pen was fondly loved at home, honored and highly esteemed by his teacher and schoolmates. On Sunday evening, at two o'clock, October 12, 1890, after a funeral service and sermon by his pastor, and friendly remarks by the Rev. Mr. Crafton, of the Presbyterian Church, amid a throng of sympathizing friends, he was laid to rest in Bethel Cemetery.

God grant the bereaved ones grace for this peculiar trial in life, and at last a reunion where partings are no more.

J. W. ELLISON, Pastor.

BLACKSHEAR—LILLIAN CHILDERS BLACKSHEAR, infant daughter of F. C. and Lillian Blackshear, was born October 12, 1889, and died in Robeline, La., September 12, 1890.

This little innocent babe only lived a few short months to bless and brighten her earthly home. Though a constant sufferer for ten months, she was remarkably quiet, patient and submissive; thus unconsciously an angel from the skies, constantly teaching father and mother many wonderful lessons of resignation. Though her life was short, cut down ere it had budded well, yet God crowded into it many joys for brother and sister, and much sunshine for papa and mama. Now the pure babe, living and growing in the paradise of God, is causing many resilient influences to say: "Except ye be converted, and become as little children, ye shall not enter into the kingdom of heaven."

A. D. MCVOY, JR.

JONES—WILLIE C. JONES, son of George L. and Laura E. Jones, was born November 24, 1872, and died September 16, 1890. Willie was one of our best young men, and the church, Sabbath-school and community have suffered a great loss in his death. During his last illness he said he was trusting in his God and was willing to die. He is sadly missed; but most of all by his devoted parents, to whom he was a dutiful and helpful son. We deeply sympathize with the household where this precious link is missing.

Farewell, Willie; we expect to meet you in the home of the pure and good.

GEO. W. HUFF.

Hood's Sarsaparilla

Is a peculiar medicine. It is carefully prepared from Sarsaparilla, Dandelion, Mandrake, Dock, Pipsissewa, Juniper Berries, and other well-known and valuable vegetable remedies, by a peculiar combination, proportion and process, giving to Hood's Sarsaparilla curative power not possessed by other medicines. It effects remarkable cures where other preparations fail.

Hood's Sarsaparilla

Is the best blood purifier before the public. It eradicates every impurity, and cures Scrofula, Salt Rheum, Boils, Pimples, all Humors, Dyspepsia, Biliousness, Sick Headache, Indigestion, General Debility, Catarrh, Rheumatism, Kidney and Liver Complaints, overcomes that tired feeling, creates an appetite, and builds up the system.

Hood's Sarsaparilla

Has met peculiar and unparalleled success at home. Such has become its popularity in Lowell, Mass., where it is made, that whole neighborhoods are taking it at the same time. Lowell druggists sell more of Hood's Sarsaparilla than of all other sarsaparillas or blood purifiers. Sold by druggists, $1; six for $5. Prepared only by C. I. HOOD & CO., Apothecaries, Lowell, Mass.

By All Odds

The most generally useful medicine is Ayer's Pills. As a remedy for the various diseases of the stomach, liver, and bowels, these Pills have no equal. Their sugar-coating causes them not only to be easy and pleasant to take, but preserves their medicinal integrity in all climates, and for any reasonable length of time. The best family medicine, Ayer's Pills are, also, unsurpassed for the use of travelers, soldiers, sailors, campers, and pioneers. In some of the most critical cases, when all other remedies have failed, prove effective.

"In the summer of 1864 I was sent to the Annapolis hospital, suffering with chronic diarrhea. While there, I became so reduced in strength that I could not speak and was compelled to write everything I wanted to say. I was then having some 25 or 30 stools per day. The doctors ordered a medicine that I was satisfied would be of no benefit to me. I did not take it, but persuaded my nurse to get me some of Dr. Ayer's Pills. About two o'clock in the afternoon I took six of these pills, and by midnight began to feel better. In the morning the doctors came again, and after deciding that my symptoms were more favorable, gave me a different medicine, which I did not use, but took four more of the pills instead. The next day the doctors came to see me, and thought I was doing nicely, (and so did I). I then took one pill a day for a week. At the end of that time, I considered myself cured and that Ayer's Pills had saved my life. I was then weak, but had no return of the disease, and gained in strength as fast as could be expected."—F. C. Lane, Late Lieut. 36th Regt. Mass. Vol. Infantry.

"Ayer's Pills are

The Best

I have ever used for headaches, and they act like a charm in relieving any disagreeable sensation in the stomach after eating."—Mrs. M. J. Ferguson, Pullens, Va.

"I was a sufferer for years from dyspepsia and liver troubles, and found no permanent relief until I commenced taking Ayer's Pills. They have effected a complete cure."—George W. Meaney, Walla Walla, W. T.

ORGAN OF THE LOUISIANA, MISSISSIPPI AND NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCES OF THE METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH, SOUTH.

Rev. C. W. CARTER, D. D., Editor.

THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 27, 1890.

Briefs.

Praise ye the Lord.

Praise God in his sanctuary:

Praise him in the firmament of his power.

Praise him for his mighty acts:

Praise him according to his excellent greatness.

Praise him with the sound of the trumpet:

Praise him with the psaltery and harp.

Praise him with the timbrel and dance:

Praise him with stringed instruments and organs.

Praise him upon the loud cymbals:

Praise him upon the high-sounding cymbals.

Let everything that hath breath praise the Lord.

Praise ye the Lord. (Psalm cl.)

A venerable Sunday-school teacher among the Wesleyans gives this short sentence in regard to teachers: "It is of the first importance that the teacher should have the blessing of salvation himself; he should be faithful to Bible truths, and labor vigorously to enable his scholars to gain the mastery over their appetites and passions." There is sound practical wisdom in that.

The biggest thing in this country just now is the pension business. From $16,000,000 in 1865 the output has run up to $135,000,000 in 1891. This legacy which the Republicans have left to the Democrats is about as big an elephant as ever came along, and the inheritors are sorely perplexed as to how to manage him. They can't trim him down in any way, and the wisest don't know how to provide food for him. The contemplation of this huge problem is beginning to dim the radiant faces of the exultant victors.

The prohibition cause has met a sad defeat in Nebraska. The friends of prohibition had to contend with fearful odds, and the methods of the enemy, if we are to credit the reports, are a disgrace to our civilization. When such means have to be resorted to, it is indubitable evidence of the unrighteousness of the cause which they seek to uphold. But all such contests have an educational value, and, if properly studied, will help to victory in the future. Agitation always helps a righteous cause, because it clears away the mists and enables the people to see the truth as it is. Unrighteous methods will not carry the day, when once they have been truly exposed.

Ever since disease invaded the realm of health, men have been on the lookout for remedies, and quick to experiment with anything suggested as a cure. This is perfectly natural, for nobody wants to be sick. Just now Prof. Koch, of Berlin, has the ear of the civilized world, and it is listening intently to his talk about his discovery of a cure for consumption. He has not yet told what it is, but his experiments and the success attending them warrant him to proclaim that his discovery is a valuable remedy in incipient stages of pulmonary disease. The curative matter, the source and preparation of which the Professor has not disclosed, is a brownish transparent liquid, which is applied subcutaneously. Good effects have already been observed from the application of the remedy, but sufficient time has not elapsed to tell whether these will be permanent. Of course, patients are flocking from all quarters.

Thanksgiving.

REMEMBER THE POOR.

This is the day set apart by our Chief Magistrates as a day of thanksgiving to God for his blessings and mercies to us as a people. The blessings have been abundant and the mercies can not be counted; therefore, there are abundant reasons for thanksgiving, and we trust all our people will keep the day in proper spirit.

But while we are giving thanks let us not forget the poor—those whose blessings are fewer than our own. It is Christ like to remember the poor in gifts for their comfort. We hear of a beautiful action taken by the "Ready Workers" of Carondelet Street Church. These young people, having the love of Christ in their hearts and the example of Christ in their minds, have arranged to visit the poor widows of their church and spread for them good, substantial dinners, that these whose fare is always scanty may have an enjoyable day as well as others. We trust that this beautiful charity will be observed wherever there are any poor.

"Blessed is he that considereth the poor; the Lord will deliver him in time of trouble. The Lord will preserve him and keep him alive. The Lord will strengthen him upon the bed of languishing. Thou wilt make all his bed in his sickness."

An Exhortation.

In the issue of this ADVOCATE, for November 13, the publisher makes an announcement which is important for all of us of the patronizing Conferences to ponder well. Shall the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE be all that we need it to be, all that it ought to be, all that it is striving to be? This question is not to discount its present worthiness. It is good: worth more than it costs; but it can grow. It would grow, if so many of its subscribers did not muzzle it while it treads out the corn. Do these delinquent subscribers read the paper? are they at all concerned to secure a sound, religious literature for their children and to keep themselves in fellowship with the church of their choice and abreast with the workers in the field?

The publisher says: "Every dollar received for subscription and advertisement will be used to improve the paper." There is enough now due to pay an assistant editor and to enlarge the paper. In whose hands, then, does this improvement lie? Dear brethren of the patronizing Conferences, shall we not rally to our own ADVOCATE, and give this noble Christian enterprise the very bread it has earned from our hands for its own life and growth? It appeals to us by its merit, by the great work it is doing for our common Methodism in this Southwest, and by the service it can minister to our own Christian nurture.

The publisher gives the whole income of the paper to its own support. Do we, then, want an assistant editor from Mississippi, and also to have more and greater variety of reading matter in the ADVOCATE? We have the case in our own hands. The paper is ours; it ministers to us and our glorious cause; enters largely into the means we use to give the gospel to our own homes and people. Now let us quickly have this added editor and those added columns, and so add blessing to the noble band of workers and to a growing company of readers. Let all who owe pay up and renew, and let many hundreds of new subscribers be sent forward. Shall not we, of the North Mississippi Conference, pledge our very best effort to add a thousand names from our territory? Who says, Amen?

W. T. J. SULLIVAN.

Prepare to Pray.

From our observation we are inclined to think that generally there is too little preparation made for praying. We prepare for almost everything else but this, the most important act of worship. The superintendent prepares his lesson carefully, selects his songs with judgment, thinks over his talk to the children, but not always does he study how to pray with profit to his school. The preacher reads over his lessons and hymns and is diligent in preparation of his sermon, but does not always prepare to pray the effectual prayer. The leader of the prayer meeting and those who are called upon to pray very often find themselves able to say nothing but commonplace things in their prayers. This neglect may account for a good deal of the coldness and deadness in our addresses to the throne of grace; for the "stale, flat, unprofitable" praying that is so often heard.

There is one prerequisite to successful prayer which we mention just here, the absence of which weakens ardor and hinders effectual praying. Prayer is simply asking God to supply our need. If we never realize that need, we will never pray. We must know our needs and feel them keenly, or we will not, can not pray. To pray for ourselves we must find out what we need. To do that we must study ourselves in the relations in which we are placed, and thus find out what we need to meet the obligations growing out of those relations. Realized need is the guage of effectual prayer. The superintendent must study the needs of the teachers and children composing his school, before he can pray profitably in his school. The preacher must know his congregation in their necessities, before he can lead them successfully to God in prayer. Depending upon the inspiration of the moment is a thing to be avoided, if possible. Premeditation upon our own necessities and upon the necessities of our fellow-worshipers is a thing to be cultivated assiduously.

And this coming into the august and awful presence of God without preparation for such high and holy communion has not the flavor of reverence. It is "rushing in where angels fear to tread!" It is a careless sauntering into the presence of a King before whom the holiest beings have prostrated themselves in trembling awe! If we would be successful in prayer, private and social and public, we must prepare to pray. When that preparation is properly made, we will find that a wonderful power will be added to all other acts of worship. The leader will discover a freshness in his thoughts and exhortations that will interest many, and the preacher will secure access for the gospel to hearts he has often thought were bolted with bars of iron. Our exhortation is, PREPARE TO PRAY.

The Important Place for Church Work.

The recent census shows some surprising things, and it also shows some things that ought to be well pondered. One of these is the stupendous growth of the population of our cities. There are over 400 cities whose populations are above 8,000 inhabitants. The eleventh census shows a gain of sixty per cent. in our city populations. The rate has run somewhat after this manner: In 1800 one-twenty-fifth of the population was found in cities; in 1810 and 1820, one-twentieth; in 1830, one-sixteenth; in 1840, one-twelfth; in 1850, one-eighth; in 1860, one-sixth; in 1870, one-fifth; in 1880, half-way between one-fifth and one-fourth; in 1890, nearly three-tenths.

These figures show that the tendency of our civilization is to mass populations in the cities. It is a surprising thing that the agricultural districts should empty themselves into the cities, but such is the fact brought out by the census. Why a man should exchange the independence of country life for the utter dependence and servitude of half work, and poor pay for that, in a city, has always been inexplicable to us. But we have to face facts whether we can account for them or not.

The fact of forty millions of our people living in cities has to be met by the church in her dispensation of the gospel. The fact that Christian work in cities is more difficult and more perplexing than in country places is forcing itself upon the attention of Christian workers everywhere. These are the two facts that have come up in such a way as to demand immediate attention and prompt and energetic action. The church can not overlook these facts without being recreant to the trust committed to her by her Lord. She must go to the centers of population with the gospel message.

Those centers are the most important places for Christian work, because there the people are, and there the adversaries are, and there the peculiar and perplexing difficulties are. The difficulties and adversaries and people coming together specially invite the wisdom and energy and money of the church to be expended in evangelistic effort. They give a distinct and direct challenge to the aggressiveness of the church. This massing of the people by millions in our cities means not merely an increase in population, but it means an increase in ignorance and vice and crime and pauperism. There is in it a prophecy of unspeakable misery and unending trouble, if the church fails to grasp the opportunity and wield it for God in the salvation of these millions.

This single fact brought to the surface by the census ought to arouse every follower of the Lord. Judging from the history of the past, we can see that the population will continue, in the future as in the past, to increase in the cities, and if the church does not do something promptly to control this rising tide and turn it into channels of good, how long will it be before the church herself is overwhelmed and ruined? We really think the situation is a grave and serious one, and we need to lay aside all defensive armor and assume the aggressive at every point. If ever the church needed an exhibition of ecclesiastical statesmanship, it is now when she stands confronting this awful problem. If ever she needed wise and courageous leaders, it is in this dire emergency. If ever she needed money to carry on evangelistic work, it is now when these millions are huddling together and growing strong in wickedness and in numbers! We are glad to know that some of our people are waking up to the real state of the case, and are speaking out bravely. During the session of the West Texas Conference, Bishop Galloway took occasion to speak out on this subject. He said:

We boast of being an aggressive church, pushing to the frontier. The great Boston lecturer, Joseph Cook, said: "This is an age when the frontiers are crowding into the cities, and we look to Methodism to take care of the frontiers." That is a strong statement, but none the less true. We must give more attention to missionary work in our centers of population. Some of the country brethren look with disfavor on large appropriations to city missions, but that is the true policy for us to pursue. Put your missionary money where it will do most good. They have the people, the country people, the frontier people in the cities, and we must reach them with the gospel.

"Large appropriations for city missions is the true policy for us to pursue." Let us add to these words of the Bishop. Men who love God and souls with intensity, and are endowed with common sense sanctified by the presence of the Holy Spirit, are the men into whose hands we will commit those "large appropriations" to be expended in rescuing the people. If the right workers are obtained, there will be no lack of money. Look at the London Mission. It has never lacked for money! Look at General Booth of the Salvation Army! He never calls in vain for money! When the church sees that the right work is being done she is never slack to supply the means by which that work shall be kept going in ever-enlarging spheres.

A Dangerous Class.

There is a good deal said and published about the "dangerous classes," and it has come to be believed by a great many people that only the poor are the dangerous classes. Poverty and wickedness make a bad compound, it is true, but not so bad a compound as wealth and wickedness. A man ground to the dust by the wickedness of others may become, and does often become, "desperately wicked," but this wickedness does not necessarily become generally dangerous. The rich man who deliberately and wickedly grinds the poor between the mill-stones of his wealth, is a far more dangerous character. The Evangelist, of New York, sums up the question after this manner:

But are the poor the only dangerous class in society? Are they even the most dangerous? Are not the rich as dangerous as the poor? They have a great deal more influence for evil as well as for good. The poor have little influence, or none at all, outside the very limited circle of their friends and acquaintances, and they can not be half as dangerous to the social, moral and religious interests of the country as that large class of wealthy men—a class whose numbers are certainly not decreasing—who use wealth for their own pride and vanity, who are seldom or never seen inside of churches, who certainly are not found there more frequently than the poor, and whose wide influence is everywhere and altogether irreligious, demoralizing and unwholesome. Their example is bad both upon those of their own class, whom it fills with envy and a foolish desire for imitation, and upon the poor, whom it rouses to bitterness, as they see those above them spending for luxury what, perhaps, they themselves need to give their children bread. Does not this class of the rich need missionary work more than the poor? Will somebody tell us how to reach them?

That certainly is not a pretty picture, and yet it is true in the main. And we would ask, Where is the missionary to the rich? Who hears many public prayers for them? Who goes to them and bravely preaches the gospel according to St. James? Who dares to walk up to a man or women of this class, and cry out, "Thou fool, this night shall thy soul be required of thee?" Where is the preacher who has gone to this dangerous class and, with a heart full of pain and eyes full of tears, declared the whole gospel of God with regard to riches and their deceitfulness and perilous tendencies?

Whenever the people see that work is being successfully done in the evangelization and uplifting of those who are down in sin and the slums, they will supply the money to keep that work going. Mr. Hughes, of the London Mission, said recently that the mission needed £3,000 to carry on its work. There was no other solicitation than this simple announcement, and yet the next week £623 were reported, and the week after the sum had increased to £1,557. Whenever and wherever the Lord's work is being done, the money will come. "The silver and the gold" are his, and if people will do his work, they will be supplied with funds.

Notes.

Despise not little things. The coupler that links the tender to the train is as useful in its place, and pulls as much, as the engine.

The kind of religion that grumbles at any little hinderance and magnifies every trouble is not a good kind to have, especially about home.

It is a very suspicious religion that helps a man to talk and act like a saint on Sunday, but won't restrain him from talking and acting like a heathen on week days.

Can any of our readers recall an instance where a man or woman went to sleep at a political meeting? How many have you known to do so at a church service?

Fretting can destroy the happiness of a home quicker and more effectually than anything else in this world excepting drunkenness. Therefore set a guard at the domestic door to kill it at once if it tries to enter.

The preacher who thinks that men will hear him because he speaks the truth may be making a mistake. If men are not interested, they will listen to nothing. The truth spoken in harshness does harm; the truth spoken in love accomplishes wonders.

A mathematical genius has figured it out that if "God had given Adam a salary of $25,000 a year, and he had lived until the present day and hoarded every cent of it during these six thousand years, he would be fifty million dollars poorer than Mr. Vanderbilt." Now let the reader calculate how much Mr. Vanderbilt is worth.

Sir James Whitehead, ex-lord mayor of London, said recently: "One of the great wants of the present day is the evangelization of the rich and well-to-do people. I don't think I should be far wrong if I were to say that there is, at least, as much spiritual destitution among the rich as there is among the poor." That is as true here as in London.

A wise engineer always makes the difficulties in his way his real starting-point. Success in any department of life's work depends in a great measure upon a correct knowledge and appreciation of the difficulties that lie in the way. If these do not have a prominent place in the plan, when they are met with, there is discouragement, and that is the next thing to failure.

According to the New York Herald, the difference between the expenditures of the government administered by the Democrats and Republicans is the difference between $395,337,516 under the Democrats, and $162,939,956 under the Republicans. Nearly two-thirds of this increase is on account of pensions. As the total revenue estimated by the Secretary of the Treasury is only $450,000,000 yearly, it is apparent that the perplexing "surplus" has climbed over on the other side of the ledger!

The Southern Churchman "hits the nail on the head" in this:

Tons and tons of books have been written about preaching and texts and sermons and manner and other matters that pertain to preaching. Some things the preachers have thereby learned; but after all the preacher is to teach himself not how best to preach, but how he can best preach; he, the individual preacher, with A and B and C and D before him; he with his few or more gifts, and they with their wants and weakness and longings and desires. If the preacher can learn this.

Here is a curious thing taken from the Mid-Continent:

The publisher of the Independence (Kan.) Star sued a delinquent subscriber for eleven dollars. The delinquent claimed that he never subscribed for the paper and did not propose to pay. The judge instructed the jury that if the evidence disclosed the fact that the defendent had taken the paper from the office, or caused it to be so taken, then they should find for the plaintiff. It cost the man nearly $100 to settle what eleven dollars would have paid.

Spiritual health is worth far more than physical health. Some are sickly. They have too much luxury and too little exercise. To be thrown out of their comfortable and luxurious churches, where they have grand preaching and music, and be compelled to organize and conduct a prayer meeting and Sunday-school in some needy place, would almost kill them, as they think; but many who have been forced to try it have found it the very thing they needed. Let the sickly ones look about for something to do. Hardships are often wholesome.—New York Advocate.

Bro. Palmore presented the St. Louis Advocate's claims — although what claims the St. Louis has in a Texas Conference this scribe can not see. As Bro. P. is a little new in the newspaper business, the scribe will just say to him that the Texas Advocate could be offered at a profit in Missouri for 50 cents a year; but it would not be just to the St. Louis Advocate nor to the constituency of the Texas. Mr. Dameron, during his regime, was never fair to other church organs. This scribe regrets to see the new management adopting apparently the same tactics. Bro. Palmore and all other Conference organ brethren ought to know that it is abuse of the courtesy of a Texas Conference to present the "claims" of any paper save the Texas or Nashville Advocate.—Texas Advocate.

IT IS practically impossible to comply with the desire of the Publishing Committee to employ a Mississippi editor, or to make a larger or more interesting paper, unless the subscribers in arrears promptly pay what they owe.

Every dollar received for subscription and advertisements will be used to improve the paper. Let everyone indebted to this paper either remit the amount to the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE, or hand it to the preacher in charge before the meeting of Annual Conference.

J. G. GRANT, Publisher.

Personal and Otherwise.

Dr. R. S. Storrs has been forty-four years pastor of the Church of the Pilgrims, Brooklyn.

W. E. Russell, just elected governor of Massachusetts, is a graduate of the Boston University Law School.

The increase in missionary collections this year over last year in the Methodist Episcopal Church was $37,000.

The Central Christian Advocate says, "Politicians are the most unteachable men in the world, except theologians."

The Independent says that the defeat of the Republicans in the late election "is due to a concatenation of circumstances."

The Episcopal authorities in Virginia keep three evangelists in the field visiting new places and supplying vacant parishes.

Rev. John W. Beckwith, Bishop of the Protestant Episcopal diocese of Georgia, died last Sabbath at his residence in Atlanta.

The Ram's Horn says: "Hunting up substitutes for giving is as foolish as stopping up the pores with varnish to keep from sweating."

A good remedy for discouragement is to stop thinking about yourself and go to meditating upon the multitude of God's mercies to you.

The South has lost her most eminent literary and art critic in the death of Dr. A. A. Lipscomb, which event occurred in Athens, Ga., November 21.

"Eight applicants for ministerial honors," is the way the dispatches referred to the candidates for admission on trial in the North Alabama Conference.

As far as we are able to judge of the vote on the admission of women into the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, the vote is against them.

We have a subscriber who is one hundred years old. "He is an Englishman, walks but little, can see to read splendidly, and is a man of wonderful mind." His name is John Hughes, of Jackson county, Miss.

Gov. Pattison, recently elected in Pennsylvania, is a prominent Methodist. Gov. Northern, recently elected in Georgia, is a Baptist deacon. Gov. Eagle, recently re-elected in Arkansas, is a Baptist minister.

A double pneumatic tube line is being laid between New York and Philadelphia, and when the arrangements are all completed letters and packages will be sent from one city to the other in twenty minutes.

In Kansas the Farmer's Alliance elected a man to a judgeship, and have sent him to the law school at Ann Arbor, Mich., to learn law. When he learns to be a lawyer, they will have to turn him out of the Alliance, or take in other lawyers.

We are glad to note that our young friend, Marion H. McGuire, of Monroe, La., has won in the competitive examination for the appointment to fill a vacancy at the Academy at West Point. He was last year a student at Tulane University, in this city.

The London Methodist Times complains that a "most serious evil is the growing scarcity of healthy and efficient local preachers in many country circuits." It says that "Methodism could not live a month without these invaluable unpaid agents."

Dr. McCoy, of the Alabama, and Dr. Kirkland, of the Southern, are both reported improving. We are glad to note this. Let these young brethren take care of themselves better in the future. The church will need them both for long years to come.

For the purpose of carrying on the great work of rescuing the thousands from the slums of London, General Booth says: "We shall need the best brains, the largest experience, and the most undaunted courage of the community." Verily, the church everywhere needs just those things to carry on her work successfully.

The Nashville Advocate, announcing the sudden death of Mrs. Dr. D. C. Kelley, at her home in Wilson county, Tenn., November 14, says:

By birth, instinct, and training, she was a lady. She had great native force of character, and a strong faith in the gospel of the Son of God. Her life was well-ordered after the pattern of the New Testament. She will be missed and mourned. We sincerely sympathize with the bereaved husband and his motherless children.

Our young friend, Rev. H. H. Ahreas, pastor at Gretna, not having the fear of a poor circuit before his eyes, did on yesterday enter into an alliance offensive and defensive (mostly defensive?), whereby he secured a helpmeet for his ministerial life, and immediately departed for the seat of the Louisiana Conference to give an account of his stewardship and ask Bishop Haygood for a place where two can work together.

Postal Card Reports.

—Rev. J. D. Hays writes from Poplarville, Miss.: "I desire a small space in your paper for the purpose of reporting the results of my labor on this work for the present year. The work is known as Poplarville circuit. It has three churches, and one appointment without any organization. We have had three protracted meetings. Our meeting at Purvis was a grand success. Number of members received by profession, 17; at Poplarville, 13; at Lumberton, 7. So you see the Lord has been gracious to us. To him be all the praise. Our thanks are due to Bros. Anders, Brown, Meador and Chambers, who did us faithful work."

—Rev. T. L. Mellen, P. E., writes: "Rev. L. P. Meador, Hopewell circuit, Mississippi Conference, reports $2 60 for Millsaps College Day, of which $1 60 was contributed by colored people. Rev. W. G. Backus, DeKalb circuit, reports $6 60, and Rev. V. V. Boone, Daleville station, reports no collection on account of his being sick."

Attention,

Rates to the Louisiana Annual Conference at Monroe, December 3, are as follows:

Southern Pacific road—Full fare to Cheneyville going, and one-third from Cheneyville returning.

Texas Pacific road—Round-trip tickets from place of embarkation to Shreveport, at four cents per mile.

L., N. O. and T. road—Full fare coming and one-third returning.

Queen and Crescent road—Full fare coming, and one-third fare returning.

Steamboats—"The Ouachita Consolidated Line" will give round-trip from New Orleans at $12, and other points in proportion.

Please remember that a certificate that you have paid full fare coming should be obtained from the agent of whom you purchase tickets, and of the agent of each line.

Parties from New Orleans and Baton Rouge, coming on the L., N. O. and T. railroad, can purchase tickets to Monroe, and the certificate of agent will be honored by the agent at Monroe, and one-third fare tickets returning sold. Those living at other points, however, will purchase tickets to Vicksburg, and there of Queen and Crescent to Monroe. Those living on the Southern Pacific will purchase tickets to Cheneyville on terms already indicated for that road, and at Cheneyville buy round-trip tickets to Shreveport, and there get ticket of the Queen and Crescent to Monroe.

Remember that you must get a certificate that you have paid full fare from every agent of whom you purchase a ticket, except on the Texas Pacific. Over this road you purchase a round-trip ticket.

Round-trip tickets over the Texas Pacific will be on sale December 1 and 2, and will continue good until the tenth. On the other routes certificates may be issued as early as November 27, and reduced rate be given to the twelfth. THOS. J. UPTON.

Don't let rheumatism settle on you this month. Try Johnson's Anodyne Liniment; never fails.

North Mississippi Conference.

NOTICE!

Members attending the Conference at Greenada, December 10, will pay full fare going, and take a receipt from agent when purchasing ticket. This, when signed by the secretary of the Conference, will entitle the holder to return at one cent a mile. Members must obtain a receipt for every ticket purchased. Tickets good to December 20. JOSEPH S. OAKLEY,
Assistant Secretary.

A Little Trip.

On last Monday, by invitation of Rev. H. C. Brown, I went up to Slidell, where Bro. Brown met me with his jumper, taking us out six miles in the country. We found there, at Hickory Grove Church, a fine congregation who had gathered with baskets and abundance of dinner. Had the pleasure of preaching at 11 A. M. and 3 P. M. Baptized 28 infants and 8 adults, and had the pleasure of seeing 21 members received into the church. These, with 25 taken in at a meeting a month previously, at the same place, made 48 new members at that appointment.

Bro. Brown seems to have a revival influence all over his work. It is strengthening to one's faith to witness such a scene on a Monday in the pine woods.

A BEAUTIFUL HOME BOOK has come to our notice entitled Golden Thoughts on Mother, Home and Heaven. Edited by Theo. L. Cuyler, D. D., and others. Its deserved popularity is attested by its wonderful sale of 200,000 copies. Our opinion of it is very cleverly expressed in the review given by The Detroit Christian Advocate: "We scarcely can tell which is most attractive about this volume, its par excellent title, its 400 literary gems on the themes named, its brilliant array of distinguished writers, or its beautiful mechanical execution. It is a splendid book every way. A copy should be in every home, where every mother and mother's friend can have access to it." Price, $2.75. Gilt edge in a box, $3 50. Agents are wanted by the publisher, E. B. Treat, 5 Cooper Union, New York.

THE SUN.
FOR
1891.

Some people agree with THE SUN's opinions about men and things, and some people don't; but everybody likes to get hold of the newspaper which is never dull and never afraid to speak its mind.

Democrats know that for twenty years THE SUN has fought in the front line for Democratic principles, never wavering or weakening in its loyalty to the true interests of the party it serves with fearless intelligence and disinterested vigor. At times opinions have differed as to the best means of accomplishing the common purpose; it is not THE SUN's fault if it has seen further into the millstone.

Eighteen hundred and ninety-one will be a great year in American politics, and everybody should read THE SUN.

Our Young People.

ONE OF HIS NAMES.

Never a boy had so many names—
They called him Jimmy and Jim and James,
Jeems and Jamie; and well he knew
Who it was that wanted him, too.

The boys in the street ran after him,
Shouting out loudly, "Jim! hey, Jim!"
Until the echoes, little and big,
Seemed to be dancing a Jim Crow jig.

And little Mabel, out in the hall,
"Jim-my! Jim-my!" would sweetly call,
Until he answered, and let her know
Where she might find him—she loved him so!

Grandpa, who was dignified,
And held his head with an air of pride,
Didn't believe in abridging names,
And made the most that he could of "J-a-m-e-s!"

But if papa ever wanted him,
Crisp and curt was the summons—"Jim!"
That would make the boy on his errand run
Much faster than if he had said, "My son."

Biddy O'Flynn could never, it seems,
Call him anything else but "Jeems";
And when the nurse, old Mrs. McVyse,
Called him "Jamie," it sounded nice.

But sweeter and dearer than all the rest
Was the one pet name that he liked the best—
"Darling!" He heard it whate'er he was at,
For none but his mother call him that.

—St. Nicholas.

Killing Time.

"O dear!" sighed Tommy Dodd, "I wish I had something to do."

"Is it possible," asked Aunt Mary, "that a boy of fourteen can find nothing to do? Has he mastered all his studies?"

"Oh, I guess I know a good deal!" said Tommy, sulkily.

"And have you explored all the surrounding country within ten miles? Your uncle says this mountain and valley region is very rich in mineral and botanical treasures."

"I haven't traveled around very much," admitted Tommy, reluctantly.

"Then, of course, you have put the hinges on the back gate, mended the horse trough, fixed the chicken coop, and done the ten or fifteen other jobs your father spoke about last Saturday?"

"No-o. I haven't."

"But I thought you said you had nothing to do!"

"Now, you're laughing at me, Aunt Mary."

"Well, isn't it laughable?"

"I don't think you understand me, Aunt Mary," said Tommy, earnestly. "I feel awful dull, and I want something to do—not exactly work, you know, but something that will interest me."

"Yes, I do understand you. You have got into a languid, listless way of thinking and working, until time hangs heavy on your hands. You lie back and dream of doing something great instead of doing something useful; you are always looking abroad for objects of interest, while you shut your eyes to the many beautiful and interesting objects close at hand. When you come of age you will come into a large fortune, and then you will spend your money killing time and doing really nothing."

"Oh, no, I won't!" he cried, a little angrily. "When am I a man"—

"The boy is father of the man," said Aunt Mary, quietly. "If you can find nothing to interest you now, while you are young and fresh, what will the world be to you when you are old? I hope you will find out, before it is too late, that the days are too short for busy men. Do you know that Newton, the great astronomer, after a life spent in a perfect grind of work, sighed to think that he had accomplished so little?"

"Did he, though?"

"Yes, indeed; and he was only one of many. Mr. Edison, the great inventor, limits his hours of sleep to four or five daily, because he has so much to occupy his time. He never has to think how he can kill time."

"No, I suppose not," said the boy, thoughtfully.

"Then there is the great Gladstone. He is more than eighty years of age, and you would think he would by this time have known everything worth knowing and want to take a rest. But he is the busiest man in England. Every day he studies and works and writes, and his only complaint is that life is too short for the work he wants to do."

"That's strange," commented Tommy.

"No, it isn't. Nobody really has more time than he can use—he only thinks so. A busy man can find something to occupy every waking hour. Emerson, in one of his essays, wonders why people should be permitted to live who have more time than they want, and Pliny said of some dull, sleepy men, who had complained of having lost an evening by hearing an essay, that they were angry, not because they had lost an evening, but rather because they had been compelled to make use of it."

"Perhaps I am lazy," admitted Tommy, with an uneasy laugh.

"That is the best name for it," replied Aunt Mary, with a smile, "and you should begin right away to cure yourself. Commence to-day by doing everything you possibly can that needs doing. Work—work until you are tired out, and, as you work, you will think of something else to do when that job is finished. Try it for a week, and I warrant you will not find any necessity for killing time."

"I'll do it," said Tommy, resolutely; "and I'll start this very day."

"This very minute," corrected Aunt Mary.

"Yes, I mean minute. Here goes for the back gate."—Golden Days.

Hat lifted when offering a seat in a car, or in acknowledging a favor.

Keep step with anyone you walk with.

Always precede a lady upstairs; and ask her if you may precede her in passing through a crowd or public place.

Hat off the moment you enter a street-door, and when you step into a private hall or office.

Let a lady pass first always, unless she asks you to precede her.

In the parlor, stand until every lady in the room is seated, also older people.

Rise if a lady comes in after you are seated, and stand until she takes a seat.

Look people straight into the face when speaking or being spoken to.

Let ladies pass through a door first, standing aside for them.

In the dining-room, take your seat after ladies and elders.

Never play with knife, fork, or spoon.

Do not take your napkin in a bunch in your hand.

Eat as fast or as slow as others, and finish the course when they do.

Rise when ladies leave the room, and stand until they are out.

If all go out together, gentlemen stand by the door till ladies pass.

Avoid noise in eating, and smacking of the lips should be avoided.

Cover the mouth with hand or napkin when obliged to remove anything from it.

Deafness Can't be Cured

by local applications, as they can not reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube gets inflamed, you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result; and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that we can not cure by taking Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

OUR FIRST THANKSGIVING DAY.

Children, do you know the story
Of the first Thanksgiving Day,
Founded by the Pilgrim Fathers
In that time so far away?

They had given for religion
Wealth and comfort; yes, and more—
Left their homes and friends and kindred
For a bleak and barren shore.

On New England's rugged headlands,
Now where peaceful Plymouth lies,
There they built their rough log cabins
'Neath the cold, forbidding skies.

And too often e'en the bravest
Felt his blood run cold and dread,
Lest the wild and savage red man
Burn the roof above his head.

Want and sickness, death and sorrow,
Met their eyes on every hand,
And before the springtime reached them
They had buried half their band.

But their noble, brave endurance
Was not exercised in vain;
Summer brought them brighter prospects,
Ripening seed and waving grain.

And the patient Pilgrim mothers,
As the harvest time drew near,
Looked with happy, thankful faces
At the full corn in the ear.

So the governor, William Bradford,
In the gladness of his heart,
To praise God for all his mercies,
Set a special day apart.

It was in the autumn, children,
Sixteen hundred and twenty-one—
Scarce a year from when they landed
And the colony begun.

And now, when in late November,
Our Thanksgiving feast is spread,
'Tis the same time-honored custom
Of those Pilgrims long since dead.

We shall never know the terrors
That they braved years, years ago;
But for all their struggles gave us
We our gratitude can show;

And the children of New England,
If they feast, or praise, or pray,
Should bless God for those brave Pilgrims
And their first Thanksgiving Day.

A Thanksgiving Turkey.

REMEMBERING THE POOR.

Early in my Christian experience I found the promise in the thirty-seventh Psalm, "Trust in the Lord, and do good; so shalt thou dwell in the land, and verily thou shalt be fed;" and in my own experience and in that of others I have seen it verified.

Somebody has said that we are taught to pray for "our daily bread," but not for plum-cake. To this I answer that the Lord, having made eating a necessity in order that we may live, has filled the world with good things to satisfy tastes that he himself has created—that eating may also be a pleasure. I believe the Lord is pleased with our fast-days (when we fast to him), and that he is also pleased with our feast days (when we feast to him), and that he attends himself to providing for us even in the matter of a thanksgiving turkey.

Soon after my conversion I became acquainted with a good Christian brother who, I had reason to believe, was in very poor circumstances. When Thanksgiving came that year, I had money enough to buy me a turkey, but none to spare. I bought my turkey on Tuesday (earlier than usual), and when I was buying it this question came into my mind, "Suppose somebody would give you a turkey, what would you do with it?" and I said, "I would give it to Brother M."

That evening my door-bell rung, and when I opened the door I saw a woman with a good-sized turkey in one hand, and in the other a dish of nuts.

"Can I see Mrs. W.?" she asked.

I invited her in, called my wife, and left them. Presently my wife came out to me and said: "Oh, George, Mrs. H. has sent her nurse with a turkey and some nuts for the children. She says she saw them out on the lawn at play, and wanted to give them something. Now what shall I do?—you know we have a turkey."

"Never mind," I said; "take the turkey; I know what to do with it." So we accepted the turkey. I then took the turkey that was bought to brother M., and said: "Brother, the Lord has sent me an extra turkey, and I think that it is for you." On this Brother M. remarked that his wife asked him that morning if he wasn't going to pray for some meat.

It is written: "Before they call I will answer, and while they are yet speaking I will hear."

Brother M. and his wife have gone, but I hope to meet them both at that great feast yet to come, "the marriage supper of the Lamb."—Anon.

Probable Duration of Rock Gases in Our Country.

The question now arises how far this resource afforded by gaseous fuel drawn from the earth is likely to endure. Some observers of an over-confident turn of mind are disposed to think that the supply is likely to be permanent, but all the evidence points to the conclusion that it is of a very temporary nature. Owing to the fact that the gas has to creep through the interstices of the grains which compose the rock in which it is contained, the pressure, and consequently the amount of gas discharged, steadfastly diminishes from the day the well gives access to it. The rate of this decrease varies, as may be conceived, according to the permeability of the rock and the original amount of the pressure; but in the end the supply from every well is exhausted. Now wells in the same neighborhood may, if at sufficient distance from the original boring, give access to other parts of the field, but in a relatively brief time a large area may be exhausted. At the existing rate of demand for these light and heat-giving gases, it is doubtful if in fifty years from the present time they will have any place in our economies, and in the regions of most extended consumption, as in Western Pennsylvania, it seems quite certain that the exhaustion of the store will be accomplished in much less time. In estimating the probability of discovering strata containing gas at depths below the levels to which the search has been carried, we must remember that the deeper the deposit, the more likely it is that the materials have undergone great changes in their character—changes which would have been likely to expel the gaseous material from the beds. In a word, the conditions which lead to the formation of the gases which are of value as sources of heat and light are common, but those which lead to the effective storage of the materials are of seldom occurrence. It is, therefore, safe to say that this, the last great economic resource afforded by the under-earth, though a precious, is a most fleeting gift.—Arena.

OCEAN CABLES OF THE WORLD.—According to the latest report of the International Bureau of Telegraph Administrations, the submarine telegraph system of the world consists of 120,070 nautical miles of cable. Government administrations own 12,524 miles, while 107,546 are the property of private companies. The total cost of these cables is in the neighborhood of $200,000,000. The largest owner of submarine cables is the Eastern Telegraph Company, whose system covers the ground from England to India, and comprises 21,860 miles of cable. The Eastern Extension, which exploits the far east, has 12,958 miles more. Early in last year the system of West African cables, which started from Cadiz only six years ago, was completed to Cape Town, so that the Dark Continent is now completely encircled by submarine telegraph, touching numerous points along the coast. More than 17,000 miles of cable have been required to do this, and several companies with more or less aid from the British, French, Spanish and Portugese governments, have participated in carrying out the work. The North Atlantic is spanned by no less than eleven cables, all laid since 1870, though I think not all are working at the present time; five companies are engaged in forwarding telegrams between North America and Europe, and the total length of the cables owned by them, including coast connections, is over 30,000 nautical miles.—Scribner's.

A PROBLEM IN ASTRONOMY SOLVED.—Mr. S. E. Peal, in proving that Greenland is covered by a large ice-cap, may have solved a problem in astronomy. The polar caps of Mars are not diametrically opposite; the southern one is not centrally over the axis of rotation. A like anomaly may exist on our earth. Flat-topped icebergs, 2,000 feet high and several miles long, are seen in Antarctic waters. These are apparently fragments of the permanent ice-cap over the South Pole. Thin ice prevails in the Arctic region. This may prove the theory that the North Pole is covered by a deep sea having no islands and free from permanent ice. Nansen's recent expedition may prove that one of the polar ice-caps covers the continent of Greenland.—Iron, London.

DR. KING'S

Royal Germetuer.

NEW ORLEANS, Sept. 2, 1890.

I have been for several years constantly subject to malarial fevers. The best medical treatment has failed to remove from my system the malarial poison that produced them. I have had to use an average of forty grains of quinine per week for years. The fevers would invariably return in a few days, if it was discontinued. The quinine was doing great harm to my nervous system, but I had to keep it up as my only hope. Recently I commenced using Dr. King's Royal Germetuer. It has done me more good than all the medicine I have ever taken. I have not had a fever since commencing its use, nor found it necessary to take a dose of quinine. It has toned my nerves, built up my strength and given me a buoyancy and healthfulness of feeling that I have not known for years. My experience justifies me in saying that this wonderful remedy is all that is claimed for it, if not more.

LESSON X.—December 7.

THE WALK TO EMMAUS.

Luke xxiv, 13-27.

GOLDEN TEXT.—Ought not Christ to have suffered these things, and to enter into his glory?—Luke xxiv, 26.

TIME.—A. D. 30. A few days after the resurrection.

PLACE.—A country road near Jerusalem.

13. Two of them—One was Cleopas (abbreviation of Cleopatros), of whom we know nothing, for the name is not the same as "Cleophas," though they may have been the same person. The other is unknown and unconjecturable. There is no shadow of probability that it was St. Luke himself. Emmaus... about threescore furlongs—There appear to have been three places of the name in Palestine, one of which is mentioned in Josephus, as distant about sixty furlongs from Jerusalem, and which may therefore be identified with the place mentioned in the text.

15. Jesus himself drew near—He came partly, it may be, with altered garb and tone ("in another form," Mark xvi, 12), partly as holding their senses under supernatural control, so that they knew him not.

16. Eyes were holden—The evangelists agree in the result that Jesus was not recognized. Mark speaks of a mysterious change in our Lord's outward appearance (comp. John xx, 15; xxi, 4); St. Luke of a subjective impediment to recognition in the disciples themselves. That they should not know him—Rather, recognize him. There are two other instances of the same remarkable fact. Mary of Magdala did not recognize him (John xx, 14), nor the disciples on the lake. (John xxi, 4.) The same thing is evidently implied in ver. 37 and in Matt. xxviii, 17; and it exactly accords with the clear indications that the resurrection body of our Lord was a glorified body, of which the conditions transcended those of ordinary mortality. It is emphasized in Mark xvi, 12, where we are told that he was manifested in a different form from that which he had worn before.

17. What manner of communications—Literally, What are these words that ye banter to and fro with one another? Walk, and are sad—There is a strong weight of manuscript authority in favor of this reading, as adopted by Tischendorf: "And they stood, sad." This intrusion of a stranger into their conversation was unwelcome, and possibly perilous.

18. One of them, whose name was Cleopas—Cleopas thought that the supposed stranger was one of the numerous persons who had come to sojourn at Jerusalem during the period of the paschal feast, and expressed surprise at his being there without having heard of the death of Jesus of Nazareth; he assumes that no person could have been at Jerusalem at the time without hearing of it.

19. Concerning Jesus of Nazareth, which was a prophet—The words indicate the precise degree of faith which the two disciples had reached. They believed in Jesus as a prophet; they hoped that he would redeem Israel. They had not risen to the belief that he was the Christ, the Son of God. And now even their limited faith was tottering. The whole narrative suggests that our Lord was choosing this exceptional method of dealing with them as a step in the spiritual education which was to lead them on to the higher truth.

20. Delivered him to be condemned to death—Literally, to a sentence of death. The words are strictly accurate. The Sanhedrin had not, strictly speaking, passed a sentence of death, though they had voted for condemning our Lord on a capital charge. For that they had to deliver him up to the secular arm of Pilate.

21. But we trusted—The pronoun is emphatic. "We, the disciples, were hoping," whatever might be the judgment of others. This would imply that now their hope was dimmed, if not quenched. Which should have redeemed Israel—More exactly, he that is about to redeem. The two travelers belonged apparently to those who now, as at the time of the nativity, were waiting for redemption in Jerusalem.

22. Certain women... made us astonished—Something strange had taken place, but not such as to answer our expectations. These women found not his body, and a vision of angels said, "He is risen;" and some of our men went to the sepulcher and found no body.

23. Which said—Rather, which say. This mention of a sort of double hearsay ("women saying of angels who say") shows the extreme hesitation which appears throughout the narrative. It seems to us that our hopes are to be blasted, for he is dead! But we have rumors that the body has disappeared. Indeed, certain women report that they have seen angels who said, "He is alive!" So here comes up a new and yet more surprising question.

24. But him they saw not—This phrase most naturally and tenderly expresses their incredulity and sorrow. It also shows how impossible is the skeptical theory that the disciples were misled by hallucinations. Against any blind enthusiasm we see that the apostles and disciples were most suspiciously on their guard. They accepted nothing short of most rigid proof.

25. O fools—The expression is much too strong. "O unintelligent ones," would be better. Slow of heart—The former epithet refers to intellectual, the latter to moral, impediments to belief. The disciples are reproved for not believing the evidence of the women, when they would have been led to the same conclusion by the voice of prophecy if they had attended to it.

26. Ought not Christ to have suffered—Rather, the Christ, the Anointed. It was a divine necessity. Thus St. Luke mainly dwells on the resurrection as a spiritual necessity; St. Mark as a great fact; St. Matthew as a glorious and majestic manifestation, and St. John on its effects on the minds of the members of the church. Was it not predicted of him? Was it not necessary as a fulfillment of the divine will declared by the prophets? The new points which he would teach and impress with utmost force were: (1) That these sufferings were entirely vital to his redemptive work; were fundamental in the gospel scheme of human salvation. It was by dying for sinners and for their sin that he has become their Ransom, their atoning Sacrifice, "bearing their sin in his own body on the tree." (2) That it was by "entering into his glory" that he was to develop the great powers of his kingdom. It was not by ascending an earthly throne, not by becoming precisely a second David and subduing all hostile forces by the sword; but far otherwise—even by entering into his heavenly glory and sending down his divine Spirit with light and truth and love—that the really conquering forces of his kingdom were to be developed. These great and vital truths he set himself to unfold by expounding the old prophets from Moses onward.

27. Beginning at Moses—From the great first gospel of Gen. iii, 15, to the last utterance of the last of the prophets announcing the coming of Elijah (Mal iv, 5), with special stress, doubtless, on prophecies such as those of Psa. xvi, 22; Isa. liii, that spoke of sufferings and of death as belonging to the perfect picture of the Servant of the Lord and the ideal King; and the unfolding of the divine purpose was now made clear to those who before had been "slow of heart to believe." The Lord probably directed the attention of the disciples on this occasion less to isolated Scriptures than to the whole tenor of the Old Testment in its typical and symbolical character."

The Census of 1890.

HOW THE STATES RANK.

New York, as in 1880, still heads the list, followed by Pennsylvania. Ohio and Illinois have exchanged places. Of the other changes in the list the most marked are those of Texas, which rises from No. 11 to No. 7; Kentucky, which drops from No. 8 to No. 11; Minnesota, which rises from 26 to 20; Nebraska, which rises from 30 to 26; Maryland, which drops from 23 to 27; Colorado, which rises from 35 to 31; Vermont, which drops from 33 to 36; Washington, which rises from 42 to 34; Delaware, which drops from 38 to 42; Nevada, which drops from 43 to 49; and Arizona, which drops from 44 to 48.

Quick Work.

Twenty minutes for refreshments. More than a minute consumed in getting to the lunch counter, and at least three minutes more gone before you get what you want. That's modern haste for you. If you tell a busy man anything now-a-days you've got to keep on the jump with him and give him the essential points without any fluffs and frills. So you will understand why you are invited to skip from one to another of the following points:

Drs. Starkey & Palen's Compound Oxygen Treatment has restored thousands of invalids to health. Thousands gratefully admit it. You may know who have been cured, where all these restored men and women live, and what were the diseases removed. If you will ask Drs. Starkey & Palen for their 200-page book which will be sent entirely free of charge to any address. For over 20 years the Compound Oxygen Treatment has been doing this good work. And there is every good reason why it should be good and lasting in its results. In the first place, Drs. Starkey & Palen are skillful physicians—in the second place, they are experienced chemists—in the third place, their Compound Oxygen Treatment is blood-food. It is instantly and easily available. Circulation appropriates it and every hungry need has its ailment. Nature responds—You take heart again, and best of all—you get well. If you want the names and addresses of those who have already been cured by the use of the Compound Oxygen Treatment, you may have them by return mail if you send your address to DRS. STARKEY & PALEN, No. 1529 Arch St., Philadelphia, Pa., or 120 Sutter St., San Francisco, Cal.

GRANT'S FURNITURE STORE

NEW STORE, AT 28 and 30 Camp Street, NEW ORLEANS

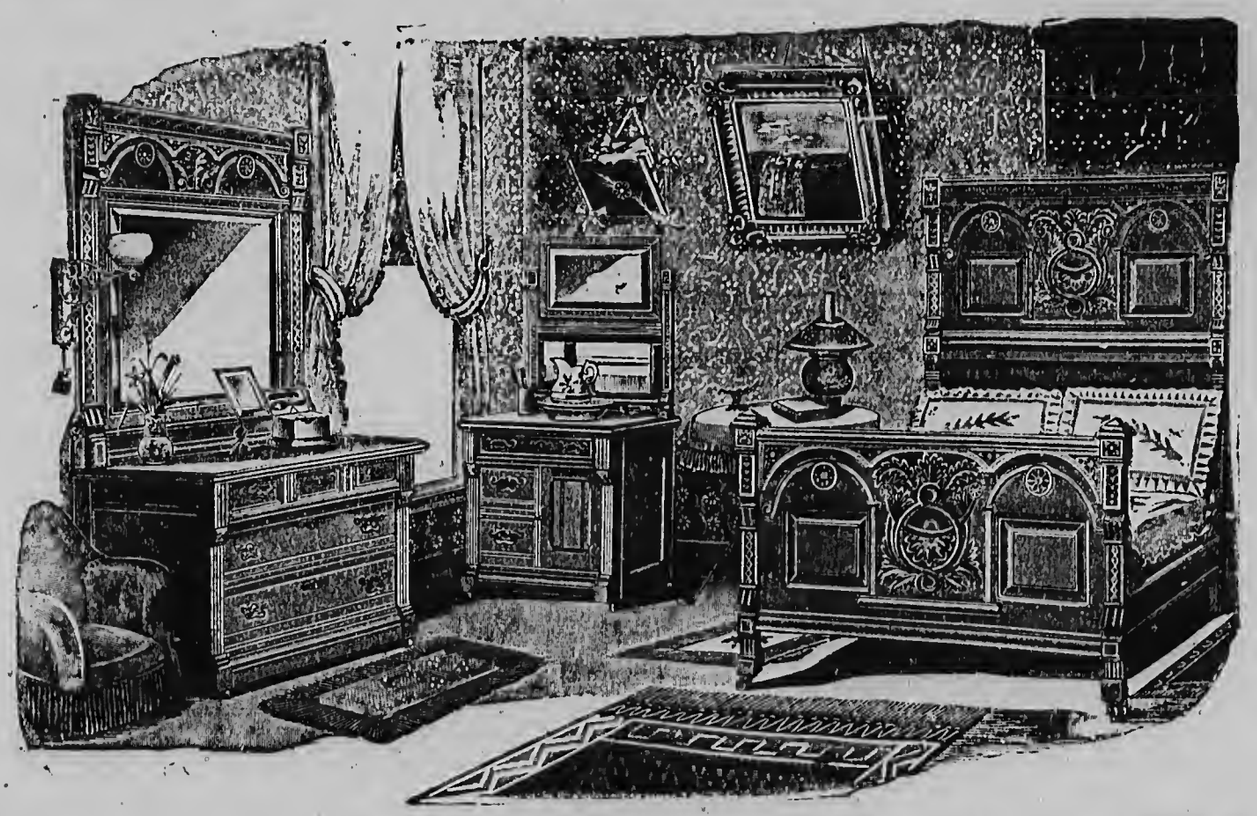
BEAUTIFUL PARLOR GOODS.

I have one entire floor devoted to the display of those goods alone, and have over sixty different varieties to select from. Complete Suits anywhere from $35 to $650, and odd pieces—such as Sofas, Divans, Easy Chairs, Patent Rockers, Window and Reception Chairs—at as low prices in proportion as the Complete Suits. I have these goods in Cherry, Mahogany and Walnut, and can give you your choice of any of the following coverings:—Crushed, Embossed, Plain and Silk Plushes, Hair Cloth, Mohair, Raw and Spun Silks, Satins, English Tapestries, French Valours, Petit Point, Brocatelle or Damasks. I make a specialty of these goods, have many of the patterns made specially for my own trade, and can offer a greater variety at lower prices than any other house in the South.

NEW STOCK

in all departments, and every grade of goods, from the cheapest to the most expensive, in endless variety. I have all the latest and most fashionable designs, and, as I have only purchased from factories whose goods I have been selling for the past six years, can and do guarantee every piece of Furniture that leaves my establishment.



LOW PRICES

are the order of the day, and I propose to sell strictly reliable goods at a lower price than has ever before been quoted in the South. My store has long been known as "The Cheapest Furniture House in New Orleans," and this season I intend to add to the reputation it has gained in this respect. I only ask a chance to save you money.

HANDSOME BEDROOM SUITS.

A very extensive assortment of these goods in every style; and whether you wish to pay $40 for a Complete Suit of twelve pieces, or from that price anywhere up to $1,000, I can sell you what you require. I have these goods in Black Walnut, Natural and Dark Cherry, and Natural and Dark Mahogany, or in imitation of any of these woods, and can furnish the very latest, neatest and most artistic designs.

I have also a large and carefully selected stock of Hall, Library, Dining-room and Kitchen Furniture; Reed, Rattan and Wicker Chairs, Rockers, Lounges and Cribs; Brackets, What-nots, Easels, Music Stands and Fancy Top Tables; Carpets, Carpet Strips, Matting, Shades, Curtains, Curtain Poles, and everything necessary to furnish a house completely throughout.

LARGE SALES.

I have a large city trade, and am shipping goods extensively to every Southern State. My country trade has increased very rapidly during the past year, and the facilities which my new store affords me for carrying a larger and better stock will enable me to still further extend it, and to give complete satisfaction to my customers.

Mansfield Female College

Conservatory of Music and Art.

MANSFIELD, LA.

One of the most popular and flourishing institutions of the South. The Sixty-seventh Session opens September 10, 1890, and the Spring Term begins January 28, 1891, with an able and experienced faculty. Curriculum comprehensive. Instruction thorough. Advantages in Music unsurpassed, as is the best conservatories. The pianos are new and of the best make. The Technicon and the Techniphone are used to facilitate the work in the music department, placing this department beyond competition. Departments of Fine Arts and Industrial Arts under specialists.

The location is unsurpassed for beauty and attractiveness, and the school is celebrated for the remarkable record for good health maintained. The climate is the best in which to educate, and the place is the safest for girls. The main building is of brick, massive and commodious, with a large and well-shaded campus. Rooms large, well furnished, warmed and ventilated. Ample provision for the table of the best the market affords. All necessary comfort secured. Expenses very low and the school very economical. A new building with a large audience hall is in contemplation, and extensive improvements are in progress to make this the grandest institution in the State.

Science Overcomes Deafness.

Just now the medical world is engaged in discussing the new device for deafness called Sound Disc. No invention of late has attracted so much interest among the medical profession. Its perfection, which is now an established fact, has resulted in the overthrow of many pet theories of there being no relief for a vast number of cases of deafness.

This ingenious discovery was made by H. A. Wales, of Bridgeport, Conn., and coming as it does, with the approval of some of the leading Aurists of the world, it can hardly fail to prove of great value to both the profession and the afflicted.

Emperor William has conferred the grand cross of the Order of the Red Eagle upon Prof. Koch.

A REMARKABLE BOOK

By Rev. T. DeWitt Talmage, D. D.

This is said to be a year of remarkable books, but doubtless the most remarkable that will appear for some time to come is Rev. T. DeWitt Talmage's new work on the "Life of Christ" and "Palestine and its People." Some idea of what the book contains and how it was prepared may be obtained by reading the following extract from the author's preface:

"In my American home, on the Atlantic, on Mediterranean, on camel's back, on mule's back, on horseback, under chandelier, by dim candle in tent on Lake Galilee, in convent, at Bethel where Jacob's pillow was stuffed with dreams, and the angels of the ladder landed; at the brook Elah, from which little David picked up the ammunition of five smooth stones, four more than were needed for crushing like an egg-shell the skull of Goliath; in the Valley of Ajalon, over which, at Joshua's command, Astronomy halted; on the plain of Esdraelon, the battle-field of ages its long red flowers suggestive of the blood dashed to the bits of the horses' bridles; amid the shattered masonry of Jericho, in Jerusalem that overshadows all other cities in reminiscence, at Cana where plain water became festal beverage, on Calvary whose splintered and ruptured rocks still show the effects of the earthquake at the awful hemorrhage of the five wounds that purchased the world's rescue and with my hand I slattened from the storm, or wet from the Jordan, or bared to the sun or gliding over smooth table, this book has been written."

HOW TO CHOOSE A COLLEGE.

Friendly advice to Young Men on this subject will be contributed to the forthcoming volume of The Youth's Companion by President Seth Low, of Columbia; Ex-President Andrew D. White, of Cornell; President Merrill E. Gates, of Amherst, and Prof. Goldwin Smith.

Diarrhœa, Dysentery, Cholera, Flux.

Maguire's Benne Plant for nearly 50 years the infallible cure. Thousands of testimonials; indorsed by the Western Sanitary Commission, U. S. army officers, hospital physicians, steamboat officers, etc. Taken in time a sure preventive of Asiatic cholera.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

DOMESTIC.

The Non-Partisan W. C. T. U. met in Pittsburg, Pa., last week. Letters and telegrams from various parts of the country were read approving the work and urging members to prosecute it with vigor until successful. Mrs. Phinney, of Cleveland, was reelected president.

The New York Herald points out that the pension legislation has practically rendered the goverument insolvent; that is, its revenue will not be sufficient this year to meet its expenditures. The disbursements for pensions will run probably to $200,000,000, or $60,000,000 more than was expected, swallowing up all the surplus revenue and leaving a balance against the government.

The Indians are beginning to show a turbulent spirit at many of the agencies, it is said, particularly at Rosebud, and Pine Ridge, and it is predicted that there will be a general uprising and a serious Indian war this winter. The War Department has authorized the number of Indian scouts in the division of Dakota to be increased by 500 men. They will be selected from among the Indian police and other disciplined Indians in the division. The Indians are expecting a Messiah, who is to lead them to victory and drive the white men out of this country.

The General Committee to make arrangements for the assembling of the Ecumenical Council of the Methodist Church met last week. Those present included many Bishops and other prominent persons, representing all the divisions of the church and all parts of the country. It was resolved that the representation for the churches in America should be 300 delegates, and foreign Conferences by 200 delegates. The matter of selecting the place for holding the council was referred to a committee. It was decided to hold the council at Washington (D. C.), beginning the third Wednesday of October, 1891.

The Postmaster General will try the experiment of free delivery for the mails by carriers in small towns of 500 people. At present free delivery is limited to towns of 10,000 or more population. A bill was offered at the last session proposing to extend the service to towns of 5,000, and it will, in every probability, be adopted. In the meantime, however, an appropriation has been made to test the experiment in oven smaller villages.

A meeting of the Bureau of Siberian Exiles' Association was held in New York City. Geo. Kennan, the celebrated Siberian traveler, was present. It was announced that 100,000 names had been obtained to a petition which is to be forwarded to the Czar with a view to induce him to set some of the Siberian exiles at liberty.

The Deaconesses' Home, to be established in memory of Mrs. Lucy Hayes, the late wife of ex-President Hayes, will be located in Washington. The object of the institution will be to train and educate deaconesses of the Methodist Church.

The annual report of the Comptroller of the Currency contains full information in reference to the affairs of national banks, and covers the operations of the bureau for the twelve months ending October 31, 1890. During this period 307 new associations have been organized, fifty have gone into voluntary liquidation and nine have been placed in the hands of receivers.

FOREIGN.

A bill was introduced in the French Chamber of Deputies last week, providing that foreign life insurance companies shall obtain the assent of the government prior to founding branches in France; that they shall invest half the amount of the premiums received from their French business in rentes, and that they shall report annually the business done by them.

From Austria comes the statement that the Jesuits who, up to the present time, have refused to undergo examinations prescribed for teachers in the Austrian public schools, have now decided to submit themselves to those tests in order to qualify their educational institutions to rank as public schools.

The Krupps have sent the head physician of the medical staff connected with the Essen factory to Berlin to study Prof. Koch's remedy, prior to the erection of a hospital for consumptives at Essen.

A conference of Berlin socialists, at which many women were present, approved the admission of female members into the socialist associations.

It is evident that Mr. Parnell means to remain as leader of the Irish party, and that the mass of the Irish people are willing to ignore his private errors in view of what they regard as the necessity for the public services. One of the prominent members of the National League said, in reply to a request for an opinion: "Even with this divorce stain on him Parnell stands better to-day with the English than any member of the Irish party, and if Ireland is to be delivered it must be through English votes."

The terrible condition of the working women in Paris has at last attracted the attention of the French government, and inquiries are being made with a view of alleviating some of their sufferings.

The King of Holland died on November 23. Queen Emma was proclaimed regent.

The Russian government has forbidden the newspapers to publish a petition drawn up by the Jews, asking that they be placed on a civil equality with other classes in Russia. An edict of the ministry of lands directs that no work in connection with the government shall be given to Jews outside the territorial limits assigned to them.

The recent heavy rains and the overflow of the rivers in England have flooded long stretches of the Manchester ship canal, and in many places the works have been destroyed. Forty-five hundred navvies are idle in consequence of the overflow, and at least four months must elapse before they will be able to resume work on the canal.

No one has ever been disappointed in using Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup for a cold.

It gives a description of every place where a Newspaper is Published, compares location, distance from some prominent point, railroad, water, and stage communication, telegraph, express, and banking facilities, advantage of location, nature of the surrounding district, and its productions, agricultural, or otherwise, leading manufacturers, educational, and other public institutions. Price, $5; carriage paid.

The Clergy of America take kindly to Life Insurance, and have been its firmest champions. They fight for it and thoroughly believe in it. There are many splendid financiers in the Church; that they are intelligent and thoughtful for their future goes without saying. All denominations seek the protection of Life Insurance, and are careful to select the company offering the greatest security and the most advantageous terms to policy-holders.

The Episcopal Diocese, of New York, has an Insurance Fund for all of its members, and the Mutual Life, which is the largest and strongest company in the world, with over $122,000,000 assets, has been officially selected by that body to issue all the Insurance to these worthy people.

A Southern Department of this Company has been opened in New Orleans under the management of Mr. T. H. Bowles, with offices in Louisiana National Bank Building.

"The truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth."

That's what you ought to know about the thing you wash with. What good soap doesn't hurt, Pearline cannot. That's only part of the truth. Pearline washes and cleans without the rubbing and scrubbing that wear things out—without the work that makes women old. Half your labor is spared by it; twice the work is done with it; time and money are saved by it. "Nothing but the truth" is the best policy for us; "nothing but Pearline" is the best policy for you; but perhaps you use Pearline. Millions do.

Not True Peddlers and some unscrupulous grocers will tell you, "this is as good as" or "the same as Pearline." IT'S FALSE—Pearline is never peddled; and if your grocer sends you something in place of Pearline, the honest thing to do is—send it back. 273 JAMES PYLE, New York.

Letter No. 35.

MY CAVALCADE—THE DAMASCUS ROAD—BEEROTH, WHERE THE VIRGIN MISSED THE SAVIOR—A NIGHT AT BETHEL—A VISIT TO SHILOH—A REST AT JACOB'S WELL—MTS. GERIZIM AND EBAL—THE SCRIPTURE ACCOUNT TRUE—THE PULPIT OF JOTHAM.

I found, on leaving for Leke Galilee, that I had unwillingly "tarried ten days in Jerueelem." It was to me a pleasing coincidence. I depart on my northward journey on horsebnck, attended by a dragoman, a cook, two muletcers, four horses, a mule and a donkey. In addition, there are two tents end luggage to correspond, making for one solitary traveler a retinue of imposing array. The luggage and tents go forward in the morning with the cook and muleteers, while the dragoman and myself follow more leisurely, viewing the country and visiting the sacred eites on the road. Late in the afternoon we evertake them, and see from afar the white tents gleaming in a clump of trees, or on the edge of some town or villege, or neetling in some sheltered valley, while the blue smoke, curling up in front, proclelms the approach of the evening meal.

I leave by the Demascus road. Much has been said and written about this historic thoroughfare, along which kings and generals have swept with their armies; along which the Savior and his disciplee walked on their way to and from Galilee, and upon which, still lator, the fiery Saul was met by the Savior, and cast to the ground by a blinding light from heaven. It was once, doubtlces, a magnificent highway. Here and there remains of the old Roman road are still seen; but only here and there, as the centurlee have buried it out of sight, and caving hillsides have eaten it away, and the tread of myriads of feet of men and beeste of burden have had their sure destroying effect. The Damascus road, all through Judea and most of Sameria, is nothing bnt a pathway of stones! Stones of all eizes cover or constituto the road, and through which horse, camel and donkey pick their peinful way. Sometimes the only sign of the highway is in a certain emoothnese and polish given to the rocky bouldere in the center by the friction of the feet of passing animale. A carriage or wagon could not survive a total wreck in a few hundred yards. On either eide of the road, and as far as the eye can see, stretch away the gray and brown-looking hille. No trees are upon them; no beautiful farms on their sides; no fences by the way; no homes, with orchard and flower garden, smiling upon you and brightening the journey—only stones to be seen. Stones on the road, stones by the side of the road, and on the hill-sides countless millions of brown rocks and gray rocks, and gray rocks and brown rocks. And this is the land that once flowed with milk and honey. Here was the country where every man sat under his own vine and fig tree.

The land has sinned grievously. It rejected and killed God's only Son, and he has written his displeasure and judgment in lines of brown and gray all over the landscape. The blessings that produce the harvest have been withheld, the elements have washed away the soil, and the projecting rocky ribs of the mountains are yellowing or whitening in the sun.

In Samaria I observed a difference. There is more green on the hill-side, more fig trees and olives in the valley, although a kindred desolation is manifest. I remember, as I note the difference, that Samaria was not as guilty as Judee. It was the Samaritan leper that returned to give Christ thanks; it was a Samaritan woman who gave him water and believed on him, and it was a Samaritan town that begged him to remain with them, and believed on him as he preached, while Judea was plotting his ruin. So the lines of judgment here are shaded and softened in temporal mercies in a manner worthy of a just, discriminating God.

Along this road of Damascus, Saul sped on his angry way. He was going to annihilate Christianity, so he thought, and so many others thought. Poor Saul; so little was he dreaded in heaven that nothing was done to arrest his progress until he stood almost on the threshold of Damascus; and then, and not till then, an angel quietly twisted a trembling beam of light into a lasso, and flung it about his neck and landed him in the dust.

At Becroth, nine miles from Jerusalem, I was shown the place where the Virgin Mary first missed the child Jesus on her way to Nazareth. The Scripture says she had gone a day's journey. But Beereth is only nine miles from Jerusalem. Is nine miles a day's journey? This is easily understood in Palestine. Nearly everybody who journeys from the city start in the afternoon, and camp from nine to twelve miles awey. This is invariably called a day's journey. Fractions of days are still called daye in this part of the world. It was so in regerd to the Savior's lying in the grave, and it is so in regerd to travel. I paid my dragoman for the first march of twelve miles the same that I did for the second day's journey of twenty-four—the first being a day's journey. As I thought of the long, wearisome road that intervened between the two pieces, I marvelled how it was possible that Mary should have been ignorant of the absence of Jesue. The child hed been given to her in a supernatural manner, hie birth being amazingly announced; his entrance, as an infant, into the temple calling forth bursts of inspired prophecy from Simeon and Anna. How could she, with such memories, ever take her eyes from such a child, much lees travel four hours in utter ignorence of his whereabouts? Whet was she doing all this time? Was she absorbed in conversation with other women in the caravan in regard to the sights and occurrences of the city just left? She seems to have been an absent-minded kind of woman; a woman of a placid, tranquil temperament, not given to being much disturbed about anything. It is remarkable to my mind how this fact about her crops out here and there in the gospel narrative. The Catholic Church represents her in a picture holding the dead body of the Savior in her arms; but the gospel intimates nothing of the kind, but quietly gives the names of those who sought the sepulchre at day-dawn, and the name of the Virgin Mother is not among them. I know many mothers who would not have traveled one hundred yards without the sight or touch of their child; and yet Mary journeyed twelve miles in ignorance of the whereabouts of the solemn-eyed, holy-faced, heaven-announced boy, about whom the angels had been sent to her four distinct times previous to this occasion. And yet this woman, who could not take care of her own child, the Catholic Church has entrusted with the care of countless millions of souls!

I spent the night at Bethel. As I mounted an eminence I saw in the valley beneath me our two tents pitched on a little plateau near some fruit trees, while a blue line of smoke, ascending in front of one of them, announced the preparation of the evening meal. As I dismounted and entered my tent and saw the roominess, noticed the bed on one side, the table and stool in the center, the bright carpet on the ground, not only a spirit of thankfulness came over me, but a home-like feeling. After this came a dinner of several courses, then reading and writing by a clear lamp until nine o'clock, and then a walk and meditation under the stars of Bethel.

The place where Jacob slept is upon a swelling ground or eminence. A poor Syrian mud and stone village now covers the site. A few clumps of fruit treos relieve the prevailing tint of brown and gray that still pursues us in this stony country. It was at this place that Abraham built an altar to God. It was here that the young prophet delivered his courageous message against idolatry, and then afterward fell into disobedience through an old lying prophet. It was here that Jacob, fleeing from his brother Esau, "lighted on a certain place, and took of the stones of that place, and put them for his pillows, and lay down in that place to sleep." Then came the vision of that wonderful stairway, the voice of the covenanting God, the morning awakening with the cry, "The Lord is in this place; this is the gate of heaven!" How little Jacob thought thet night, as he gathered the stones for his pillow, that this act would be known to all the world! How little we realize that certain acts of ours, gone through quietly, even secretly, will have a publicity fairly amazing! Nor can we tell what act it will be. Thus we read that Sarah laughed behind the tent door. Surely no one ever would know that. She was hidden; her breath scarcely stirred the curtain; no one was in the tent when she laughed, and yet thet laugh has resounded through the world! Guard your laughs, my reader; and when you pick up a stone in a lonely spot, say to yourself, "This act, so simple and trifling, may yet be known to the world." What a value this places on daily transactions, and what watchfulness it demands on human life!

Shiloh is seven or eight miles from Bethel, and fully two miles from the main road, and on the right hand as you journey north. It is located on a hilly slope, and surrounded by loftier hills. It is thus, in a manner, shut in; but has several wide valleys leading out in different directions. Not a house is seen there to-day; not a living creature abides there. Only ruins, and but little even of those. I fancied that I could distinguish several narrow streets outlined by stones for a short distance; but the ruin is so complete that it was impossible to be certain. The ancient Shiloh is utterly wiped out. The gate where Eli sat trembling for the ark is gone. I recall the Word of God at this point, "I will make you like unto Shiloh." And yet this desolate hill-side, now partially covered with a poorly cultivated field, was the place where the land of Canaan was divided by Joshua among the tribes, and was besides, for a long time, the abiding-place of the ark of God. One of the most deeply interesting chapters in the Old Testement tells how the ark was removed from this place and fell into the hands of the Philistines. Here Semuel's mother knelt in bitterness of spirit; here Eli was priest, while the child Samuel ministered unto the Lord. Again I recelled the fate of the young woman whom I always associate with Rachel. It was in this place that she died; for when the news came that the ark was taken and her husband was dead, the death-blow was given her gentle, beautiful life. "Fear not," said the women around her, "for thou hast borne a son," and her dying reply was, "Call him Ichabod, for the glory is departed from Israel."

In the afternoon we entered the valley in which Shechem, now called Nablous, is situated. At the eastern end of the valley, where it joins at right angles a broad plain that runs south, is Jacob's Well. Christian, Jew and Mohammedan all agree in regard to the identity of this place. The gospel narrative says it is not far from the parcel of ground that Jacob gave to Joseph. Close by is the reputed tomb of Joseph. The well, however, possesses its great interest not from Jacob's digging it, or from its great antiquity, but from the fact that here the Savior rested, sitting on its side, and thet here he held that wonderful conversation with the woman of Samaria. "Jesus, therefore, being wearied." He that journeys on the rocky and rough roads of Judea, and along the hot road that stretches through the plain for miles south of Shechem, will understand why Christ was wearied. The well, as the woman said, was deep. Even now, although much rubbish is in its depths, it is still seventy-five feet deep. A number of years ago some church had it arched over for its protection; but the arches are to-day in ruins, while the well still remains. I descended through the broken covering to the original level or top curbing of the well, and, seating myself on the stone mouth, read, with a sweet realization of the presence of Christ, the fourth chapter of John. How vividly the scene arose before me—the wondering woman; the wearied, patient, teaching Christ! What a sermon he preached to that solitary woman! What beautiful self-forgetfulness! He is so absorbed in doing good that the brain has forgotten to deliver the nerve telegram thet the physical man was hungry. This is said to be one of the two places where we are absolutely certain that Christ stood on the actual spot. The other place is where he stood on the southern slope of Mt. Olivet and wept over Jerusalem. To these two might be added the synagogue site in Capernaum. I am impressed here with an additional proof of the consistency of our Lord's course in life. He that refused to turn the stones into bread, when hungry, refused to make the water leap from the bottom of the well to satisfy his thirst. Patient, long-suffering, "he pleased not himself," and never worked a miracle to benefit himself.

A little distance up the valley we stand, with Mt. Gerizim on the left and Mt. Ebal on the right. I stood, I am confident, at or near the spot where took place that remarkable scene of the blessing and cursing. What is the reader's idea of this transaction? Does he think that six men went up to the top of one mount, and six to the summit of the other, while the vast multitude stood in the center of the valley? Or does he think that six tribes stood on the side of one mountain, and six tribes on the slope of the other, while Joshua was posted in the center of the valley, reading the words of the Law, and the people, thus divided, gave forth the loud response that must have rolled down the vale like distant thunder? It is remarkable that just at the spot where the occurrence is said to have taken place, that there are two recesses, or natural amphitheatres, in the sides of the two mountains, and directly facing each other. Whether six tribes stood ranged on end up one of these places, and the other six at the opposite one, with Joshua in the plain; or whether six men went to the summit of Mt. Gerizim, and six to the top of Mt. Ebal, while the people stood in the plain below, remains for the reader to decide. The thrilling fact with me is, that in either case the Scripture account would be true. I was perfectly satisfied with that fact before leaving the place, for after measuring the distance with the eye, and walking over much of it; after viewing the mountain summits from the valley beneath, and then climbing to the top of Mt. Gerizim and viewing Mt. Ebal over against me and the valley from above, I left, firmly convinced of the truth of the scriptural account.

This is a great country for loud and distant calling. The natives are greatly given to hallooing to each other. The hill and mountain-sides make excellent sounding-boards, the valleys are fine conductors, the atmosphere is favorable, and the lungs of the natives are excellent. I have seen a man call from a valley up to his house, far distant in the mountain-side, and "get the message through," to my wonder. Several miles east of Jerusalem I heard a Bedouin calling to a village that was twice the distance from him that Mt. Ebal is from Mt. Gerizim, and yet he made himself understood. More than once at night, while tenting through the land, I would hear the people calling to each other at great distances from one another, and at a great distance from myself, and yet the tones were as distinct as the sound at night was solemn and impressive. From all these things I was prepared to believe in the solemn colloquy and response between the tribes that long ago took place in the valley of Shechem; but when, in addition, I saw the place, my faith was confirmed an hundredfold by all that the eye observed.

A little farther up the valley, and jutting out of the craggy mountain-side directly over the town of Shechem, and at the height of four or five hundred feet, appears what I would call Jotham's pulpit. It is a ledge of rock about ten feet in length and breadth, and is said to be the place where Jotham, the son of Gideon, stood and shouted aloud his opinion on certain governmental matters to the inhabitants of Shechem, who were ruled over by his brother Abimelech. The remarkable scene is described in Judges ix, 7-21, and is well worth reading. As soon as Jotham finished his Philippic or, rather, Ahimelic, he sprang from the rock and fled, as many a preacher hed done before, and has done since. Jonah ran before he delivered his; Cranmer preached his, and then took it back; but Jotham, having delivered himself, girded up his loins and speedily left the land. Under the circumstances, it was a good speech or sermon. The parable he used was striking and faithfully applied, when we consider the fact that he knew that presently hundreds of people would be climbing the mountain-side in hot chase after him. He and Mark Antony became famous by making one speech; and, although we hear of him no more after this, yet he can claim that one address of his goes down to posterity, which is certainly more than many of us can say.

I regret that I have not space in this letter to describe my trip to the top of Mt. Gerizim, what I saw there, and the vast panorama of mountains, valleys, plains, near and remote towns and villeges that are beheld from that lofty and historic summit.

B. CARRADINE.

A Jawbone.

Samson was a unique character, as well as a man of great valor and mighty muscle. By his individual prowess he inflicted great punishment upon the Philistines, and wrought deliverances for Israel. But Samson had a way of his own. He disdained the tactics and weapons of the martinets; did not sound a trumpet to assemble the hosts like Gideon; nor, panoplied with helmet and corsage and sword, like the valiant Jephthah, led forth the armies of Israel. Single-handed and alone, he went out, simply rending, perhaps, with his brawny hand, as he would have rent a kid, or striking out from the shoulder and smiting "hip and thigh," or wielding the jawbone of an ass, and so inflicting great slaughter upon the uncircumcised.

Between Samson and some evangelists who have lately been among us, there is a verisimilitude. These evangelists, discarding the conventionalities of a stilted pulpit manner, according to methods of their own, by plain speech and powerful preaching, have smitten the modern Philistines, turned many sinners to the Lord, and rendered signal service to the church. What matters it if they are not furnished with the polished armory, and do not fight according to the tactics of the trained ministry? Yet their works approve them, and so do many brethren.

But the men of Judah were displeased with Samson, notwithstanding his terrible onslaught upon the Philistines, when he smote them "hip and thigh" with great slaughter. And instead of rallying about him against a common foe, they came upon him with rough words and evil intent, and, binding him with two new cords, they delivered him into the hands of the Philistines! How these Philistines exulted and "shouted against him" when they saw their dreaded enemy bound and turned over to them! And so some of the chief scribes and elders of the tribe of Mississippi, and elsewhere, are greatly displeased with the evangelist, the modern Samson, speaking and writing against him! They do not tell us, by name, who the offending Samson is. Like the men of Judah, they seem intent on getting rid of Samson. They would turn him over to the tender mercies of the uncircumcised—the men of the world. And how, as of old, the Philistines shout against Samson in the toils—the evangelist—bound and turned over to them by the reproaches of his brethren! But the two new cords availed nothing. They became as flax before the fire under the mighty strength of the inspired athlete; and, grasping "a new jawbone of an ass," he went for those dastardly Philistines. Such slaughter, with such a weapon, warriors never saw before! How that jawbone went crashing through the thick skulls of the Philistines! How Samson piled them, heaps upon heaps, a thousand men! How about the men of Judah now? I can imagine thet they were thoroughly indignant and disgusted. But didn't he punish the uncircumcised Philistines? Yes; but such a weapon! A jawbone! Has it come to this? Has Judah no army, nor weapons of war? Nothing but this rough man swinging the jawbone of an ass fresh from the feast of the jackals? The vulgar fellow!

So some of our chief scribes and elders. They cry out against the evangelist, against his plain speech and his methods. What though great multitudes hear the plain gospel from his lips, turn to the Lord and come into the church? What though many believers are brought up to a better religious life? What though sin is rebuked in high places, in Church and State, and communities are made better? No account is taken of all these things. These men of Judah would bind Samson with their reproaches, and give him into the hands of their enemies! But they avail nothing. Samson goes on, all the same, crushing with his jawbone, slaying many, while our rattan sticks and silver-mounted canes would rebound from these same skulls with but little effect. The evangelist reaches many, and turns them to a better life, who are seldom moved or reached by ordinary pulpit ministrations.

Beloved scribes and elders, let us not bind Samson, nor take that jawbone from his hands. Let us not forbid him because in his methods he followeth not us, lest we be found to fight against God.

To the Louisiana Conference.

There will be a file on the secretary's table for statistical reports. Let the preachers file their statistics on the first day of Conference. Don't retain them until you have made your reports, brethren. The blanks prepared by the Book Committee are printed in duplicate; one set is to be filed, the other to be used in reporting. All reports must be made on these blanks.

Last year the secretary suffered a great deal of inconvenience, and was put to a great deal of unnecessary labor, by reason of many reports being filed late in the session. One brother brought in a report of two charges after the manuscript had been prepared for the printer.

Under the head, "Foreign Missions," report only what is reported to the treasurer of the Board of Missions. Report current expenses, and all funds for which blanks are not provided, under the heading, "Other Objects." Calculate net gain or loss of membership by comparison with last year's Minutes.

Let us endeavor to have our statistical reports tally this year. They have never done so before.

STATISTICAL SECRETARY.

Statistics of Mississippi Conference

Dear Brethren: Please get the blanks ordered by the last General Conference. Reports can not be made on the old blanks. Please hand your report to the statistical secretary as soon as you arrive at Conference. If it is in any way doubtful as to your being there on December 17, please forward your report, so thet it can be recorded.

Your brother,

JOHN W. CHAMBERS.

Mississippi Conference Notice.

Parties attending the Conference, to be held at Canton, December 17, will purchase regular tickets, taking certificates of all agents where tickets may be purchased. Upon the presentation of these certificates, tickets for return will be sold at one-third regular rates.

Parties coming over the L. and N. railroad will procure tickets via New Orleans. Tickets good to return till December 26.

These rates apply on all roads except the Mobile and Ohio, from which I have not been able to get any reply.

The hours of the arrival of the trains in Canton are 6 P. M. and 3 A. M. The afternoon train from Vicksburg does not make connection with the evening train for Canton.

All classes and committees will meet at the court-house in Canton.

T. B. HOLLOMAN.

North Mississippi Conference.

NOTICE!

Members attending the Conference at Grenada, December 10, will pay full fare going, and take a receipt from agent when purchasing ticket. This, when signed by the secretary of the Conference, will entitle the holder to return at one cent a mile. Members must obtain a receipt for every ticket purchased. Tickets good to December 20.

MORE ROOM AND MORE LIGHT.

BY A. H. REDDIE.

"A little girl has died," they say—
Only sixteen!
Weep, if we may—bend low as ye pray!
"What does it mean?"

But we can not weep, though the child be dead,
And hearts beat sore;
Life droops unwed, by yon stricken bed,
By the shadowed door.

Listen! God fashioned a house—he said:
"Built it with care;"
Then softly laid the soul of a maid
To dwell in there.

And always he watched it guarded it so,
Both day and night;
The wee soul grew as your lilies do,
Splendid and white.

It grew; I say, as your lilies grow,
Tender and tall;
Till God smiled, "Now, the house is too low
For the child and small."

And gently he shut the shutters one night,
And closed the door:
"More room and more light to walk upright
On a Father's floor."

More room and more light for the maid, you know—
Only sixteen;
And on God's high row, where angels go,
She smiles between.

A Mission Day at Shubuta, Miss.

BY MRS. A. LOU EDGAR.

MR. EDITOR: Such a treat as I enjoyed recently does not often fall to the lot of many preachers' wives. The occasion was a pleasant coming together at Shubuta of representatives of the Woman's Missionary Societies along the Mobile and Ohio railroad, from Meridian to Waynesboro, to hear a missionary sermon by Bro. Mellen.

At Shubuta I spent two pleasant, happy years, as mistress of that comfortable parsonage, and was the recipient of the many kindnesses which were continually showered upon its inmates. Surely I needed no second thought to avail myself of the privilege of once more meeting face to face those friends who nursed and comforted me during our troubles and distresses. I went, and it was one continued feast of joy and gladness.

This meeting was a pleasantly concocted scheme and sweet surprise, gotten up by Sister Drake, the beloved pastor's wife. She had invited Bro. Mellen to preach that sermon, and—generous soul! as she is—wanted some one from every auxiliary near to share the "gospel feast" with her.

A regular meeting of the Shubuta Society, reports from representatives present, and the sermon constituted the programme. A very encouraging letter from our district secretary, Sister Mellen, was read as a report. Sickness prevented her coming, which was a disappointment to all. Sister Drake presided in her stead. One thing she said I wish every member of our auxiliaries could know and feel. She said, "I love this missionary work, because it lifts me out of self, and makes me forgetful of self." Oh! if more of our women could have this experience—this forgetfulness of self—they would find more time for work in the Master's vineyard, and there would not come up from so many places the report that our women are not interested.

The sermon! Shall I attempt to tell you about that sermon? Nay, verily. The text will suffice. "And the Spirit and the bride say, Come. And let him that heareth say, Come. And let him that is athirst come. And whosoever will, let him take the water of life freely." (Rev. xxii, 17.) If all the presiding elders were as earnest and zealous in the missionary work as our presiding elder, there would not be so many district secretaries of our society complaining that they have no one to help them. How little trouble it is for a presiding elder to organize a Woman's Missionary Society! Oh, if we had more "helpers for those women!"

One district secretary writes: "Our presiding elder told me that there were many places on the district where they had no missionary societies. I can not attend to the duties of district secretary unless I could travel. I could not accomplish anything by writing. I have tried." If it were our presiding elder, he would take time and pleasure in helping that woman.

The reports that have come to me recently I give, condensed as much as possible.

Sister Mellen's report of Meridian district: "Four adult and one juvenile society organized since our annual meeting in June, viz: 'New Hope,' 'Marion,' 'Big Rock,' 'Pachuta' (the latter organized with 16 active and 9 honorary members) and 'Vossburg Juveniles.' Vossburg Auxiliary has raised $3 per member. Enterprise has made two life members!" Meridian Auxiliary has a membership of eighty.

DeSoto, a small town, has an auxiliary numbering twelve members; average attendance, eleven.

Waynesboro is not doing so well. We average an attendance of seven out of a membership of sixteen. We pay our dues; that is all. Sad record! (Not enough Woman's Missionary Advocates read.) If our women would subscribe for our paper and read it, they could not help being interested and going to work for our poor, tired, worn-out missionaries in foreign fields.

On the Brandon district the work is not progressing. Only seven auxiliaries in operation out of seventeen organized in the last four years. "The work is moving on prosperously on the Brookhaven district." No new auxiliaries, however.

All the members of the Moss Point Society subscribed to the training-school. This is an example well worthy of imitation. Notice of this school should be brought before every auxiliary.

Sister Hunnicutt, district secretary of Woodville district, has our sympathies. On account of illness she is unable to make a report of work done in her district. No doubt there are many live auxiliaries in the Woodville district.

Vicksburg and Jackson districts not heard from. So you see, Mr. Editor, this is not a full report.

Before I close, please allow me to call attention of the auxiliaries to the magazine soon to be published in Shanghai, China: Woman's Work in the Far East; price, fifty cents. See prospectus in last number of our Woman's Missionary Advocate. Every member should become a subscriber to this magazine.

I would earnestly request all corresponding secretaries of auxiliaries to inform me of items of interest connected with their respective societies.

WAYNESBORO, Miss.

The Beginning of the End.

The Nashville commends the plan, adopted by Bishop Hargrove, of calling the presiding elders together the day before the session of the Conference opens, at which time each presiding elder is to present a draft of his district to the Bishop, and suggests that the Bishop can then take up these drafts of appointments, dismiss the presiding elders, consult the preachers and laymen, and make the appointments without the usual friction attending this work.

This plan will soon put an end to the presiding eldership—at least, in its present form—and place several hundred more men in the field with sickle and gleaning-bag. This is my opinion.

I commend the result, but condemn the means by which it is reached.

ST. BERNARD.

Fairs and Gambling.

In reading your most excellent paper, of November 13, I find the following statement under the head of "Notes":

Several fairs have been held recently in Mississippi and Louisiana, and the people have attended in very respectable numbers. The display of agricultural products, specimens of handicraft and exhibitions of improved breeds of stock has been very fine. The one drawback to all these fairs, as far as we have read accounts of them, is the gambling and horse-racing that seems to be an invariable attendant. Can not gambling grow fast enough among us, that the whole people of a given section must lend their countenance and support to it? It would be refreshing to read of a fair where this vice was uncompromisingly shut out.

I am glad to see our religious papers of all denominations speaking out against the evil features of our fairs. The demoralizing and debauching effect of such practices in such high places is beyond computation. Just how widespread it is, and how deep it goes into the hearts and lives of our young men—of society in every relation—no one can tell. What it leads to, the bad it brings about, and the harm it does in the church, in the family, in the business and political circles, is, doubtless, far greater than any imagine. Our people ought to stop the wickedness of these fairs. Every father and mother in the State should raise their hand against it and put their foot down on it. Public sentiment must say, in loud and unmistakable tones, "No more of these pernicious and ruinous things must be allowed in our agricultural fairs." These fairs are occasions for the gathering together of fathers and sons, mothers and daughters, brothers and sisters, kinsmen and neighbors, from the highest to the lowest, the richest and poorest; and why should such foreign and hurtful devices, as are mentioned in the above note, be allowed a place or recognition on the grounds at these occasions? Is it not a few blood-sucking, money-getting and character-destroying men that override the feelings and the convictions of the great body who make up these fairs, by forcing themselves and their mischief into an institution where they have no claims? Yes. But is it allowed or countenanced? I took my pen, however, Bro. Editor, to say, and that proudly somewhat and gratefully made, that our fair, "The Noxubee County Agricultural and Stock-Breeding Association," whose meetings have been held for five or six years regularly on its grounds at Macon, does scrupulously and emphatically keep out every form and fashion of these vices. Nothing of a questionable character, as to its moral shade and coloring, is allowed on the ground. The whole conduct of the four days' meeting is rigidly in keeping with the rules of good morals. Our people set out to have what could be justly called a fair. It is a pronounced success. So much honor is due to the noble, patriotic and high-toned citizens of old Noxubee. Come up next October, and go through the rounds of the whole fair with us, and I will assure you that you can write us up as one fair in Mississippi and Louisiana where "gambling and horse-racing," and such like, are not the attendant. In the name of the good citizens of our county, and the Christian brotherhood, I give you now a cordial invitation to be with us next fall, assuring you that nothing will be done or seen under the knowledge or consent of the fair that would provoke your keenest moral sensibilities.

L. M. STONE.

(We are exceedingly glad to hear that there is one fair where gambling, horse-racing, etc., are not allowed. All honor to the "Noxubee County Agricultural and Stock-Breeding Association" for its regard to the decencies!—EDITOR.)

The Advocates and the Masses.

MR. EDITOR: In your issue of the twentieth instant we find a most interesting communication from the pen of Bro. T. C. Wier, to all which I respond a most hearty, Amen! The closing exhortation in the article is, "Let our aim be 10,000 subscribers within the next year;" from of which I conclude that the list has not reached that number. This is certainly a very small showing for the numbers represented in the three patronizing Conferences.

Putting the membership at 90,000 in Louisiana and Mississippi, this would give one paper for every nine members, and, calculating an average of three persons to the family, this would give us a paper to only one family in every three in the territory, leaving, as will be seen, 20,000 families, representing 60,000 members, who never see the paper. The intimation in the suggestion is, that if we can secure the above number of subscribers, we will have done a great work, whereas we find when compared with the membership that it represents but little.

I know, Mr. Editor, that the idea is to get the paper into every family; but sir, I ask, When was it ever so? and when may we ever expect it to be any nearer so than now? That the majority of our people do not take our religious paper or papers is beyond a doubt. That our preachers, as a rule, are interested in its circulation I believe also to be beyond question.

As a medium of communicating knowledge to the people all are agreed that the church paper is indispensable, and, therefore, should be in every home. But that the masses do not see it has already been shown, and thus the great question with us is, How shall we secure this end? How shall we enlighten our people concerning the doctrines and usages of our beloved Methodism?

There was a time when tracts were largely used in this great work; but that time has passed. The church paper seems to be looked upon as all that is necessary in this day. All of our resolutions and memorials and enactments on this subject have utterly failed of their design.

Now, sir, what is the conclusion of the whole matter? If we would have the church paper accomplish its desired object, some plan must be set on foot whereby no family shall be without it.

Is it not high time that some special effort should be made in that direction? Would it not be wisdom in us to wake up to the demand that is made for a cheaper paper of the same price as our great secular dailies? Would it not be well for the three patronizing Conferences, now soon to meet, to look into this matter and offer some suggestions for the relief of our existing circumstances? Many, very many, of our people are perishing for lack of knowledge, and, as wise men, it behooves us to consider the momentous situation.

T. B. HOLLOMAN.

From the Work.

COLFAX, LA.

Through the courtesy of Rev. B. F. Alexander, presiding elder of Alexandria district, I was furnished an opportunity of visiting a part of Louisiana through which we traveled together in 1863 and 1864, with a speed which varied as we were pursuers or pursued, and which I had not seen since. The company of a boyhood friend on the train turned earlier pages of memory, and suggested to me that if one side of the imagination had the power, through a dread of the future, to hasten old age, through another its kindlier office was to turn backward the flight of time and make us boys again. And so, in reviewing sites familiar as "war scenes," and frolicking again over play-grounds of my childhood, I was more than repaid for the loss of a solitude which was coveted for meditation on a dedication sermon.

There was life enough on the outside as we passed through the sugar region. The freedmen sang as they felled the forests of cane, and the cartmen, sometimes with laughter and sometimes with oaths, kept time to the rumble of their heavy wagons as they rolled their sweet burdens on to the mills. The smoking furnaces told of a boisterous and jocund crowd in all the departments of the sugar-houses. Scarcely ever has there been a larger or more productive crop of cane. The bounty of two cents per pound, conceded by the late Congress, makes all the planters who own refineries very jubilant, but is poor consolation to those who must sell their crops in the crude state, since the removal of the impost on sugar tears down the prices which have prevailed heretofore. The final outcome of this legislation will be, I fear, the consolidation of the 700 sugar-houses, which exist now, into as few as thirty or forty; the amassing, by those few, of enormous wealth, and the consequent impoverishment of the great mass of the cane growers. It will be the old story—the rich grow richer, and the poor grow poorer.

The tall sycamore of the Louisiana Conference, who was ecclesiastically mine host for this occasion, met me at Boyce, and turned me over to the courtly Bro. A. A. Dean, one of the stewards of the Colfax Church.

Colfax, famous for scenes of riot, and shunned by the freedmen for many years—looked upon with misgivings and fear by even commercial itinerants; Colfax, the city where immorality of every sort held high revel since the days of reconstruction, and religion was considered as the impracticable dream of women and children, has sobered up, and boasts one of the prettiest, brightest, and most completely furnished churches in the State. As usual, we have taken the lead, and are alone in our glory. Fortunately, we have built so wisely that we will not have to build again in order to attain the respectable appearance made by other denominations who usually improve upon the earliest builders. The church is centrally located, and stands complete—pulpit, altar, communion service, lamps, carpets and pews. The light from without is admitted through stained glass, most happily combining the colors; the roof is an open one, and, with the ceiling, is finished in oil. A church may be relied on as a fair expression of religious ideas and obligations, and usually indicates both the phase and measure of the spiritual and artistic culture of the people who build it. Hence we may infer a most hopeful condition of a section of our State which, in a large measure, has lain fallow for many years. The cost of this structure was about $2 000, the most of which had been paid by this little community, though other contributions were received from a distance. The debt which remained amounted to about $300, and the large congregation came promptly to the rescue with subscriptions sufficient to largely overwhelm this amount. The promptness and cheerfulness with which this was done seemed to indicate that they felt it a privilege to give to the Lord.

Colfax is in the midst of a prohibition parish, and its people feel secure in their temperance privileges from the resolution with which the grand jury and court pursue all transgressors with the penalty of the law. The steady progress in all commercial and agricultural enterprises, together with an evident purpose of the people to "cry after the living God," is ample assurance of a new life and grand future for Colfax and Grant parish.

I recur with pleasure to the hospitality of Mr. J. H. McNeely, of Colfax, and to polite attentions of Mr. H. G. Goodwyn, editor of the Chronicle, who, by the way, is son of Rev. P. M. Goodwyn, known and loved throughout this Conference.

CHAS. F. EVANS.

SALLIS REVIVAL.

On the morning of November 12 our dear Lord sent to Sallis, Miss., two of his most skilled and successful colaborers in sermon and song—the peerless Geo. S. Inge and Prof. D. J. Evans. They came as re-inforcements from the fields of glory. The enemy felt their touch and soon began to fall under the story of the cross and the melody of song; but they arose again to live for God and the right. Multitudes flocked to the gospel feast and filled the house to its utmost capacity. Day after day, and night after night, did the renowned messenger of love come before his audience with thoughts that breathed and words that burned; his language as clear as a sunbeam, as chaste as a snowflake, and as strong as bands of steel; his illustrations new, apt, true and telling. For ready knowledge, energy and adaptability, I have never met and known his peer, and what I say of Bro. Inge as a revivalist, I say of Bro. Evans as a vocalist. He is simply at the top.

As to results, no one can measure them. Our entire community has been lifted up. Scores have been won to God; hundreds have declared their intention to amend their ways. Thirty-one have joined the Methodist Church, and quite a number have given their names for membership in the Baptist Church. Our young people have received great benefit from their faithful master of song. We shall walk in newness of life on all lines.

Bright, happy and enduring will be the memory of these dear brethren and their work in this field. May God be ever so good and kind to us in the ministry of his Word and the sweet notes of his praise, and may we ever remain loyal to our pledges of love and Christian endeavor!

Once more briefly: We have held five meetings besides this one, and at all of them we feel sure that good was accomplished. Some 65 in all have joined the Methodist Church. Many have renewed their pledges.

Several of my brethren in the ministry have rendered us faithful services during the year, for which I now tender my warmest thanks. This has been, to many of us, one of the most remarkable years in the history of our lives. Nine have answered to roll call above; and of these I may say, "Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord!"

I will write an article ere long in which special mention will be made of the sainted dead. I have made, notwithstanding my protracted illness, more than 300 visits, and have preached not less than 125 sermons. I have been kindly received everywhere, and have learned to love my people as my own.

I now believe that our collections will measure up with assessments all round.

To God be all the praise, both now and forever. Amen and amen!

R. M. EVANS.

SHANNON CIRCUIT, NORTH MISSISSIPPI.

We have recently closed our round of protracted meetings, resulting in over one hundred conversions and sixty-three accessions to our church. We feel under many obligations to Bros. Eugene Johnson, of Verona station, and N. G. Augustus, of Tupelo station, for their able help in these meetings. We had Bro. Joe J. Jones with us at Troy and Shannon for one week. Bro. Jones is surely a gospel preacher. He relies wholly upon God's Spirit and Word to accomplish the work to be done. He is certainly a man with a message, and that message from Christ to dying men. He preached in Troy five days to not less than 600 people. Old men and young men who had never before been moved came tremblingly and took Bro. Jones by the hand with a vow, "By the grace of God, I will be a better man." It must be that God has called him to rescue these hard-hearted ones. May God's richest blessings attend him and his faithful and efficient singer (Bro. Gilreath) wherever they may go.

Books and Periodicals.

All books received will be acknowledged in this column. A fuller notice will depend upon the interests of our readers.

BOOKS.

GUSTAVUS ADOLPHUS. By C. R. L. Fletcher, M. A. G. P. Putnam's Sons, New York. Eyrich, 130 Canal street, New Orleans. Price, $1 50.

This book is one of "The Heroes of the Nations Series," and recounts, in thrilling language, the struggle of Protestantism for existence in the land of the Swedes. It is a story which has interested the world for three hundred years, and yet it is as fresh as ever. Prof. Fletcher has brought to his aid a full knowledge of the times of which he writes, and a style at once clear and pleasing. This series of biographies will, no doubt, find a ready reading public, for we never tire of the great deeds and noble actions of former generations.

A LOYAL LITTLE RED-COAT. By Ruth Ogden, with sixty original illustrations by H. A. Ogden. Frederick A. Stokes Company, New York. Price, $1 50.

That Revolution which, more than a century ago, freed us from "the Britishers" will never lose its interest, no matter in what form it is brought before us. Here is a story of a loyal little red-coat that can not fail to fascinate all young readers, and the older ones will hardly lay the book down before they have finished the thrilling tale. And then the book is a beauty to look upon, and will make a valued Christmas present to any boy or girl who relishes historic stories.

FORWARD, MARCH; THROUGH BATTLE TO VICTORY. Talks to Young People on Life and Success. By Rev. Henry Tuckley. Cranston & Stowe, Cincinnati. Price, $1.

This is a book for young people—a book that sets forth the great fact that life is a battle, and can only be won by the brave and true; a book to inspire enthusiasm and incite to noblest purposes, and, therefore, a good book to put into the hands of thoughtful boys. It is gotten up in an attractive style and has forty illustrations.

LALLA ROOKH. AN ORIENTAL ROMANCE. By Thomas Moore, with one hundred new illustrations by Thomas McIlvaine.

THE PRINCESS, AND OTHER POEMS. By Alfred Lord Tennyson, with one hundred new illustrations by Charles Howard Johnson. Frederick A. Stokes Company, New York. Price, $1 50 each.

The contents of these two books are, doubtless, familiar to our readers. They have been a part of English literature for a long time. But we have never seen these literary gems so beautifully set as these publishers have set them. The very finest paper, the clearest type, the most beautiful illustrations combining, make up volumes that will ornament any library in the land.

Mississippi Items.

An artesian well has been bored at Ocean Springs. Water was found at 875 feet, and gives out 60 gallons per minute.

The Marshall-Nugent cotton seed delinter has been tried successfully at Jackson. It takes every particle of lint from the seed without injuring the hull.

The taxable property in Jackson has increased since last year $676,085. One of the largest sash, blind and door factories in the South is in process of erection.

The merchants of Columbus have purchased a steamboat to run on the Tombigbee river in the interest of the city, which will add greatly to the volume of trade.

The Democrat-Star says:

Capt. W. H. Hardy, the president of the Gulf and Ship Island railroad, has gone to New York to get more money to complete this road from Gulf Port to Hattiesburg. Of course, this road will reach Hattiesburg by the first of January. So says Hardy.

The Water Valley Progress makes a remark that can't be said by many country-town papers. It says: "All the levees and bridges on the various roads leading into Water Valley are in splendid condition." It would be a "splendid" thing if every town could say that!

The distribution of the Mississippi river appropriation has been made by the chief engineer as follows: For improving the river from the head of the passes to the mouth of the Ohio, $4,000,000; for Hickman, Ky., $111,250; Greenville, Miss., $350,000; Vicksburg, $175,000; Natchez, $250,000; Red and Atchafalaya rivers, $350,000; New Orleans, $200,000.

This, from the Brookhaven Leader, shows the good effect of "no saloons" on a "high day:"

Notwithstanding the immense crowd in town Monday at the circus, not an arrest was made and not a case of drunk and disorderly was reported. The crowd was sober, good-humored, well-behaved and orderly, and the mayor didn't have a case before him at the wind-up. How different the record would be with three or four saloons running in town!

Gov. Stone has appointed R. H. Thomson, of Lincoln; G. G. Dillard, of Noxubee, and R. B. Campbell, of Washington, commissioners under section 278 of the new Constitution, "to prepare and draft such general laws as are contemplated by the Constitution, and such other laws as shall be necessary to put into operation the provisions thereof, and as may be appropriate to conform the general statutes of the State to the Constitution."

Louisiana Notes.

The rice crop of Acadia parish will reach 250,000 barrels.

Seventeen indictments for the murder of Hennessy, chief of police in this city, have been found by the grand jury.

The Acadia College, located at Crowley, has had a successful term, and gave an interesting exhibition last week.

A fire insurance company, composed of successful business men, with a capital of $250,000, has been organized in Baton Rouge.

A mill capable of making 75,000 feet of lumber per day has been put in operation in Logansport, which town is growing rapidly.

The bridge over Boeuff river, on the New Orleans and Northwestern railroad, will be located near the Cut-Off, three miles above Rayville.

Shreveport has had a chrysanthemum show, and it was a great success. This is said to have been the first show of the kind ever held in the South.

An oyster canning factory, which puts up and ships 5,000 oysters a day, has been established in Houma. The plant is to be enlarged next year.

A subscription of $30,000 has been taken in New Iberia for the purpose of organizing a new bank. This, with the outside help promised, will start the project at once.

The American and Christian Visitor, of Lake Charles, have been consolidated. Elder G. B. Rogers, editor of the Visitor, goes on the editorial staff of the American.

A Merchants' Association has been organized in Lafayette for the purpose of seeing that the Sunday law is properly observed. All good citizens are under obligation to see that every law be properly observed.

Work on the Louisiana and Northwestern road, which will start from Lake Charles and pursue a northward course through the Louisiana parishes and Arkansas, connecting at Little Rock with the St. Louis and Little Rock road, is progressing rapidly.

The North Louisiana Horticultural Society made an exhibit recently at Shreveport, which was said to be very fine in every respect. The Caucasian thinks that great good will come to Shreveport if this society receives proper encouragement. Why not have something of this kind in every town?

MULLINS—Mrs. NANCY L. MULLINS was born March 3, 1846, and died October 9, 1890, aged forty-four years and seven months. Sister Mullins joined our church at sixteen years of age, and continued a member until her death. Though her life was a short one, comparatively, yet, during that life she passed through many hard and rugged pinces which (I judge from my observation of her character for the past three years) she found in her experience as a Christian, the wife of a farmer, and the mother of eight children.

Sister Mullins was a solid, faithful Christian woman who mixed her Christianity with and into every relationship in life. I have noticed her closely while occupied with her other duties about the kitchen and house. She never failed to respond to the appeals of her children, for comfort or assistance, and she always did so with cheerfulness, entering into motherly sympathy with them in all their (little?) crosses. Doubtless, she was the same kind wife as she was mother, and the same earnest, laborious, faithful woman in all the other relations of life. I knew her as the preacher's friend, who was invariably frank and cordial in her hospitality to this writer and to former preachers on Meadville circuit. Often I have felt sad that more pressing duties called me to other parts of my work, and I felt compelled to leave her invitations to spend the night or "stay longer," uncomplied with, but not unheeded. How much treasure she will find—perhaps, to her surprise—laid up there when she gets to heaven! For the Master has said, "Inasmuch as ye have (been kind) done this to one of the least of these my brethren, ye have done it unto me." It was not necessary for Sister Mullins to leave words of testimony at her death, as an evidence of her safety; her life of purity and active love was testimony enough to convince us of her acceptance with God.

HER PASTOR.

COLLINS—SERBERT MAURAY, infant son of P. and M. A. Collins, was born in Onachita parish, La., April 1, 1889, and fell asleep in the arms of the blessed Savior on October 6, 1890, after a painful illness of about two weeks. Though little Serbert leaves quite a number of brothers and sisters to make home cheerful and happy, yet his departure leaves a sadness which the presence of others can not expel. Before the little lips had learned to lisp the name of Jesus he was removed to that celestial world, there to behold the lovely face of him who placed his hands upon young children, and said, "Suffer such to come unto me."

But in such seasons of sorrow, there is always comfort to the Christian parents. Though the dear little one has been taken from them, and he "can not come again to them," yet "they can go to him," and even now can rejoice in the anticipation of meeting their son again in that city where death can never enter, and where the word "farewell" is unknown. Thus the ties for heaven are stronger and those for earth grow weaker. May God bless the parents and relatives who sustain this loss!

ISAAC T. REAMES.

DAY—LEONA ESTELLE, little daughter of Rev. H. W. and Julia Day, was born June 12, 1889; was baptized July, 1889, by Rev. C. McDonald; died August 29, 1890.

Leona was a sweet little girl. We laid her in the church-yard by her little sister, who was buried one year before she was, to await the morning of the resurrection. God takes these precious jewels to himself, and says: "Suffer little children to come unto me, for of such is the kingdom of heaven." How home-like heaven is becoming! May God bless the faithful young preacher and father and comfort the heart-broken mother. May they ever feel that all things work together for good to them that love and serve the Lord, and may they finally meet those precious children where parting will be no more.

W. M. SULLIVAN.

SADLER—My old life-long friend and Christian brother is dead. Our love for each other began when we first met; when we were wayward youths indulging in follies and ungodliness for a few years. In 1840 he joined the Methodist Church in Macon, Miss., leaving me in my sinfulness until about one year after, when I became a member of the same church. After we were both born again and became worshipers of God, our friendship grew into love, and we often talked of our trifling troubles here, and rejoiced together of the hope we had of getting where troubles cease. A more humble Christian spirit I have not met, nor do I expect to meet this side the grave. Bro. Sadler was a righteous, godly man. I remember very fondly the mingling of voices together in song, and the melting of hearts in worshiping the Master, connecting our vows in tears and praise to our blessed Redeemer, and how we would serve him while our lives continued. He has left me, but I thank God he was faithful to the end.

ELIAS MERIT SADLER was born in Jefferson county, Ala., December 3, 1815; died at Iuka, Miss., on October 10, 1890, near seventy-five years of age. He was married twice. His first wife died when he was comparatively young. Some time afterward he married her reintive, Miss Mary E Murry, who a short time after marriage became almost a helpless invalid. Bro. Sadler's care of her was like a mother's watchful care over an afflicted babe. No one ever saw more tenderness and love for an afflicted wife than he showed her until her death on July 13, 1879. They sleep together in Iuka Springs Cemetery. H. W. FOOTE.

WISNER—A. J. WISNER was born in Wilkinson county, Miss., July 26, 1845; was married to Miss Amanda E. N. Low, May 7, 1865; joined the Methodist Church, January, 1865; died June 10, 1890. He was converted under the ministry of Bro. M. H. Moore in 1888, whom he ever afterward loved. Bro. Wisner was a quiet man; his temper was his only trouble. If he said or did anything wrong, he would not rest until he felt that he was forgiven. For twelve years he made it his business to take a pitcher of water to the church for the preacher. The last Sunday he spent on earth, not being able to go to Sunday-school, he taught his little boy his lesson, and helped the family off; then spent the day in reading. After they returned he spent the evening in singing. After having prayer with the family at night, retired very happy. The next day he was off in the neighborhood on business; returned home in the evening, and went over his field as well as usual. After family worship he said he was so sleepy. He retired, and at ten o'clock his wife heard a strange noise in his room; went to wake him, and he couldn't speak. He was dead in a few moments. He loved his church. He leaves a wife and six children to mourn his loss. May God comfort the widow and orphans, and finally save them.

KELLER—Suddenly did the angel of death visit the home of Mrs. Sue P. Keller, and bore from it the purest gem, the idol of her heart. Sweet little BENNIE died of congestion, October 29, 1890, and on the following day, just as the sun was sinking in the west, filling the earth with its glorious light, we gathered in Bethel Churchyard, to lay his beautiful form in its lowly bed. Before he was taken sick, he would ask his mama so many questions about heaven. What the people did there, and how God put wings on the angels. Dear little darling, your questions have all been answered by Jesus himself, as you've walked the golden streets of that beautiful city. Though only four years and six months old, little Bennie was a remarkably bright child, and won every heart with his sweet, gentle manners. He never failed to ask his little blessing at the table, and during his last illness, when his medicine was brought to him, he said it was no use, for when God wanted us, we would have to go any way.

May God comfort the grief stricken mother, as he only can, and bring her with her sister and brothers to meet dear little Bennie, for he will be waiting and watching for them at the beautiful gate. COUSIN EMMA.

FAISON—RICHARD B. FAISON, Jr., the eldest son of Richard B. and Sallie C. Faison, was born December 14, 1878. From his babyhood he was taught to love Jesus, and, as the result of this early training, he joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, when but ten years of age.

I shall not soon forget the warm welcome that he gave "the new preacher" not quite one year ago. It was with a look of pride that he told me that he was a member of the church. It was my privilege to talk and pray with him and his sister and brother just a few days before his death. I little dreamed that before another week should pass Richard would be called home. But the angel of death passed by, and on the following Friday, October 31, 1890, Richard B. Faison, Jr., passed from his home on earth to his home in heaven. Let us meet him there, where there is no more parting.

GEO. H. LIPSCOMB, P. C.

STRINGER—On October 1, 1890, at 8 o'clock A. M., little JESSIE, infant daughter of M. B. and Alice Stringer, closed her baby eyes for that last long sleep from which there is no awakening.

For two short years she made home bright with her winsome smiles and baby prattle; but "she was too pure for this sin-stained earth, and God, in his wisdom, saw best to transplant this precious flower to a sunnier clime, where the chilling winds and blighting frosts of time can never mar its tadeless beauty."

ONE WHO LOVED HER.

RICHARDSON—Miss SARAH G. RICHARDSON died August 21, 1890, aged twenty-nine years four months and nineteen days. She had been a member of the Methodist Church for some time. She died very suddenly, without a moment's warning.

Sister Richardson leaves an aged and afflicted mother and many loved ones who hope to meet her in a better land. God bless the relatives of the deceased, and especially the troubled mother; and at last save them where parting will be no more.

W. M. SULLIVAN.

CLEARMAN—Mrs. BETTIE KIRK CLEARMAN, was born in Noxubee county, Miss., September, 1866. She was left an orphan at eight years of age, but was fortunate in that she had religious influences around her. At the age of twelve years professed religion and joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in which church she lived and died, making a useful and consistent member. In 1880 she was happily married to W. W. Clearman. For ten years they lived happily together and prospered. Two children were the fruit of the union. The first, a little girl, died at eight months of age. The second, a little boy four years of age, still lives.

Her illness was complicated and long—first, measles; then fever, and then heart affection. She had every attention that faithful nurses and skilled physicians could give, but the approach of death could not be arrested. It seems that her mission on earth was done, though her life was short. So God took her, October 25, 1890, from her home in Macon, Miss., to her home in heaven. She left every evidence that she was ready. May God sustain the husband, take care of the child, bless the brothers and the sister! J. H. MITCHELL.

WRIGHT—Mrs. LOUISA WRIGHT (nee Millsaps) was born April 13, 1810. Some time during the year 1822 she was converted and united with the Methodist Episcopal Church. In 1830 she was married to Kendal Wright, with whom she lived happily until God took the husband to his better home.

"Aunt Louisa," as she was familiarly called, was a true Christian, though not very demonstrative, yet firm in adherence to Christian principles and duty. Age and infirmity had for some time prevented her attending church, but she enjoyed very much religious service at her home. In conversation with the writer, a few days before her death, she said, "My children are all converted and in the church but one;" then, calling his name, she exclaimed, "O, if he would only yield and be saved, I should be so happy." We laid her to rest beside her husband, and thought of a happy meeting on the other shore.

E. F. MULLINS.

FENN—ADA L., daughter of Rev. L. and G. E. Fenn, of Elm Bayou, was born October 20, 1885, and died August 14, 1890, of congestive chill.

Ada was a lovely child and of a bright and sunny nature. She loved the Sunday-school songs, many of which she could sing with a degree of accuracy remarkable for one of her years. Thus the angel reapers have gathered another lovely flower to bloom in the garden of God, and, though the sweet voice is hushed to earthly ears, it is now blended with infant symphonies in a clime more in keeping with her pure spirit.

JED.

LONG—WILLIAM HENRY, only child of James and Ann Long, was born October 28, 1889; was baptized June 8, 1890, and departed this life, November 13, 1890. He took sick while at church, Sunday, November 9, at Andrew Chapel. He died from teething; was a patient sufferer only four days, and God took his little spirit to be with the sainted spirits at rest.

His little prating tongue and timid footsteps will be missed. May God bless the bereaved parents and friends of the little one!

A. C. FLOWERS.

McCARTY—Died, at Hemingway, Carroll county, Miss., on October 11, HENRY, infant son of W. H. and Sallie McGee McCarty, aged one month and eleven days.

Hood's Sarsaparilla

Is a peculiar medicine. It is carefully prepared from Sarsaparilla, Dandelion, Mandrake, Dock, Pipsissewa, Juniper Berries, and other well-known and valuable vegetable remedies, by a peculiar combination, proportion and process, giving to Hood's Sarsaparilla curative power not possessed by other medicines. It effects remarkable cures where other preparations fail.

Hood's Sarsaparilla

Is the best blood purifier before the public. It eradicates every impurity, and cures Scrofula, Salt Rheum, Boils, Pimples, all Humors, Dyspepsia, Biliousness, Sick Headache, Indigestion, General Debility, Catarrh, Rheumatism, Kidney and Liver Complaints, overcomes that tired feeling, creates an appetite, and builds up the system.

Hood's Sarsaparilla

Has met peculiar and unparalleled success at home. Such has become its popularity in Lowell, Mass., where it is made, that whole neighborhoods are taking it at the same time. Lowell druggists sell more of Hood's Sarsaparilla than of all other sarsaparillas or blood purifiers. Sold by druggists, $1; six for $5. Prepared only by C. I. HOOD & CO., Apothecaries, Lowell, Mass.

The Voice

Is easily injured—the slightest irritation of the throat or larynx at once affecting its tone, flexibility, or power. All efforts to sing or speak in public, under such conditions, become not only painful but dangerous, and should be strictly avoided until every symptom is removed. To effect a speedy cure no other medicine is equal to

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral

The best of anodynes, this preparation rapidly soothes irritation, strengthens the delicate organs of speech, and restores the voice to its tone and power. No singer or public speaker should be without it. Lydia Thompson, the famous actress, certifies: "Ayer's Cherry Pectoral has been of very great service to me. It improves and strengthens the voice, and is always effective for the cure of colds and coughs."

"Upon several occasions I have suffered from colds, causing hoarseness and entire loss of voice. In my profession of an auctioneer any affection of the voice or throat is a serious matter, but at each attack, I have been relieved by a few doses of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. This remedy, with ordinary care, has worked such a that I have suffered very little inconvenience. I have also used it in my family, with excellent results, in coughs, colds, &c."—Wm. H. Quartly, Minlaton, Australia.

"In the spring of 1853, at Portsmouth, Va., I was prostrated by a severe attack of typhoid pneumonia. My physicians exhausted their remedies, and for one year I was not able to even articulate a word. By the advice of Dr. Shaw I tried Ayer's Cherry Pectoral, and to my surprise and great joy, in less than one month I could converse easily, in a natural tone of voice. I continued to improve and have become since a well man. I have often recommended the Pectoral, and have never known it to fail."—George H. Lawrence, Valparaiso, Ind.

ORGAN OF THE LOUISIANA, MISSISSIPPI AND NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCES OF THE METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH, SOUTH.

Rev. O. W. CARTER, D. D., Editor.

THURSDAY, DECEMBER 4, 1890.

Briefs.

According to the American Banker, the rapid increase in the wealth, business and prosperity of the United States during the last ten years is simply marvelous. The total wealth of the country is now $71,459,000,000—equal to nearly $1,000 per head. This is an increase in ten years of $18,000,000, or 42 per cent. England's wealth in 1885 is given at $50,000,000,000, giving an average wealth per head of $1,545. The average in Scotland is $1,215 per head, and Ireland $565. The total wealth of France is estimated at $36,000,000,000. England exacts in taxes $20 per head of population, while each individual in the United States pays but $12 50. America will produce 9,000,000 tons of iron this year, while England's production is 8,600,000.

The general committee to make arrangements for the assembling of the Ecumenical Council of the Methodist Church, met in Wesley Hall, Philadelphia, a few days since; among those present being Bishops Foss, Bowman, Hurst, Hendrix, Gorman, Payne, Arnett, Chancellor Garland, of Vanderbilt University, and General Superintendent Gorman, and others, representing all the divisions of the church and all parts of the country. Bishop Hurst and Dr. Hamilton presented reports on the action of the Wesleyan and Irish Conferences relative to the coming council, and asking to be represented in it. The representation in the council will be 300 delegates from American churches and 200 from foreign churches. The place for holding the council has been referred to a special committee.

The deficiency of the pension account this year will be at least $40,000,000. The commissioner so reports officially to the secretary of the treasury. The Herald took a conservative estimate and made it $30,000,000. It now appears that even the commissioner's estimate is too low. From the information received to-day it is likely the deficiency will reach $49,000,000. This means $150,000,000 instead of $135,000,000 this year for pensions. It means more than $200,000,000 next year for pensions. It means a bankrupt treasury and an unpaid national credit, even sooner than the Herald had predicted. General Raum, the commissioner of pensions, said to-day that the pension deficiency bill would not be as large as has been claimed. Without giving the exact figures, he said the deficiency appropriation asked for would not be more than $35,000,000. According to this estimate the total appropriations for pensions next year, General Raum said, would not be more than $130,000,000.

The act of the last Mississippi Legislature, requiring uniform series of text-books to be used in the public schools, has created some troubles, and, in consequence of these troubles, the State Board of Education met and promulgated the following resolution, which is based on the opinion of the attorney-general:

In response to numerous inquiries from county superintendents and others touching the effect of the school-book law, it is resolved, that in the opinion of this board that the act of 1890, providing for a uniform series of text-books, etc., is mandatory, and if a teacher shall make use of other books than those adopted by the school-book committee on October 6, and contracted for by the county superintendents, it will be a breach of his contract destroying all claim to compensation.

This opinion of the State Board of Education is promulgated for the guidance of superintendents and for the protection of teachers.

The Second Coming of the Lord.

A convention of Baptists was recently held in Brooklyn, to give consideration to this very solemn subject. Eminent men of the Baptist Church from all sections of the country were present and participated in the addresses and speeches on the occasion. The convention was largely attended, and the interest in the proceedings increased from the first day to the close.

We can not find that any of the speakers attempted to cipher out from the prophecy the exact time of the Lord's second coming; but they interpret the signs of this present period as indicating that the beginning of his earthly reign is approaching. The prevailing opinion among them is that the coming of the Lord will precede the millennium, and not follow it. The augument seems to be that, though Christian activity is greater than ever before, sin was never more powerful than to-day, and has wrought so effectively its dreadful work that it has brought about a condition of things which can only be relieved by the actual presence of infinite wisdom in the person of Christ.

There are a great many persons of other denominations who are holding and disseminating like views on this subject. Bishop Coxe, of New York; Mr. Moody; and General Booth, of the Salvation Army, are all pronounced pre-millennialists. And there are a great many people who, though not holding these views, would be glad to believe that the Lord will soon come and take possession of his own. They are actually perplexed by the present state of things, and see no way out but by a general wind-up of earthly affairs.

Whether the recent convention will settle or unsettle anybody's faith on this particular point, we do not know; but we think it very likely that a discussion will be started that will become quite prominent in the religious world. Of one thing each reader of this may be quite sure, and that is, it will not be long before the Lord will come to him with the words, "Give account of thy stewardship." Are you ready for that?

Utterances at the Episcopal Congress.

The Protestant Episcopal Congress held a session recently in Philadelphia. Besides discussing matters pertaining exclusively to the Episcopal Church, they talked considerably on topics of wider interest. One of these was "Practical Co-operation with Other Christian Bodies in Rescue Work." On this subject there were some who spoke out plainly. An exchange says:

Rev. Clarence Buel heartily endorsed the work of the Young Men's Christian Association. He deplored the church's attitude of indifference toward the Evangelical Alliance, the Christian Worker's convention recently in session in Hartford, and kindred undenominational organizations; and he referred with shame to the fact that at the recent great conference of missionaries at Shanghai, China, the Episcopal Church had but two representatives, a fact that Phillips Brooks pronounced humiliating, later in the session.

Archdeacon Mackay Smith, of New York, waked up the Congress by his severe rebuke of evils, in and out of the church. Speaking of country rectors, he said:

They do not solve the problem by devoting all their energies to building lovely little churches with spires pointing to heaven, in places already supplied with them; nor by excusing themselves for visiting no farmhouses or lonely cross-roads, by pointing out that the building of a rectory in harmony with the architecture of the church is the next vital step in evangelizing the neighborhood; nor by refusing to do anything for those poor souls, in common with his brother across the way, on the ground that, although that brother fulfils three out of four conditions of the bishop's ultimatum, he still does not believe in the episcopate locally adapted to particular emergencies.

The archdeacon's endorsement of the Salvation Army must have caused a thrill of horror in the minds of some of his hearers. His endorsement was absolute, declaring that thus far it is the only agency that has gone down and made itself "all things to all men."

I grant you every objection you may urge against the vulgarity, the seeming irreverence, the hideously noisy and uncouth methods of their work; but in judging this movement I leave all my prejudices, prepossessions and nerves in my study, and lock the door.

After this came another prominent New Yorker, Dr. G. R. Van De Water, and advocated cordial co-operation with the clergy of all denominations in rescue work. Said he:

If we can not recognize them as priests, we can as teachers and prophets. It makes me exceedingly weary to have men who hob-nob with socialists, who become partisans and managers of political campaigns, and who affiliate with Father McGlynn on an anti-poverty platform, find fault with him if he gives the right hand of fellowship to a Presbyterian, or associates with Mr. Moody in his anti-deviltry campaign.

We find Dr. McKim, former rector of Trinity, in this city, agreeing with Phillips Brooks on church work in foreign lands, and saying:

It is the duty of the Protestant Episcopal missionaries to make conformity to dogma, creed and church ritual a secondary matter in their work in heathen lands. The simple gospel is to be preached—not church doctrine about the historic episcopate, or the priesthood. The main effort ought to be to make Christians, not Episcopalians. A native ministry, a native literature and a native church architecture should be encouraged. All that is good in the native religions should be recognized and built upon. There should be no attempt to engraft occidental incidental features upon what may be an oriental type of Christianity, if the simple gospel is presented and allowed to do its work naturally.

Verily, "the world do move," and so do some Episcopal preachers.

Class-Meeting with Gilderoy.

MR. EDITOR: I am glad you are yet on the "tripod." The committee did not unhorse you, and they would not let you dismount. You are in the saddle yet. You are still a member of the North Mississippi Conference, and we may look for you at our annual sessions.

If we should chance, or providence, to have a home at the same house this year, as we did last, it would suit me to a fraction. You have grace enough to endure my "gab," or you did endure it with much long suffering last year. The Conferences are coming mighty fast and thick of late years. Time goes in a whirl. I have hardly time to turn round till the year is gone. What means all this? I am only a boy yet; out of my teens, of course, and more than half a hundred years old. The long end of life is behind me. It has been lived, and the record is written in the memory of God. I will have to stand face to face with it in the last day. But for the mercy of God and the merit of Christ the thought would kill me. That is my only hope; his blood, my only plea. Through him I hope to pass the test.

I have good reason to believe that I am growing in grace as I grow in years. I have less trouble with my temper and my tongue than I used to have. I am not nearly so "touchy." I am more patient with the faults and weaknesses of other people, more considerate of their prejudices, whims and peculiar notions. I am not inclined to run roughshod over them as I used to do. If they compel me to go a mile, I am inclined to go two, rather than have a dispute about it. If they sue me at law and take away my coat, I am disposed to throw in the overcoat. I want to return blessing for cursing, good for evil and prayer for persecution. By this course I find less spleen and infinitely more peace in my own heart. I would do these things for no other reward than the peace and comfort I get in my own soul.

The fact is, "Virtue is its own reward." I pray more now, pray easier, love to pray—indeed, it just prays itself. Prayer has become a blessed and glorious privilege rather than a duty. I catch myself praying when I was not conscious of praying. It bubbles up and boils over without thought or effort. I do not have to pray for the spirit of prayer as I once did. The Word of God grows in sweetness. "It is sweeter than honey or the honey-comb." His Word is bread and meat. I feed and fatten on it. It is clearer, purer, stronger, sweeter than ever before. I see less controversy and more of the conversation of heaven in the Bible now than I used to do. My faith is stronger, hope brighter and love purer. I live nearer to God. I believe I am entirely free from a feeling of hate, or of unkindness towards any human being under the sun. I hate sin, but love the sinner, and long to see him quit sinning against his own soul. It has taken me long years to come to this measure of grace. I did not come to it per saltum, at one bound. With me it has been a growth rather than a leap in grace. When I look up at Christ, the standard, the measure to go by, I find that I am yet a long ways from what I ought to be, what I must be. I find that as I grow towards him, he grows still higher above me. It seems to me I will never grow tall enough to stand and look my Master square in the face. It is, and has been for forty-odd years, looking up all the time. "The measure of the stature of the fullness of Christ" is hard to attain. The standard is high. God put it high on purpose—indeed, an inch lower would be unworthy of himself. It is as low as God can come and no higher than we ought to go. It is just right.

Well, I thought I would have a little private chat with you since your re-election and before we meet at Grenada. That the chat took this turn is purely accidental or providential; by which I mean to say, it was not of purpose, or by a preconceived plan. I had no plan in my mind, but sat down and began to touch the keys of this machine, and the thing turned out this way. May God bless you! Your brother,

GILDEROY.

The Saloon Keepers and the Supreme Court.

A very important case has been decided by the Supreme Court of the United States in regard to a man's right to sell liquor. A saloon keeper in San Francisco conducted his business so outrageously that when his license expired the commissioners of police refused to renew it. The fellow took the bit in his teeth and undertook to sell without a license, and was forthwith arrested. He appealed to the State Court and was beaten. He took his case to the United States Circuit Court, and the judge decided in his favor. Upon this the commissioners appealed to the Supreme Court of the country, and this court of last resort sustained the commissioners. As this decision bears upon the special cry that is so often made, that "prohibition is an invasion of personal liberty," we give large extracts to show what the highest judicature of the country has to say on that point. Mr. Justice Field delivered the opinion of the court. He said:

It is undoubtedly true that it is the right of every citizen of the United States to pursue any lawful trade or business, under such restrictions as are imposed upon all persons of the same age, sex, and condition. The possession and enjoyment of all rights are subject to such reasonable conditions as may be deemed by the governing authority of the country essential to the safety, health, peace, good order, and morals of the community. Even liberty itself, the greatest of all rights, is not unrestricted license to act according to one's own will. It is only freedom from restraint under conditions essential to the equal enjoyment of the same right by others. It is then liberty regulated by law.

TO THE PREACHERS OF THE LOUISIANA, NORTH MISSISSIPPI AND MISSISSIPPI ANNUAL CONFERENCES.

STATEMENTS of your accounts have been mailed to your address. Please bring amount due to the Conference, together with all the renewals and new subscriptions possible.

The Publisher or Business Manager will be on hand, Wednesday morning, to receive your ADVOCATE money.

The right to acquire, enjoy, and dispose of property, is declared in the Constitutions of several States, to be one of the inalienable rights of man. But this declaration is not held to preclude the Legislature of any State from passing laws respecting the acquisition, enjoyment, and disposition of property. What contracts respecting its acquisition and disposition shall be valid, and what void or voidable; when they shall be in writing, and when they may be made orally; and by what instruments it may be conveyed or mortgaged, are subjects of constant legislation. And as to the enjoyment of property, the rule is general that it must be accompanied with such limitations as will not impair the equal enjoyment by others of their property.

For the pursuit of any lawful trade or business, the law imposes similar conditions. Regulations respecting them are almost infinite, varying with the nature of the business. Some occupations by the noise made in their pursuit, some by the odors they engender, and some by the dangers accompanying them, require regulations as to the locality in which they shall be conducted. Some by the dangerous character of the articles used, manufactured, or sold, require also special qualifications in the parties permitted to use, manufacture, or sell them. All this is but common knowledge, and would hardly be mentioned were it not for the position often taken, and vehemently pressed, that there is something wrong in principle, and objectionable in similar restrictions when applied to the business of selling by retail, in small quantities, spirituous and intoxicating liquors. It is urged that, as the liquors are used as a beverage, and the injury following them, if taken in excess, is voluntarily inflicted, and is confined to the party offending, their sale should be without restrictions, the contention being that what a man shall drink, equally with what he shall eat, is not properly matter for legislation.

There is in this position an assumption of a fact which does not exist, that when the liquors are taken in excess, the injuries are confined to the party offending. The injury, it is true, first falls upon him in his health, which the habit undermines; in his morals, which it weakens; and in the self-abasement which it creates. But, as it leads to neglect of business and waste of property, and general demoralization, it affects those who are immediately connected with and dependent upon him. By the general concurrence of opinion of every civilized and Christian community, there are few sources of crime and misery to society equal to the dram shop, where intoxicating liquors, in small quantities, to be drunk at the time, are sold indiscriminately to all parties applying. The statistics of every State show a greater amount of crime and misery attributable to the use of ardent spirits obtained at these retail liquor saloons than to any other source. The sale of such liquors in this way has, therefore, been, at all times, by the courts of every State, considered as the proper subject of legislative regulation. Not only may a license be exacted from the keeper of the saloon before a glass of his liquors can be thus disposed of, but restrictions may be imposed as to the class of persons to whom they may be sold, and the hours of the day, and the days of the week on which the saloons may be opened. Their sale in that form may be absolutely prohibited. It is a question of public expediency and public morality, and not of federal law. The police power of the State is fully competent to regulate the business—to mitigate its evils or to suppress it entirely. There is no inherent right in a citizen to sell intoxicating liquors by retail; it is not a privilege of a citizen of the State, or of a citizen of the United States. As it is a business attended with danger to the community, it may, as already said, be entirely prohibited, or be permitted under such conditions as will limit to the utmost its evils. The manner and extent of regulation rest in the discretion of the governing authority. That authority may vest in such officers as it may deem proper the power of passing upon applications for permission to carry it on, and to issue licenses for that purpose. It is a matter of legislative will only. As in many other cases, the officers may not always exercise the power conferred upon them with wisdom or justice to the parties affected. But that is a matter which does not affect the authority of the State, or one which can be brought under the cognizance of the courts of the United States.

The Constitution of California vests in the municipality of the city and county of San Francisco the right to make all "such local, police, sanitary, and other regulations as are not in conflict with general laws." The Supreme Court of the State has decided that the ordinance in question, under which the petitioner was arrested and is held in custody, was thus authorized and is valid. That decision is binding upon us unless some inhibition of the Constitution or of a law of the United States is violated by it. We do not perceive that there is any such violation.

All of which goes to show that the saloon keeper is not only not beyond the supervision of the law, but is subject to its most vigorous restrictions. This decision was rendered November 10.

Notes.

During the month of October one million persons attended the meetings of the Salvation Army in this country, and $21,000 were contributed to its support.

"If the alchemy of science can extract beautiful colors from coal tar, can not Divine alchemy enable us to evolve gladness and brightness out of the agonized hearts and dark, dreary, loveless lives of doomed myriads."—General Booth.

Holston Methodist:

We have found no lack of sympathy and no difficulty in town or country to secure subscribers when we have gone from house to house in search of them. In some circuits and stations the pastors could have easily doubled our circulation, but, mayhap, the work is distasteful to them, and we do not desire to lay burdens on the brethren.

Outside of the thousands of churches in London, there are 500 missionary workers. Each missionary calls on 500 families every month. They visit the slums and rum holes, and are subjected to many dangers. During the warm season open-air meetings are held every day and night on the streets and in the parks.

Holston Methodist:

A Conference may lower its standard of admission until the territory develops faster than the Conference. There may be a larger demand for educated men than the supply on hand can meet. In that case men should be imported without hesitancy. Conferences that keep their grade of men equal to the grade of work only can object to transfers with show of reason.

One of the truest things Dr. John Hall ever said is this: "The true guage of a church's life is found in what she is doing outside of herself." It is also true in regard to the individual Christian life. Our ability is the measure of duty, but our doing is the measure of our love. "Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself," seems to be little understood by many of us.

The Free-Will Baptists are building a boat in St. Louis for river mission work in the towns and cities on the Mississippi river and its tributaries. It will combine the work of a bethel and open-air missionary work. The director of this work is Rev. M. A. Shepherd, who has been a minister for the past twenty-five years. This boat will float down the Mississippi river this winter.

Personal and Otherwise.

Henry M. Stanley will lecture on Darkest Africa, in New Orleans, March 30, 1891.

Dr. R. N. Price, of the Holston Conference, is now editor of the Western N. C. Advocate.

Rev. W. V. Tudor, D. D., has been appointed to Broad Street Church, Richmond, Va.

J. W. Hawxhurst, Waukegan, Ill., has issued a ten-cent edition of "Pilgrim's Progress." It is well gotten up, and is a sort of pocket edition.

B. P. Shillaber, better known to the reading public as "Mrs Partington," died at his residence at Chelsea, Mass., November 25, aged seventy-six years.

Our friend, H. Bascom Browne, says in the Nashville: "The Southern Christian Advocate has the largest cash subscription in its history—over 5,000 subscribers, and the publisher will collect 95 per cent. of his dues." Those South Carolina people are worthy of imitation.

Postal Card Reports.

—Rev. A. C. Flowers writes: "Clark circuit reports $5 50 for Millsaps College; will send to-morrow."

—Rev. J. E. Buck reports from Rural Hill, Miss.: "Collected on 'Millsaps College Day' eight dollars. Have had a successful year on Kosciusko charge. Sixty additions to the church. Preachers and presiding elder's salary paid. Considerable deficit in Conference collections."

—Rev. J. M. Wyatt reports from Water Valley, Miss.: "My second year at Water Valley is nearing a close. Last year we had fifty accessions. Up to date this year we have had eighty-four to join; sixty-nine on profession of faith. Have paid in money and notes nearly seven hundred dollars to Millsaps College. Expended on church repairs between six and seven hundred dollars. Have had two delightful years. These are a real good people to serve. God bless them!"

—Rev. J. C. Ellis writes: "Our fourth Quarterly Conference convened, November 15 and 16, at Camphellsville, Bro. John A. Ellis being on time. Besides making our hearts glad with his able sermons, we rejoiced to have had him with us several days; he being the first presiding elder ever visiting this place. Five accessions at this meeting. He is well impressed with the prospects. Our charge is still progressing, hoping to have a nice little church here for the new preacher. Pray for us."

—Rev. J. E. Thomas writes from Grenada, Miss.: "We have just remodeled our church in Grenada at a cost of $4,500. We reopened it to-day (November 30). Dr. R. A. Young was with us and preached the opening sermon. At the close of the sermon he took a collection and secured $1,375. This more than pays the entire indebtedness of the church. We are making all necessary preparations for the entertainment of the Conference, which will meet here, December 10. We are expecting you to be with us at that time."

—Rev. D. L. Cogdell writes from Carrollton circuit, North Mississippi Conference: "We have had 121 additions on this work; 61 adults and 36 infants baptized. This closes my second year on this work. We have had 206 additions. Have organized one church. Have built one church, valued at $1,000, and repaired others. Paid the parsonage out of debt and repaired the same some. We have licensed four promising young men to preach the gospel. We have no debts on property. To God be all the glory!"

—Rev. H. Mellard reports from Ponchatoula, La.: "Held a meeting at Killian Chapel, November 21 and 20, with very gratifying results, as follows: Twelve children and seven adults baptized, with eleven accessions. Presiding Elder McDonald was with us two days, with usual power. Bro. Boyes also rendered us valuable aid. We began preaching here in April at a private dwelling. Since then a church edifice has been erected, which, when finished, will approximate $400. We have received at this place twenty-one members in all. This new field is very hopeful."

—Rev. T. L. Mellen, P. E., writes: "Fairview Male and Female College, Binnsville, Kemper county, Miss., is under the presidency of Rev. W. W. Moore, of the Mississippi Conference. It is a school where thorough work is done, and where spiritual as well as moral and intellectual training is done. All the students attended the Quarterly Conference services, November 25, morning and night, and many of them communed in the sacrament of the Lord's Supper. After the night sermon, and in response to a special appeal by the presiding elder, two consecrated young women came forward and pledged themselves for foreign mission work or any other work God would have them do."

—Rev. W. W. Hopper writes from Vicksburg, Miss.: "Have held a meeting for three weeks in Bro. Harmon's church. A deep and powerful work has been done by the Holy Spirit in the hearts of some of the wickedest people in this city. Some sixty or seventy conversions (or, perhaps, more), and forty-one accessions, and the church aflame for God and souls."

—Rev. T. J. Newell writes from Gronada, Miss.: "Dr. William R. Sims lectured before the pupils of Gronada Collegiate Institute, last night (November 30) with great profit to them. The Methodist Church was re-opened to-day by Dr. R. A. Young. His sermon was strong, appropriate and eloquent. He raised $1,375 to finish paying for the church's improvement, which has cost $4,460. We hope to be ready for the Conference. Come up."

—Rev. M. L. White writes from Vaneleave, Miss.: "I am closing up my second year on this circuit (Vancleave). Every effort made on this circuit this year for good has been a success. More money has been collected for different objects this year than any one year previous. This has been a grand year with us. I am more deeply concerned about the salvation of immortal souls than I have ever been. My constant prayer for my people and myself is, Roll upon us the burden of immortal souls. The church here is improving, financially and spiritually. There are people on this circuit who walk from two to seven miles once or twice a month to church to hear preaching. Our Sunday-schools have been prosperous this year. Our camp meeting was a success; fifty accessions to church up to date. Have not counted the conversions—a large number, if it was counted. This people's kindness has never ceased towards the preacher and his family. To-morrow is Thanksgiving Day. We are looking for a large congregation here at the parsonage. The people will bring provisions ready prepared. All will spend the day pleasantly, giving God thanks for his kindness towards us during the year. What shall I render unto the Lord for all his benefits towards me? I will give him my time, my talent, my all, and work in his vineyard as long as I live. Praise God for salvation!"

Notice.

To the Members of the Ministerial Educational Aid Association of the Mississippi Conference—

Dear Brethren: Please do not forget to bring the amount of your notes to Conference with you. The necessity of this has been made apparent too often for me to repeat it. Let those brethren who pledged themselves at Crystal Springs Camp Meeting please bring or send to me the amount of their pledges. B. F. Lewis, Sec.

Our Young People.

AN ALPHABET OF RIVERS.

A stands for the Amazon, mighty and grand,
And the B's Beresina, on Muscovy's strand,
The placid Charles river will fit for the C,
While the beautiful Danube is ready for D.
The E is the Elbe in Denischland far North,
And the first F, I find, strange to say, is the Forth,
The great river Ganges can go for the G,
And for H our blue Hudson will certainly be;
The quaint Irrawaddy for I has its claims,
And the J is the limpid and beautiful James.
The K is for Kama, I know in a jiffy,
And the L is the Loire and the prosperous Liffey.
For M we have plenty to choose from, and well,
There's the noble Missouri, the gentle Moselle,
For N we have Nile, and the Onion is O,
While for P you can choose the gray Pruth or the Po.
The Q is the Quinebaug, one of our own,
But the R comes to front with the Rhine and the Rhone."
For the S there's the Shannon, a beautiful stream,
And the T is the Tiber where Rome reigns supreme.
The Ural, I think, will with U quite agree,
And the turbulent Volga will fit for the V.
The W's Weser, and Xenil is X
(You may find it spelled with a J, in perplex).
Then for Y, Yang tse-kiang is simple and easy,
And to end the long list with a Z, take Zambesi.

Composition.

One day a shabby dressed woman, who had three little children—the smallest one was so small that she had to carry it in her arms—entered a drawing-room car and sat down in the asy chair, for she was tired. In a little while the conductor came along and told her that she would have to go in the emigrant car. A little girl who sat behind her followed her and gave her lunch. The old woman and the children felt happy. But not as happy as the little girl, for she went hungry herself to give to the poor woman. This lesson teaches us that we must be kind to the poor and also to each other.

HELEN M. CROCKER.

MR. EDITOR: As I was admitted in the young folks' department once before, I will try and see if I can gain the same success this time. I enjoy the young folks' letters very much. I have just been reading Dr. Carradine's letter from Venice, and like to read them very much. I think the man that rubbed himself, and did not have the money when he felt for it, must have felt cheap, sure enough. I reckon he will have to pay for two rubbings next time. Bro. Rawls is our pastor this year, and I hope he will be sent back next year. He is such a good preacher. We all like him very much. Well, I reckon I had better stop my letter, or you might not have time to fool with it, and away it would go. So, good-by. With success to the dear old ADVOCATE, I remain,

Your unknown friend,
PRESTON L. BLACKWELL.

MONTROSE, Miss.

MR. EDITOR: My papa has been taking your nice paper for some time, and I have been noticing the nice letters written by the little girls and boys. I have been thinking for some time of writing one myself and surprise papa and mama, but have been just a little afraid it would not be good enough to be published; anyhow I am going to risk it. I have been going to school to Miss Marie and Miss Jessie Bond. I went two months to Miss Marie, and then Miss Jessie came and taught the public school. I dearly love to go. I have a little brother name Ibry, who will write if my letter is published.

Your little friend,
CARRIE BEATTY.

RUSTON, La.

MR. EDITOR: As I have never seen any letters from this little town, I thought I would write one. I am a little boy nine years old. I go to Sabbath-school every Sunday; my teacher is Mr. Watson. Our present pastor is Bro. Reams; we like him very much. I have been going to school three years. Papa has promised to make me pick cotton this autumn for a rest. Our school will begin in September; we are to have a new teacher from Tennessee. I have a sister older than myself, and two younger, and being the only boy gives me a great many errands to do. This being my first, please don't throw it in the waste-basket.

Your little friend,
HOWARD PEEVY.

CALHOUN, La.

MR. EDITOR: As our Conference will soon be in session, I thought I would write a letter to the ADVOCATE, if you will be so kind as to publish it. Oh, Bishop, don't send our faithful and earnest pastor, Bro. N. J. Roberts, away from us next year. I think you would be glad to send him back if you only knew the good he has done here. We have had more preaching here this year than I ever knew, and the best protracted meeting I ever attended. Dear Bishop, I hope you will remember this letter. I am not the only one that thinks so much of our pastor; but it is everyone here.

Your little friend,
MARION HARRISON.

BEAR CREEK, Miss.

How Clintie Said His Prayer.

Clintie was four years old and very full of mischief.

One afternoon his mama, after washing him and putting on a clean suit, told him he might go into the yard and play.

Then she worked away very busily at the sewing-machine, and, after a while, as she was saying to herself, "How good and quiet Clintie is," she heard the door open and shut softly.

She looked up and there stood Clintie, but, oh, what a sight he was—he was covered with soot from head to foot! A few questions from mama brought out the story.

There were a great many old stovepipes in the wood shed, and these had been Clintie's playthings.

So mama at once took off the white pinafore, which was very black indeed. She washed him again and then put him to bed.

"Now," said mama, "you must lie there until tea time; then you may come out and let papa see his naughty little boy with his night dress on in the daytime."

Then she went back to her sewing.

It was about five o'clock in the afternoon, and Clintie was very much ashamed of being in bed in the broad daylight. But he was old enough to know he deserved all the punishment he was getting; but as he had been taught that he was too old to cry aloud like a baby, he cried away softly to himself, thinking he would never, never get into mischief again. Pretty soon the low sobs ceased, and, when mama tip-toed lightly into the room, the white eyelids were shut down tight.

"He will surely wake by tea-time," thought mama, and then, kissing him softly, she closed the door and went back to her work. When papa came to tea, Clintie was still sleeping, and papa said he must not be awakened. So the little fellow slept right on, until at last bedtime came; then his papa and mama went to the little bed, kissed him gently as he lay asleep, and went away to their own room.

In the middle of the night they were awakened by a tiny voice, crying,

"Mama, mama!"

"What is it, Clintie?" was mama's sleepy answer.

"I didn't say my prayer," he wailed.

"Too bad," said mama, still only half awake.

"But I'm going to say it now," he persisted.

Then they heard him tugging and grunting as he climbed out of bed. In a moment his silvery voice piped out the beautiful words of the "Lord's Prayer," which he knew as well as anyone. When the "Amen" was said, they heard his little feet pattering through the large, dark sitting-room.

"I want my good-night kisses," he said.

When they were duly given he trotted back through the dark room alone, mama following softly to "tuck him in," praying as she did so, that he might always keep a conscience so tender that the regret for an unsaid prayer would have power to disturb his slumber.—Christian at Work.

Household.

Why She Wouldn't.

Bob Burdette insists that he overheard a woman lecturing her husband as follows on board a train:

"Now, I'll tell you why I wouldn't go into the restaurant and have a cup of coffee with you while we were waiting for the train. I didn't like the way you asked me. Keep quiet; I have the floor! Not half an hour before, you said to Mr. Puffer, 'Come, let's get a cigar.' And away you went, holding his arm, and not giving him a chance to decline. When we met John O'Hardy on our way to luncheon, you said, 'Just in time, John; come, take lunch with us.' And then, to-night, when we found the train an hour late, you looked at your watch, turned to me, and said in a questioning way, 'Would you like a cup of coffee?' And I did want it. I was tired and a little hungry, but I would have fainted before I would have accepted such an invitation. And you went away a little bit vexed with me, and had your coffee and bread and butter by yourself, and didn't enjoy it very much. In effect you said to me: 'If you want a cup of coffee, if you really want it, I will buy it for you.' You are the best husband in the world, but do as nearly all the best husbands do. Why do you men seem to dole things out to your wives, when you fairly throw them to the men you know? Why don't you invite me heartily, as you invite men? Why don't you say, 'Come, let us get a little coffee and something,' and take me right along with you? You wouldn't say to a man, 'Would you like me to buy you a cigar?' Then, why do you always issue your little invitations to treat in that way to me? Indeed, indeed, my dear husband, if men would only act toward their wives as heartily, cordially, frankly, as they do to men whom they meet, they would find dearer companions at home than they could at the club."—Selected.

WHAT IS MY INFLUENCE?—Has the reader ever calmly and seriously considered the question which stands at the head of this article, "What is my influence?"

Are you a parent? Which way are you leading your children by your example? Which way does your life draw them? Are you a merely moral man, priding yourself on your high-toned morality, while at the same time you ignore the gospel? Then you are influencing your companions to regard morality as a passport to heaven. This is the effect of your life on society. Your influence, it is true, moves in a higher circle than that of the vicious, yet it is a circle from which Christ is as effectually excluded and salvation by faith in Christ as truly spurned. Are you a skeptic? One skeptical thought which passes from your lips into the mind of a friend may cause his soul to bristle with the harvest of the rankest infidelity. Are you a votary of the wine-cup? By putting the bottle to your neighbor's lips you may lead him into the foulest degradation and irreparable ruin.

Take care of your influence, dear reader. Walk in company with Jesus. Reflect his light, his life; then you will never have to utter the remorseful exclamation, "Gather up my influence, and bury it with me!" Then will your influence not be like the scar which the lightning leaves on the forest oak.—E. M. Peterson.

A Girl Worth Having.

A few weeks ago I read in your paper Mr Morehead's experience in the Plating Business, in which he cleared $167.85 in a month; but I bent that if I am a girl. I sent as he directed and got a Plater, and cleared $208.17 in one month. Can any of your readers beat this? You can get spoons, forks or jewelery to plate at every house. Send 83 to W. H. Griffith & Co., Zanesville, Ohio, and they will send you a Plater, and you can make money enough in three hours to pay for it, or address them for circulars. There is plenty of work to do in both city and country; then why should any person be poor or out of employment with such an opportunity at hand. I hope my experience will help others as Mr. Morehead's did me.

The Ice-Cap of Greenland.

The aspect of these boundless wastes rolling away in scarcely perceptible undulations, and in the distance mingling the gray of their snows with the gray of the skies, at first gave the impression that Greenland was a uniform plateau, a sort of horizontal table. The belief now prevails that the rocky surface of the land is, on the contrary, carved into mountains and hills, valleys and gorges, but that the plastic snows and ice have gradually filled up all the cavities, which now show only in slight sinuosities on the surface. Allowing to the whole mass of the ice-cap an average thickness of five hundred feet, it would represent a total volume of about one hundred and fifty thousand cubic miles. This sermer suak, or "great ice" of the Greenlanders, flows like asphalt or tar with extreme slowness seaward, while the surface is gradually leveled by the snow falling during the course of ages and distributed by the winds. In the interior of the country the surface of the ice and snow is as smooth as if it were polished, looking like "the undisturbed surface of a frozen ocean, the long but not high billows of which, rolling from east to west, are not easily distinguishable to the eye." Nevertheless, the exterior form of the ice-cap has been greatly diversified, at least on its outer edge, where in many places it is difficult to cross, or even quite impassable. The action of lateral pressure, of heat produced by tremendous friction, of evaporation and filtration, has often broken the surface into innumerable cones a few yards high, in form and color resembling the tents of an encampment.—Popular Science Monthly.

Cotton-Seed Hulls and Meal.

Bulletin No. 3 of the Tennessee Experimental Station contains the investigations of Professor Stone upon the subject of cotton seed as food for cattle. The following are the condensed results:

1. The practice of feeding cotton seed hulls and meal as an exclusive diet is well established and increasing in the vicinity of the cotton seed oil industry. All the information available indicates that the practice is economical and profitable.

2. It seems in no way harmful to the health of the animal nor to the healthfulness of the products (beef and milk) resulting

3. The diet seems adapted both to the production of beef and mutton as well as milk.

4. The average ration should consist of 25 35 pounds of hulls and five-eights pounds of meal daily.

5. The hulls are a cheap and effective substitute for hay.

6. The manure produced by this system of feeding is an important factor in considering its profitableness.

THE COMPASS IN CHINA.—Dr. Edkins thinks the use of the compass by a Chinese envoy to Corea in 1122 is the oldest recorded account of its use by any nation.

The Sung Shu mentions the use of a compass during a dynasty 800 years earlier. It gives the history of the compass and of its first use, which was 1130 B C., to send envoys straight back to their lauds. During the Ts'in and Han dynasties this instrument appears to have been unknown, but one was reconstructed about 50 A. D. During the first Wei dynasty, about 235 A. D., an expert was ordered to make an improved compass. The Western Hur Emperor and the Tangul Emperor, during the fourth century, ordered their officers to construct compasses. These were in the form of a man or vane, and placed upon the roof of a cart. The man's hand held up was the needle, and always pointed to the south irrespective of the direction of the chariot.—Notes in China Review.

Dr. Davis' Compound Syrup of Wild Cherry and Tar has made a name and record in the past fifty years that is enviable. Thousands of people having tried it for coughs, colds, catarrh, asthma, bronchitis and consumption know its value, and would not be without it. Why? Because it cures where other remedies fail. We recommend it for children subject to croup and whooping-cough. It will give relief and cause speedy cure. The medical profession recognize it, and physicians frequently prescribe it for lung troubles. These facts have pushed Davis' Wild Cherry and Tar to the front rank. It is the best remedy for coughs, colds, all throat and lung affections, and no family should be without it. One dollar bottles hold two and a half times as much as a 50c. bottle.

The only reliable vegetable substitute for calomel, which acts on the liver, blood, kidneys and stomach, and best anti-bilious purgative is Maguire's Cundurango. Endorsed by Archbishop Ryan, of Philadelphia; Rev. McNally, of St. Louis, and a host of prominent people.

LESSON XI.—December 14.

JESUS MADE KNOWN.

Luke xxiv. 28-43.

GOLDEN TEXT.—And their eyes were opened, and they knew him.—Luke xxiv, 31.

TIME.—After the resurrection. A. D. 30.

PLACE.—Near Emmaus, in the neighborhood of Jerusalem.

28. Made as though, or was making as though. Our Lord could act no otherwise, if he desired to maintain the character he had hitherto assumed; he would act no otherwise because he desired not merely to enlighten their minds, but also to prove their hearts; he would really have gone further had they not constrained him by the force of love. He probably seemed about to bid them farewell with the usual blessing; but they already felt united to him by so holy a tie that the thought of separation was quite insupportable. They therefore most earnestly besought him (comp. Luke xiv, 23; Acts xvi, 15), and pointed to the declining sun, with a conviction that their spiritual light would also set if they should lose his company.

29. Abide with us; for it is toward evening—"Abide with me," has become the burden of the most popular of evening hymns; the true prayer of the evening of each day; for the evening of each man's life; for the moments when hopes fail and we commune one with another and are sad; for those, also, when our hearts burn within us in the half consciousness that Christ is speaking to us through the lips of human teachers. He went in—We learn from these passages how needful it is to win Christ's presence by praying for it. Our Lord's taking on himself the office of the master of the house... alone would show that it was not their house, but an inn.

30. Sat at meat—Properly, reclined, according to the usual custom. He took bread—He was recognized by the two disciples in breaking of bread. (Ver. 35.) This was not because it reminded them of the last supper, at which the apostles only were present (see on ver. 18), but because our Lord had probably of tenso acted in presiding at the common meals of his disciples.

31. Were opened—Opposed to were holden, ver. 16. It is evident from this that full recognition took place in consequence of the removal of the supernatural impediment which had hitherto prevented it. And they knew him—There he stood, this very Messiah of whom all Scripture was the harbinger; the sufferer, the heir of glory, the judge of the earth. Before this moment he could not reveal himself without disturbing their minds so as to undit their understanding of the Scripture. And now he could reveal himself, to show that his exposition was authoritative and divine, being his own. In the order of time this is the first example of the new conditions of our Lord's risen life. It was not that he rose and left the room in which they sat. In a moment they knew him with all the fulness of recognition; and then they saw him no more. He faded, as it were, from their sight. The work for which he had come to them was done. He had imparted comfort and insight, and had brought them into communion with himself, and then they were to be taught that that communion was no longer to depend, as before, on a visible and localized presence. He vanished—The expression is a peculiarly strong one, implying a sudden and supernatural disappearance. His body was now approaching its glorified condition, and obeyed, more freely than before, the will of his spirit. Moreover we must recollect that, properly speaking, Jesus was already no longer with them (ver. 44), and that the marvel lay rather in his appearance than in his disappearance.

32. While he talked with us—Rather, to us.

33. And they rose—It was about sunset (that is say, about 6 P. M.) when our Lord vanished out of the sight of the disciples at Emmaus. If that place was distant only sixty furlongs from Jerusalem, they may very easily have returned to the city in time to find the apostles assembled together the same evening. We must suppose the sudden revelation of himself to them by our Lord induced them to abandon their plan of remaining all night at Emmaus, in order that they might lose no time in carrying the news of this appearance to the apostles. Rose...hour—Their fatigue is gone, and the darkness with which they deterred and detained their Guest detains not them. They fear no longer the night journey from which they had dissuaded their unknown companion. Returned to Jerusalem—A night walk over a rough, uneven road. The eleven—So called as their official number; but as Thomas was absent and Judas dead, there were but ten. They must have reached the chamber where the eleven were assembled after night-fall.

34. The Lord is risen—In Mark xvi, 13, we read that the other disciples did not believe the report of the two to whom Jesus had appeared in the country. It is quite possible that some were still in doubt, while others confirmed the recital of the two disciples from Emmaus by an account of the appearance to Simon. Such a difference of opinion appears to be hinted at in verse 38. Hath appeared to Simon—Of the manifestation referred to we have no other record in the Gospels. It occupies, however, a prominent place in those which St. Paul enumerates (I. Cor. xv, 5), and takes its place among the phenomena which indicate St. Paul's acquaintance with the substance of St. Luke's gospel. What passed at the meeting we can only reverently imagine.

36. Stood in the midst of them—The words imply a sudden appearance. The eleven, with the exception of Thomas the twin, were sitting at supper with the doors closed, through their fear of the Jews. This is one of the most remarkable appearances of the risen Christ. His intercourse with them on this occasion consisted of a greeting; a reproach and consolation; a demonstration of the reality of his person; an opening of their understandings; an appointment of the apostles to the ministries of remission and witness; a promise of the Spirit, for the fulfillment of which they were to wait in Jerusalem. At the close of this great scene he once more pronounced the benediction of peace, and breathed on them with the words, "Receive the Holy Spirit."

37. A spirit—The body of Jesus was now in a transitional state. We have no experience by which to form a clear idea of this transition, any more than of that to which it tends, the glorified body.

38. Thoughts—Rather, reasonings. He knows even the unuttered thoughts and questionings that are rising in their hearts.

39. Behold my hands and my feet—The test thus offered to the disciples, like that afterward given to Thomas, was to be to them a proof that they were not looking on a specter from the shadow-world of the dead. The resurrection was a reality, not an appearance. The conditions of the problem must remain, however transcendental and mysterious. There is a real corporeity, and yet there is a manifest exemption from the common conditions of corporeal existence. Hath not flesh and bones—"I am not a bodiless spirit" are words attributed to him in Ignatius. From the omission of "blood," with "flesh and bones" very precarious inferences have been drawn.

40. And his feet—Which must therefore have been pierced, and not merely tied to the cross.

41. Believed not for joy—One of the psychological touches of which St. Luke is fond, and profoundly true to nature. Have ye here any meat—Literally, any thing to eat, any food. Here again is an agreement with St. John. A new crucial test is given of the reality of the resurrection body. It could be no shadow or specter that thus asked for food. This we all feel; but the further question, whether there was not only the power to receive food, but a life in any sense dependent upon the laws which govern the bodily life of men, leads us into a region of problems which we can not solve, and on which it is profitless to dwell. What seems suggested is a spiritual existence capable by an act of volition of assuming, in greater or less measure, the conditions of corporeal. We not how the apostles dwelt afterward on what now occurred as a proof of their Lord's resurrection. They had "eaten and drunken with him."

42. A piece of a broiled fish, and of a honeycomb—The fact is interesting as pointing to the comon food of the disciples. Fish, as in the miracles of the five thousand and the four thousand, seems to have been the staple article of diet. Honey, as in the proverbial speech which described Canaan as a land flowing with milk and honey, common enough to enter into the diet of the poor.

43. And did eat before them—This was one of the "infallible proofs" appealed to in Acts i, 3. Of these demonstrations we must in reason say that this was the appropriate evidence of a genuine resurrection; and yet more, that it was shaped by the Lord and given thus to his disciples for avowed purpose of proving it. This brings the evidence to the point of perfect demonstration. Say what we may choose to say about deceptions practiced upon the senses or possible to the senses, all that can never shake this testimony; because here it is simply certain that Jesus meant to prove to his disciples his own actual resurrection. If he was honest, his resurrection was real. This, it should be noticed, is the perfection of testimony. The disciples could say, "We believed only what Jesus sought to make us believe—only what he compelled us to believe."

Public Opinion against the Lottery.

Public opinion is against the Lottery monopoly because its evil tendencies are far-reaching and demoralizing; because it is a gambling institution, a non-producer, which absorbs the earning of the many to enrich the few, in whose interest it is manipulated and controlled.

Public opinion is against the combine because the agents and hirelings of this autocrat monopoly of legalized gambling have been scattered over every section of Louisiana to influence, if possible, the approval of the people to their scheme of perpetuation.

Public opinion is against the combine because the leaders imagine that every man in the State has a fixed price and is opened for purchase, somewhat in the style of buying hogs, cattle or merchandise.

Public opinion is against the Lottery because, being a corruptor of morals, it judges all men by its standard and has, apparently, little regard for virtue and honor among men.—Caucasian.

Irritating Medicines.

"For diseases, unless they are extremely dangerous, must not be irritated by medicines." This is sound doctrine, if it is old. Now there is a well-known remedy, neither a drug nor medicine. It is as easy to take as to breathe, in fact it is inhaled into the lungs. It is the Compound Oxygen Treatment of DRS. STARKEY & PALEN. We have a vast number of testimonials. You can obtain them free of charge, by writing us either a letter or postal card. Don't fail to send for our brochure. It is no medical almanac, with the signs of the Zodiack, and old jokes, but a well-written and thoughtful medical work, the result of years of study and experience. There is evidence enough to convince all the juries in the country. Address DRS. STARKEY & PALEN, 1520 Arch Street, Philadelphia, Pa., or 120 Sutter Street, San Francisco, Cal.

God is Alpha and Omega in the great world; endeavor to make him so in the little world; make him thy evening epilogue, and thy morning prologue, practice to make him thy last thought at night when thou sleepest; and thy first thought in the morning when thou awakest; so shall thy fancy be sanctified in the night, and thy understanding rectified in the day, so shall thy rest be peaceful, thy labors prosperous, thy life pious, and thy death glorious.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease, and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven Catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and, therefore, requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure in the market. It is taken internally in doses from ten drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address,

The Salvation Army.

The heads of the Salvation Army were in session in Chicago, December 1, with a view to extending the operations of the army into the West. Up to date the headquarters have been located in New York, and the operations confined mostly to the Eastern cities. General Ballington Booth, commanding the forces, has determined to carry the war into the interior, and may transfer his camp to Chicago. St. Paul, Kansas City, St. Louis and New Orleans will all be strengthened by reinforcements. There are now 1,100 commissioned officers in the army.—New Delta.

An Old Soldier.

HEAR HIS STORY.

NEW ORLEANS, Nov 22, 1890.

I, William A. Smith, member of Company 3, Thirtieth Louisiana Regiment, Army of Tennessee, was wounded in the left lung on the 18th day of December, 1864. As a result of that wound I have suffered since then with hemorrhages and have tried everything in God's world in the shape of medicine to cure me, but everything failed that the doctors gave me. But I have found a cure at last. I have been taking Dr. King's Royal Germetuer for five weeks, and I am now a well man. I have not had a hemorrhage since I commenced taking it. Anyone doubting this can call and see me at No. 5 Park avenue, Sixth District, New Orleans.

WM. A. SMITH.

I refer to Judge J. U. Landry, who was my lieutenant during the war, and who is thoroughly acquainted with my case, and who will verify this statement. W. A. S.

The above testimony is but one out of many thousands which assert the matchless power of this wonderful preparation. The worst cases of fever—Swamp Fever, Typho-Malarial, Typhoid and Chagres Fever—yield every time to its proper use. Rheumatism, Neuralgia and Catarrh give way before it. As an appetizer and general tonic there is nothing like it. For sale by all druggists. Call at the Germetuer office, 202 Canal street, and investigate to your perfect satisfaction.

A consulting physician is on hand, who will make medical examinations and give consultation and advice free. Office hours: 9 a. m. to 2 p. m.

DONALD KENNEDY

Of Roxbury, Mass., says

I have kept a Scrap Book for a good many years of letters received from patients; some are long, too long to publish; some are short, short and good. Rainy days I sit down and read them, and have learned a good deal about the human body from some poor, sickly woman or overstrained man. Here is one of them. I call it a good letter:

TRENTON, TEXAS, Sept. 28, 1886.

"To Kennedy of the Medical Discovery, Roxbury, Mass. I am so proud of my recovery as to express my feelings in thanks to you. The RHEUMATISM has made me four-legged for six years. At last I have traded off two of them to Bell—Druggist—for four bottles of Kennedy's Discovery. I am yours, gratefully and unsolicited, J. B. IVY."

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

DOMESTIC.

The second session of the Fifty-first Congress began on December 1.

President Harrison's message to Congress at its opening, on the first instant, was very long. He stands by the pension appropriations, and applauds the McKinley Tariff bill, while the enactment of an election law is energetically demanded. Steamship subsidies are recommended as a means of extending commerce, also an international copyright protection to authors, and the enactment of a national bankrupt law is regarded by the President as "very desirable."

A Brazilian fleet sailed into New York harbor on November 26, and was received by a squadron of the United States Navy, and courtesies were interchanged. From New York the fleet sailed for Washington, and the officers were tendered a reception by President and Mrs. Harrison.

The steamboat T. P. Leathers, while under way, took fire in mid-stream near Fort Adams, Miss., on November 27, at half-past eleven A. M. The boat and cargo a total loss. The freight consisted of 2,700 bales of cotton and 1,400 sacks of seed. About six lives lost.

At the Eastern Park, Brooklyn, on November 27, a grand stand collapsed, carrying down with it about 2,000 people who had assembled to witness the Yale-Princeton foot-ball game. About fifty were injured.

Five of the Irish envoys now in America have issued a manifesto condemning Parnell, saying that his leadership opens an impassable gulf between the representatives of Ireland and the liberal party, and that the recent manifesto of Mr. Parnell cut off the Irish party from all hope of success while under his leadership. He is, therefore, ruled out.

Miners in the Birmingham district (Ala.) quit work on November 29. It is said that all the mining industries of the South will be affected.

The Southern Lumberman's Manufacturers' Association has issued a call to its members to meet in this city on the ninth instant. All questions of interest to the yellow pine trade will be considered.

The express car on the west-bound train of the Georgia Pacific was robbed near Indianola, Miss., November 29, by one man, who, compelling the mail and express agents to throw up their hands, ransacked the safe. The robber was captured and jailed at West Point.

According to the report of the comptroller of the currency the number of national banks organized during the year ending October 31, 1890, in Alabama was five, with capital of $350,000; in Arkansas one, with $50,000 capital; in Louisiana four, with $650,000 capital; in Florida one, with $100,000 capital.

FOREIGN.

The German government has placed at the disposal of Prof. Koch sufficient funds to enable him to continue his inquiries and produce the lymph. There is now good ground to hope that the remedy would be found to be efficacious in the treatment of other diseases than tuberculosis. Care has been taken to make the remedy perfectly accessible to the poor. In the course of time the preparation of the lymph would be entrusted to competent persons employed by the State. A private gentleman had given 1,000,000 marks, the money to be used for the benefit of poor persons suffering from tuberculosis.

General Booth's remarkable scheme of salvation is meeting with great favor in all classes of the community. In addition to the donation made by the Duke of Fife, many noblemen have sent contributions, and there is little doubt that the £100,000 asked for by this singular man will be forthcoming.

On account of Mr. Parnell's connection with divorce proceedings, the result of which placed him in an unenviable position, there is a general demand for his retirement.

Mr. Balfour, chief secretary for Ireland, introduced the Irish land bill in the House of Commons on November 27. He said the government's policy was the same as in 1889, but for simplicity the bill had been cut in half. One variation of the present bill from that of last year was that it met in some degree Mr. Parnell's views. Mr. Parnell had suggested that the privilege of purchase be confined to tenants whose holdings were under £50 valuation. Though he (Mr Balfour) could not accept exactly that limitation, he had altered the scope of the bill by excluding all purely grazing farms and farms whose tenants did not reside on them.

Colonel Chaille-Long, the Franco-American general of General Gordon's campaign in the Soudan during 1874, in an interview, calls the rescue of Emin Pasha a philanthropic masquerade, and generally questions the truth of Stanley's accounts of his journey. Colonel Long predicts that Stanley will be found to have been guilty of imposture and disloyalty, and challenges an answer to his assertions.

The German Reichstag will be asked for 50,000,000 marks for the army, part of which is to provide new munitions and part to alter the color of the uniforms, in order to render the movements of troops less distinct. Henceforth no glitter of head piece of arms will be permitted. A sombre uniform is a necessity under the new tactics.

Oh, stop that toothache! Johnson's Anodyne Liniment will relieve any severe pain promptly.

The day is near at hand when all persons of any enterprising spirit will say with one voice that there are no prospects whatever for the one who does not advertise. The expense it involves will be put in with the amount of needed capital.—T. H. Cahill.

Salvation Oil, the great pain destroyor, should be kept in every family. 25 cents.

Financial Review.

Notwithstanding the recent severely strained financial situation at home and abroad, the general business of the country has not only been very active, but unprecedentedly large. It is, however, probable that after the heavy liquidation that has taken place in speculative values some shrinkage may ensue for a short while in the near future in the activity of business.

Locally, as usual at the close of the month, the movement in a wholesale and jobbing way has been limited, while cotton has been fairly active, rice slow, and the receipts and sales of sugar and molasses the largest on record according to the statistics of the Louisiana Sugar and Rice Exchange. Money has continued in good demand and firm, but not so close, though small currency is so scarce that gold coin has to be paid over the bank counters in some instances to accommodate customers. Securities have been moderately active, especially for most favorite values, which have generally been firmly maintained, especially for Louisiana 4s and premium bonds, which show a material advance over last week's figures.—Times-Democrat.

If your house is on fire, you put water on the burning timbers, not on the smoke. And if you have catarrh you should attack the disease in the blood, not in your nose. To do this, take Hood's Sarsaparilla, the great blood purifier, which permanently cures catarrh.

Greenville District.

Soon our Annual Conference will convene at Grenada. So far as we can learn, this has been a prosperous year all over the Conference, both materially and spiritually. New churches, new parsonages, churches and parsonages improved, and great revivals of religion are reported from many places. The Greenville district has had a very prosperous year, notwithstanding the overflow in the spring. There has been marked advancement in the religious sentiment of this country. Our preachers have been outspoken in their condemnation of certain forms of worldliness which have heretofore been, to some degree, passed over. The result shows a growth of public sentiment against worldliness. Along with this there is a desire among Christians to attain a higher spiritual life. Prayer meetings, auxiliaries to W. M. S., and family altars are multiplied. This valley presents the most interesting field in Southern Methodism. It is destined, within a very few years, to be the richest section of North America. There will soon be a perfect network of railroads all over it. The interests will be so great that we can not afford to have an overflow. The levees will be put in a condition to hold any flood which may be poured out upon us. That this can be done is evident from the advancement made in the last eight years in the levee system of the lower Mississippi. In 1882 there were 800 miles of levee and sixty-four miles of breaks. In 1890, with an equal flood, there were 1,100 miles of levee and four miles of breaks, and but a small per cent. of this in the levees of the Yazoo-Mississippi Delta; and this done, too, with a fund recognized to be wholly inadequate, and with comparatively no help from the general government. Now, on account of the enhancement of property values, our fund from taxation is larger, and, besides, the general government is taking more interest in this portion of the levee system than ever before. It is safe to predict that we have had our last overflow. That this confidence is generally felt by those who are in position to know, is manifest by the immense investments which are being made in valley lands, and in the improvements which are everywhere to be seen.

We have here a very excellent class of people—the opinion of people abroad to the contrary notwithstanding. I remember, when I returned home from the Conference which gave me my first appointment in the valley, that a good brother said:

"Well, John, where did they send you?"

"To the Mississippi bottom."

"Going to preach to heathen, eh?"

This brother represents a very large class who imagine that the people of the "swamps," as they term it, are a lot of barbarians. No greater mistake was ever made. You will find no more intelligent, refined and hospitable people anywhere, and their liberality is almost unprecedented.

Methodism is in the ascendency all over this valley. Our fathers planted well. The great work to be done now is the reaping; holding the ground already won. To do this we must have churches, good churches; and in the building of these, we must have an eye to the future. A house which meets the requirements of a town of to-day will not do for the same town five years hence. Our houses ought to be built five years ahead of our congregations. You understand my idea. But the question arises, How are we to do this? Here is the place for our Church Extension Society to do some of its best work. This field is more important than the West, because it will soon be able to do more than the West. Build up this field, and it will soon be a great factor for building up other fields. Build up the West, and the best we can expect of it is that it will be self-supporting. But the question will be asked, Why can not your liberal people do this work themselves? Examine the statistics, and you will find that they have done much. But more is needed than the people can do. Remember that a constantly increasing stream of emigration, of the very best class of people, is pouring into this country. The denomination which meets them with a good house of worship, and a Sunday-school for their children, while they recuperate their broken fortunes, will ever have their tender regard, to say the very least. There is much in being the first on the ground. Many men will subscribe to any denomination to get a church in their town. If we go to such a town—and they are numerous—with a donation of $150 and a loan of $350, we can, without trouble, secure enough to build a handsome church. Then we are planted. When others come, the people say: "We have a church. We are able to support but one; therefore, there is no room for another." And, although the new-comer may be the church of his choice, he supports the other church.

We have here also the finest field for work to be found anywhere. A year's work, or a dollar invested here, will bring greater returns than any place of which we know. The young men of this generation will see Methodism a mighty power in this valley, if we make no mistake. It will bring joy to our hearts, as we look upon its progress, to know that we have had part in the work. We will need a few good men next year, in addition to our present force. These will be needed for places which can not be surpassed in the Conference. In fact, there is not a poor appointment in the district.

Mr. Editor, I hope to see you at Conference. J. A. RANDOLPH.

How to Save the Children.

The great and principal aim in Sunday-school work is the salvation of the children. The growth of the church shows that this is being accomplished, but to a limited extent. Why the seven million pupils now attending Sunday-school are not converted, is a difficult question to answer. It may be, because pastors, parents and Sunday-school workers fail to use wisely the means of grace within their reach. Seldom do pastors catechise the children, either at home or in church, as many did formerly.

The parents, to a great extent, neglect the religious training of their children, and teachers often perform their duties in an indifferent, careless, thoughtless, prayerless way.

How to remedy this sad state of affairs is easy. Let the pastor in visiting his people not leave a house where are children without seeing that they understand their need of a Savior and his plan to save them. The pastor should know the spiritual condition of each child of his charge as well as of the adults. He should not rest until all his lambs are safely sheltered in the church. He should cause the parents to feel their religious responsibility concerning their offspring. The pastor, in holding devotional exercises with the family, should not only insist upon the adult members being present, but the children, and in his exposition of the chapter of the Bible which he reads should endeavor to feed all the household with the "bread of life."

The parents should recognize the spiritual need of their children, that their souls are to be cultivated as well as their minds. While the children are young they should be taught the truths of the Bible; not only should they read it, but they must be instructed in the way of salvation. They understand the great facts of redemption at a very early age. The Holy Spirit works in their little minds, simplifying the things of God to their understanding. Every day parents should gather their household at the family altar when each one should be given their needed portion of spiritual food. Opportunity should be sought daily for individual conversation with each child about their soul's welfare. Stated times should be used for teaching the Sunday-school lesson of the following Sunday. Not merely asking questions in the lesson papers, but seeking to impress the spiritual thought of the lesson on the heart of the children. On Sundays the children should be catechised as to the sermons they have heard that day, as to Scripture lessons read, hymns sung, and text. All this should be done, not as a duty, but pleasantly, joyously, interestingly.

The Sunday-school superintendent should take special pains to know that each teacher of his school is teaching, not only the historical, geographical and biographical part of the lesson, but the gospel as its distinctive feature.

Teachers have no business undertaking this responsible work unless they are converted. They should spend hours each week in praying for the conversion of their scholars and for ability to properly teach the lesson. The burden of souls should rest upon the teacher's heart. The constant visiting of scholars by superintendent and teachers will bring the latter into close contact with the lives of the children, and enable the teacher to apply the truths of the lesson to the condition and experience of the pupils.

In these efforts, as in all other soul-saving work, nothing results so favorably as personal work. Each child should be sought out alone, so that the inner heart may be discovered and reached, and the child saved. If these means are persistently used and earnest prayer offered for the salvation of the children, not many precious scholars would be lost. M.

The Last Round.

None but the Methodist itinerant can know of the various emotions brought into exercise during the last round on a circuit. Sometimes sorrowful, sometimes joyful, and sometimes it is a mingled cup; but, let it be as it may, it soon and often comes. Oh! how short the year! how much to do! and how little done! and Conference is at the door.

Well, while I have some things to regret, I want to say I have some good news to tell for St. Helena circuit. Our former meetings have been already reported. But I must say something about one just held at a new church just built, which we call Wesley Chapel, in honor of the founder of Methodism, and also of John Wesley McLean, the principal mover in this enterprise.

On the fourth Sunday in November, after filling my last appointment at the old Darlington Church, I went in the afternoon to fill my first and, as I thought, my last one in the new church. On my arrival I found a fair audience awaiting me. Among them was my faithful stand-by, Bro. Carroll, who has been preaching at a school-house near by during the year, and who has added much to the spiritual building, and who had come over to attend the first service in the new church. Finding the people somewhat at leisure, and the weather open, we concluded to continue the meeting a few days, which we did, with the most happy results.

On Wednesday we called together the members of the church living in the vicinity, and formed a society of thirty-five members, to which twelve new members were added, among whom were two old couples who had passed their "threescore years and ten."

Several old neighborhood and family troubles were settled, and all feel that a beginning of better times has come, and that a "Bethel" has been erected in their midst.

Bros. Carroll, Haney, and Van Valkenburgh, Jr., were with us, and did effective work, and much endeared themselves to our people.

This is our second year on the work, and the following is something of what has been accomplished in the good cause, viz: one new church built, two old ones repaired and two painted, with some needed repairs on the parsonage and lot. Eighty-eight members have been received, many have professed faith in Christ, and the church in some places much improved, spiritually; quite a number have removed by letter, and twenty-two have died during these two years, and yet we are on the increase.

Our country is growing in population and material improvement, and the church is, in some measure, keeping pace with the times.

I am trying to collect for the ADVOCATE, and am sorry to confess that we are not up to time in this matter. The main trouble is cheap papers, and a want of appreciation of religious literature. What is the remedy for these evils? P. HOWARD.

In Memoriam.

W. T. SHELL, NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

Rev. W. Thomas Shell, son of Thomas H. and Mary C. M. Shell, was born in Yazoo county, Miss., February 27, 1838, where he grew up to manhood. The late war coming on, we find him in the Virginia army, in Col. W. H. Luce's regiment. During his service in the Confederate Army, he lost a leg at Sharpsburg.

August 7, 1866, he was married to Miss Carrie S. Powell. From this marriage came four children, of whom a son and daughter survive.

Bro. Shell was converted in August, 1871, and soon afterwards was licensed to preach. Joining the Mississippi Conference, he afterwards located.

In 1879 he supplied Lake, Lee and Leota, North Mississippi Conference. In 1880, 1881 and 1882 he supplied Belzona charge, same Conference. During the year 1882 he remained in the Yazoo Delta, and was subjected to all the hardships of the disastrous overflow of that year. In 1883 he supplied Sidon and Sheppardtown, where he again passed through another overflow. In November, 1883, he was "readmitted" into the North Mississippi Conference, in session at Oxford, and was appointed to Indian Village, where he was subjected to the hardships of another overflow. In 1885 he labored on the Jones' Bayou work. In 1886 he served the Old Town work, in Calhoun county. At the West Point Conference, in December, 1886, he was appointed to serve the Saltillo circuit, to which charge he was three times reappointed.

During the month of July, 1889, in the midst of the arduous summer labors of a large circuit, he was taken with the malady which finally ended his life; and for twelve months, although he bravely attempted to perform his duties as a preacher, he was never well again. After a year's suffering he at last passed to rest, Monday, June 30, 1890, near Saltillo, Miss.

It was the fortune of the writer to know Bro. Shell for nearly seven years. He was uniformly bright, hopeful, happy, full of faith and love.

In company with our presiding elder and his wife, the writer visited him two weeks before his death. After prayer with him, we sang that old hymn, "When I can read my title clear." During the singing our brother's heart overflowed with praise to God.

Bro. Shell belonged to that class of men who have made Methodism what it is, and without whom it must speedily pass away as a church reaching out for and saving the poor. He followed the steps of the great Teacher as a preacher of righteousness to the lowly. He belonged to that class of men who save many souls on small salaries. During the seven years in which his reports are recorded in our Minutes, hundreds were converted and added to the church. During that time he moved five times, sometimes moving hundreds of miles. He also passed through three destructive overflows in the Mississippi bottom; yet he—a cripple, too—did heroic work, and supported himself and family on an average salary of $265.

That apparently prosaic fact tells a tale of courage and self-sacrifice far more eloquent than mere speech can ever be. All honor to the men of our Conferences who do the work of Christ for the love of Christ! Such was the history of the subject of this notice. Cheerful, happy, hopeful, doing and giving all for the love of Christ.

He leaves a needy family to the care of that church for which he lived and labored. N. G. AUGUSTUS.

A Pointed Parenthesis.

Some people get mad and vow they will never again hear a certain preacher; and, having so vowed, they stick to their vow. "I am a man of my word," said one of them, "and I said I would not hear him again, and I won't. I'll keep my word." But what about that solemn vow made years ago to "attend upon the ordinances of the church?" Was he a man of his word then? Is a vow made to self, or a vow made to the devil, more binding than the vow made to God in the presence of the great congregation? Does the white heat of passion weld and rivet the one more than the other, made calmly, deliberately, solemnly and in the fear of God?

Some of them get mad and will not pay the preacher, and so beat the presiding elder out of his salary, too; or else they get mad at the presiding elder and refuse to pay the preacher, lest the presiding elder should get a dime out of the dollar. They get mad, and think getting mad settles the whole question and authorizes them to sit in judgment on their own complaint against the preacher, or the presiding elder, and to render a verdict always against both the preachers as well as the church and the remainder of the world. Then they proceed to execute their own sentence by a sort of ecclesiastical lynch law. It looks like they would be glad to settle with the merchant and the doctor in the same way, and, no doubt, would if there were no courts nor lawyers nor jails in the land. But the preacher's salary can be held back and the delinquent pass for an honest man—"a man of his word"—in the community. He got mad and settled with his preacher by getting mad. That settles everything—so he thinks. But in the high court of heaven there will be another hearing, and God will be the judge to hear and to determine. Getting mad will not do then. The man who hides behind his temper now will then (if not before) learn that it is better to keep cool and be honest. T. L. MELLEN, P. E.

Letter from Mexico.

MR. EDITOR: I can imagine you all at home sitting round a cheerful fire while I sit wrapped in shawls, and my teeth chattering with the cold. Yesterday I lighted a lamp, and sat near it, trying to imagine the little flame afforded some warmth. For nearly a week we have had cold, gloomy weather, and no sun. Many predict much sickness; and, indeed, we have plenty of colds and pneumonia now. Our brother in the Mission House is still detained by the illness of his little boy—all packed and ready to start—but the child is not able to be moved yet. This is a trial state, and I feel very much for them. The dear Lord gives strength and grace to supply their need. Our pastor has not arrived, owing to sickness in his family. We trust he will come this week, and all things be arranged for work. The school being dismissed, has given me a spare hour or two to indulge a little home-sickness, which is not best for us.

Mr. Weems is away on his district. When he comes in Monday morning he will have to go to work on the Evangelista, as the editor is in the States, and left Mr. Weems with the elephant on his hands. I judge it takes a good many indispensable things to make a good paper when you thoroughly comprehend the language; but to run one in a foreign language is an undertaking. However, if the dear Lord will furnish the readers grace, the experience will be good for Mr. Weems, and he, at least in this particular, can say he has done the very best he could. Work, and plenty of it, is what we want, and have in this field.

We will have a talk in our church to-night by one of our Mexican sisters, who has been to Rome and just returned. She will tell of the wonders she saw. She is a good Christian, and will make a good worker. How much I wish some of our Christian friends would employ her as a Bible woman for our new church!

I feel very thankful that the dear children are becoming interested in our church in Mexico. A dear mother in Israel talked to her grandchildren and children, and they were so interested that in a few days they brought this dear sister $11 for this good cause. This dear woman has been a leader and blessing to the church in Caseyville for many long years, and I learned to call her home the "itinerant's rest," for there all ministers found a home and Christian cheer. When in the dear home-land, we had our hearts cheered by her and her noble Christian husband, and they have not forgotten us in Mexico. May God bless them, their children and children's children, and may the bricks placed in our church by them prove more enduring in blessing to this sin-cursed land than any marble shaft ever could at home! Let others follow their example.

I trust our people knew this Endowment Fund is for the support of our old superannuated preachers, and the widows and orphans of our deceased preachers. The principal of this fund is never to be appropriated. The interest only is to be used. Let all our people contribute to this worthy cause. Let the rich give largely, but let all the poor pay what they can. If I can not reach every community in person, please send me your contributions by money order on Jackson, Miss. If you can not pay something before Conference, drop me a postal, and get one, two or more notes, and sign them for any amount. Notes are made payable on December 1 of each year, and the notes are forfeited after the death of the parties; so that our friends need have no fears of having their estate involved thereby. Let me hear from all the friends of our old preachers right away, before our Conference meets on the seventeenth. My post-office is Jackson, Miss.

W. W. HOPPER, Agent.

Notice.

To the Brethren of the Mississippi Conference:

Our general secretary of missions, Dr. Morrison, expects to be with us the first two days of our Conference session. We must have our anniversary not later than Thursday night. Brethren, please be ready to hand in all moneys for missions, Wednesday evening; and may God grant you all good success in the laudable effort to exceed the assessments. Otherwise, there will be suffering among laborious workers in our hardest fields. One brother of whom I know, who has stretched himself to his utmost might on a wide circuit (which should have had an appropriation, and which he and the presiding elder thought was so provided), will get nothing unless our collections far exceed former years. Will not one and all strain several points to bring up something beyond the "minimum"?

J. P. DRAKE,
Sec. B'd of Missions, Miss. Conf.

Mississippi Conference Notice.

Parties attending the Conference, to be held at Canton, December 17, will purchase regular tickets, taking certificates of all agents where tickets may be purchased. Upon the presentation of these certificates, tickets for return will be sold at one-third regular rates.

Parties coming over the L. and N. railroad will procure tickets via New Orleans. Tickets good to return till December 26.

These rates apply on all roads except the Mobile and Ohio, from which I have not been able to get any reply.

The hours of the arrival of the trains in Canton are 6 P. M. and 3 A. M. The afternoon train from Vicksburg does not make connection with the evening train for Canton.

All classes and committees will meet at the court-house in Canton.

"NOT AS I WILL."

BY HELEN HUNT JACKSON.

Blind-folded and alone I stand
With unknown thresholds on each hand;
The darkness deepens as I grope,
Afraid to fear, afraid to hope:
Yet this one thing I learn to know
Each day more surely as I go,
That doors are opened, ways are made,
Burdens are lifted or are laid
By some great law unseen, and still Unfathomed purpose to fulfil,
"Not as I will."

Blind-folded and alone I wait;
Loss seems too bitter, gain too late;
Too heavy burdens in the load,
And joy is weak and grief is strong,
And years and days so long, so long;
Yet this one thing I learn to know
Each day more surely as I go,
That I am glad the good and ill
By changeless law are ordered still
"Not as I will."

"Not as I will," the sound grows sweet
Each time my lips the words repeat,
"Not as I will," the darkness feels
More safe than light when this thought steals
Like whispered voice to calm and bless
All unrest and all loneliness.
"Not as I will," because the One
Who loved us first and best has gone
Before us on the road, and still
For us must all his love fulfil—
"Not as we will."

Letter from China.

Dear Christian Friends: No doubt you have heard the saying, "When you have got something to say, say it, and don't be all day about it." From this it is easy to draw the inference that if a body has nothing to say, that the wisest and best policy is to keep his mouth shut. Well, this morning I feel as if I had a message for you; but whether I prove happy in delivering it, or in making myself understood at all, remains to be seen. I have been here a little over two years, and while you have not heard from me often, still it has not been indifference that has kept me silent. Like a good many things in this world, the commodity "advice" is very abundant (sometimes I think a little too much so), and often it can be had for the asking, and not unfrequently it may be given unsolicited and unsought. Well, I have had a little chip off of the old block bestowed upon me. It has somewhat of this appearance: "Stay in China, one, two, three or, perhaps, more years; keep eyes, heart and ears open and your mouth shut; if you have opinions, keep them to yourself," which sage counsel I have tried to imbibe and abide by. But while, in the main, this is an excellent prescription, yet if adhered to too closely, it will prove detrimental both to the receiver and the administrator. While I have been in this inhibition period, I find myself getting out of touch and sympathy with you, my dear friends, simply because you don't know me, what my aspirations are and what I am doing. This ought not to be so, for, indeed, we are one family trying to magnify and glorify the name of one common Father; so this morning I feel tempted to say that hereafter you shall hear from me occasionally, even though I may sometimes make statements that in the future, because of greater knowledge and enlightenment, I may have to retract, and if I prove a prosy, dull letter-writer, you will have to bear with me, for, indeed, my "intentions" are good.

We, who are stationed in Shanghai, have had "Doo-fok-chi," as the Chinese would say, because this year we have had two Conferences in our midst. In May, as you know, the "General Conference" convened here, and the Lord gave us a blessing and the Holy Spirit brooded over the assembly in great power. There went forth from that body of over four hundred earnest Christian men and women a great cry to the "Lord of the harvest" to send forth other laborers to this needy field. This petition went up to the throne of grace, not from enthusiasts, but from those who had borne the heat and burden of the day; from those who are in the midst of the noonday sun of labor and trial of missionary experience, and from those who are just beginning to engage in this battle against sin and superstition. Missionaries from all countries, and who have passed through all phases of life (and there were those present who knew what it meant to stand persecution, ridicule, and to risk even life itself), united in asking the God of all comfort and grace to thrust out other helpers. If you could have heard the prayers that went up to God from white-headed men, men who have given their youth, vigorous manhood, and are spending their last declining years to give this people the knowledge of God; if you could have seen their faces lit up with a holy joy and peace as they spoke of God's love and help to them through all the various vicissitudes of long missionary years of life, you would have understood, in a faint degree, how much they meant those prayers when they prayed that God would send forth other laborers. I believe that if anyone of them had been asked, "If you had to live your life over, would you cast in your lot with the people of God, though a mere handful, in China?" I believe truly that he unhesitatingly would have replied in the affirmative. It is not a mere sentiment that calls men and women to this work, but the love of God working in their hearts. We feel that we have a good thing—aye, the best thing—a power so transforming and uplifting that even though we be the vilest of the vile, that through this influence of the love of God upon our hearts, we are made fit vessels for the Master's use, and it is the desire, and I may say unselfishness, that prompts us to come and impart this great blessing, this transforming power to a people who sit in darkness and the shadow of death. If we believe that Christianity is the power by which the world is to be saved, how can we sit quietly by and not lift a finger to tell the numberless multitudes all around us that there is a God who can save them, save them in time and prepare them for eternity?

But I am digressing. I want to make a point, and, perhaps, it will be necessary for me to make several small ones before I reach the important one. As a result of this praying to God for more laborers, there were sent forth to the churches in Christian lands several appeals. I supplied the presiding elders of the Mississippi Conference with them, and I suppose that ere this most of you are familiar with their contents. I sent them, praying that God would use them to stir some heart to the great needs of this China-land. Shall my prayers be in vain? I believe not.

Not only have we in Shanghai been blessed by having the "General Conference" meet within our borders, but we (I speak in a more specific sense now) have just closed the sessions of a most delightful and harmonious Annual Conference and annual meeting. Both were presided over by Bishop A. W. Wilson. The Annual Conference held its opening session at ten o'clock, October 15; the ladies' opening session was held in the parlor of "McTyeire Home and School" on Thursday, October 16, at two P. M.; both bodies closed October 21. Even after the appointments were read, while there were some solemn-looking faces, there was no weeping done, even by the ladies. "If one may speak for others," as I heard a good brother say yesterday, I think that we have a mighty fine Bishop over in this part of the country at present. During the sessions of these two bodies Bishop Wilson called two joint meetings for the purpose of considering any questions that might relate to the workings of both sides, and to discuss any points that might have a peculiarly common interest. At the last session, Rev. M. B. Hill proposed that we should organize a prayer circle to pray especially for each other's work, and to present the cause of this people before the throne of grace, also that we should pray for more laborers. This proposition met the approval of all (I may say here that every member of the mission in China attended Conference this year), and after discussion as to the most suitable time for holding such a service, Saturday, from 7:30 to 8:30 o'clock P. M., was chosen. A committee was appointed to select topics for these hours of waiting before God. The topics for this fourth quarter of the year have been selected, and under every Saturday night I see this heading, "Pray for more laborers." On general principles I believe that a Christian ought both to have faith and to work; but last Saturday night, while we were gathered together praying for an increase of force, it was impressed upon me very forcibly that, perhaps, I had a personal duty in the matter; that if I prayed for reinforcements, that I also ought to strive to induce them to come; so here is the outcome of this conviction. In reading a little book, a few weeks ago, this sentence impressed me very greatly: "There are few prayers where we do not have something to do with the answering." I believe it. God does not do his part and ours, too. If laborers come to China, there must not only be the prayers for them, but also there must be presented to the home church the need and the demand for more helpers. Friends, the need is great; how great only God could tell. Feeling as I do the great need of this people, what could be more natural than that I should look to the States, where I received the first kindlings of the mighty love of God in my heart, and where so many of my heart's dearest hopes and desires cluster, to come over and help us? Surely there are those in Mississippi and Louisiana who are just waiting for the command, "Go ye, therefore, and teach all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost . . . and lo! I am with you alway, even unto the end of the world. Amen!"

I don't say that you will see the results of your labors or that you will gather in the fruits, but I can assure you of this—that there will be joy and peace in doing the will of the Father; and although we may not see, yet the promise is that the Word of the Lord shall not return unto him void.

In our mission there is not a minister from Mississippi and Louisiana, and only three ladies from those States. Assuredly there must be some who are ready to come. I can assure you that there awaits you a warm, hearty handgrasp from one in this Celestial Empire. I am quite convinced of this: that if the impetus should once be given in either Conference Chinaward, that the ball set rolling would not soon stop. I know that there is consecration, and if the needs of missions once gets hold of you, you are not the people to neglect the call of the "Most High God."

What a wonderful power thorough knowledge of either people or lines of work has in influencing others! As an illustration: "Thirty years ago, and over, Dr. Y. J. Allen, of Georgia, came to China. He kept himself before the people, and especially before the eyes of Georgia. The Methodists of that State, very largely through him, became imbued with the missionary spirit, and, as a consequence of this familiarity on mission subjects, there are more Georgians on the field than there are representatives of all the other Conferences, all told. It goes without saying that every new recruit merely broadens the waves of influence already set in motion. Who will be the "Allen" from Mississippi to set this wave of influence going?

Praying that soon there may be a response heard from the beloved Mississippi and Louisiana, I am, yours, dear friends, in his service.

SHANGHAI, China.

A Round of Camp Meetings.

I promised Bro. Cooper, presiding elder on the Seashore district, to take a round with him and attend his camp meetings, commencing with the St. Tammany, of which I have written you a short account. From there we went to the Palmer Camp Meeting, on the Whittington circuit; J. H. Holland, pastor. I was surprised to see such arrangements down in what is called the poor piney woods in south Mississippi. They have a splendid shed and all conveniences; feed and sleep all that come; good, roomy tents. The holy fire was kindled into a holy flame the first night and increased to the last. The preaching was excellent. Dr. Walker preached every day at eleven o'clock, and he certainly renewed his youth in the pulpit. The pastor reports about eighty conversions; but the results of a camp meeting are widespread, and hard to tell what it does accomplish.

We went across the country about fifty or sixty miles to the Salem Camp Meeting, in Jackson county, that is likely the oldest camp ground in the State (between sixty and seventy years, and but a break of two years). We had but few preachers, but the spirit of the Master was upon them and the power of God upon the people; they sung, prayed and shouted to their fullest capacity. Bro. N. Roberts and his wife were as happy as they could be in the flesh. Bro. Roberts is doing a fine work. Likely the circuit will pay one hundred dollars over their assessment, though the presiding elder had the assessment raised at the first Quarterly Conference. It shows what the people can and will do when in good spirits. They love God, the church and their pastor. From there we went to New Prospect Camp Meeting, on the Vanoleave circuit; Bro. White, pastor. I don't think I was ever at a better camp meeting; but one drawback—the shed, altar and fixtures too small for the crowds of people that come there; but every service grew in interest until the whole place was in a rapturous flame. Sinners were converted by numbers, Christians made to rejoice all over the campus. Bro. White has done a grand work on Vanoleave circuit, and is in the hearts of his people. I never saw a pastor more beloved by his people. One affecting scene took place at the close. Bro. Thomas Price, one of our old superannuate preachers, was on the eve of moving west to make his last home this side the river. He had been their pastor and presiding elder for several years. He got up to take his final adieu of them, and as they came to tell him good-by, they put into his hands money they had raised for him—a purse which was most opportune. I find Methodism advancing all along that coast country; they are building good homes for their preachers, paying them much better salaries. Bro. Cooper looks well to the welfare of his preachers, as he does everything else that comes under his administration. He is making a model presiding elder. He has a genius for being a friend to his preachers. He defends them, looks well to their interest; at the same time a friend to the people, looking to their interest also, and the people hold him in high esteem as a presiding elder and Christian gentleman.

But while Methodism is doing well in the country, except in one or two instances, it is not the case in the towns. I have had charge of all the towns along that coast, except Moss Point, and I was astonished at the improvements for the last twelve years. For thirty miles along the beach it is almost one continuous line of villages, towns and cities; in sight of the great Ship Island harbor, and the Seashore Camp Ground in the centre; Pass Christian, with thousands of inhabitants, with her country back; and not a vestige of Methodism. Biloxi claims nine thousand. She has an old weather-beaten house out at one side narrow street. The church has declined since I was there, and it was bad enough then. Ocean Springs not much better, when they ought to be a station in everyone of those towns. They have one at Pearlington and Bay St. Louis, and they are doing well. Bro. Cooper, the presiding elder, has a plan, if he can carry it out, I think will work a great change for the better, and it ought to be done, and must be done soon, or be forever too late. Those towns and country are filling up fast with men and means.

A Death in the Mission House in the City of Mexico.

On November 17 our little band of Southern Methodist missionaries gathered in the Mission House to mingle our tears and prayers with Bro. and Sister Carter as we watched their first-born—an interesting little girl of five years—sweetly fall asleep, at her usual bedtime, a quarter past seven o'clock. Death is sad at all times and under any circumstance; yet doubly so away in a foreign land, far from friends and loved ones. We did all we could, with our own hearts full of sympathy and sorrow, for, oh! how well I knew the bitterness of this drop. Bros. Sutherland, Watkins and wife, Mr. Weems and myself, knelt beside the sorrowing parents around the dead body of little Ella, and reconsecrated our lives to the service of our Lord. God's grace is sufficient for every time of need, and now sustains the stricken parents. I have heard from them not a word of murmuring. They meekly bow to the will of God, confessing his way is best. We lay her away this evening in the American cemetery, beside little Mabel Patterson, who died in the same house. Faithfully we tried to hold her back from death; but the dear Lord knew his way was best, so took her to himself. That dread disease, scarlet fever, claimed her for its victim, and now the next child has the same disease. As soon as Bro. Carter learned the nature of her disease, he informed us, and we immediately closed the school; sent the children home to stay till all danger was past. I feel very thankful we were so prompt, for the disease seems of such a malignant character. I trust it may not spread. God's Spirit has been with us, for around this little one's casket I felt a comfort was given more precious than ever before. "Ah! no one can comfort like Jesus!" When the other children are well, and Bro. Carter is able to go to his work, this home, now in the shadow of death, is to be mine for this year. Pray that the dear Lord may there abide, filling it with the light of his presence, cheering and comforting us in every time of trial, and blessing us in all our efforts to serve him! I feel sure your sympathies will be with our stricken missionary and his wife, and I hope you will pray that the other children may be spared, and he be blessed in his work this year. In time of sorrow we, in this field, are comforted by drawing near together and mingling our tears. "Our Father" is with us. Pray for us!

A Good Matter.

The people called Methodists at Slidell, La., on the Northeastern railroad, are "inditing a good matter," and I write of the things I have heard touching the same; and had I the pen of the ready writer, I would endeavor to touch the hearts and purses of some friends, and inspire them to help out the "good matter" those people have in hand.

The faithful little band have been worshiping in the public school-house, not being able to build a church. Now with the nucleus of a few dollars they propose to build a neat church. "Tell it not in Gath" that there is no Methodist Church at this important point. Slidell is an incorporated town and the first station of note on this road from New Orleans, and already Rome is raising her standard there. When the priest called for funds to build a church his flock hastened to lay their offerings at his feet. Are Methodists less wise in their aggressive movements than Rome? There should be a Methodist Church at every railroad station. Many railroad employees might be saved by this wise plan.

Anyone who is willing to aid in this noble cause may send any sum, small or great, to any member of the committee at Slidell, La., and it will be very thankfully received and acknowledged.

PEARL RIVER, LA., Dec. 1, 1890.

Sermons to the Children.

"In twenty-five years past I have not heard five sermons addressed to the children."

So says the Rev. J. R. Rogers in the Alabama Christian Advocate, of November 6. And so say I to-day. And in the same paper, writing on the same subject, the venerable and reverend George G. Smith, who takes so much interest in infantile Christianity, says: "The neglect of the children is a crying sin. To say the Sunday-school does the work, is to say what we all know is not true."

If there could be such a thing as neglecting one branch of pastoral work that another might be prosecuted, and if you put missions, church extension and half our preaching in one scale, and cradlehood Christianity in the other, and we could prosecute but the one and let go the other, in my judgment I would let go the former and prosecute the latter. The man who supposes the church has more to hope in missions, church extension and half our pulpit preaching—all three—than in the Christian teaching and culture of young children, has, so I think, something yet to learn of the true philosophy of childhood. His thinking is a mere following of the fashion.

The following letter touches this subject squarely. It was not intended for publication; but Dr. Cunnyngham is a public man, and he writes on a subject of unsurpassed interest to the whole church, and he will excuse this liberty.

NASHVILLE, TENN., Nov. 17, 1890.

My Dear Dr. Abbey:

Your very thoughtful article on, "What Shall Be Done for the Children?" came to hand in due time, and will appear in the Sunday-School Magazine, for January, 1891.

The question is one that must be answered sooner or later. The "goody" methods of the past are not satisfactory. I am glad to see men, like yourself, taking hold of this and other grave questions connected with the proper training of the children. I have read your "Cradlehood" with much interest, and wonder it has not attracted more attention. It is a thoughtful book. But people do not like to think. "Clap-trap" suits the masses better than thoughtful discussions of great subjects. Thank you for the article. Yours sincerely,

W. G. E. CUNNYNGHAM.

The Sunday-school, as it works at present, is doing its work; and doing it well; but might it not be improved? How might this do? Let it have a few minutes more time, and at the close of its catechetical exercises, which are always biblical and theological, let there be a five or ten minutes' sermon adapted to their childhood capacity. No part of the "regular" morning sermon is understood by the children. Better shorten the eleven o'clock service, if need be. Instead of having five sermons in twenty-five years, let there be fifty each year. That a five minutes' sermon to the children, adapted to their capacity, will do more good generally than an hour's sermon to adult people, is one of the things I do most steadfastly believe.

I am well aware we, none of us, know how to preach to children, and the reason may be that we never tried; but can we not learn? The best preaching we, any of us, do is to the negroes, and in back neighborhood school-houses. And, then, can we not improve upon this? It may be supposed that child-preaching should attempt to spread over very little theological ground. I would say, Never go over ten minutes; generally five, or thereabouts. Now, let some one try it and report.

Some women want to preach. Now, is this not a most excellent and most fruitful field?

But there are other points of vitally important teaching greatly needed before any sort of preaching can be ministered; but they can not be explained here and now.

R. ABBEY.

From the Work.

SCRANTON CIRCUIT.

MR. EDITOR: Don't think me presuming; but if the article in last week's Democrat-Star was copied verbatim as written by you in the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE, in which you described your visit to Scranton and dedication of the Methodist Episcopal Church there, you forgot to mention one important item. I think Methodist preachers generally on this circuit have a hard work. Give honor to whom honor is due. The church, though just dedicated, had a debt on the building, and our venerable old preacher, Rev. Ben Jones, last year, by mighty effort, raised the debt and prepared the way for its dedication. He did some other most praiseworthy acts, and now, though he is far from us, he will be glad to know we give him credit for his hard work. This is, as you say, a spot in the Methodist field of work calculated to call forth the executive ability of our Bishops. Local peculiarities exist. Having seaport situation, foreign element is plentiful, each with his peculiar belief and religion. The old resident occupants and owners of best lands are direct descendants of the French discoverers, thereby giving a large proportion of Roman Catholics. Being a manufacturing district, there is a large floating, laboring population, who subject themselves to no particular religious observations of beliefs.

Last, but not least, we have almost at our door—at least, within the reach of church services—a large, but ignorant country population. These are settlers on government and other cheap lands, and some very ignorant and unambitious. As a type—some who have large families, and are satisfied to feed them on sweet potatoes, and not one member of the family being able to write his name. These are the least of evils incident to such mode of life, naturally.

Now, to solve this problem, let our beloved Bishops give us on our work men who are full of religion themselves, and anxious to work for the Lord and the salvation of souls, and whose hourly life is a sermon and an invitation to come to Christ—men who follow the life of Christ as near as in them lies, and whose Christian efforts are not only put forth in the pulpit, but in their daily contact with the people; peacemakers, for we have members of the church here who do not even speak to each other. In short, send men who are not satisfied without the salvation of souls; the soul of a poor, erring man or woman being as precious as that of the rich man.

METHODIST.

BATON ROUGE, LA.

I have just made out my reports for Conference. The year has been a hard one; but I thank God for the results. Since I came here I have purged the rolls of sixty-eight "dead-heads." In their places I have put the names of fifty-two active, good people—some children among them. I have, in two years, increased the collections from the church, for all purposes, from $2,067 25 in 1888, to $2,710 30 in 1890—a gain of $643 05. For the first time, as far back as I can trace the records, all the assessments are paid in full. The church has paid $586 30 more for other church work than it has paid the pastor. We have raised for missions, from all sources, $316 85—nearly $1 per capita for the membership. Counting the membership at the beginning of the year, it is over $1 per head. For all purposes the membership has paid—and you know it is a very poor set of members; financially, I mean—a fraction over $7 90 per head. My salary is the only thing that "lags behind."

BOOKS.

IN SCRIPTURE LANDS. By E. L. Wilson. Charles Scribner's Sons, New York. Price, $3, postage paid.

This is the title of a choice book written and illustrated by a noted Sunday-school worker of Philadelphia. For many years he, together with many others, longed to see the lands of the Bible just as they are and photograph all the noted places, so that others should obtain correct views of them. This he was enabled to do, and in this carefully prepared volume he has artistically pictured the scenes and describes with accuracy the people and country where biblical characters lived and journeyed. Mr. Wilson is said to be the best landscape photographer in the United States, and was the one of many chosen to photograph the "Exposition" held here in 1885 and 1886. In this book he has given his best effort, and readers interested in Bible study will find it a valuable aid. The Charles Scribner's Sons have shown their usual skill and good judgment in publishing this work.

A STUDY IN PEDAGOGY. For People who are not Professional Teachers. By Bishop John H. Vincent, D. D., LL.D.

Universal attention will certainly be given to this unique, suggestive and eminently helpful production from the pen of one whose genius, wisdom and popularity have endeared him among the educators of the world. It will find its way, by dint of its exquisite merit, into thousands of homes. The multitudes who find themselves eager to excel in study and to convey by natural methods instruction, will be charmed by this book. It will be an inspiration and a benediction to young and old. Cloth, sixty cents. Wilbur B. Ketcham, publisher, 13 Cooper Union, New York.

THE STORY OF THE ILIAD. By Edward Brooks, Ph.D. Penn Publishing Company, Philadelphia. F. F. Hansell & Bro., 94 and 96 Canal street, New Orleans.

The siege of Troy, as told by Homer, will never lose its interest. This book is written specially for boys, and will be a delight and profit to them.

THE ODDS AGAINST HIM. By Horatio Alger, Jr.

HARRY AMBLER. By Sidney Marlow. Penn Publishing Company, Philadelphia. F. F. Hansell & Bro., 94 and 96 Canal street, New Orleans.

These are interesting stories, and well told.

Obituaries of less than thirty-five lines of six words each, will be published free of charge. For all over thirty-five lines, five cents for each additional line will be charged, and the money must invariably accompany the manuscript. When parties desire extra copies of the ADVOCATE containing the obituaries of their friends, they must send with the order the sum of five cents for each extra copy ordered.

BULLOCH—CARRIE L., daughter of A. E. and Annette Bulloch, was born at Logtown, Miss., February 11, 1875, and died in Lake Charles, La., July 10, 1890.

She was an only daughter, and gave much promise of a useful womanhood. Her modesty was a notable characteristic, and yet her self-assertion was prominent. In a quiet way she walked in the path of duty. As a Sunday-school scholar, she was faithful, showing in preparation and regular attendance that going to Sunday-school was not a mere play or pleasant fiction. A scholar in regular school work, she was one of the most faithful, studious pupils I ever knew. As a usual daily thing, she led all her classes. When others were at play, she was studying. Carrie had not made an open profession of religion, nor joined the church; but she was a religious, prayerful child. Not emotional in her nature, yet profound in her feeling, she was spiritually religious, without much outward expression.

Her sickness was protracted. She suffered much, but without complaint. Quietly and patiently submitting, she went down to the grave. We all have hope of her in her death, and the church sympathizes deeply with the father and mother, who are faithful, humble Christians.

JOEL T. DAVES.

PLUNKETT—MARTHA A., beloved wife of Richard Plunkett, was born in Alabama, October 15, 1856, and departed this life, near Montgomery, La., September 1, 1890.

She had been an orderly member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, about sixteen years; but for the last year of her life had constant communion with her Savior. When the writer came to this work, nearly four years ago, he found Sister Plunkett one of his most consistent members; but at a meeting held in her neighborhood, in August of last year, she received an overpowering blessing, and said that she had never been converted before. From this time until Jesus called her home her countenance seemed radiant with the glory of the Lord. She was taken sick at our meeting in her neighborhood, last August, and while her pastor was absent, attending another protracted meeting, her sweet and gentle spirit passed away to the glory-world. When we heard of her death (with no particulars) about our first exclamation was that she had gone straight home to glory.

We sorrow not for our departed sister, but for loved ones left behind. May her husband and four daughters meet her on the other shore!

MARTIN—The following resolutions were adopted by the Sunday-school at Beauregard, Miss.:

Whereas, In the divine wisdom of our heavenly Father, our beloved friend and Christian worker, Miss EUGENIA MARTIN, was called to her reward on high, October 6, 1890, and as she has been a faithful pupil and teacher in our Sunday-school; therefore, be it

Resolved, That we do hereby express our grief and sense of loss in the death of our willing co-laborer.

Resolved, That we humbly submit to the wise dispensation of a kind Providence, and that we believe her young Christian life, together with her cheerful resignation to suffer God's will, will prove a blessing to us all.

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be sent the bereaved family.

Miss R. RAY, for Com.

WHITAKER—Mrs. JENNIE WHITAKER departed this life, at hers and her husband's residence, six miles south of Villa do Santa Barbara, Stato of San Paulo, Brazil, September 27, 1890, at one o'clock in the afternoon. She was born of Missionary Baptist parents in Perry county, Ala., near Marion, January 9, 1820, where she was raised to womanhood. About this time her father, Mr. Alexander Moore, moved to Union county, Ark. In 1847 or '48 she was married to Dr. Duncan McKellar, with whom she lived happily until 1854 or '55, at which time the Doctor died. Shortly after this sad occurrence she joined the Missionary Baptish Church (Hopewell). Of this church her entire family were members, consisting of father, mother, five brothers and four sisters. On January 8, 1863, she was married to Orville Whitaker, with whom she emigrated to Brazil in 1870. Shortly after arriving in this country, the Rev. Richard Ratcliff organized the first Missionary Baptist Church of Brazil. She was one of the few that joined at once; she by letter from her loved home church, Hopewell, Union county, Ark.

She loved her church, and was always ready to contribute from her limited means to its advancement. She loved her kindred so well that she braved the dangers of the great ocean that lies between Rio and New York twice to see them and be with them; her two visits to the United States occupying more than five years of the twenty years she lived in Brazil. She returned home from her last visit to the United States in September or October, 1886. Shortly after she reached home she had a severe attack from her old complaint, from which she had suffered many years, from which it was with much difficulty she was relieved, and then only temporarily. From this time it was plain to be seen that her mind was giving way. From this to the end she had to have the closest attention, as she became more weak daily. For two months before the end she was confined to her bed. She suffered much, but no complaint was uttered by her relative to her suffering. Several days before the end came she opened her great luminous eyes, and said, "I hope I will go to heaven." She then seemed to sleep a little. In a short time she again opened her eyes, and said, "I hope I will go to heaven." She was told that only good and upright people went there; she need not have any fear, as she had lived the life of a Christian from her earliest womanhood to the end. Her exclamations during her sickness were mostly, "Oh, my father;" or, "Oh, my mother."

At the time of her death she was seventy years eight months and eighteen days old. She leaves no children by either marriage, but leaves many relatives and friends to mourn her loss. "Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord; they rest from their labors and their works follow them." May the God of all mercy comfort all those who mourn her loss!

HER HUSBAND.

CLARK—Sister SARAH CLARK, consort of Bro. A. J. Clark, was born in Scott county, Miss., in the year 1847, and departed this life, October 28, 1890. When about ten years old her parents removed to Jasper county, Miss., where the early years of her life were spent. At the age of sixteen, under the evangelical ministry of Henry T. Jones, she was happily converted and joined the Methodist Church. Her life from then on was fully consecrated to the service of God. Surrounded by loving friends and relatives, and filled with the Holy Spirit, her life was singularly happy. In the year 1865, with her parents, she again moved; this time to Green county, Miss.

Her religion, which was the great solace of her life, she carefully carried with her to her new home, and by her devotion to the cause of her Lord and Master, together with her naturally sunny and lovable disposition, she was soon surrounded with hosts of friends, many of whom still linger on this side of the river; and, although they have been separated from her by the lapse of many years, they will weep tears of sincere sorrow when they read these lines.

In the year 1868 she was united in happy marriage with Bro. A. J. Clark, and to them were born eleven children, ten of whom still live and mourn the loss of that dear Christian mother who has just put off this mortality and now sits clothed in glory at the right hand of the Lord Jesus, whom she so faithfully served on earth.

In the year 1883 she came with her family to Purvis, Marion county, Miss., where the remaining years of her life were spent; and, although her latter days were clouded by the malady, dyspepsia, which finally took her away from her devoted loved ones, she never murmured; but in all her dark hours her faith was firm and her resignation to the will of the Father was perfect. She could always sweetly sing, "Rock of Ages."

Sister Clark's funeral took place at the Methodist Church in Purvis on October 30, 1890, attended by a very large concourse of friends and relatives who deeply mourn her loss—but not without hope, knowing that her salvation is sure, and that her home henceforth and forever is within the pearly gates of the New Jerusalem, where, God grant, she may meet all who knew and loved her here. A FRIEND.

SEALE—JAMES W. SEALE, son of Elijah and Elizabeth Seale, was born in Franklin county, Miss., November 23, 1845, and united with the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in August, 1871, and was happily converted shortly afterward.

He was a great sufferer with rheumatism for more than a year, which reduced him very much in flesh, when dropsy ensued, and he died in perfect peace, June 6, 1890. It was my privilege to visit him often during his sickness, and, when singing and praying with him, he always received a fresh baptism of grace, and, with much earnestness, would exclaim, "There is not a cloud between me and my God."

He leaves behind him a wife and three children and a host of relatives and friends to mourn his departure; but not as those who have no hope.

J. W. TUCKER, P. C.

POLLARD—Sister J. C. POLLARD (nee McNeill) was born in Robinson county, N. C., June 24, 1810, and died October 17, 1890. She was married to Angus McKinnon, September 14, 1832, and moved to Kentucky. In 1837 she moved to Attala county, Miss., where her husband died, December 31, 1852, leaving her a widow with seven children—two boys and five daughters. In 1854 she was married to Parham Pollard, with whom she lived until his death, in 1888. Sister Pollard joined the Cumberland Presbyterian Church in 1852, and about 1857 joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in which she lived until called from "labor to rest."

Sister Pollard was an even and smooth Christian, always hopeful, letting her light shine, summer and winter, at home or abroad, in prosperity and adversity, health and sickness, "that, others seeing her good ways, might glorify God;" hence the end was peace.

A large concourse of relatives and friends assembled to pay their last respects to the deceased. Sister Pollard leaves a large family of children, grandchildren and great-grandchildren to mourn her death; but we can say to them, "Weep not as those who have no hope." A FRIEND.

ATKINSON—Sister RUTH A. ATKINSON was born in Clark county, Ga., August 28, 1838. At fifteen years of age she became a member of the Christian Church, but did not experience conversion until about two years later. She was a diligent seeker, and had a wonderful experience. In 1856 she married Bro. Burkett Atkinson, who survives her. Some two years after her marriage she united with the Methodist Protestant Church, and continued a member of that denomination till 1870, when she joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, at Senoia, Ga. In this faith she remained steadfast, until the Master's summons came, November 7, 1890, near Vernon, La.

She died "in the faith," after a long illness. "Her children arise up, and call her blessed; her husband also, and he praiseth her. . . . Let her own works praise her in the gates."

G. E. GREENE, Pastor.

ABNEY—Died August 24, 1890, in Covington, La., Sister SARAH CROSBY ABNEY, wife of Bro. J. M. Abney. Sister Abney was born in Jasper county, Miss., November 14, 1843; joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in 1858, and married June 10, 1862.

Sister Abney, though long an invalid, died suddenly; but her steady, uniform piety; her quiet, careful, industrious life, especially in that "meek and quiet spirit which is, in the sight of God, of great price," give to all who knew her a full assurance of her entrance into realms of bliss. Nine children, mostly young in years, are left to weep a mother's love, while one had just preceded her, as if to welcome her to heaven.

May they all meet her there! "Precious in the sight of the Lord is the death of his saints!"

H. C. BROWN.

BEADLE—WIHODA BEADLE, infant daughter of William and Mary Beadle, was born January 23, 1888, and died of diphtheria, near Lafayette, La., August 30, 1890.

It was with sorrow and deep sympathy that we witnessed the sufferings of the dear little one; but, as we stood beside her bed, we thought of the happy life she was soon to enter, where no suffering would come, nor sorrow, nor sin mar the blissful years of eternity. Her life on earth was short, but long enough for sweet memories of her to dwell in the hearts of father, mother and sisters through all time, ever reminding them that a glorified spirit awaits to welcome them into "the house not made with hands, but eternal in the heavens."

IDA HARRY.

MCNEIL—The following resolutions were adopted by the Pauiding (Miss.) Auxiliary:

Whereas, It has pleased our heavenly Father to call from our midst Bro. JAMES D. MCNEIL, one of our most liberal and zealous honorary members; therefore, be it

Resolved, That we deeply sympathize with the family in their sad bereavement, and tender to them our prayers in this sad hour of their irreparable loss.

Resolved, That a copy of this action of the society be sent to them as a token of our regard in their deep sorrow and distress; also that a copy be sent to the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE.

Rabbi Eliezer said, "Turn to God one day before your death." His disciples said, "How can a man know the day of his death?" He answered them, "Then you should turn to God to-day; perhaps you may die to-morrow; thus every day will be employed in returning."

Peculiar

To itself in many important particulars, Hood's Sarsaparilla is different from and superior to any other medicine.

Peculiar in combination, proportion and preparation of ingredients, Hood's Sarsaparilla possesses the full curative value of the best known remedies of the vegetable kingdom.

Peculiar in its medicinal merit, Hood's Sarsaparilla accomplishes cures hitherto unknown.

Peculiar in strength and economy—Hood's Sarsaparilla is the only medicine of which can truly be said, "100 doses one dollar." Medicines in larger and smaller bottles require larger doses, and do not produce as good results as Hood's Sarsaparilla.

Peculiar in its "good name at home"—there is more of Hood's Sarsaparilla sold in Lowell, where it is made, than of all other blood purifiers.

Peculiar in its phenomenal record of sales abroad, no other preparation has ever attained such popularity in so short a time. Do not be induced to take any other preparation. Be sure to get

Ayer's Sarsaparilla

The Best Blood Medicine

So say Leading Physicians and Druggists, and their opinion is indorsed by thousands cured by it of Scrofula, Eczema, Erysipelas, and other diseases of the blood.

"Ayer's Sarsaparilla has won its reputation by years of valuable service to the community. It is the best."—R. S. Lang, Druggist, 212 Merrimack st., Lowell, Mass.

Dr. W. P. Wright, Paw Paw Ford, Tenn., says: "In my practice, I invariably prescribe Ayer's Sarsaparilla for chronic diseases of the blood."

Dr. R. R. Boyle, Third and Oxford sts., Philadelphia, Pa., writes: "For two years I have prescribed Ayer's Sarsaparilla in numerous instances, and I find it highly efficacious in the treatment of all disorders of the blood."

L. M. Robinson, Pharmacist, Sabina, O., certifies: "Ayer's Sarsaparilla has always been a great seller. My customers think there is no blood-purifier equal to it."

"For many years I was addicted with scrofulous running sores, which, at last became so bad the doctors advised amputating one of my legs to save my life. I began taking Ayer's Sarsaparilla and soon saw an improvement. After using about two dozen bottles the sores were healed. I continue to take a few bottles of this medicine each year, for my blood, and am no longer troubled with sores. I have tried other reputed blood-purifiers, but none does so much good as Ayer's Sarsaparilla."—D. A. Robinson, Neal, Kansas.

Rev. C. W. CARTER, D. D., Editor.

THURSDAY, DECEMBER 11, 1890.

Dedication at Downsville, La.

It is twenty-seven hours from New Orleans to Downsville, to which place I was invited by the pastor, Rev. R. S. Colier, to preach and dedicate a new church. Traveling by rail, with its jolting and thundering, is becoming a wearisome thing. I hope those Illinois people will hurry up their flying machines, so that instead of being compelled to poke along at the rate of forty miles an hour, with the disagreeable noise and suffocating dust, we shall glide along smoothly and with comfort in the air at the rate of two hundred miles an hour. That will be traveling worth talking about. On this trip, however, the last ten miles relieved the whole journey, for it was a delightful drive over the hills of old Union, such as I have not had in years. What can equal the exhilaration produced by a ride behind two fleet-footed greys on a frosty morning?

Such a congregation as we had on Sunday morning! It was a sight to inspire a preacher, and I gave them the best I could for the space of fifty minutes. At the close a small balance was quickly raised and the house was solemnly consecrated to the worship of God according to our form of dedication. Bro. Colier and his helpers certainly deserve praise for the erection of such a beautiful church. It was planned by the pastor, and its simplicity and neatness commend it to all beholders. It is a good evidence that Methodism is looking for brighter and more prosperous days in the Downsville circuit. It was my privilege and delight to preach again at night to a large and appreciative audience.

Monday morning Bro. Colier said: "We will go a-fishing," to which I readily agreed, glad of the opportunity to throw aside the cares of office and spend a day in piscatorial pastimes. An exhilarating drive of seven miles, in company with Dr. Hamilton, the resident physician, brought us to the far-famed Choudrant, where I had a most pleasant day watching Bro. Colier and the Doctor "land" the white perch. For some unexplained reason I could catch none. Bro. Colier proved himself to be in the regular succession, for he not only caught many, but he prepared them for the table with the skill of a first-class cook. Like the Savior on the banks of Galilee, he prepared and cooked the fish for the disciple who toiled all the morning and took none. I have had no such day of enjoyment for, lo! these many years.

Tuesday morning, bright and early, found me hurrying to catch the train for the Conference at Monroe, satisfied that it has been a long, long time since I have had such an enjoyable trip, as this one to Downsville.

C. W. C.

Bishop Haygood's address to the class for admission into full connection was of the finest order. It sparkled with wit and with wisdom. It was replete with profound thought made clearer by the aptest illustrations. It was full of a religious pathos that stirred every hearer. It abounded in a clean humor that came near lifting some of the brethren from their seats. It contained the deepest philosophy, couched in "the simplest form of speech." There were passages of rare eloquence which thrilled the audience like an electric current. Altogether, it was the simplest, wittiest, wisest, deepest, most pathetic, most philosophical, most appropriate address to young preachers we have ever heard. The young brethren who will carry its wisdom with them into their work, and act it out in the details of that work, will have abundant resources for many days to come.

Louisiana Conference.

FIRST DAY.

This body met in annual session in Monroe, La., December 3, 1890. Bishop Haygood opened the session by reading the Scriptures (Ephesians iv), singing hymn 228, and prayer. The roll being called, a large number of preachers and laymen answered to their names. Rev. J. T. Sawyer was elected secretary, and Rev. A. E. Clay was elected assistant secretary. The time for meeting was fixed at 9:30 A. M., and for adjournment 1:30 P. M.

The presiding elders reported the following committees, which were appointed: Conference Relations—C. W. Carter, J. F. Wynn, W. F. Henderson, T. H. McClendon, R. M. Blocker, William Wimberly and H. O. White. Church Publications—J. B. Walker, J. W. Medlock and N. S. Cornell. Temperance—J. M. Beard, R. Parvin and S. Whited. Bible Cause—T. B. White, F. G. Hocutt and J. L. P. Sheppard. District Conference Records—B. F. White, L. A. Reed and T. S. Randle. Public Worship—T. J. Upton, C. T. Munholland and J. D. Harper.

Communications from the Publishing House, from the Sunday-school editor, from the Church Extension secretary were read and referred to appropriate committees.

Communications from Mansfield Female College and from the publisher of the New Orleans Christian Advocate were read and referred to the proper committees.

The twentieth question was called, and the presiding elders, one by one, gave short accounts of the work in their several districts. The progress of Methodism, though not as rapid as is desirable, is visible in all parts of our territory.

Question 7. Who are the deacons of one year?

George T. Ashley was called. The presiding elder stated that he had left the church and a committee was asked for. J. B. Williams, James E. Riddle, C. B. Carter, W. J. Porter were called and their characters passed, and they were advanced. C. M. Lyons was called and his case referred to a committee. W. F. Henderson, James E. Denson were called, their characters passed, and they were advanced.

Ques. 1. Who are admitted on trial?

Herman W. Knickerbocker, Charles A. Coomb, James M. Henry, Benjamin H. Sheppard, William F. Sanders.

Ques. 5. Who are re-admitted?

None.

Ques. 8. Who are elected deacons?

J. F. Foster, Thomas L. Lallance, Arthur D. McVoy, Jr., George E. Greene, James J. Kelley, Charles F. Staples.

Ques. 10. What local preachers are elected deacons?

Noel B. Norwood, Benjamin H. Sheppard.

Ques. 14. What local preachers are elected elders?

D. L. Mitchel.

The time having expired, notices were given, and Conference adjourned with doxology and benediction.

SECOND DAY.

The Conference was opened by religious service conducted by Rev. John Pipes, after which the minutes were read and approved. The roll was called and perfected, and upon motion its future calling was dispensed with.

The committee on the case of C. M. Lyons reported that there was nothing to justify further proceedings. He read his report and was passed. Rev. W. L. C. Hunnicutt, D. D., president of Centenary College, and T. B. Holt, treasurer of the Board of Missions, were introduced to the Conference.

Ques. 14. What local preachers are elected elders?

J. M. Davies was elected.

The report of the Board of Trustees of the Depository in New Orleans was read, and $300 of its revenue were appropriated to the widows, orphans and superannuates.

Ques. 2. Who remain on trial?

Henry H. Ahrens, Isaac T. Reames, William G. Evans, Henry M. Banks, Richard M. Walker, William Schule, Charles E. McDonald and E. L. Singletary.

A communication from the missionary secretary was read and referred to the Board of Missions.

At this point the class for admission into full connection was called, and after a simple, clear and wise address by the Bishop, the following were admitted into full connection with the Conference: J. F. Foster, T. L. Lallance, A. D. McVoy, Jr., G. E. Greene, J. J. Kelley and C. F. Staples.

The following persons were referred to the Committee on Conference Relations: For supernumerary relation, C. Keener; for superannuation, John Pipes, Jesse Fulton, R. S. Trippett, E. W. Yancey, E. B. Foust, P. H. Dieffenweirth, J. H. Stone, George Jackson, J. L. Wright, M. C. Manley.

Ques. 20. The following persons were called, read their reports and characters were passed: J. T. Sawyer, B. Carradine, J. M. Beard, S. S. Keener, F. N. Parker, C. Keener, W. Wimberly, J. B. Walker, H. W. Johns, J. A. Parker, F. M. Grace, A. E. Clay, J. F. Scurlock, C. W. Carter, J. B. A. Ahrens, F. D. Van Valkenburgh.

After notices given, the Conference adjourned with benediction by the Bishop.

THIRD DAY.

The Conference was opened with religious services conducted by J. A. Parker. The minutes were read, corrected and approved.

On motion, a committee of three, consisting of C. F. Evans, J. A. Parker and R. J. Harp, was appointed to nominate the examining committees and the Conference Boards for the next quadrennium.

Ques. 10. What local preachers are elected deacons?

Thomas N. Sweeney.

Ques. 14. What local preachers are elected elders?

W. B. Pilley.

Rev. Joseph Berwick, formerly of the Baptist Church, was admitted into our church and his orders recognized.

Ques. 20. The following persons were called, read their reports and their characters were passed: F. S. Parker, J. H. Scruggs, S. J. Davies, R. J. Harp, Thomas B. White, S. S. Holliday, A. A. Cornett, N. S. Cornell, L. A. Reed, J. S. Sanders, A. D. McVoy, Sr., B. F. White.

Rev. J. W. McLaurin, agent for the American Bible Society, was introduced to the Conference, and in an able address presented the claims of said society.

A communication from W. M. Hayes, commissioner of education, was read and referred to Board of Education.

The committee on Conference Relations reported in favor of granting the supernumerary relation to Walter Dunstan, C. Keener and A. M. Wailes, and in favor of granting the superannuated relation to John Pipes, J. H. Stone, P. H. Dieffenwierth, Jesse Fulton, E. W. Yancy, George Jackson, R. S. Trippett and E. B. Foust. The report of the committee was adopted.

Ques. 20. The following persons were called, read their reports and their characters passed: S. H. Whatley, J. I. Hoffpauir, J. M. Johnston, Wilson Moore, J. F. Wynn, R. P. Howell, H. W. May, J. H. Callaway, R. Harry, R. S. Isbell, R. M. Blocker, F. G. Hocutt, J. T. Daves, T. J. Upton, C. T. Munholland, J. M. Brown.

The report on Church Publications was read by Dr. Walker, and set forth in clear words the value of religious literature, and exhorted the Conference to give all aid to this line of church work. The report was spoken to by D. L. Mitchel, the business manager of the Christian Advocate, and C. W. Carter, the editor.

The report of the Committee on District Conference Records was read and adopted.

The report of the Committee on Bible Cause was read by Dr. T. B. White, and Rev. E. M. Tabor spoke feelingly on the subject of Bible distribution in Louisiana, after which the report was adopted.

After notices, the Conference adjourned with benediction by the Bishop.

EVENING SESSION.

Conference opened with religious service conducted by J. B. Cassity. The minutes of the morning session were read, corrected and approved.

Ques. 20. The following persons were called, read their reports and their characters were passed: H. J. Boltz, J. O. Bennett, H. Armstrong, T. S. Randle, J. F. Patterson, T. H. McClendon, J. L. P. Sheppard, J. W. Medlock, R. Parvin, C. R. Godfrey, R. A. Davis, H. O. White, D. C. Barr, T. K. Faunt LeRoy, R. S. Colier, G. A. Mandeville.

The Committee on Conference Relations recommended that A. A. Cornett be placed on the supernumerary list, and that J. L. Wright be placed on the superannuated list, and the recommendation was adopted.

The Committee on Temperance, through its chairman, Dr. Beard, presented an able report, which was adopted.

On motion, the Conference ordered 2,000 copies of the Minutes, to be paid for by the Conference Boards.

On motion, the Conference adjourned with benediction by the Bishop.

FOURTH DAY.

The Conference was opened with religious services conducted by B. F. Alexander. The minutes were read and approved.

The Conference adopted a memorial asking the United States Congress to pass an amendment to the Constitution, prohibiting all lotteries throughout this government.

Ques. 16. Who are located this year?

None.

Ques. 19. What preachers have died during the year?

None.

Report No. 3 of the Committee on Conference Relations was read, and, after quite a debate, was adopted.

The Committee on Nominations reported as follows:

COMMITTEES OF EXAMINATION.

For Admission: J. M. Beard, T. S. Randle, T. J. Upton.

First Year: J. M. Brown, Fitzgerald S. Parker, William Wimberly.

Second Year: A. E. Clay, N. S. Cornell, R. S. Isbell.

Third Year: R. J. Harp, J. W. Medlock, T. B White.

Fourth Year: J. B. A. Ahrens, James A. Parker, A. D. McVoy.

BOARD OF COLPORTAGE.

R. J. Harp, J. B. Cassity, F. D. Van Valkenburgh, R. M. Blocker, J. D. Harper, J. O. Bennett, R. Parvin, W. B. Thompson, T. C. Standifer, Daniel Brewer, S. Whited, C. J. Foster, U. T. Blacksher.

BOARD OF CHURCH EXTENSION.

C. F. Evans, F. S. Parker, James M. Johnston, S. J. Davies, J. W. Medlock, N. S. Cornell, S. H. Whatley, Dr. J. W. Adams, L. H. Richardson, John B. Pickles, W. B. Torian, Jethro Moore, R. A. Smith, B. O. L. Rayne, T. C. Standifer, S. B. McCutcheon, J. M. Beard.

BOARD OF MISSIONS.

R. Randle, T. H. McClendon, F. N. Parker, Thomas B. White, Lewis A. Reed, C. R. Godfrey, T. J. Reames, J. W. Dawson, W. B. Thompson.

BOARD OF EDUCATION.

C. W. Carter, J. B. A. Ahrens, J. I. Hoffpauir, J. B. Walker, B. F. Alexander, J. W. Medlock, J. G. Grant, C. J. Foster, A. A. Dean, A. J. Gay, Dr. A. S. Helmick, W. W. Guthrie.

BOARD OF SUNDAY-SCHOOLS.

A. E. Clay, W. F. Henderson, J. S. Sanders, John F. Foster, C. B. Carter, R. P. Howell, E. P. Mackie, C. J. Foster, H. P. Wells, J. W. Dawson, U. T. Blacksher, A. H. Mays.

The Sunday-school Board, through its chairman, J. M. Brown, made its report, which was adopted.

At this point the Bishop introduced Dr. Morton, secretary of the church extension department, and Dr. Potter, one of our missionary secretaries. Dr. Potter addressed the Conference at some length on the subject of missions, and was listened to with great attention. A collection was taken to support a single man as a foreign missionary, and resulted in raising $881.

Mrs. E. J. Fullilove, the president of the Louisiana Woman's Board of Missions, addressed the Conference, and read a detailed statement of what the Woman's Board of Missions has done in Louisiana during the past year. The work has progressed, but not as rapidly as is desirable. The outlook for the future is brighter and better than it has been heretofore.

The Conference resolved to hold its next session in Alexandria.

After notices, Conference adjourned with benediction by Dr. Potter.

EVENING SESSION.

The Conference was opened with religious services conducted by J. B. A. Ahrens. The minutes were read, corrected and approved.

The report of the Board of Finance was read by the chairman, B. F. White, and adopted by the Conference, and the distribution of the moneys was made to the various claimants.

Ques. 33. What are the educational statistics?

Schools, 2; teachers, 17; pupils, 209; endowment fund, $55,000; property, $105,000.

The Bishop announced the Joint Board of Finance, as follows: Clerical—B. F. White, D. C. Barr, T. H. McClendon, C. T. Munholland, R. M. Blocker, S. S. Keener. Lay—S. B. McCutcheon, E. P. Mackie, J. B. Pickles, T. C. Standifer, A. S. Helmick, W. T. Blacksher.

The Board of Education, through its chairman, J. A. Parker, made its report, an able document, presenting the importance of the subject in terse, yet strong language. After able and forcible addresses by Dr. Hunnicutt, of Centenary College, and Dr. McVoy, of Mansfield Female College, the report was adopted.

On motion, the Conference resolved to meet Sunday evening, at seven o'clock, to receive the appointments.

After notices, Conference adjourned with benediction.

Statistics are as follows:

Local preachers, 90; members, 20,025; infants baptized, 916; adults, 614; number of Sunday-schools, 216; teachers, 1,299; scholars, 8,499; collected for widows and orphans, $3,721 40; collected for foreign missions, $4,980 27; domestic, $1,548 81; church extension, $1,388 53; Bishops, $829 22; education, $566 50; number of churches, 231—value, $429,005; parsonages, 58—value, $50,313 85; collected for Sunday-schools, $2,882 18; money expended for churches and parsonages, $28,645 96.

TO THE PREACHERS OF THE NORTH MISSISSIPPI AND MISSISSIPPI ANNUAL CONFERENCES.

STATEMENTS of your accounts have been mailed to your address. Please bring amount due to the Conference, together with all the renewals and new subscriptions possible.

The Publisher or Business Manager will be on hand, Wednesday morning, to receive your ADVOCATE money.

Louisiana Conference Notes.

The Conference had cause for profound gratitude in the fact that not a death had occurred among the ministers during the year.

Bishop Haygood pleased the Conference more than some of the other Bishops, because he consumed very little time in talking. Some of the other Bishops have worried the brethren no little by frequent and lengthy talks.

The missionary collections did not reach quite up to the mark of last year. This can be accounted for in the fact that the session was held two weeks earlier. The receipts for foreign missions amounted to $5 286, and for domestic missions $1,454.

The pastor had arranged for preaching every night, and those who preached were imbued with the spirit of earnestness and gave the simple gospel to houses crowded with attentive hearers. Good seed was sown with a liberal hand, and the future will bring a bountiful harvest.

Bishop Haygood preached on Tuesday night to a large audience, and by the profound thought and the simple words in which the sermon was clothed completely captivated everybody. His earnestness of soul, combined with simplicity of manner, attracted the attention and held it for forty-five minutes without wavering.

The visitors to the Conference were very many, coming from all points of North Louisiana. They seemed to enjoy the occasion to the fullest extent. One old brother had never attended a Conference nor had he even seen a Bishop. It was an era and an epoch in his life which will be pleasantly cherished through all the future.

The attendance of the citizens upon the Conference sessions was large, and the visitors seemed to take a lively interest in the proceedings. The ladies outnumbered the men, and at times would forget themselves and indulge in talking, but the exhortation of the Bishop generally quieted them down to a whisper. He very generously gave them permission to "talk in whispers."

The gray-heads make quite a show in the Conference. These veterans of the army have seen much hard service, for Louisiana is not an easy battlefield, but their looks betoken the fact that through all they have kept themselves in the favor of the great Captain and are looking forward to the time when, by his command, they will be retired by an honorable discharge and enter upon the enjoyment of an eternal peace.

Dr. Potter's address before the Conference on the subject of missions was a thorough biblical and philosophical discussion of the whole question. The success of the missionary movement is simply a question of leadership. The ministers of the gospel are naturally the leaders in all church enterprises, and as they lead so the church will go forward. His analysis of this point was very fine and carried conviction. In proof of this, the collection, contributed largely by the preachers, amounted to $881.

Mrs. Fullilove, the president of the Woman's Board of the Louisiana Conference, read a most interesting and edifying address. Mrs. Fullilove is well acquainted with the workings of our whole missionary system, and is enthusiastic in her support of the cause, and has infused some of her own enthusiasm into the hearts of the Methodist women of Louisiana. The work is progressing favorably, and the hopes of future enlargement and expansion are growing clearer every day.

Ten years ago the editor was pastor in Monroe, since which time very many changes have occurred. The membership of the church has undergone a great change, many having moved away and many gone to their eternal reward. The town itself has wonderfully improved. It has enlarged its borders and about trebled its population. Industries of several kinds have been set on foot and others are talked of. Two railroads and a river afford commercial and traveling facilities of the best kind. The citizens are wide awake to lay hold of everything that will add to the prosperity of the city.

The young men of the Conference constitute quite a large number, and have behaved with great gallantry on the field during the past campaign. They have led their hosts into the thickest of the fight, and have won many victories and gained a large experience for future undertakings. They are the hope of the church; therefore, let them lay up wisdom. Let them study the gospel in its relations to the present condition of the world. The gospel must solve all perplexing questions, but it must be rightly applied to do so.

Postal Card Reports.

—Rev. T. L. Mellen writes: "Rev. Joe Jones has been preaching twice daily in First Church at Meridian during the past ten days. At 10 A. M. the congregations are large, but at night the church is crowded to its utmost capacity. He is doing a glorious work and making a profound impression on the minds, hearts and lives of his hearers. Evidently he is a 'good man,' and full of the Holy Ghost and of faith. Of a surety, God is with him. The homes and hearts of Meridian are open to him and our prayers will follow him."

—Mrs. J. S. Parker, president Newton Auxiliary, Mississippi Conference, writes: "Will you kindly allow me a very brief report in the ADVOCATE from our Woman's Missionary Society at this place? For the encouragement of our sister workers, I wish to say that we are not idlers in the Lord's vineyard. On Friday night, last, we had a missionary concert, following in the main, at least, the programme sent out for the use of auxiliaries. The audience was large, and we trust good seed was sown. The neat sum of $26 was netted for the treasury of the Lord, and we pray that God's blessing may rest upon our feeble efforts. We have about twenty members."

—R. W. Vest reports from Utica charge, Miss.: "We have just closed a protracted meeting at this place, which lasted six days. It was held in the Baptist Church by our pastor, Bro. N. J. Roberts, assisted by Bro. V. D. Skipper. They both preached with great power, and the Lord was with us from the beginning, and that to own and bless us. Sinners were brought to Christ, and members of the church all revived. Some were made to shout praises to God. To God be all the praise. Bro. Roberts organized a Methodist Church at this place, and we hope to soon be able to have a house of our own to worship in. May the good work go on!"

—Rev. J. H. Callaway writes: "We have had a prosperous year on Centerville circuit. Thirty-one accessions; 5 of them from the Baptists. Some conversions; some sanctifications. Ten adults baptized, all by pouring; 26 children baptized. The preacher's salary paid in full. Praise God! Methodism is neither dead nor dying. God bless these kind people! We have good help on this circuit: two local elders —E. W. Yancy, superannuated, and W. R. Whatley—and two faithful local preachers—J. J. Masters and J. J. Arnold—who are ever ready to assist us when called on. God bless these dear brethren! We have just closed a good meeting at Trout Creek Church. Three accessions; one old man and his wife. Praise the Lord! When we were giving the right hand of fellowship we had crying and shouting in the camp."

—Rev. J. W. Sandell writes as follows from Beauregard circuit: "This is a new charge, composed of four churches. One of them was built last year under Bro. William Hoover's administration; but not complete and ready for dedication until last week. It is called Matthews' Chapel, for the family who contributed most to the building, and was solemnly dedicated to the service of God by Dr. W. C. Black, on November 30, 1890, in the presence of a large congregation. On the fourth Sunday of November Miss Addie V. Marshall organized a Woman's Parsonage and Home Mission Society at Beauregard, with twelve members. We are near the close of the year, and the time is at hand when the preachers must report to the Annual Conference concerning their charges. Happy the preacher and people whose work is well done!"

—Mrs. L. Crary Sadler writes of Slidell, La.: "Yesterday being the fifth Sunday of the last Conference month, our young pastor, Rev. H. C. Brown, gave our little band the benefit of his presence and preached a sermon on 'Christian Growth' that would have done much credit to an older head. From the Savior's words—'Consider the lilies how they grow'—and St. Paul's exhortation to the Ephesians— Grow up into him in all things, which is the head, even Christ'—he made some very fine points, proving that the beautiful lesson that Jesus sought to impress upon his hearers by the life and growth of the lily from the little brown germ hid in the earth up to the glorious array of beauty that overshadowed even Solomon's, was the same that Paul would have the Ephesians and all the rest of the Christian world to know what they might attain to by growing 'up into him in all things,' thus showing the beauty, the life, the growth of a creature of sin 'up into him' who is 'the Lily of the Valley,' the 'chiefest among ten thousands,' 'the head, even Christ.' Bro. Brown has been very zealous the short time he has been on this circuit, and won many souls for Christ. The appointment at Hickory Grove, mentioned by Bro. Van Valkenburgh, in the ADVOCATE, had been almost abandoned for several years. He took it up, and has had wondrous success and sown seed in good ground. With sad hearts we bade him farewell, but hope to see his face again on the circuit; and if not, we will meet in a better one than this, when all our work is done."

—Rev. J. C. Lowe writes from Lexington, Miss.: "I am just closing my second year on the Lexington circuit. Have had some degree of success both years. The material improvements are valuable, being of a most substantial character. The spiritual upbuilding has been right extensive, considering the circumstances and peculiar opposition here. In our first meeting, which was at Greenbrier, the Rev. C. W. Perkins was the principal human instrument. His spiritual preaching and faithful labors greatly revived and strengthened the church. Several professed faith in Christ, and were received into the church. Bro. M. L. Blanton was with me at Tchula, and his ministry was a great blessing to the church. The character of his preaching tended to encourage the Christians, 'build them up in the most holy faith,' increase their zeal, and set them to work for the Master. Not a word of slang escaped his lips. Bro. G. S. Inge was with me in Lexington a week, and citizens say the town was never so stirred before. About forty persons professed conversion. I received twenty-four into the church on Sunday, November 19; among them our dear little girls—one aged ten, the other nearly seven years old. These were the youngest received. Bro. Inge's preaching was apt, clear, religious, and free from all uncleanness. He won the affections of our people. He and Bro. Blanton are as unlike in their ministrations as they are in their physical expressions; yet each one seems peculiarly adapted to the evangelistic work, and both very successful. Bro. D. J. Evans, who accompanies Bro. Inge as leader of song, is equally well adapted to his place, a skillful musician and a consecrated Christian gentleman. All these brethren have blessings wherever they go, and I take the greatest pleasure in commending them as faithful, zealous laborers. I have good reason to believe that the collections will be full, and other items correspondingly perfect."

—Rev. R. F. Witt reports from Paulding circuit: "We have had five very fine revivals on the Paulding circuit this year. The results up to date are as follows: Accessions to the church, 49; adults baptized, 12; infants baptized, 26. In connection with these figures there has been a very deep spiritual work of grace in all of these revivals. Many persons have been induced to lead in public prayer, and many new family altars have been erected to God. At four of these meetings we have had good ministerial help. Bro. J. T. Nicholson, of Edwards circuit, was with us at Rose Hill and did us very fine service. At Pleasant Hill, Bro. J. T. Nicholson was again with us one day only, and preached with his usual power. In the same meeting Bro. L. J. Jones came to us and preached with power and demonstration of the Spirit. Bro. Jones is, indeed, a very faithful worker. At Pleasant Grove, Rev. J. W. Baldwin, of Enterprise, one of our faithful local preachers, assisted us. He did faithful work. Our beloved presiding elder, T. L. Mellen, was with us at Paulding during the entire meeting. Bro. Mellen's sermons were fine, and his work thorough. He has made an impression upon the people of Paulding both as a presiding officer and preacher that will never fade away. We note the material improvements of the circuit during the year: Since the last Conference we have made the church at Pleasant Grove new by a reconstruction and painting inside and out. New seats, pulpit and altar rail, all complete. We have painted Rose Hill Church on the inside thoroughly. Our church at Paulding, under the direction of our faithful layman and co-laborer, Hon. S. S. Cope, has been painted on the outside and inside also, and a beautiful carpet put upon the floor. The church was presented with a pulpit decoration, by Miss Clara Harmon, that was perfectly beautiful. We have improved the parsonage by putting new pickets around the yard and painting the entire house. We expect the salary of the preacher and the collections ordered by the Annual Conference to be met in full. Rose Hill, under the tuition of Profs. Pattillo and Hunt, is doing a fine work for education. This is the place to educate your boys and girls. Send them along."

Of Roxbury, Mass., says

I have kept a Scrap Book for a good many years of letters received from patients; some are long, too long to publish; some are short, short and good. Rainy days I sit down and read them, and have learned a good deal about the human body from some poor, sickly woman or overstrained man. Here is one of them. I call it a good letter:

TRENTON, TEXAS, Sept. 28, 1886.

"To Kennedy of the Medical Discovery, Roxbury, Mass. I am so proud of my recovery as to express my feelings in thanks to you. The RHEUMATISM has made me four-legged for six years. At last I have traded off two of them to Bell—Druggist—for four bottles of Kennedy's Discovery. I am yours, gratefully and unsolicited, J. B. IVY."

THE TRULY BRAVE.

Who is the truly brave?
The boy with self control,
Who curbs his temper and his tongue,
And though he may be big and strong,
Would scorn to do the slightest wrong
To any living soul.

Who is the truly brave?
The boy who can forgive,
And look as though he had not heard
The mocking jest, the angry word,
Who, though his spirit may be stirred,
Yet tries in peace to live.

Who is the truly brave?
The boy whose daily walk
Is always honest, pure and bright,
Who can not lie, who will not fight,
But stand up boldly for the right,
And shuns unholy talk.

Who is the truly brave?
The boy who fears to sin,
Who knows no other sort of fear,
But strives to keep his conscience clear,
Nor heeds his comrade's taunt or jeer,
If he hath peace within.

Who is the truly brave?
The boy who dares to pray,
And humbly kneeling, seeks the face
Of God, and asks supplies of grace
To help him run the Christian race,
And walk in wisdom's way.

The Little Worker.

Dear Children: I want to tell you about this little paper. It is, beyond doubt, the best child's missionary paper I ever saw; and is only twenty-five cents a year. Just think of it!—only that small sum for an eight-paged paper for a whole year; and it is as chucked full of good reading matter as your stockings are of good things to eat on Santa Klaus' night. Send to Miss Sallie Stewart, of Oxford, Ga., for a sample copy and see for yourself. Or, better still, send twenty-five cents and get it for a year. When you have seen what a good thing you have in this paper, don't be selfish; but try to get every one of your little friends to subscribe for it, that they may also be happy in the possession of this most excellent paper. The reading is so arranged that the tiniest reader can read and understand; yet the grown children and the mamas and papas will enjoy reading every word of it.

HOUSTON, Miss.

The Blarney Stone.

A great many curious legends are started, nobody knows how, and repeated nobody knows why, and the legend of the Blarney stone is one of them. About four miles northwest of the city of Cork, in Ireland, are the ruins of Blarney Castle, and near the summit of a large square tower, which used to be the donjon or keep of the castle, is the stone which is said to give the person who kisses it the power to say pleasant things, to flatter his friends, and to pretend to like those that he does not like at all. It is a very great blessing to have a pleasant tongue, but it is to be feared that those who are called "blarneys" are not often honest, and say what they do not mean in order to coax others to do what they want them to do.

It is not known just how the Blarney stone first received its supposed power. It is said that more than two hundred years ago the owner of the castle was taken prisoner by the English, and promised a great many times that he would surrender the fortress. Each time he invented such plausible excuses for delay that the word "blarney" came to mean a soft, pleasant, but deceitful manner of speech; and it may have happened in this way that the story started that to kiss a stone in his castle would make the person who did so like that owner of Blarney Castle, who was "smooth, pleasant, but deceitful" in speech.

The position of the stone in the wall is such that he who wishes to kiss it must climb above it, and then have some one hold him by the feet while he hangs himself down the outside of the wall till his head is opposite the stone. A foolish thing to do, you think. Well, it is; and it is also foolish to believe that the stone can have any power over any one's tongue; but there are a great many of the more ignorant people in Ireland who believe firmly in the power of the stone, and it is often said of anyone who uses pretty compliments that he has "kissed the Blarney stone."—N. Y. Advocate.

Edison's Workshop.

There is so much said just now about that wonderful little talking-machine called the phonograph, that our young folks may like to know something of its inventor. Thomas A. Edison, when about fourteen years of age, was a train-boy on the Grand Trunk railroad of Canada. He also edited, printed and published a little paper of his own (called the Grand Trunk Herald), which shows that he must have been a lad of ability and energy.

Edison lives in Llewellyn Park, Orange, N. J., where a few years ago he bought a handsome house, situated on a side-hill, commanding a fine view of the country between Orange and New York. Not far from his home is his workshop. The main part is two hundred feet in length, fifty wide, and perhaps fifty feet high. There are four one-story wings, and in the rear may be seen the tall brick chimney, at the base of which are the engine-buildings.

One room in the main building is a library, elegantly furnished, and the books are scientific works intended for the use of those employed in the establishment. Lectures are also given once a week, for the benefit of the employees, in the lecture-room, which is over the library.

The room next to the library would, perhaps, be the most interesting to us, for here in closets, drawers, and bottles are to be found samples of almost "every thing imaginable." All kinds of feathers and furs, snake-skins, bones, and teeth of such creatures as narwhals, rhinoceri, and sharks; gums and spices, etc. The reason for having such a collection is that Mr. Edison has to try a great many things in his experiments before he finds the right one; and he does not wish to wait to send to Africa for an ostrich feather, or to Labrador for a seal's tooth, when he happens to need one.

There are rooms where machinery is made, a chemist's room, testing-rooms, and many others, which we have not the space even to mention; but we must speak, in closing, of the phonographer's studio. Here may be seen pictures of the phonograph as it was fifteen years ago by the side of the perfected machine of to-day, and many other interesting things. But the most wonderful thing about this room is that the pictures of patented inventions that hang on these walls, though numbered by hundreds, are all the work of one man.—N. Y. Christian Advocate.

SOMETHING FOR BOYS.—Science gives the following significant facts concerning the results of smoking by boys: "In an experimental observation of thirty-eight boys of all classes of society and of average health who had been using tobacco for a period ranging from two months to two years, twenty-seven showed severe injury to the constitution and insufficient growth; thirty-two the existence of irregularity of the heart's action, disordered stomachs, cough, and a craving for alcohol; thirteen had intermittency of the pulse, and one had consumption. After they had abandoned the use of tobacco, within six months' time one-half were free from all their former symptoms, and the remainder had recovered by the end of the year."

Household.

Mothers, Speak Low.

I know some houses, when built and handsomely furnished, where it is not pleasant to be even a visitor. Sharp, angry tones respond through them from morning till night; and the influence is as contagious as measles, and much more to be dreaded in a household. The children catch it, and it lasts for life; an incurable disease. A friend has such a neighbor within hearing of her house when doors and windows are open, and even Poll Parrot has caught the tune and delights in screaming and scolding, until she has been sent into the country to improve her habits. Children catch cross tones quicker than parrots. Where mother sets the example you will scarcely hear a pleasant word amongst the children in their plays with each other. Yet the discipline of such a family is always weak and irregular. The children expect just so much scolding before they do anything they are bid; while in many a home, where the low, firm tone of the mother; or a decided look of her steady eye, is law, the children never think of disobedience either in or out of her sight.

O mothers, it is worth a great deal to cultivate that "excellent thing in a woman," a low, sweet voice. If you are ever so much tired by the mischievous or willful pranks of the little ones, speak low. It will be a great help to you to even try to be patient and cheerful, if you can not wholly succeed. Anger makes you wretched and your children also. Impatient, angry tones never did the heart good, but plenty of evil. You can not have the excuse for them that they lighten your burdens any; they make them only ten times heavier. For your own, as well as your children's sake, learn to speak low. They will remember that tone when your head is under the willows. So, too, would they remember a harsh and angry voice. Which legacy will you leave to your children?—Christian Observer.

A HAPPY CHILDHOOD.—Dear mother, do not, I beg of you, try to make your little woman "ladylike." Nature will do that in spite of you. Of course, you will teach her good manners, as you do your sons; but do let her enjoy her youth unconscious of what custom has decreed "proper" for girls. Let her develop a strong, healthy body to endure the strains which must come upon it later. Don't add another "broken-down" woman to the world. Let her romp; encourage her to climb; fit her for tramps in the country with her brothers; try not to let her suspect her hereditary bondage to clothes. This is one of the hardest things to accomplish, for public sentiment is all against you; but do your best. Dress her as strongly and plainly as she can bear and not feel herself unpleasantly unlike her mates; and then let her run and grow, and forget that she is doomed to be banded, and swathed, and pinched, and made uncomfortable all the days of her life after her happy school years. Give her a free, careless, happy girlhood to look back upon, to keep in her mind as a sunny picture forever.—Oliver Thorne Miller.

THE POSTAGE STAMP.—The value of the postage stamp as a time-saver seems to be unknown to most women. The readiness with which half the women you know will take upon themselves errands that really require a great deal of time rather than do the errand by the aid of the post is amusing. Sometimes it is pathetic. A busy woman with many calls upon her time will go a long way to change a pair of gloves or to return a borrowed handkerchief when a postage stamp would save her an hour of time. Short letters will take the place of calls in nine cases out of ten, when the calls are merely for small errands. The truth is, there is too great a regard for those small expenses which are after all economies with most of the less rich half of creation.—Boston Transcript.

Mr. P. D. D. Delacroix, Cypremort P. O., La., Nov. 30, 1888, says: "Three years ago an agent representing Dr. Davis' Compound Syrup of Wild Cherry and Tar came into my store. Being busy, was unable to give him any time. Before leaving he gave me a sample bottle of Davis' Wild Cherry and Tar, asking me to give it to anyone suffering with a cough or cold. Several days afterward I caught a heavy cold. Remembering the sample, thought I would try it. Six teaspoonfuls cured me. Ordered a supply at once, and have sold it with satisfaction to all. It acts like magic on all my family, and I would not be without it. I take pleasure in recommending it at all times." One dollar bottles hold two and a half times as much as 50c. bottles.

Scientific.

Dust Essential to Fogs.

Nearly ten years ago John Aitken, of Edinburgh, proved experimentally that the presence of dust was essential to the formation of fog and cloud. He connected two receivers, one containing common air, the other air freed from dust by passing through cotton-wool, with a boiler. When steam was admitted into the first receiver, a fog formed within it; but when allowed to enter the one containing filtered air, not the slightest cloudiness was produced. Particles of water-vapor do not combine with each other to form a cloud-particle, but must have a free surface on which to condense. The particles of dust serve as nuclei on which the vapor condenses, and hence the more abundant the dust the more dense the cloud. When the vapor in the second receiver was brought by circulation against the sides of the receiver, it gradually condensed on these surfaces. The density of the fog formed in common air shows what a large amount of dust is present every day in the air around us. But the particles of fog do not represent all the dust-particles in the air. If enough steam is blown into a receiver full of common air to produce a dense fog, and after the fog has settled more steam is blown in, another fog will form on the dust which still floats in the air. If this is repeated a number of times, a less dense and coaser-grained fog forms each time, till at last no fog is seen, but the condensed vapor falls as rain. These dust-particles are not the motes that we see in the path of a sun-beam; for, when common air is passed through a flame, these motes disappear, but the air still remains a good medium for fogs. It is a finer kind of dust which furnishes the fog and cloud nuclei. The products of combustion are fog-producers, and especially the vapor from the burning of sulphur.—Popular Science Monthly.

Cold Waves.

According to Prof. T. Russell's explanation of the subject, in the American Association, the term cold wave is employed when a fall of temperature occurs in twenty-four hours of 20 degrees or more over an area of at least 50,000 square miles, and the temperature in any part of the area decends to 36 degrees. According to this definition, there were in the United States, between 1880 and 1890, 691 cold waves. In the great cold wave of January 17, 1882, the twenty-degree fall line included an area of 1,101,000 square miles, and the ten-degree fall line an area of 2,929,000 square miles. There have been in ten years six cold waves in which the area of the twenty-degree fall was more than a million square miles. The cold waves seem always to occur over the country covered on the preceding day by an area of low barometric pressure, or the southeast of the country covered by an area of high pressure. Where both occur, the cold waves attain their greatest extent. Only a few cases are recorded in which low pressure areas have not been followed by a fall of temperature at their centres. In twelve instances within ten years there were rises in temperature instead of falls. On the other hand, cold waves do not occur without the presence of an area of high or low pressure. The extent of the cold wave is dependent on the extent of the area of low pressure and the area of high pressure on the day preceding it. The shapes and relative positions of areas of high and low pressure are various, and are described and classified in the author's paper.—Popular Science Monthly.

Fill a tumbler with water until the surface of the water is rounded. Ask any one to guess how many coins you can drop into the glass without the water running over. one would naturally say "none," but you try how many (even as large as half and whole silver dollars) you can, by carefully dropping them edgeways in the center of the glass, put in before it overflows.—Selected.

Sunday-School Lesson.

LESSON XII.—December 21.

JESUS' PARTING WORDS.

Luke xxiv, 44-53.

GOLDEN TEXT.—If I go and prepare a place for you, I will come again, and receive you unto myself.—John xiv, 3.

TIME.—Forty days after the resurrection.

PLACES.—In and about Jerusalem.

44. And he said....these are the words—Words, by a Hebraism, signifies the things or events, signified by the words. These, refers to the events of his death, resurrection, and re-appearance. No longer need the apostles doubt, when this whole train of strange events is but the fulfillment of his sayings and of the Scriptures. While I was yet with you—The expression is worthy of notice, for it proves that Jesus felt that his departure was already accomplished. He was no longer with them otherwise than exceptionally. His abode was elsewhere. Law ... prophets... psalms—This threefold division of the Old Testament is the ordinary Jewish one, into the law, prophets, and hagiographa—the first containing the Pentateuch; the second, Joshua, Judges, the four books of Kings, and the prophets, except Daniel; the third, the Psalms and all the rest of the canonical books—Daniel, Esther, Ezra, and Nehemiah being reckoned as one book, and the Chronicles closing the canon.

45. Opened he their understanding—By a direct internal enlargement and enlivening of their spiritual faculties. Assuming, as we must assume, that this was the same meeting of the Lord with his disciples as that reported in John xx, 22, we have here that which corresponds with the gift of the Holy Spirit he then imparted to them. They were conscious of a new spiritual power of insight and knowledge which they had not possessed before.

46. Said unto them—A subsequent continuation of discourse to the same them, on the same general subject, but with less reference to time or place. And thus it behooved Christ to suffer—Read, thus it is written that the Christ should suffer.

47. Repentance and remission of sins—Comp. Acts ii, 38. Among all nations—Comp. Matt. xviii, 19; Mark xvi, 15; and especially Acts i, 8. See Gen. xii, 3, "all families of the earth." Psa. xxii, 27, "all kindred of the nations." Isa. xlix, 6, "a light to the Gentiles," etc. Beginning at Jerusalem—"For out of Zion shall go forth the law, and the word of the Lord from Jerusalem." Isa. ii, 3; Mic. iv, 2.

48. Ye are witnesses—How prominent in the minds of the apostles was this ministry of witness may be seen from Acts i, 8; ii, 32; iii, 15; iv, 33; v, 30-32, etc. Of these things—Of my death and resurrection.

49. Behold I send the promise of my Father—As far as St. Luke's gospel is concerned, the promise thus referred to would seem to be that of chap. xii, 13. The discourses preserved by St. John show, however, that there had been the more recent and the more definite promise of the Comforter, and so far St. Luke's report, vague as it is, presents an undesigned coincidence. This verse presents a striking instance of the habit of our evangelist of passing from one scene to another without giving any indication of an omission. There can be no doubt that a considerable interval intervened between this appearance and that recorded in the preceding verses. But tarry ye—Or, literally, but sit ye down. Be endued—Literally, put on as a garment. The disciples were to be invested—that is, clothed upon with a new power, which was to be as the new garb in which their old nature and its gifts were to manifest themselves, purified and strengthened, but not losing their identity.

50. And he led...as far as to Bethany—As far as into; that is, to the point where the "into" began; to the entrance, but not into Bethany. Luke implies, in Acts i, 12, that the ascension took place from the Mount of Olives, which agrees with the present passage, for Bethany is upon the eastern slope of that mountain. Barclay, in his City of the Great King, identifies a hillock overhanging the margin of Bethany, as clearly the true place. The summit of the mount, where now stands the Church of the Ascension, certainly could not have been the spot. Blessed them—This blessing belongs to all the faithful, for they were all represented by the eleven, and those that were with them.

51. The original conveys a clearer impression. He stood apart from them (aorist), and was gradually borne into heaven. The same image is involved in the expression used (Acts i, 9), "while they beheld;" and in our Lord's own words (John vi, 62), "what and if ye shall see" (properly "gaze upon" as on a spectacle) "the Son of man ascend up where he was before?" And carried up—Not by angel or by a cloud, but absolutely, and without reference to any particular agent. The tense should be translated literally, was being carried up. We must imagine our Savior slowly rising above his disciples, with his hands still raised in the attitude of blessing, until a cloud conceals him from the eyes of his followers. The withdrawal of his bodily presence preceded his spiritual omnipresence.

52. And they worshiped—Or, and when they had worshiped him. The verb "worshiped" can only signify, in this context, the adoration which is offered to a divine person. Returned to Jerusalem—St. Luke mentions the appearance of two angels before the return of the disciples in Acts i, 10, 11. With great joy—Now, at last, the disciples found the fulfillment of their Lord's promise that "their sorrow should be turned into joy," and that joy—the joy of knowing their Lord and their Friend was at the right hand of the Father—was one which no man could take from them. The joy of the disciples, in consequence of their Master's exaltation, which was a pledge of the victory of his cause, already fulfilled the saying of Jesus: "If ye loved me, ye would rejoice, because I said I go unto the Father, for my Father is greater than I."

53. Continually in the temple—In the closing words of the gospel St. Luke anticipates the beautiful description of the life of the apostolic church which he has given us in Acts ii, 46; iii, 1; v, 21-42. Their days were spent, not in the routine of common life, but in the prayer of fervent expectation; and for this no place was so fitting as the temple, which their Master had taught them to look on as in very deed his "Father's house," the "house of prayer," in which the soul of the true worshiper could find access to its God. There, too, we must remember, all the memories of the precious days that had preceded the passion would be with them in their fullest intensity.

Help the Preacher.

Preachers are called a very sensitive class of man, and tho most of them will not deny the charge. The character of their work tends to make them sensitive. And because they are sensitive is tho very reason why they need the help which it is easily within the power of many, if not all, of their hearers to render them, especially when they preach. Any preacher who is quite indifferent to the listlessness of his hearers must be a very thick-hided and dull man, and, of course, a poor and uninteresting preacher. It may seem to be a very small matter, to a hearer, to cast his eyes around the church much of the time during the delivery of the sermon, as though the sermon were of no special interest to him; but it is a matter of much importance to the preacher. Even one disagreeable hearer (?) has done much to hinder some preachers from doing their best in the pulpit on a single occasion. On the other hand, even a thoughtful and attentive boy may greatly help a preacher. A certain preacher tells his experience in these words: "It was a pretty fair sermon, so the minister thought; at least, it had done good in other places. But he began to suspect that for that Sunday lines had fallen to him in unpleasant places, when just then he noticed on the front seat a small boy, with big black eyes. He was sitting bolt upright; the black eyes were fixed on the preacher's blue eyes, and an electric message sped between the two pairs of eyes. The boy did not know it, perhaps, but the minister did know it. The sermon was not a five-minutes' sermonette for children; but the boy listened, just the same. In fact, the discourse was written for Father A. and Brother B. and Mr. C., and for the pillar behind the pillar; but, as they would not listen, the minister began to preach to the boy. He warmed to his subject; he recovered his failing grip on his theme and on the audience. He kept glancing into those black eyes for encouragement, and they never failed him, to the very end. Who was the boy with the black eyes? No one seemed to know, though the minister made inquiries after church; but one thing the minister did know, he helped the preacher, and in a sense, saved the sermon." Let members of churches profit by this important lesson. Let them studiously remember, every time that they go to church, that they are responsible, in a large degree, for the effectiveness of the pastor's preaching, in the matter of attentive listening. While it is of great importance that the pastor should have the power of the Holy Spirit to help him, it is also very important that he should be helped by the power of appreciative hearers.—C. H. W., in Watchman.

A Good Deal Easier.

It is a good deal easier to be brave than it is to be patient.

It is a good deal easier to mean right than it is to do right.

It is a good deal easier to do your duty than it is to get others to do their duty.

It is a good deal easier to be what God wants you to be than it is to be what the devil wants you to be.

It is a good deal easier to walk in the light than it is to crawl in the dark.

It is a good deal easier to tell other people what they ought to do than it is to tell yourself what you ought to do.

It is a good deal easier for a camel to go through the eye of a needle than it is for a rich man to enter the kingdom of heaven.

RELIGION AND REASON.—Piety is very different from superstition. To suffer piety to degenerate into superstition, is to destroy its essential character. But at the same time, there is nothing so truly reasonable, as to exclude reason from the province of faith; and nothing so truly irrational, as to lose sight of reason in things which are not necessarily of faith. The two excesses are equally dangerous—to shut out reason, or to make it all in all. Faith tells us what the senses can not tell, but it never contradicts them; it is above and not against reason.—Pascal.

The Human Body

"I have to acknowledge," said an ancient philosopher, "how well this body of mine has served my purpose." There are, alas! too many of us who are not in a mood to make a similar acknowledgment. But perhaps the body can be put in order, the machinery repaired, and the acknowledgments will follow.

"In the Wash"

That's where your delicate handkerchiefs come to be "more hole-y than righteous"—certainly not in the show-like service required of them—more or less true of all things washed.

Give two equally delicate handkerchiefs equal service for one year.

Wash one. with soap—usual way—the other with Pearline without rubbing, as directed on each package—wash the one you value most with Pearline—it will be far the best at the end of the year.

The old-fashioned way of rub, rub, rub, is slow work, poor work, slow death to women—quick death to fine things, and renders coarse things useless long before their time.

Pearline does away with all this. Costs but five cents to try it; directions for easy washing on every package; easy for you, easy on things washed. We can't make you try Pearline—you would thank us if we could. Millions are grateful for its help. Envious soap makers try to imitate it—borrowed brains are cheap—and so are their productions.

Send it back Peddlers and some unscrupulous grocers will tell you, "this is as good as" or "the same as Pearline." IT'S FALSE—Pearline is never peddled, and if your grocer sends you something in place of Pearline, do the honest thing—send it back. 174 JAMES PYLE, New York.

Royal Baking Powder

ABSOLUTELY PURE

The Clergy of America take kindly to Life Insurance, and have been its firmest champions. They fight for it and thoroughly believe in it. There are many splendid financiers in the church; that they are intelligent and thoughtful for their future goes without saying. All denominations seek the protection of Life Insurance, and are careful to select the company offering the greatest security and the most advantageous terms to policy-holders.

The Episcopal Diocese, of New York, has an Insurance Fund for all of its members, and the Mutual Life, which is the largest and strongest company in the world, with over $122 000.000 assets, has been officially selected by that body to issue all the insurance to these worthy people.

A Southern Department of this Company has been opened in New Orleans under the management of Mr. T. H. Bowles, with offices in Louisiana National Bank Building.

SIR PHILIP MILLER, the great English horticulturist, writing in 1740, says: "The best method to have Cabbages good is to procure fresh seed from abroad every year, for it is apt to degenerate in England in a few years."

The above is a simple illustration of the fact that the best seeds will rapidly degenerate under unfavorable conditions. The wise will take heed, therefore, and buy their seeds of D. M. Ferry & Co., Detroit, Michigan, whose world-wide reputation as the best and most reliable, as well as the most extensive seed growers and dealers, is due to the fact that they take advantage of every circumstance of climate, soil, methods of culture, selection of seed-plants, etc., to procure the best possible seeds and keep them up to that high standard.

Send your name to the firm's address, and you will receive a copy of their Seed Annual for 1891 free.

Mansfield Female College

Conservatory of Music and Art.

MANSFIELD, LA.

One of the most popular and flourishing institutions of the South. The Sixty-seventh Session opens September 10, 1890, and the Spring Term begins January 28, 1891, with an able and experienced faculty. Curriculum comprehensive, instruction thorough. Advantages in Music unsurpassed, as in the best conservatories. The pianos are new and of the best make. The Technicon and the Technophone are used to facilitate the work in the music department, placing this department beyond competition. Departments of Fine Arts and Industrial Arts under specialists.

The location is unsurpassed for beauty and attractiveness, and the school is celebrated for the remarkable record for good health maintained. The climate is the best in which to educate, and the place is the safest for girls. The main building is of brick, massive and commodious, with a large and well-shaded campus. Rooms large, well furnished, warmed and ventilated. Ample provision for the table of the best the market affords. All necessary comfort secured. Expenses very low and the school very economical. A new building with a large audience hall is in contemplation, and extensive improvements are in progress to make this the grandest institution in the State.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease, and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven Catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and, therefore, requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure in the market. It is taken internally in doses from ten drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address,

An Old Soldier.

HEAR HIS STORY.

NEW ORLEANS, Nov 22, 1890.

I, William A. Smith, member of Company 3, Thirtieth Louisiana Regiment, Army of Tennessee, was wounded in the left lung on the 18th day of December, 1864. As a result of that wound I have suffered since then with hemorrhages and have tried everything in God's world in the shape of medicine to cure me, but everything failed that the doctors gave me. But I have found a cure at last. I have been taking Dr. King's Royal Germetuer for five weeks, and I am now a well man. I have not had a hemorrhage since I commenced taking it. Anyone doubting this can call and see me at No. 5 Park avenue, sixth District, New Orleans.

WM. A. SMITH.

I refer to Judge J. U. Landry, who was my lieutenant during the war, and who is thoroughly acquainted with my case, and who will verify this statement. W. A. S.

The above testimony is but one out of many thousands which assert the matchless power of this wonderful preparation. The worst cases of fever—Swamp Fever, Typho-Malarial, Typhoid and Chagres Fever—yield every time to its proper use. Rheumatism, Neuralgia and Catarrh give way before it. As an appetizer and general tonic there is nothing like it. For sale by all druggists. Call at the Germetuer office, 202 Canal street, and investigate to your perfect satisfaction.

A consulting physician is on hand, who will make medical examinations and give consultation and advice free. Office hours: 9 a. m. to 2 p. m.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

DOMESTIC.

The Southern Lumbermen and Manufacturers' Association met in this city on December 9.

The National Board of Trade opened its twenty-second annual session in this city on December 8.

A recent severe case of lockjaw has been successfully treated in Philadelphia by the use of chloral aided by careful nutrition.

Alaska is the twenty-first division of the census bureau, and its enumeration will not be completed until the latter part of 1891.

It is estimated that 100,000 spruce and tamarack saplings will be shipped from the Pocono Mountains of Pennsylvania to New York and Philadelphia for Christmas trees.

The National Convention of the Farmers' Alliance met in Ocala, Fla., last week. The farmers have set out, as they declare, to eliminate sectionalism from the public councils, and from the conduct of the government.

The Secretary of War has declined to permit the employment of convicts in Louisiana on levees being built by the United States. He takes this action under authority of a law of 1887, which prohibits the employment on government works of persons incarcerated for violating United States statutes.

A permit has just been issued by the State Auditor of Illinois to permit the organization in Chicago of the Bank of London and Chicago. The new bank will have a nominal capital of $1,000,000. According to the Tribune of that city the backers of the enterprise are mainly London capitalists, with practically unlimited funds behind them.

The Republicans are greatly annoyed over the action of the Farmers' Alliance convention, in session at Ocala, Fla., in denouncing the Force bill, and they claim that the Alliance is controlled by the South. It is quite evident that this action hurts them, not so much because it arrays the farmers against them as because it proves the sectionalism of this infamous law.

The Farmers' Alliance, in convention at Ocala, Fla., demand an increase of the circulating medium, and that the government shall establish sub-treasuries or depositories in the several States, which shall loan money direct to the people at a low rate of interest, not to exceed 2 per cent. per annum. Alien and corporate ownership of land is denounced. The abolition of national banks is demanded.

The Force bill was the principal subject of discussion in the United States Senate last week. While the Republican senators appear to be acting in concert with regard to the Force bill, there is really much discord in their ranks, and some of the most prominent senators on the Republican side are not at all desirous that the bill should become a law, believing that if it did the result would be disastrous to their party.

Governor-elect Tillman, who was elected on the reform ticket composed of the Farmers' Alliance and other Democrats who wanted a change of government, was inaugurated in Columbia, S. C., on December 4. He said in his inaugural address: "We deny that 'all men are created equal.' It is not true now, and it was not when Jefferson wrote it. But we can not deny that it is our duty, as the governing power in South Carolina, to insure to every individual, black and white, 'the right to life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness.'"

There was presented to the United States Senate, December 5, a memorial from the citizens of Cairo and Mound City, Ill., asking that $9,000,000 be appropriated to the protection from floods of the lowlands of the great Mississippi Valley by means of a system of levees from Cairo to the Gulf. Their memorial sets forth that the government owns the river, and its natural flood waters that devastate the lower Mississippi Valley come from the territory of other States, and every principle of justice demands that the government should control these floods. St. Louis has also sent a memorial setting forth that States penetrated by the Mississippi River and its tributaries cover an area of more than 1,000,000 square miles, an area which embraces the major part of the population of the United States, which contributes fully 80 per cent. of the food products of the entire country.

FOREIGN.

Germany has officially recognized the United States of Brazil.

Mr. Balfour's Irish relief bill, in which he asks a vote of £5,000 to provide seed potatoes for distressed farmers, passed the committee in the House of Commons on December 5.

Commenting on the passage of the copyright bill by the United States House of Representatives, the London News congratulates America on having taken a great forward step in international honesty and justice.

The Irish Parliamentary party held a stormy meeting on December 6. Mr. Parnell refused to vacate the chair, and also to recognize the anti-Parnellite members. Justice McCarthy and his followers—a large majority—bolted the party.

Mr. Gladstone received the Irish delegates of the Parliamentary party with touching kindness and courtesy. Mr. Gladstone told the delegates that as soon as a new leader was appointed, he would be prepared to treat with him. The home rule movement would then proceed as if it had never received the smallest check.

Cold Waves

Are predicted with reliable accuracy, and people liable to the pains and aches of rheumatism dread every change to damp or stormy weather. Although Hood's Sarsaparilla is not claimed to be a positive specific for rheumatism, the remarkable cures it has effected show that it may be taken for this complaint with reasonable certainty of benefit. Its action in neutralizing the acidity of the blood, which is the cause of rheumatism, constitutes the secret of the success of Hood's Sarsaparilla. If you suffer from rheumatism, give Hood's Sarsaparilla a fair trial; it will do you good.

Cuticura Soap

FOR BAD COMPLEXIONS, RED ROUGH HANDS AND BABY HUMORS.

BAD COMPLEXIONS, WITH PIMPLY, blotchy, oily skin, red, Rough Hands, with chaps, painful finger ends and shapeless nails, and simple Baby Humors prevented and cured by CUTICURA SOAP. A marvelous beautifier of world wide celebrity. It is simply incomparable as a Skin Purifying Soap, unequalled for the Toilet and without a rival for the Nursery. Absolutely pure delicately medicated, exquisitely perfumed, CUTICURA SOAP produces the whitest, clearest skin, and softest hands and prevents inflammation and clogging of the pores, the cause of pimples, blackheads, and most complexional disfigurations, while it admits of no comparison with the best of other skin soaps, and rivals in delicacy the most noted and expensive of toilet and nursery soaps. Sale greater than the combined sales of all other skin soaps.

Sold throughout the world. Price, 25 cents.

Washington Letter.

(From Our Regular Correspondent.)

WASHINGTON, Dec. 10, 1890.

The annual agitation of the question of a high liquor license, which we have had for several years past, was precipitated somewhat earlier than usual this season by reason of the strong recommendation of the high license bill now before Congress, made by the district commissioners in their annual report. Since then the question is being discussed everywhere. The W. C. T. U. has come out strong against high license, or, in fact, any kind of license for dealers in liquor; and it proposes to do its utmost to defeat the bill now under consideration by a congressional committee. The question came up at this week's meeting of the Pastors' Alliance; but, there being a division of opinion, it was referred to a committee with instructions to investigate and report upon it at a future meeting.

The Pastors' Alliance has agreed upon a bill which Congress will be asked to pass, amending and regulating the marriage laws in force in this District.

Among the President's recent callers were Rev. George A. Ferris and wife, of Kohlnpur, India. Mr. Ferris is a graduate of Princeton College, and has, with his wife, been engaged in missionary work for ten years. They are now en route for India to resume their labors in behalf of Christianity.

The tobacco crusade of the W. C. T. U. is already bearing fruit. Bills have been introduced in both House and Senate which will, if passed, make it unlawful to sell cigars, cigarettes or tobacco, in any shape, to persons under sixteen years of age; and it will impose a fine of from $2 to $10 upon minors who may be convicted of using tobacco in any shape, in any street, avenue, alley or other public place of resort in the District of Columbia. I am assured by members of the W. C. T. U. that they believe the bill will pass without serious opposition; and a number of Congressmen, with whom I have talked on the subject, are of the same opinion. Some such law is certainly needed bad enough.

Preparations are already under way in this city for the entertainment of the 500 ministers that will attend the Ecumenical Conference, which convenes in Washington on October 21, 1891, and which is to continue in session for two weeks. This will be the second meeting of the kind ever held, the first having met in London in 1881. Three hundred of the delegates will represent churches in the United States and Canada, and the remainder will come from active religious organizations in Great Britain, Australia and New Zealand. The opening sermon is to be delivered by the Rev. William Arthur, who is rated as one of the greatest pulpit orators in England. This Conference will be of world-wide interest, for it will embrace not only the discussion of denominational matters, but all subjects bearing on the needs of the Christian world. It is expected also that a vast amount of evangelical work will be accomplished in all sections of this country by the visiting ministers. Bishop Hurst is chairman of the Executive Committee having the arrangements for the Conference in charge, and a Financial Committee has been appointed to raise a guarantee fund of $15 000, to pay the expenses of the visiting ministers.

Mrs. J. Ellen Foster delivered a strong address on temperance to a large audience, Sunday afternoon, in which she scored the drinking habit unmercifully. I quote a few of her remarks: "In Washington life is beginning to take on its usual winter activity. The social season is opening, not as the spring opens, with its glory of leaves and blossoms, but into a mad whirl of gayety, and the round of teas, receptions and entertainments. Oh, the season! the season! What does it mean? We temperance women know that it means temptation, and the ruin of many who have hitherto resisted it. What does the young girl see as she steps out of her nursery? The matron taking account of the judgment day that is to come? No; rather of a settlement and a brilliant match for her daughter. A society woman in this city recently told her own son that it was necessary for him to drink occasionally, lest people should think him a crank." Think, reader, if you can, of the feelings of this thoughtless woman should her son become a drunkard, which God forbid, because of the advice she gave him. Surely it is high time for social reform when a mother deliberately advises her young son to drink intoxicating liquor. For my part, I should greatly prefer that my son be known as a "crank" than as a drunkard.

Letter from Dr. Cottrell.

It is Saturday afternoon, and a dark one! I'm to preach three miles in the country to-morrow; and this lonely, private, secluded, retired room, in which nearly all my hours, by night and by day, are spent, could tell, if it could talk, of most grotesque modes of preparation. In spite of all my determinations to do like other men who seem to be approved, I find myself repeating the same, same—never-the-same—absurdities. I've begun of late, when bowing before the Almighty, to say: "I come not to promise, I come to implore! I come to adore! I come to give thanks for infinitely more than I could ever have dreamed for me was in store!" The sources of sentiment—the occasions of emotions that heave my soul like the swellings of the sea!—how simple and trifling!

A negro preacher—Rev. Elias Cottrell, educational agent for his church—appeared before our Conference, at Bowling Green, Ky., a few weeks ago. Introduced by Bishop Hargrove, he spoke of his having belonged, in early life, to Benjamin Cottrell, of Marshall county, Miss.; of the manner he and the other negroes hid the valuables belonging to their master from the Federal soldiers. Much else he said, in the way of criticism and narrative, protesting against the mistaken policy of office seekers, by which the negroes and their best friends—their former owners—are alienated. Said he: "I meet here in your Conference, Dr. J. B. Cottrell. I don't know much about him, for I was born after he left his brother Ben's, and went back to his mother in Alabama; but if he is as good a man as his brother—my old master—was, there is not a better man on this earth!" How my soul was thrilled by those words! The father of the speaker was Uncle Dan, my brother Ben's right-hand man on the farm. He was the best friend of my orphan boyhood. From his lips—as I would work by his side in the field, or ride the off-wheel mule as he drove, hauling in the crops—I got impressions that shaped and colored my character. Criticisms of the preachers and of the neighbors; his estimate of the several Presidents of the United States as derived from pictures of them in a volume of United States history he had in his cabin, and delineations of preferred characteristics of horses, mules, dogs, and the like—these determined my estimates. My tomato-red rooster I named John Quincy Adams, because Uncle Dan thought the face of Adams the most intellectual of all who had been President. He knocked off his spurs against the ledges of the barn wall as he fought with Jim Pegues' game. After that he could whip any rooster, just with his bill and claws, the boys would bring over. Finally, I saw him dead, lying in the barn-yard. I grieved as much, later in life, when I heard the announcement, at the citadel in Charleston, S. C., that Calhoun was dead.

Aunt Anarchie, who did the milking and the carding and the spinning, was the grandmother of Elias Cottrell. She was the mother of Uncle Dan's wife. How often I've listened to Aunt Anarchie tell the wonders of her Christian experience! She heard many things and saw many sights when she was "seekin' of de Lord!" Well, to sit and contemplate the scene of the grandson of my old Aunt Anarchie—the son of Uncle Dan—addressing the Louisville Conference, and the audience crowding the hall, awakened many reflections; and since then, from occasion of what there transpired, there have come up to memory, cumulatively, the scenes of my boyhood on the farm; of my being a mourner at the protracted meeting at old Sylvestria Church, where the school-girls thronged the altar, and where the older people wept, and wrung their hands and rejoiced. McMahon, Morgan, Jarrett, McPherson and Dodson were the preachers. Their daughters were boarders and students in brother Ben's academy. What a multitude now in the peacefulness of cemeteries! These memories, and many more connected with other environments, awaken to all the delights of the royalest grief; and I can just sit here and think of Wm. Harris, Tom Abernethy, Father Pilley, Jim Shores, William Motley and Frank Grace; of Tom Weir, and Cameron, and Jim Peebles, and many, many others. "My mind to me a kingdom is."

By the way, I dreamed the other night that I was at Conference, and an election for delegates to the General Conference was being held. Three were to be elected. I voted for F. M. Grace, Walter C. Harris and Thomas S. Abernethy, Jr. When the ballot was read out, it was exclaimed by the one who read it: "Why, two of these have been dead for years, and the other is not a member of this Conference!" A general laugh ensued, and I felt the embarrassment of having enacted the absurdity. Men who have inspired confidence and won esteem have not lived in vain! J. B. COTTRELL.

FRANKLIN, KY., Dec. 6, 1890.

Louisiana Conference Notes.

It used to be, "To Conference and back," was a prolific source of events to write about, and no letters were read with more zest than these. But in these latter days such is the facility and rapidity for travel that, in going and coming, time is so nearly annihilated there is no time or occasion to see or hear incidents by the way. Then, such is the improvements made by the Bishops in dispatching business, that four or five days is all they want to wind up the business of an Annual Conference; and if it were not for the Sabbath service, many a Conference might be closed out on Saturday night. How different in olden times! I believe it was the second Conference I attended after being admitted, that was protracted some fourteen days. These are days of electricity, phonography, not to say of air ships. Why should we hesitate to believe the possibility of anything which does not conflict with inspiration?

Bishop Haygood, by his easy and rapid method of dispatching business, and his congeniality, very soon captured the whole Conference. One thing struck me as new and forcible. At the close of the first day's session of the Conference, in order to get information and to give the people and preachers an opportunity to deliver themselves in reference to their several appointments, he said: "I will give a reception at my room to-day, from two to four o'clock, that they may interview me as to their several interests." It is doubtful, however, whether some of these will ever avail themselves of a like occasion. The Bishop was too far-seeing and too big-souled to be influenced by merely personal or local interests. The Bishop's method of preaching was simple and strong, not to say novel. In coming out of the church after the sermon on Sunday, I heard the remark, "The way he handled that audience reminded me of a cat playing with a mouse." The Bishop's personal style and dress, his slouched hat, unique-cut coat, to say nothing of his black traveling cap, seemed to be wanting in the dignity of a Bishop's style. I am no great stickler for dress; but there are certain habits and tastes in dress that no man can well afford to ignore. The Bishop expressed very great sympathy and tenderness for worn-out preachers, widows, claimants on the Conference. He would make you believe they are worthy of all honor.

By the way, the accumulation of the claimants on our Conference are outstripping the collections, and in that proportion lessening their support. A uniform effort, however, upon the part of the church would keep the latter abreast with the former.

The Conference session was unusually harmonious from the beginning to the end. A little mouthing, however, was indulged in by some who protested, as they say, against transferring men for special appointments, and they the very best in the Conference. If that is so, and none but men equal to the best appointments are transferred, it won't be long till all our preachers will be equal to the best appointments and the thing will break down under its own weight.

An Annual Conference occasion is a source of inspiration to an itinerant preacher that he can not afford to lose.

This made the forty-sixth session of the Conference since I was admitted, and I failed to attend only three.

There is nothing I love to sing so much as, "I love thy church, O God!" etc. J. P.

Mount Ebal and Mount Gerizim.

I saw the request that had been made of Dr. Carradine to see if it were possible to hear the blessings and cursings from Mount Gerizim and Mount Ebal, according to the account thereof in the Scripture. I have just read his "Letter No. 35," and, observing that Dr. Carradine says: "After measuring the distance with the eye, and walking over much of it; after viewing the summits from the valley, and after climbing Mount Gerizim and viewing Mount Ebal over against me and the valley from above, I left, firmly convinced of the truth of the scriptural account," I concluded to send you Bishop Marvin's account of his practical demonstration of the truth of the scriptural account.

Yours, J. R. BINGHAM.

"The time had now come for the accomplishment of a purpose long since formed by H. and myself—the reading of the blessings and curses, responsively, on Mount Gerizim and Mount Ebal, with a view of ascertaining if the space between might be compassed with the human voice. We had detected the very spot where this must have taken place, at first sight. There is no mistaking it. There is a natural rock-pulpit on each of the mountains at the point of nearest approach to each other—the one just opposite to the other. At this point the level ground is, to my eye—for we made no measurements—about a half-mile wide; and from the edge of the level ground to the rocks from which the responsive utterances must have been delivered, the ascent was, perhaps, a quarter of a mile on each side, putting the two at a distance of a mile, or near it, on a straight line. In both directions from this point the valley widens, so that a countless host might be assembled in it and on the foot of the respective mountains. The man who sees the place once can never doubt as to the question of room for the people to stand, even upon the supposition that there were three millions of them actually present. Mr. Hendrix took his stand on Mount Gerizim, and Mr. Samson on Mount Ebal. I and our guide stood in the valley between when the reading commenced. Every word, every syllable, every vowel, every consonant pronounced by the two men reached my ear distinctly, except a sentence or two lost in the noise of some passing travelers on the road; and that notwithstanding a current of wind against the voice of Mr. Samson, who was the more remote of the two from my position. More than that, Mr. Samson heard every word from the other side, and Mr. Hendrix heard nearly every word from Mr. Samson, though the wind was adverse. The narrative of the responsive reading of the blessings and curses here has been criticised as impracticable; but the fact demonstrates that it is not so. Whether the dense atmosphere of the narrow valley, or whether the rock walls of the mountains act as a sounding-board, I do not know; but I do know that the articulate utterances of the human voice reach out over this great space with astonishing distinctness. Before the reading began I conversed with both men as to the right position for them to occupy.

"What a scene was that when all the congregation of the tribes was assembled here in this valley, with the women and the little ones, and the officers and elders and judges stood, some on this side and some on that, these shouting out the blessings in unison, and those the curses; all the people—three millions—shouting back with one voice, Amen!"—(To the East by Way of the West, pp. 401, 403.)

The Ecumenical Conference.

The first Conference of delegates from all of the Methodist Churches in the world was held in London, in September, 1881. Before the adjournment of that body, it was resolved to hold a similar meeting in the United States in 1891. Pursuant to this action, the General Conferences of the two Methodist Episcopal Churches meeting in New York in May, 1888, and St. Louis in May, 1890, appointed Committees of Arrangements for the forthcoming Conference in 1891.

The General Committee, consisting of representatives of all the Methodist Churches in North America, was called to meet in Philadelphia on November 19, 1890. The Methodist Episcopal Church and the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, the Methodist Church, Canada, the three Colored Methodist Churches, and the Evangelical Association, were represented by commissioners. Bishops Hargrove and Hendrix, Drs. Harrison and Whisner, from the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, were present.

Bishop Foss, of the Methodist Episcopal Church, was elected president of the commission, and Bishop Hargrove, vice-president. A Committee on Location was appointed, and nominations for the place of meeting were called for. Nashville, Tenn., was the only city that gave an unconditional invitation to the Conference.

After a careful examination of all the conditions and requirements of the occasion, the city of Washington, D. C., was selected for the place of meeting of the second Ecumenical Conference of Methodism, and October 21, 1891, was appointed as the time for the opening of the sessions.

The commission was influenced chiefly by the desire of the British delegates, who were indisposed to come into the interior of the country. The capital of the nation, centrally located, and not far from the seacoast, Washington City possesses peculiar advantages for such a meeting.

By arrangement with the British Committee, it was agreed to limit the number of delegates to five hundred, of which number the Eastern section, composed of Europe, Asia, Africa, and Australasia, were allowed two hundred, and the Western section, the United States and Canada, three hundred delegates. The apportionment of delegates to each church having been made, approximately, by the authorities of the Methodist Episcopal Church, a Committee on Apportionment was appointed to revise and arrange the matter on an equitable basis. Bishop Hurst and Dr. Monroe, of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and Dr. W. P. Harrison were appointed upon this committee.

An Executive Committee was appointed, consisting of nineteen members, four of whom are from the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. Bishop Granbery, Dr. W. P. Harrison, Dr. P. H. Whisner, and E. B. Prettyman, Esq., of Baltimore, are the members of the Executive Committee from the South. A Finance Committee, also consisting of nineteen members, was appointed. Col. E. W. Cole, of Nashville; Jesse B. Wilson, Esq., of Washington City; John P. Branch, Esq., of Richmond, Va., and Julian Carr, Esq., of Durham, N. C., are the members of this committee from the South. The General Committee passed a resolution conferring upon the Executive Committee all the powers possessed by the General Committee, so that the smaller body may take any step necessary to perfect the arrangements for the Conference.

The Executive Committee appointed a Committee on Programme and Correspondence, whose work involves the entire arrangement of subjects to be considered, and speakers to be appointed. On this committee Bishop John C. Granbery and Dr. W. P. Harrison were appointed from the Southern Methodist Church.

A Guarantee Fund of $15,000 is to be raised to pay for the entertainment of the foreign delegates, and for the necessary expenses of the various committees required. Of this amount each church is expected to raise the share indicated by the number of delegates to which it may be entitled. The Methodist Episcopal Church, South, is requested to raise $5,000 for these purposes. The North Alabama Conference, at its recent session in Birmingham, Ala., resolved to collect $200, and to forward this sum immediately to Barbee and Smith, Book Agents, at Nashville.

I have been requested to place this matter before the church at large, and as the Conference sessions are nearly over, it will be necessary to communicate directly with the presiding elders. I will be greatly obliged if the postoffices of the presiding elders can be furnished to me within the next six weeks. The time is short, and it is due to our church that we should be adequately represented in this great enterprise.

The Programme Committee meets in New York on December 5, 1890, and as Bishop Granbery can not attend, I am compelled to be present at this important meeting. The committee instructed me to state that the Bishops of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, are expected to furnish this committee with a list of the delegates from our church by January 1, 1891. The programme can not be arranged until the members of the Conference are known. Canada and the Methodist Episcopal Church have appointed their delegates, and the other churches are requested to do so at the earliest moment practicable.

These are only a few items that occur to me, and as matters of information, I give them to the readers of the Advocate. The Methodist Episcopal Church, South, will show an increase of forty per cent. over the membership of 1881, and in all respects we may be devoutly thankful for the divine blessings conferred upon us.

Letter from Japan.

MR. EDITOR: The last few copies of the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE contains several letters from brethren in the Mississippi Conference, strongly and earnestly urging the Conference brethren to send another missionary to the foreign field. These letters give me great joy, and I trust the means may be speedily forthcoming, and the man be found ready to say, "Here am I; send me." These letters do not say to what field they desire to send the new missionary; so I put in a plea for Japan—not that I am trying to work against another field (for surely they all need the gospel in an eminent degree), but I feel just now that Japan needs, at least, five or six more missionaries from our own church. We have places to occupy, and we want the men to fill them. The Presbyterian Church of the United States have determined to send men until they can place a man and his wife in every important city in Japan. That is the right spirit; and if they can send truly consecrated men, God will bless their efforts, and souls shall be converted unto him. Just at this time in Japan we need men and women who are truly consecrated to God, and who will be ready and willing to show, by their lives, that there is a mighty uplifting power in the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ. There are thousands, multiplied thousands in this land who are ready to accept Christianity as soon as convinced. They will cast away their idols to the moles and to the bats.

I send you a copy of a letter I received from a Japanese in the interior, a man I have never seen. This is, I think, the third or fourth letter I have had from him. I give it in his own words.

NOVEMBER 17, 1890.

My Dear Dr. Lambuth: The receipt of your kind answer, so longingly expected by every post, has afforded me inexpressible pleasure. I read the favor over and over again, each time increasing in the grateful feeling towards you, and now I hasten to thank you for so kindly and minutely acceding to my request, since you are so very busy. Besides giving me some intelligent and instructive informations, you were kind enough to give my friend so very nice and handsome present. How can I ever thank you enough for him? My heart is too full to do so at present! I shall see him early to-morrow morning, when I may have the pleasure of bringing him that beautiful Holy Bible with your message. I am sure it will afford him the greatest enjoyment. He is not a narrow-minded fellow, as it is generally the case with anti-Christians, or, at least, as generally supposed. So you may rest assured that he may read it through, and may obtain the true wisdom, as you desired him to. As for me, I am going on very well. I am very busy nowadays, as I have two schools, containing more than two hundred pupils in both, to teach every day. I am up at six o'clock in the morning, and go around the schools in Juirick-ha. And yet amid the pressure of business, I never fail to read the New Testament. Yes, I shall regard the words of God as my talisman, deriving from them sympathy with suffering and consolation in sorrow. Indeed, God will be merciful on me, a sinner.

Thanking you for your kindness repeatedly, and hoping this will find you in a good health, I am, sir,

Yours very faithfully,
YOZO NEMURA.

The friend he refers to is a Buddhist priest. Pray for both of them.

Yours in Christ,
J. W. LAMBUTH.

TRANSFERRED.

BY HELEN RENWICK M'MICHAEL.

I was only an unskilled workman,
But I loved my Master well,
And I held that to do his bidding
Was more joy than I could tell.

Then he called me to pass through his garden,
A garden that was vast and fair,
It was filled with the choicest treasures,
And grace and beauty were there.

There were spots where I fain would have lingered,
'Mid flower and fragrance and fruit
But the Master passed on, nor granted
The prayer of my half-uttered suit.

Till we came to a spot neglected,
I scarce could believe it true,
In the Master's transcendent garden,
There could be so much to do.

But I wrought with a willing pleasure
As I toiled there day by day,
And with tears and sometimes with laughter,
I cleared the rubbish away.

And a dream of surpassing beauty
Was ever before my eyes,
When the garden's most stately Master
I would greet with glad surprise.

I would trim the unsightly branches,
The wandering vines would train,
And the marsh's unhealthy moisture
Should fall like silvery rain.

From the rugged unsightly boulders
I would carve out forms of grace,
And erect for the Master's pleasure,
An enchanting resting place.

But before my work was accomplished,
E'en scarce a trace I could see
Of the grace I planned, came the message,
"The Master calleth for thee."

So I go, though I fain would linger,
For I hold that this is true,
He will give to his willing workman—
The work that he best can do.

Louisiana Conference Notes.

Monroe has long been noted for the hospitality of its citizens, and, though it was severely tested by a large Conference and a host of visitors, the test seemed to develop unknown resources, and the entertainment of the "Parlor City" was after the royal order. The ADVOCATE had the very best of courteous hospitality at the homes of Judge Gunby and C. H. Trousdale. The impression on the minds of the brethren and visitors is, "We have rarely had such generous treatment."

The Church Extension Board held its eighth anniversary meeting on Saturday night. The Board has been doing excellent work during the past year, though limited in resources. Several churches have been built by the help of the Board, and several applications for help will be responded to as soon as the funds come in. Dr. Morton made an excellent address, and the collection amounted to $175. This, added to the $875 raised in the morning for mission work, made a good show for one day by the Louisiana Conference. The amount would, doubtless, have been greater, but the evening was very unpropitious and the audience was quite small.

Sunday was a big day, notwithstanding the inclement weather and the muddy streets. The love-feast in the morning, conducted by John Pipes, was a time of spiritual refreshment to very many. Bishop Haygood preached to a house crowded to its utmost capacity a sermon of rare power. It seemed to be the universal opinion that no such sermon has been preached in Monroe for a long, long time. Dr. Morton preached at three o'clock, after which the elders were ordained. At seven P. M. the Conference met, and, after the usual resolutions of thanks and the Bishop's address, the appointments were read, and thus ended the forty-fifth session of the Louisiana Conference.

The following persons were ordained deacons: John F. Foster, Thomas L. Lallance, George E. Greene, Arthur D. McVoy, Jr., James J. Kelley, Charles F. Staples, E. L. Singletary, Noel B. Norwood, Benjamin H. Sheppard, Francis N. Sweeney and G. W. Garrett.

The following persons were ordained elders: W. Moore, R. P. Howell, S. S. Holliday, H. W. May, J. P. Callaway, R. Harry, D. L. Mitchel, W. B. Pilley.

Letter from Mexico.

MR. EDITOR: I had the pleasure of listening to one of our Mexican sisters talk last Sunday night. Our pastor had not arrived, and she held the congregation as if charmed. She left the City of Mexico, two years and a half ago, as a nurse to an invalid lady, who traveled through England, France, Spain and Italy, in search of health; but at last death claimed her, and her faithful nurse is again in her own country. When she stepped on the platform with a grace of movement peculiar to the Indian maiden (for she is one), and made a graceful bow, I felt such pride in her that every word she uttered impressed me deeply. She was a Christian, and member of San Andres Church when she left. A minister had given her a Bible that was her companion in all her wanderings. When she told how she walked through the streets of strange cities, asking for the Methodist Church, South, I wondered how anyone could say the Mexican was not faithful to any particular church. She said, when in Rome, she visited the Pope, and received three blessings from him, but did not feel that she was any better for them; but she did have a blessing that she carried in her own heart, that made such as man could give unnecessary. She spoke well and fluently and tenderly of the blessed Savior, who had been so loving and kind to her. I am so eager to have the means to employ this splendid woman as a Bible woman for our new church. Who will undertake to support her?

We were much cheered by a letter from the president of the "Edward McGehee College," telling us he had made arrangements to educate a Mexican girl in his college, taking entire charge of her, and paying all expenses. We selected the niece of our faithful teacher, Miss Roldan, who, for nine years, has taught in our mission, and told the sweet story of a Savior's love. I thought, as a reward of her faithfulness, one of her family should reap this blessing. Julio Roldan is the girl that I am to carry with me to Mississippi, to be educated by Rev. H. W. Featherstun and his noble wife. When Julio finishes her education, he is to return her to Mexico City, fitted for a Christian teacher in her own beautiful land. This is, indeed, good mission work, and the family truly appreciate the advantage to them and to Mexico. Bro. Featherstun has taken a step in the right direction, and I trust his desire to help us in this mission field may redound in blessings to him and his. I have not his permission to use his name; but I trust he will freely pardon me.

We are so happy over this mark of interest we can not keep the good news to ourselves. We are all at work, and happy in it. As far as I know, there is no cloud in the Mexican sky—at least, in the hearts of the workers. Pray for us more and more.

I am sure all our Bishops who have visited Mexico—also Dr. John—will agree with me in urging the building of a church in Mexico. I know there are many calls on our Christian people for various causes; but I am sure it is "more blessed to give than to receive." Poor Mexico is now open to the gospel. You may come in and possess the land for Christ our Lord. "Come over and help us," is our cry. We, who are here, do not wish you to do anything we can do; but, oh! there's much to be done, and only you can do it. May God bless you all more and more, as you work and pray for Mexico!

A Little Girl's Gift.

We often feel discouraged in our woman's parsonage and home mission work. Our people seem to take it up so reluctantly, and even the preachers are sometimes a check to our enthusiasm. But I have just received the sum of $1 25 from a little girl on Bro. ——'s work—all she had—which shows how readily the hearts of children are enlisted in every good work. I regret so much that her name was not forwarded with the money, as I want the little readers of the ADVOCATE to know who she is. Her mother had read to her from the recent church extension supplement to the Nashville Advocate, that unless help were speedily rendered, at least one preacher's family in our Western field would be without a house to shelter them from the cold. "Mama" said, "How much will you give?" Her reply was, "I'll div all I've dot." Beautiful example, and worthy of all imitation! Could anyone do more? And was she not animated by the same generous, loving, self-renouncing spirit which actuated the widow whom Christ commended above all the rich who cast in much? Where is another who will say, "I'll div all I've dot"?

May this $1 25 do its share towards bringing comfort to some preacher's home!

NEWTON, MISS., Dec. 8, 1890.

East Texas Conference.

The forty-sixth session of this Conference met in the Baptist Church, in the city of Tyler, November 26. The Methodists of Tyler have no church, but they speak with pardonable pride of the one that is to be. The brick work is rapidly advancing, and in twelve months the fifty-thousand-dollar church will be completed. Think of it!—a town of 7,000 inhabitants building a $50,000 church. Surely, they expect the town to grow, and are building for the future—a thing too often not done.

Bishop Galloway presided. This was his first visit to our Conference. It will not be his last, if a universal desire is met. He suits Texas. In the chair he not only satisfied, but pleased; in the pulpit he delighted in the superlative degree. His Thanksgiving sermon gave a desire to hear more from him. So it was by common consent that there should be services in none of the churches on Sunday, and that all would hear the Bishop in the Sam Jones Tabernacle. It was an immense audience that greeted the preacher, and the sermon was eloquent and strong.

The connectional interests were all represented by their special agents, except that of missions. Our own Campbell spoke in behalf of missions, and a stronger and more scriptural appeal it has not been the privilege of this writer to hear.

The session of the Conference was in every particular pleasant. The year had closed well; the church had grown in more ways than one; the laborers, I think, better paid than usual; then, as the Bishop said, the very elements favored us. A preacher remarked, "A petition could not have brought us better weather," to which an elect lady responded, "A good many petitions have gone up for just such weather." It is a common saying that Texas weather will fool the oldest gander in the land. But, ah, me! how she has behaved herself this fall. Our preachers are moving without mud, and they are moving, for there were many changes. Nevertheless, it is surprising at the large number of pastors that will be in their new charges on to-morrow, the first Sunday after Conference. Nor have I ever seen more universal satisfaction among the preachers with their new fields. They go, and have gone, to these hard fields in good spirits, and the Lord of harvests will be with them.

Below are the appointments.

A Mistake Corrected.

In the ADVOCATE, of November 6, under the heading, "Sunday-School Lesson for November 16," I find, "Jesus Condemned"—"Time, Midnight." In our International Lesson for that date we have, "Jesus Condemned"—"Time, About 9 o'clock A. M.," which every circumstance, as related by the evangelist, seems to prove the right time.

1. When Jesus was being arrested, he said, "This is your hour, and the power of darkness," showing that it must have been in the night-time in the garden.

2. He warned Peter that "before the cock crew, you shall deny me thrice," which is very reasonably construed, "Before day, you will deny me."

3. Luke, xxii, 66, says, "As soon as it was day, the elders of the people," etc., "led him into their council."

4. Pilate pronounces or, rather, allows the mob to pronounce sentence on Jesus, when we are taught that the Roman law did not admit of a verdict of death pronounced in the night.

From all this (and more) we must conclude that the time the condemnation was pronounced was not midnight. We see it is all plain. The three intervening hours, from "as soon as it was day" to about nine o'clock A. M., were taken up by going before Pilate, then to Herod's, and back to Pilate, and in line with the four histories of the lamentable fact.

The point I wish to make is: that if "midnight" is a misprint, the printer should be read a lecture on accuracy. If Hurlburt and Simpson make it "midnight," they are antagonizing some very heavy authority. They may be right. Then the eminent compilers of the International Lessons don't study their lessons well in Sunday-school. Why I write this at all is to say that all should be very honest, very careful and very accurate when we teach the plastic minds of youth the great divine truths of the Bible.

Our New Church.

About three years ago I started a Sunday-school in a little country school-house, and the good Lord blessed us abundantly in our work in this capacity, and our Sunday-school soon grew in interest until the schoolhouse was too small to hear the lessons without some confusion to each other. We consulted our pastor as to the propriety of building a church, although we felt we were hardly able; but he approved of it. We commenced with a subscription of ten thousand feet of lumber, to be sawed free of charge. From this beginning we got help from a goodly number of our friends on the circuit, and we of the Darlington neighborhood went to work, and we soon obtained a donation of two acres of land from Judge L. M. Pipkin and his excellent wife to build on, in the center of the neighborhood; and although we met with some opposition, we never forgot to pray for God's blessings on our enterprise, and before we finished our pulpit and altar, at Bro. Howard's last appointment, our dear brother, Willie Carroll, from East Feliciana, a local preacher, met us at the church, and said he was ready to help us in a protracted meeting that we had been anticipating as soon as the church was ready. So Bro. Howard was ready, and we were also ready, and they commenced preaching twice a day, and the blessed Lord was with us from the beginning to the close, and on Wednesday morning Bro. Howard organized the church with thirty-one members from the sister churches that were nearer our new church than they were where they had been holding their membership. Bro. Howard took in two new members the same morning, after which the naming of the church was proposed, and it was named Wesley Chapel, without a dissenting vote.

The Lord came and blessed us at every service. The preaching was done, and, according to our opinion, was well done, for the Spirit of the Lord was in it all. Preaching was done by Bro. Howard, our beloved pastor; Bro. Willie Carrol, who has endeared himself to us all, on account of the wonderful love he has shown for sinners, and his earnest, soul-stirring sermons he preached; Bro. Jack Haney, who also preached three very excellent sermons, which shows what is in him, for he has only been preaching but a few months, and dear Bro. Willie Van Valkenburgh, who, passing by, stopped with us and preached some impressive sermons and worked very earnestly for the salvation of souls. We had also other help around the altar. Bro. H. C. Newsome, our much-esteemed representative, was with us on several occasions, with his sweet, old songs of Zion and his earnest prayers, which are, by no means, of the least importance in such meetings. Our prayers are still going up to our heavenly Father, that he may increase the usefulness of the above names mentioned, for we certainly need many more such men to help break down the strongholds of Satan.

I never saw just such a glorious meeting only to last one week in my life. About the middle of the week Bro. Howard received my baby-boy ten years old, and one other little boy about thirteen years old, and an old gentlemen seventy-three years old into the church, and, to our great surprise, at the last service there was a dear old gentleman, almost blind and about seventy-six years old, with his daughter, who is the mother of grown children, and six others, from fifty-six years old down to about twelve years, was received into the church, making thirteen in all that joined the church. The last service brought more than one "Hallelujah to God!" for his blessings, for the blessed Spirit was there, and a great many testified that they had been blessed, and the whole neighborhood was awakened. It caused old feuds to be settled, and, no doubt, many others will join the church soon, for some have expressed themselves thus.

Before I close, let me beg the church at large to pray for us, that God may continue to pour out his blessings upon us, that our new church may be watered by the rich dews of heaven until its influence may spread all over the country and not leave one to advocate the cause of Satan; and to our heavenly Father we will ascribe our undivided praise.

MEETING OF THE TRUSTEES, AND WHAT THEY ARE DOING.

The following members of the Board of Trustees of Millsaps College are in session to-day at the Y. M. C. A. rooms, viz.: Bishop C. B. Galloway, president; A. F. Watkins, agent; T. J. Newell, secretary; J. J. Wheat, Winona; Dr. Luther Sexton, Wesson; Lieut.-Governor Shands, Senatobia; T. L. Mellen, Dr. C. G. Andrews, J. A. Lewis, Meridian; S. M. Thames, R. M. Standifer, Greenville; D. L. Swcatman, Winona; W. L. Nugent, Dr. W. C. Black, Maj. R. W. Millsaps, Jackson.

The object of the meeting was to hear reports from the secretary on money collected, the condition of the endowment fund, etc.

Mr. Watkins, agent, reported subscriptions to date, collected, in cash and notes, $57,215 75, leaving a considerable amount uncollected. Cash on hand, including a few small amounts reported this morning, is about $27,500.

Maj. R. W. Millsaps, treasurer, reported net cash on hand $26,276; total collections, $28,451, from which expenses of agent, amounting to about $1,275, are to be deducted. Maj. Millsaps stated that his original proposition was that when the church had raised $50,000 he would give a like amount, but had agreed later to give $25,000 when the church turned over that amount, and had done so. He asked that a committee be appointed to examine bonds he turned over, and Messrs. Shands, Sexton, Sweatman and Watkins were appointed.

A committee consisting of Messrs. Galloway, Watkins and Newell was appointed to prepare a report of the work done by the Board of Trustees to be presented to the Conferences.

Both the Mississippi and North Mississippi Conferences are to be asked to make an assessment of $1,000 for ministerial education in Millsaps College.

The report had gotten out that the location of the college was to be made at this meeting of the Board, but it was a mistake.

A resolution was passed to meet in Jackson on the first Wednesday in February to consider the question of location, at which time all places desiring to secure the college are requested to present their claims.—Clarion Ledger.

From the Work.

RIPLEY, MISS.

Please give us a little space in the ADVOCATE, as I am now just completing my fourth year in Ripley and New Albany station. Our four years here has been pleasant, though full of work, and some affliction. On the day of my arrival to take charge, our beautiful church at Ripley, which was built soon after the war at a cost of near two thousand dollars, was burned down. We commenced at once to build the second time on the ashes of our former churches, and have built a much more commodious house in modern style, with a tower on corner reaching one hundred feet towards the heavens; every dollar paid, and dedicated the fourth Sunday in July, last, by our own Bishop, Charles B. Galloway. With this people we have lived four years, and a more refined, intelligent and hospitable people would be hard to find. In sickness, they have proved themselves willing, constant and competent.

At New Albany, which is the crossing of K. C., M. and B. by the G. and S. I. R. R., county site of Union county, we have a beautiful frame church, complete in all its appointments; also clear of debt. Its membership is plucky, stand as firmly by their pastor, and as true to their church, and pay as liberally, according to ability, as any other church in North Mississippi. We have received into our church in this charge this year thirty-five members. Our assessments have always been paid as ordered by the Conference, though raised each succeeding year. We will not fall a whit behind any other year. We expect all the claims settled in full against the church by Conference, including the salaries of the presiding elder and pastor in charge.

We bespeak for the preacher, whose lot it may be to serve this people next year, a pleasant year, an agreeable people to serve, also a people who will co-operate with him, and make him love them, so he will not complain of the water disagreeing with him at the close of next year. May God bless the charge we now leave! and to him be the glory both now and forever. Amen!

D. W. BABB.

UTICA CHARGE.

The Lord has greatly blessed the work of our faithful and earnest pastor, Bro. N. J. Roberts, this year. The church has been greatly revived, and he has, by his gentle and loving ways, completely won the love and admiration of everyone. Our church, Reeves' Chapel, has paid more than it was assessed, and built a house over the cistern, and wired in the graveyard. It is the first time it has paid up in full for a number of years. I tell you, when the preacher reaches the hearts of the people, the stewards find it a great deal easier and more pleasant to reach their pockets; and if all preachers would do that way, there would be fewer long faces going up to Conference. I hope our presiding elder will influence the Bishop to send Bro. Roberts back another year, as he is the man for the place.

R. W. VEST.

PEARL RIVER, LA.

I was asked to write a note for the people at Slidell. They are very deserving, and it is a fine work and opening for great good. Bro. Brown has been successful at every appointment, except Covington; so I have been told. A brother there told him they "did not wish him to preach to them about their sins."

I hope to send something for the ADVOCATE before the year is out. Have been, per force of circumstances, playing the role of Martha, which is not to my liking. May God bless you and your work! Am glad you are going "to stay" with us.

L. CRARY SADLER.

EVERY DAY A LITTLE.—Every day a little knowledge. One fact a day. How small is one fact! Only one. Ten years pass by. Three thousand six hundred and fifty facts are not a small thing. Every day a little self-denial. The thing that is difficult today will be an easy thing to do three hundred and sixty days hence, if each day it shall have been repeated. What power of self-mastery shall he enjoy who, looking to God for grace, seeks every day to practice the grace he prays for! Every day a little helpfulness. We live for the good of others, if our living be in any sense a true living. It is not in great deeds of kindness only that the blessing is found. In "little deeds of kindness," repeated every day, we find true happiness. At home, at school, in the street, in the neighbor's house, in the playground, we shall find opportunity every day for usefulness.—Our Church Home.

SULLIVAN—After many weeks of extreme suffering, Miss SUSAN M. SULLIVAN closed her beautiful and useful life at the residence of her brother, W. J. Sullivan, Esq., in Caddo parish, La., on July 26, 1890, in the sixty-third year of her age and the forty-eighth year of her Christian discipleship.

The subject of this notice was a daughter of John and Esther Sullivan, pure-minded, simple-hearted, godly people, whose Methodism was Christianity in earnest, after the Wesleyan type. These parents and their children constituted a part of the writer's charge when on the Caddo circuit in 1847.

Miss Sue (as she was familiarly called) was converted at a camp meeting in Panola county, Texas, in the fifteenth year of her age, and not many months thereafter, while engaged in meditation and prayer at the root of a tree in her father's lawn, was happily converted to God.

A life-long acquaintance of the family who was present when Miss Sue first went to the altar as a peultent, and knew her well as a faithful Christian during her youth, said to the writer, "I regarded her as the most beautiful and lovely character I ever saw."

While Miss Sullivan was simple in her habits, plain in her adornments, and economical in expenditures for her own comfort, she was affluent of pure affection, sweet charities and good works. The odor of her unselfish sympathies, like the redolence of costly incense, pervaded the social atmosphere of every circle in which she moved. She was prudent, consistent, firm in Christian integrity and faithful to her convictions of duty, even when opposed to the views of the multitude. These luminous points of Christian character, added to the magnetic influence of her gentle manners and winning ways, gave a peculiar charm to a well-rounded Christian womanhood. Several orphaned children, consigned in infancy to her fostering care, now grown up and settled in different parts of the country, "rise up and call her blessed." One of these is an able preacher of that gospel which she so beautifully illustrated in her life.*

The claims of the heathen and all people destitute of the gospel were matters personal to herself. In the Woman's Missionary Society she kept a number of names on the roll whose dues she paid regularly with her own means.

Miss Sullivan, when not in extreme suffering talked with freedom and composure of the prospective fatal termination of her sickness. At an interview of the writer, a month before her death, she exclaimed: "Oh, how much I enjoyed the reading and the prayer! * * * I feel that my work here is done. If I live, it is only to suffer and wait. If it is God's will, I prefer to go. I am ready."

Thus lived and died one who has gone to join the Marys, the Marthas, the Eunices and Doreases in the kingdom. She left a brother and sister at the old homestead to mourn her absence, in which a sincere participant is her pastor. ROBT. J. HARP.

RYE—The subject of this notice, MRS. A. A. RYE, was born in Shelby county, Ala., April 8, 1820; was married to W. S. Rye, November 8, 1838, and with him was converted and joined the church at a camp meeting in Coosa county in 1842. She was the daughter of Philip and Catharine Woodtes. From Coosa county they moved to Lowndes county, Ala., and from Lowndes county to Mississippi in 1869. In 1882 to Crenshaw county, Ala., and from Crenshaw to Butler county in 1884, where she died, October 13, 1890. She was stricken with epilepsy on the morning of October 7, from which she never recovered. Under the influence of opiates, she realized very little either of her sufferings or her surroundings; but during her lucid moments she was happy, and expressed her readiness and her willingness to go. She had suffered a great deal, but always bore her afflictions with Christian patience and fortitude.

Aunt Rye (as she was familiarly known) was a good woman. However adverse the circumstances or unfavorable the conditions, she always maintained her Christian integrity and fortitude. She not only gave diligence to add to her faith, virtue, "fortitude," but all the Christian graces, and the result was a well-rounded Christian character. Attending church and getting happy, she would say she was "packing up—getting ready for the old ship." Well, she packed up, got ready; the summons came; the sails were unfurled, the ship weighed anchor, and on October 13 landed safely and triumphantly on the shores of everlasting life, "where the wicked cease from troubling and the weary are at rest."

She leaves an aged husband, three children, besides grandchildren, to mourn her loss. We commend them to the God whose tender mercies are over all his works. R. S. PILLEY.

RYLAND—Entered into rest in the early morning hours of the eighteenth day of November, 1890, SALLIE H. RYLAND, aged eleven years and nine months, beloved and eldest daughter of V. H. and B. R. Ryland.

Twenty-four hours later the gates of the everlasting city turned again upon their hinges to admit the pure spirit of the youngest child of these bereaved parents, little LUCY ALICE, who had gladdened their home for one brief year. "And Jesus said unto his disciples, 'Suffer the little children to come unto me.'" Sublime and comforting words uttered eighteen hundred years ago! How they reach down through the ages to soothe the stricken spirits and bind the broken hearts of the desolate ones who weep to-day at the grave of buried hopes! Not dead, thank God! but safe in the arms of the compassionate Savior, who loved the children in the days of his earthly ministry, and who loves them still so well that he takes them home to himself before the tender feet are torn among the thorns of life's pathway, and before the white souls are marred with the dust and scars of its warfare.

From babyhood Sallie had been her mother's help and comfort. Conscientious in the discharge of the many small duties that always devolve upon the eldest daughter; faithful, gentle, loving, thoughtful and unselfish beyond her years, she influenced to a remarkable degree the other children of the household. Young as she was, she had already given her heart to God, and dedicated her life to his service.

In her delirium she imagined she had lost her father. What a sweet thought that when she opened her eyes in the city of God she had found her Father, found him forevermore. May God send his angel of comfort to the lonely home! May those left behind walk by faith through the sea of this trouble until God shall make of its waves a wall upon the right hand and upon the left, between which they may journey toward the promised land, where their darlings await them.

CRAIG—The women of Burtonton, Pisgah and Carlisle Churches, members of the several societies, meet once a month at Burtonton Church, with lunch baskets, and attend to business. The death of one of the oldest members of Burtonton Church occasioned memorial services last month.

A gloom rests over Burtonton Auxiliary to Woman's Missionary Society, Mississippi Conference. Since our organization in 1882 two precious sisters, passing through the pearly gates, "have entered life;" Sister MARIA CRAIG, the last one but recently.

"Under the shadow of the Almighty's wing" floating clouds gathered over her life, sometimes with murky darkness, for "many are the afflictions of the righteous;" but the rifted cloud revealed the brightness of the face of the Most High, and she was faithful and true. Pronounced and outspoken, she journeyed on, one of the warmest friends of the missionary cause; and, ever ready with her mite box, she cheerfully responded to calls from the church and to private petitions for the relief of others. Being a true friend, she freely told us, also her minister, of what she disapproved in us.

We pray that her mantle may rest upon the little granddaughter, whom she made a member of our society years ago. May God bless the surviving members of the bereaved family, and unite them in that bright land, where partings and farewells are unknown!

Resolved, That we, the members of the W. M. S., W. D. C. Ex., and Aid Societies, unitedly favor these expressions of affection and grief.

Resolved, That a copy of the memoir and resolutions be sent to the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE, with a request for publication, one spread upon the minutes, and one sent to the bereaved family. MRS. E. D. JONES,
For Societies.

JACKSON—MRS. MARGARET BOYLS JACKSON was born in Perry county, Ala., November 12, 1851, and died near Meridian, in September, last.

When about seventeen years of age she experienced a clear conversion. It was at home, at eventide, when she first found the Savior. Immediately she thought of bringing her brother to Christ, and so intense was her desire that it was only at the earnest solicitation of her mother that she was persuaded, late at night, to retire. On awaking in the morning, and becoming conscious of a suspension of religious enjoyment, she severely censured herself and lamented her failure to spend the entire night in prayer, and would not rest until the family assembled and sang and prayed, and the joy of salvation was restored. And often in after life, when she found her spiritual strength waning, she would call together pious friends for a similar purpose. The evidence of a triumphant death is satisfactory. Love to the Savior was her ruling passion in death. Frequently, on the evening of her departure she stretched out her hands and called his blessed name.

J. D. CRYMES.

PEARSON—WILLIAM B. PEARSON was born September 27, 1859, and died of measles at Liverpool, La., October 13, 1890.

Bro. Pearson was a consistent member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, for some years before his death, and, though it was not his privilege to leave a dying testimony to his loved ones, yet we have what is better—the testimony of a devoted life to the cause of religion. Though not a leader in church matters, he was leadable—a rare grace in some places. He was always present on church days, and took an interest in any and all occasions of church service.

His father, brother, sister and sister-in-law had lately preceded him to the spirit-world, and were "waiting and watching for him." P. HOWARD.

DICKERSON—Died in Beauregard, Miss., September 3, 1890, Miss JENNIE DICKERSON, in the thirty-seventh year of her age.

As the first sweet flowers of autumn began to unfold their bright colors to the warm kisses of the sun, her pure spirit bade a fond adieu to loved ones here, and, folding itself in the spotless robe of immortality, was wafted home to God. Only an empty casket was left us. Grim death had stolen in and robbed it of its precious jewel, life. The bright eyes were closed in their last breathless sleep, the cold lips were sealed, the sweet voice was gone. Loving hands placed pale flowers about her and laid her away in the cold, damp earth.

Thus closed her earthly life, a life devoted to the service of God. As a woman, she was modest, loving and true. From childhood she had been devoted to the service of God. She would scorn to commit an act, however small, that would bring reproach upon the church. Her life was an example to all about her, and each day, as she worked for the Master, the light shone about her and illumed the path for wandering feet. But that pure life has passed from us. God called her name, and she obeyed the summons, and now up in his kingdom an angel answers to her name. Within those pearly gates a sainted mother has been waiting for her child, and now, clasped in loving embrace, their voices mingle with these singing praises to the Lord.

An aged father, a sister and brother weep disconsolate over their loss; but, look up, dear ones, although your star is shrouded here, it is still shining brightly for you, and her pure spirit beckons you to the other land, where peace and joy uninterrupted by temporal sorrows lives through eternal ages, without end.

COUSIN LOU.

VINSON—Rev. JOHN L. VINSON died August 16, 1890, at his residence in Jackson, Miss. Bro. Vinson was born in Anson county, N. C., August 16, 1830, and was, therefore, just sixty years of age. At nineteen years of age he came to Mississippi, where he has since resided—in Smith, Rankin, Madison and Hinds counties. He was married in 1851. His wife and four children survive him. He was licensed to preach in 1863.

In his family he was kind and affectionate. In his business relations he always maintained the character of an honorable man. He was never so situated that he felt it incumbent on him to join the traveling connection; but he made himself useful as a local preacher. He seemed in his native element when in the midst of a revival. Although considerable pecuniary sacrifice was required in order to do it, he always took a few weeks' vacation from his business in summer in order that he might labor in revival meetings. In these meetings he was quite successful. Many persons now in the church and many in heaven were turned from darkness to light through his instrumentality.

His end was peaceful and triumphant. He called his loved ones around him and spoke lovingly to each, asking them to meet him in heaven. He said that his spiritual sky was unclouded. He bore joyful testimony to the fact that our holy religion has power to sustain in the hour of death as well as amid the trials of life. May the great Head of the church sustain the bereaved wife and other loved ones! A FRIEND.

EMBREE—Died at his residence, in Wilkinson county, Miss., near Centreville, Mr. FELIX EMBREE. He was born January 7, 1805, and died October 23, 1890, aged eighty-five years nine months and sixteen days. He was married to Miss Elizabeth Whetstone, in August, 1832. They led a long and useful life together; both lived to see members of the fourth generation.

Mr. Embree was a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and one of Wilkinson's most esteemed citizens. He was especially fond of young people; consequently many of us miss his smiling face and kind advice.

The Christian's soul passes from the church militant to the church triumphant, where the struggles with temptations will end, and where hope will give place to fruition.

The kind wife, devoted children and loved ones, who are only separated from the departed soul for a time, may feel that the grave has over them a victory, and death has left a lasting sting; but at the last day, when the trumpet shall sound, the grave will give up its dead, and they shall assume a body similar unto the former; then we shall rejoice to recognize the faces of our dear loved ones!

It has been said that "the young may and the old must die;" and, oh, how true! It is hard to give up our dear old friends; but, oh, how much harder it is to give up our dear young friends! Let us ever trust in God, who is able, in his infinite wisdom, to make all things work out "for good to them that love and serve him."

Dyspepsia

Makes many lives miserable, and often leads to self destruction. Distress after eating, sick headache, heartburn, sour stomach, mental depression, etc., are caused by this very common and increasing disease. Hood's Sarsaparilla tones the stomach, creates an appetite, promotes healthy digestion, relieves sick headache, clears the mind, and cures the most obstinate cases of dyspepsia. Read the following:

"I have been troubled with dyspepsia. I had but little appetite, and what I did eat distressed me, or did me little good. In an hour after eating I would experience a faintness or tired, all-gone feeling, as though I had not eaten anything. Hood's Sarsaparilla did me an immense amount of good. It gave me an appetite, and my food relished and satisfied the craving I had previously experienced. It relieved me of that faint, tired, all-gone feeling. I have felt so much better since I took Hood's Sarsaparilla, that I am happy to recommend it." G. A. PAGE, Watertown, Mass.

BRONCHITIS

Is an inflammation of the bronchial tubes—the air-passages leading into the lungs. Few other complaints are so prevalent, or call for more prompt and energetic action. As neglect or delay may result seriously, effective remedies should always be at hand. Apply at once a mustard poultice to the upper part of the chest, and, for internal treatment, take frequent doses of

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral

C. O. Lepper, Druggist, Fort Wayne, Ind., writes: "My little sister, four years of age, was so ill from bronchitis that we had almost given up hope of her recovery. Our family physician, a skilful man and of large experience, pronounced it useless to give her any more medicine, saying he had done all it was possible to do, and we must prepare for the worst. As a last resort, we determined to try Ayer's Cherry Pectoral, and I can truly say, with most happy results. After taking a few doses she seemed to breathe easier, and, within a week, was out of danger. We continued giving the Pectoral until satisfied she was entirely well. This indisputable evidence of the great merit of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral has given me unbounded confidence in the preparation, and I recommend it to my customers, knowing it cannot disappoint them."

"Ayer's Cherry Pectoral cured me of a bad cough and my partner of bronchitis. I know of numerous cases in which this preparation has proved very beneficial in families of so that the medicine is known among them as 'the conseler of the afflicted.'"—Jaime Rufus Vidal, San Cristobel, San Domingo.

"A short time ago, I was taken with a severe attack of bronchitis. The remedies ordinarily used in such cases failed to give me relief. Almost in despair of ever finding anything to cure me, I bought a bottle of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral, and was helped from the first dose. I had not finished one bottle before the disease left me, and my throat and lungs were as sound as ever."—Geo. B. Hunter, Altoona, Pa.

ORGAN OF THE LOUISIANA, MISSISSIPPI AND NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCES OF THE METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH, SOUTH.

Rev. C. W. CARTER, D. D., Editor.

THURSDAY, DECEMBER 18, 1890.

North Mississippi Conference.

FIRST DAY.

The twenty-first session of the North Mississippi Annual Conference convened in Grenada, Miss., December 10. The Conference was opened by Bishop Galloway conducting religious services. Upon calling the roll a large number of preachers and delegates answered to their names. The former secretary, Rev. John Bareroft, having died during the year, the Conference elected J. S. Oakley, secretary, and as assistants, Thomas Cameron, T. W. Lewis and C. H. Owen. The Bishop introduced to the Conference Rev. H. C. Morrison, Missionary Secretary; Rev. D. Morton, Church Extension Secretary; Dr. Anson West, of Alabama; Dr. J. W. Boswell, of Arkansas, and Rev. A. F. Watkins, agent for Millsaps College.

The first annual report of Millsaps College was read and referred to the Board of Education. The names of the presiding elders were called, and they gave brief accounts of the progress of the work in their several districts, after which their characters were passed.

Question 8. What traveling preachers are elected deacons?

H. P. Gibbs, T. B. Hargrove and R. H. B. Gladney were called, characters passed and they were elected.

Ques. 7. Who are the deacons of one year?

B. B. Sullivan, J. T. Howell, J. W. Treadwell and W. W. Moss.

Ques. 12. What traveling preachers are elected elders?

F. P. Spencer, W. W. Woollard, D. M. Geddie, B. P. Fullilove, J. E. Buck, J. A. Randolph and J. A. Whitehurst were called, read their reports and were elected.

The Bishop announced that L. D. Worsham and E. H. Moon were received by transfer from the North Alabama Conference.

Bishop Lane, of the Colored Methodist Church in America, was introduced to the Conference and made an interesting address in regard to the origin and progress of his church among the colored people. He represented their educational work as improving, but still needing help, and a collection was taken for that purpose and ninety-one dollars realized.

After notices given, Conference adjourned with benediction by Dr. Morton.

SECOND DAY.

The Conference was opened by religious services conducted by J. D. Newsom. The minutes were read and approved. The Bishop introduced Rev. W. M. Hayes, commissioner of education; W. B. Palmore, editor of the St. Louis Advocate; W. D. Matthews, of the Arkansas Methodist.

J. W. Boswell was announced as a transfer from the Arkansas Conference.

Ques. 1. Who are admitted on trial?

B. P. Jaco, A. T. Buck, E. S. Lewis, R. A. Meek, R. B. Young and J. W. Ramsey having stood an approved examination upon the course of study, were admitted on trial.

Ques. 2. Who remain on trial?

C. W. Perkins, G. H. Lipscomb, R. O. Brown, J. C. Mimms, J. R. Rogers, W. J. Burt, H. C. Edmondson and J. C. Park having stood the examination, were advanced to the class of the second year.

Ques. 20. Are all the preachers blameless in life and administration?

The following were called, and their characters passed: J. Ritchey, E. H. Cacy, R. G. Porter, W. T. Barnett, K. A. Jones, R. P. Goar, W. J. O'Bryant, T. Cameron, R. M. Davis, H. L. Vaughn, H. C. Morehead, J. M. Wyatt, J. H. Brown, G. W. Gordon, T. G. Freeman, J. E. Thomas, J. M. Huggin, J. Porter, W. D. McCullough, A. J. Foster, J. W. Malone, W. S. Shipman, D. L. Cogdell, B. S. Rayner, T. J. Newell, T. W. Lewis, R. A. Ellis, J. F. Evans, C. N. Terry, D. C. Foust, B. F. Philips, J. C. Lowe, J. H. Smith, J. T. Moody, R. M. Evans, W. A. Dollar, A. W. Langley. J. R. Roberson's character passed, and his name was referred to the Committee on Conference Relations for the supernumerary relation.

The paper of W. M. Hayes, commissioner of education, in relation to Paine and Lane Institutes, was referred to a special committee, consisting of J. M. Wyatt, A. P. Sage and T. L. Foster.

On motion of J. D. Newsom and Amos Kendall, Rev. J. H. Brooks was invited to deliver, at this session, a discourse on his fifty years of experience and work in the ministry.

R. P. Lake presented the report of the Board of Trustees of the Grenada Collegiate Institute, which, after some remarks by President T. J. Newell, was referred to the Board of Education.

On motion of J. S. Oakley and T. C. Wier, the presiding elders were constituted a committee to nominate the examining committees and the Conference Boards for the next quadrennium.

After notices, the Conference adjourned with benediction by Dr. Sullivan.

THIRD DAY.

The Conference was opened with religious services conducted by J. W. Honnoll. The minutes were read, corrected and approved.

The committee on the case of G. W. Brown reported no grounds for further proceedings, and the report was adopted.

Ques. 5. Who are re-admitted?

None.

Ques. 20. The names of R. C. Callaway, W. B. Murrah, G. W. Bachman, J. S. Oakley, T. B. Malone, J. W. Suter, J. H. Mitchell, J. D. Newsom, E. H. Rook, W. W. Williams, T. C. Wier, J. D. Cameron, A. P. Sage, W. R. Rainey, W. C. Lester, J. R. D. King, J. A. Bowen, R. A. Burroughs, F. A. Whitson, N. G. Augustus, Eugene Johnson, J. T. Cunningham, H. R. Tucker, W. D. Bass, J. M. Barnes, M. E. Tumlin, B. R. East, T. Y. Ramsey, Jr., T. L. Foster, J. W. Bell, A. J. Jones, D. W. Babb, O. N. Koon, K. M. Harrison, J. W. Honnoll, J. H. Jacobs, H. B. Scruggs, J. W. Poston, J. A. Leech, Joseph Johnson, M. H. Honnoll, J. J. Brooks, J. W. Anderson, S. A. Ellis, A. P. Leech, E. L. Spraggins, J. H. Shumaker, W. C. Harris, A. B. Dearing, O. L. Savage, E. G. Kilgore, T. W. Dye, W. M. Young, W. W. Dorman, J. W. Dorman, C. H. Owen, J. B. Harris, S. D. Long were called and characters passed.

Dr. Morrison, Missionary Secretary, made some explanatory remarks about missionary literature.

The name of C. C. Grisham was referred to the Committee on Conference Relations for supernumerary relation.

Ques. 10. What local preachers are elected deacons?

J. C. Woodruff, L. T. Sargeant, T. P. Miller, S. Q. Bass and W. F. Rogers.

Ques. 14. What local preachers are elected elders?

None.

The report of the Committee on Conference Relations was read, and recommended that the supernumerary relation be granted to W. S. Harrison, D. M. Cogdell, J. W. Bates, J. R. Roberson; and the superannuated relation to S. B. Carson, A. A. Houston, J. H. Brooks, T. Y. Ramsey, J. M. Hampton, T. J. Lowery. Adopted.

The report of the special committee on the education of the colored people was read by J. M. Wyatt. It was an interesting document, and asked that $300 be appropriated to the purpose of helping Paine and Lane Institutes.

At this point Bishop Galloway called T. Y. Ramsey, Jr., to the bar, and, in a neat speech, presented him with a gold watch in testimony of the appreciation by the Conference of his faithful services as statistical secretary for the last ten years. Bro. Ramsey replied in a short, feeling expression of thanks.

Ques. 34. The Conference resolved to hold its next session at Macon.

J. W. McLaurin, of the American Bible Society, entertained the Conference with the statement of some very interesting facts in regard to the distribution of Bibles at home and abroad.

Mrs. E. E. Wiley was introduced and made some statements in respect to her work in the Parsonage and Home Mission Department.

Dr. Barbee, Book Agent, was introduced and spoke in behalf of the interests of our Publishing House at Nashville, Tenn. He spoke specially about the publications of the House, and exhorted the brethren to give these publications their earnest support.

After notices, the Conference adjourned with benediction by Dr. Carter.

FOURTH DAY.

The Conference was opened with religious services conducted by C. W. Carter. The minutes were read and approved.

Will Not Stay Demolished.

The Bible, says Mr. Hastings, is a book which has been refuted, demolished, overthrown, and exploded more times than any other book you ever heard of. Every little while somebody starts up and upsets this book; and it is like upsetting a solid cube of granite. It is just as big one way as the other; and when you overturn it again it is right side up still. Every little while somebody blows up the Bible; but when it comes down it always lights on its feet, and runs faster than ever through the world. They overthrew the Bible a century ago in Voltaire's time—entirely demolished the whole thing Thomas Paine demolished the Bible, and finished it off finally; but after he died the book took such a leap that since that time more than twenty times as many Bibles have been made and scattered through the world as ever were made before, since the creation of man. For a book that has been exploded so many times, this book still shows signs of considerable life.—Southern Churchman.

North Mississippi Conference Notes.

Rev. J. H. Brooks is the Nestor of the Conference. A record of attendance for fifty-one years without a break is a record that very few make. When this old veteran finished his talk to the Conference, there was singing and shouting and hand-shaking and eyes blinded by tears such as is seldom seen on the Conference floor. Bro. Brooks is held in highest esteem by his brethren. As an historical preacher he has been the peer of any preacher in the church. It is said that the historical portions of the Bible, as recited by him, have all the charms of romance, and interest the most listless.

A brother stated that notwithstanding his people had been two feet under water, they had paid about $43 per member for church purposes. Upon this statement a brother behind us handed us the following: "If two feet under water for six weeks develops members who pay $43 per capita, then we had better go under all over our territory." It takes strange things sometimes to develop folks, and sometimes some very little, insignificant things develop them the other way to absolute nothingness.

The personnel of this Conference is very fine. The young men are very many, and an intellectual cast seems to prevail in their countenances. The old men have the marks of the Lord's service upon them, and are still diligent in the Master's business, occupying until he comes. The cheerfulness that prevails among Methodist preachers is a strange thing to those who are not in the secret. The secret is, "peace with God through our Lord Jesus Christ," and "the Lord knoweth them that are his." These two things easily account for the cheerfulness of Christians.

Bishop Galloway's address to the applicants for admission into full connection was very sound and eminently sensible. It was full of practical things and sparkled with gems of intellectual and spiritual truth. There was no attempt at an elaborate disquisition on the duties and privileges of Methodist preachers, but a plain talk, in "words easy to be understood," as to how they should bear themselves in their work and among their people. Special emphasis was laid upon their conduct toward the children. This is a point upon which, we think, we older men could very well afford to listen to a lecture more frequently than we do. The great work of the church is, and must of necessity be, among the young people. Our preachers, old and young, should pay more attention to it. Here is where earnest work yields its best fruits and brings its richest rewards. Let no preacher in our bounds fail to put forth every energy in this part of the Lord's vineyard.

The anniversary of the Church Extension Board was celebrated on Thursday night. The crowd filled the church from pulpit to door. Mrs. E. E. Wiley and Mrs. T. B. Hargrove represented the parsonage and home mission work, and did it with great satisfaction. The good "those women" are doing on this line of church enterprise is springing the church to activity on all lines. They not only do not interfere with other works, but are actually infusing life and vigor into them all. After the ladies came the great Secretary, Dr. Morton, who made a brief talk, and, "as his custom is," lifted a collection to aid in building houses in the destitute places in which the people may worship God. The impression made by the meeting was deep, and will, doubtless, abide for many days to come.

On Friday night was the anniversary of the Mission Board. At an early hour the house—pulpit and pews and aisles—was filled to its utmost capacity. The introductory exercises were conducted by the writer. Dr. Newell read the treasurer's report, which said that $7,197 54 had been collected for foreign missions, and $2,151 05 had been raised for domestic missions. Dr. Morrison, the Missionary Secretary, was then presented to the audience. He was in fine trim for his work, and so well did he do it, that the large audience could do nothing but sit and look and listen. Starting with the declaration of the Psalmist, that "the earth is the Lord's, and the fulness thereof; the world, and they that dwell therein," he showed that the earth and its fullness belonged neither to man nor the devil. As far as man is concerned, it is simply his sphere for missionary operations. He then showed that Paul had the true mission spirit when he declared, "I am debtor to the Greek and barbarian, to the wise and the unwise"—ready to give the gospel to every one. In this strain he talked, eloquently, pathetically, religiously, until the preachers and people were enthused, and then he clinched the whole matter by getting pledges enough to send two single men to the foreign field. It was a very successful missionary meeting. One brother of long service in the Conference said it was the best meeting of the kind ever held in the North Mississippi Conference. The amount pledged to be paid in by April 1, 1891, was $1,510.

Saturday evening, Rev. A. P. Parker, our missionary to China, gave a most interesting and edifying lecture on China and our work there. Bro. Parker has been fifteen years in that great empire, and he evidently knows the people, their modes of life, their religious traditions and proclivities, and their government. In a brief address he gave more real information upon these points than we could get out of hundreds of pages of a book on those subjects. He regards China, with its four hundred millions of people, as the ground where the church should put forth her strength in evangelistic work for the heathen. He urged upon the audience the necessity of prayer for the thousand men for whom the missionaries in that field have made requisition upon the church at home, to be sent out in the next five years. Of the five hundred that have been called for from America he thinks our church ought to send, at least, fifty. That will be ten each year! Why can't we do that? We can, if we will.

The hospitality of Grenada proved itself equal to the occasion of entertaining a large body of ministers and a numerous company of visitors, in a right royal manner. The ADVOCATE fared well—one part with the resident Baptist minister, and the other part in the cheerful home of J. E. Hughes. Grenada has improved vastly since our visit several years ago. New stores, churches, public-school buildings, and private residences have added greatly to the beauty and progress of the town. At this place is located the Conference college for girls, the Grenada Collegiate Institute. For several years this school has been under the efficient management of Rev. T. J. Newell. He has worked well and faithfully to make this school what a school should be, and is succeeding to the satisfaction of those who put him in the office and of the parents whose girls attend the sessions. The prospect now is for larger efforts in the direction of improvement, as the debt which has hampered those efforts in the past will about be extinguished by the collections of the coming year. Let our North Mississippi Methodists patronize their own school, because it is worthy and does honest work in the education of girls.

Sunday was a high day in Grenada. The love-feast, conducted by Rev. J. B. Stone, was a time of great power and spiritual refreshment, many realizing the preciousness of the communion of saints, and rejoicing together in hope of the glory of God. At the Methodist Church, Bishop Galloway preached a fine sermon on "the mind that was in Christ," and ordained to deacons' orders H. P. Gibbs, T. B. Hargrove and R. H. B. Gladney, of the traveling preachers, and J. C. Woodruff, L. D. Sargeant, T. P. Miller, S. Q. Bass and W. F. Rogers, of the local ranks.

In the evening the Conference held service in memory of W. T. Shell, W. J. Reeves and John Barcroft, faithful men of God who had died during the past year. Beautiful tributes by various brethren were spoken in memory of these worthies, and their "names, as ointment poured forth," will perfume for many days the church-life where they were known.

At night, in the Methodist Church, Dr. Barbee, our Book Agent, preached an edifying sermon, after which the Bishop ordained the following elders: F. P. Spencer, W. W. Woollard, B. P. Fuhrlow, J. E. Buck, J. A. Randolph, D. M. Geddie, J. A. Whitehurst.

The local Baptist and Presbyterian Churches were supplied with preachers from the Conference, all of whom, we learn, preached good sermons to large congregations. Thus ended a day of intellectual enjoyment and spiritual festivity.

"You've frozen your ears," is a common remark. Bathe in Johnson's Anodyne Liniment.

Some Principles of Christian Benevolence.

1. Money is a great power in the modern world for doing good.

2. Money is a great power in the modern world for doing good through the school, the college and the church.

3. It is better to use money in one's lifetime in benevolence, and have the enjoyment of the giving and of its results, than to devise it by bequest.

4. Avarice, a most easily besetting sin, is most easily prevented and best removed by generosity.

5. People think they enjoy more keeping their money. It is the testimony of those who have been touched by the spirit of sacrifice, that the delight of giving is greater than the delight of keeping.

6. It is our duty to give at any time, not as God is prospering us at that time, but as he has prospered us at all times.

7. Some persons are converted in head, fewer in heart, fewer still in stomach, fewest in purse.

8. All our money is to belong to God. If it does not so belong to him now, it is to be made so to belong—Advance.

A Church Dedicated.

On Sunday, November 30, I had the pleasure of dedicating a new church, called Matthews Chapel, located in Copiah county, about six miles from Beauregard. I spent Saturday night in the hospitable home of Hon. J. H. Thompson and his accomplished daughter, Mrs. Chrisman, mother of Clara Chrisman. Sunday morning, in company with the pastor, Rev. J. W. Sandell, I had a pleasant drive to the church. The roads were excellent and the weather superb. A prettier day could not have been selected out of the whole year. The congregation exceeded the capacity of the building. It was estimated that about a hundred persons failed to get seats. The church was elaborately and tastefully decorated. In rear of the pulpit hangs a large and life-like portrait of last year's pastor, Rev. William Hoover, through whose instrumentality chiefly the church was built. This portrait was executed as a labor of love and presented to the church by Miss Matthews. The church is a very neat structure, and of ample dimensions for the community in which it is located. Its takes its name from Mr. E. Matthews, a liberal Methodist brother of that locality, who contributed largely to its erection and who is one of its principal members. One fact in connection with the building of this church is worthy of mention—namely, that liberal contributions were made by the Baptists of the community. It is good for brethren to dwell together in unity, even though they may not see alike on all points. After the service we drove to the residence of Bro. Matthews, where we soon found ourselves doing ample justice to a most sumptuous dinner. Late in the afternoon we drove to the city of Wesson, having previously promised Dr. Thomas Stirling West to fill his pulpit at night. The church, which is quite a spacious building, was too much crowded for comfort, many persons standing in the rear and along the aisles during the entire service. W. C. BLACK.

Report of the Board of Colportage.

AS ADOPTED BY THE LOUISIANA ANNUAL CONFERENCE.

We find that our colportor has already fairly under way a depository for the sale of our literature in New Orleans; therefore, be it

Resolved, That we elect the said F. D. Van Vnikenburgh as our general colportor.

Resolved, That we request the Mississippi Annual Conference to unite with us by selecting F. D. Van Vaikenburgh as their general colportor, and to join with us in an effort to build up a depository in New Orleans for the sale of our books.

Resolved, That F. D. Van Vaikenburgh be appointed a committee of one to convey this request and to represent this interest to the Mississippi Annual Conference at their coming session at Canton, Miss.

NEW ORLEANS, LA., Dec. 12, 1890.

Church Extension in the Louisiana Conference.

MR. EDITOR: In last week's ADVOCATE you say church extension collections amounted to $1 388 53. I have just forwarded treasurer's statement for the Minutes, in which it will be seen that the collections this year on assessments amounted to $1,416 78. Add to this $20 25, paid on last year's assessment; $185 05 paid on anniversaries, $10 on Parker Loan Fund, and $187 75 paid by the Woman's Department, and we have a total for church extension paid this year of $1,819 63.

The remark is now common that church extension is growing more and more popular in our Conference. This may be best shown by a glance at comparative statistics. Three years ago paid on assessments alone, $791 90; two years ago, $1,081 65; last year, $1,308 85; this year, $1,416 78. Thus it will be seen that our collections have nearly doubled in four years.

While on this subject, let me state that $60 remain unpaid on the anniversary collection taken at Monroe. Subscribers will please forward to me at Minden, La., as early as convenient. It is to be hoped also that brethren will take up this collection early in the year, and forward to the undersigned.

DONALD KENNEDY
Of Roxbury, Mass., says

I have kept a Scrap Book for a good many years of letters received from patients; some are long, too long to publish; some are short, short and good. Rainy days I sit down and read them and have learned a good deal about the human body from some poor, sickly woman or over-strained man. Here is one of them. I call it a good letter:

TRENTON, TEXAS, Sept. 28, 1886.

"To Kennedy of the Medical Discovery, Roxbury, Mass.: I am so proud of my recovery as to express my feelings in thanks to you. The RHEUMATISM has made me four-legged for six years. At last I have traded off two of them to Bell—Druggist—for four bottles of Kennedy's Discovery. I am yours, gratefully and unsolicited, J. B. IVY."

You hurry in with disturbance and riot.

Five minutes late, and the table is spread,
The children are seated and grace has been said;
Even the baby, all sparkling and rosy,
Sits in her chair by mama, so cosey!

Five minutes late, and your hair all askew,
Just as the comb was drawn hastily through;
There is your chair, and your tumbler, and plate,
Cold cheer for those who are five minutes late.

Five minutes late on this bright Sabbath morn,
All the good people to church they have gone.
Ah, when you stand at the beautiful Gate,
What will you do if you're five minutes late?

MR. EDITOR: As I have not seen any letters in your paper from the little folks for a long time, I thought I would write you one. I am a little girl seven years old. I am a member of the Clinton Methodist Sunday-school. My mama is my Sunday-school teacher. We have about eighty pupils on the roll. Bro. B. Jones is our pastor. This is my first session at school. I have four studies: spelling, second reader, arithmetic and geography. I am very glad that Christmas is nearly here, because Santa Claus never forgets to come to see me. I will be glad to see this letter in print. With best wishes for you and the ADVOCATE, I am,

Your little friend,
MATTIE BRAME.

CLINTON, La.

MR. EDITOR: I am a girl fourteen years of age. My mother takes the ADVOCATE, and I always like to read the cousins' letters. I live on the edge of town, and go to Sunday-school nearly every Sunday. I quit school this session, and took up the printing trade. I like it very much. My father owns the largest blacksmith shop in Ruston. I have three sisters and two brothers. I have but one pet, and that is my little brother. I think he is the sweetest pet on earth. I will close, hoping to see my letter in print. I see a letter in the ADVOCATE from Katie Gramling. I know she is related to me, for all the Gramlings are related.

Yours truly,
MAUD GRAMLING.

RUSTON, La.

MR. EDITOR: This is my first letter to the dear old ADVOCATE. I am eleven years old. I go to school, and I am in the geography and the third reader, and my teacher's name is Miss Miller, and my Sunday-school teacher's name is Sallie Watson. Bro West is our pastor. We are very much afraid we will have to give him up after Conference. We all like him so much. We have a large Sunday-school. We have two superinteudents. One's name is Mr. Lindrose, and the other's name is Mr. Rembert. I will close for this time, for fear my letter will not be printed.

Your friend,
JOSIE CESARIO.

WESSON, Miss.

MR. EDITOR: This is my third letter I have written to the dear ADVOCATE. My mama has been very sick indeed, but is up now, and sister's baby has a rising on his neck. He suffers very much with it. I have been reading four letters from the little cousins. They were nice, sure. I am out, sick with the cold. I will close for fear my little letter will reach the waste-basket. Yours truly,
HATTIE WOODWARD.

WESSON, Miss.

MR. EDITOR: Won't you publish a letter for a boy who has never written to the ADVOCATE? I want to ask Bishop Galloway to please send our beloved preacher, Bro. N. J. Roberts, back to the Utica circuit next year. We can not do without him here. Congregations are larger here this year than I ever saw. You would not be surprised if you could hear our earnest pastor. I am a member of the Methodist Church here. I hope, Bishop, you will not forget this by Conference.

Your little friend,
HENRY ANDERSON.

BEAR CREEK, Miss.

MR. EDITOR: This is my first letter to the dear old ADVOCATE. I am a little boy of eleven years of age. Miss Bettie Birch is my Sunday-school teacher. Conference is near over, and I am afraid we are going to lose our preacher. I will close for this time. DANNIE WOODWARD.

WESSON, Miss.

A Bird Study.

Do birds think? Let me tell you of a little bird I once had. The little bird was a female mocking-bird, who had a nest of young ones about a week old. The baby birds were very unhealthy, inheriting weakness from their father, who had asthma. Early one morning I was awakened by the mother bird standing on my pillow, pouring into my ear the most mournful notes I ever heard.

I knew something was wrong, and arose at once. The mother flew to her nest, then looked to see if I was following, which I was. As soon as I reached the nest she took hold of one of the baby bird's wings, pinched it gently with her beak and watched it eagerly, I think to see if it moved. Then she took hold of one of the little feet and pinched it in the same manner, and, finding it did not move, she looked up at me in a pleading way, as if she wanted me to waken them. I reached my hand out toward the nest. She stood aside and looked on with as much interest and feeling as any young human mother.

I examined the lifeless little bodies, and when I withdrew my hand the mother hastened to hover over the little ones, seeming to think that if she could warm them they would awaken. In a few moments she hopped off the nest, looked at her babies, held food close to their mouths, and coaxed and called them, but in vain. She flew all around the room as if in search of some untried remedy. Several times she perched on my shoulder, and looked so distressed and pitiful I could scarcely keep from crying. I put her in a cage and hung her in the sunshine to see if she would become quiet. She took a bath, but still remained nervous and seemed anxious, and by-and-by grew so restless I had to take her out of the cage and let her go to the nest again.

She stood quite a while looking at her dead children. Then she went over all the bodies—pinching them gently and watching them closely to see if they moved. When she saw no signs of life she seemed puzzled. She seemed at last to make up her mind the little ones were dead. And one by one she lifted them tenderly in her beak and laid them side by side in the middle of the room. She looked at them lovingly a moment, then flew to her empty nest and gazed wonderingly into that. Finally she perched on my shoulder and looked into my eyes, as if to ask: "What does all this mean?" What a lesson of love and devotion that little bird taught! She always fed the little ones before taking a mouthful herself, and sometimes she would stand coaxing them to take one more mouthful, and finding they had enough, would swallow it herself.—Exchange.

For over fifty years Dr. Davis' Compound Syrup of Wild Cherry and Tar has cured coughs, colds, asthma, bronchitis, throat and lung affections. It is the regular prescription of a physician of extensive practice, who, after prescribing it for twenty years, was induced by the gratifying results to make it a proprietary medicine. Davis' Wild Cherry and Tar soon became known as the best remedy for all throat and lung troubles. Why? Because it has merit and will cure. A. C. Hamelnager, Philadelphia, says: "I know a man sufferiag with his lungs who was in the hospital a year without benefit. I induced him to take Davis' Wild Cherry and Tar, and to-day he is well. I know it saved his life." Try it.

Religion will always make the bitter waters of Marah wholesome and palatable; but we must not think it continually will turn water into wine, because it once did.—Warburton.

Hypnotism.

The first thing that strikes me in connection with hypnotism, is the confidence with which it is asserted that it has been proved beyond dispute to be so successful that it can not drop. But I am old enough to remember not only that this was said in the time of mesmerism. Practically, mesmerism fell into desuetude fifteen years ago. Except in distant corners such a thing is scarcely heard of. Now from some researches which have been conducted at Nancy, and stimulated by the opposition of the Salpetriere School, we have the subject once more brought before us, and we are told of the advent of a great important practical truth. Once more we are told that hypnotism has established itself for all good. I have no hesitation in prophesying that before twenty-five years have passed, it will be in the same position that it was twenty-five years ago. There is a measure of physiological truth in the assumed influence of hypnotism, and the explanation must be sought in the relation of what we call will, to the body. In these experiments, too, we have attention and expectancy, which, being combined with will in a remarkable degree of concentration, are capable, as is well known, of bringing about very remarkable results. There are many homely illustrations of this fact. You have got a racking headache; suddenly some person is unexpectedly announced, and your headache is gone. Or you may have a patient suffering from costiveness, and racked with aperients, until the mucous membrane has got into a state of chronic irritation. By giving a bread pill aided by suggestion, you can so influence the mind that the bread pill will be certain to succeed in eight cases out of ten. In these facts we have the groundwork for a great many of the phenomena of hypnotism.—Sir Andrew Clark, in Lancet.

THE COCOANUT CRAB.—On the Agala Islands, in the Indian Ocean, there is a very strange crab. He is known to science as the Birgus latro, or thief crab, and his depredations are carried on in the cocoanut groves which abound on these islands. This crab grows to be twenty-two inches long, measuring from the tip of the tail to the end of the long claw, and resembling in general appearance the hermit crab. The abdomen is fleshy and not covered with a shell, and in order to protect this it is the habit of the thief crab to take forcible possesion of a shell of the Trochus family, in which it lives. It is nocturnal in its operations, and has the faculty of selecting trees having the finest cocoanuts upon them. Climbing up the trunks frequently twenty-five feet, it reaches the limbs and severs the stems which attach the nuts to the branches.

These are frequently as thick as your three fingers, and would require a strong knife to cut them. Having brought down the nut, the crab now descends to the ground, digs a hole and rolls the cocoanut into it.

He then commences to tear off the husk, fibre by fibre, until the nut is completely exposed, and then breaking in what is known as the eye he eats the meat completely out. The fibres stripped off the cocoanut by this crab will frequently fill a bushel basket, and they are gathered for making mattresses, and are also twisted into ropes. Cocoanut groves are cultivated by those who make a business of extracting oil from the nuts to be used for illuminating purposes, and the depredations of this crab are of a very serious character, in many cases the efforts of the native to exterminate them proving fruitless.—Anon.

The Clergy of America take kindly to Life Insurance, and have been its firmest champions. They fight for it and thoroughly believe in it. There are many splendid financiers in the church; that they are intelligent and thoughtful for their future goes without saying. All denominations seek the protection of Life Insurance, and are careful to select the company offering the greatest security and the most advantageous terms to policy-holders.

The Episcopal Diocese, of New York, has an Insurance Fund for all of its members, and the Mutual Life, which is the largest and strongest company in the world, with over $122,000,000 assets, has been officially selected by that body to issue all the insurance to these worthy people.

A Southern Department of this Company has been opened in New Orleans under the management of Mr. T. H. Bowles, with offices in Louisiana National Bank Building.

Household.

A Word to Mothers about Boys.

BY ALYN YATES KEITH.

Some of you have probably seen an old "St. Nicholas" picture with the legend,

"I am my mama's lady-girl,
And I must sit quite still."

It is not impossible to make a lady-boy. Many mothers have done it. But it does not pay. You will find plenty ready made; far more than the world has the slightest use for.

Live largely. Do not force your gallon boy into a gill measure unless you desire dynamite results.

In any large nature you will find more faculties packed away for future use than a boy can comprehend. Here and there the inner man bursts out in great disproportion to any known cause, and if you are a timid mother you think the end of all things is at hand. Wait a bit. Great explosions of temper are hard to bear, but like thunderstorms they make a wide, clear space all about, and health-giving breezes follow along with sunshine. Take courage.

Let your boy run, and climb. Of course, you are afraid: all mothers are. But that has nothing to do with it. Patched clothes, bruises, and scratches are more becoming to a boy than flabby muscles, and a visible fear of hurting himself. I knew a little fellow who was encouraged to climb a ladder to the top of the house when he could just reach from rung to rung. "Hold on," the father said, "and be careful where you step." And he never thought of falling. Years afterward he attributed his clear-headed fearlessness to this somewhat heroic training.

Do you never see a boy who must never do this or that, never run too fast, never get tired, never soil hands or clothes?—a boy to whom dirt is as sinful as a lie?

Perhaps you would be interested in such a boy grown to negative manhood.

"My boy," said an old lady to her neighbor, "never made any trouble. I could set him down anywhere, and he'd set and set—"

"And he's never done anything but set for forty year," commented the neighbor rehearsing the story.

Let your boy play base-ball and foot-ball, and work out the animal in him. If he is too daring, encourage him. He likes to see you gasp. The thing that you do not oppose will soon lose all the charm of forbidden fruit. The conceit will work itself clear before long. All ferments are frothy at a certain stage, and bottling is unsafe. There is great apparent waste in Nature's methods. She frequently supplies a barrel of energy to a pint of accomplishment. She is generous with boys because she is fond of them. Do not be afraid to follow her lead.

Boys alone are but sorry savages—yet here again is Nature ready with her remedy. She knows very well what she is about when she sets them in families, boys and girls together.

You have all seen boys who were cooped up from other boys, like a sort of tame flock kept from wild beasts. You have doubtless seen them grow to manhood in leading strings, without the slightest knowledge of the material they have to deal with in the world.

While your boy is under your control let him come in contact with his kind, and learn how to deal with them, and how to be dealt with. His follies will be pruned with a sharper knife than you would dare use. His words will be proved by his deeds. He will take the consequences of his actions.

Perhaps he lords it over a younger brother at home. Let him try it with one of his own size. Of course, he will be hurt. In the fields, Nature puts poison and antidote side by side. Teach him to bear things manfully.

Thank God that it is not often in your power to destroy his self-respect, though I have seen mothers whose lives were spent in the attempt. A boy is proud to keep back tears. Self-control can grow on very poor soil if you give it a start.

If your boy learns to skate, to swim, to row a boat, do not be like a hen flapping on the bank because her one duckling has taken to the water.

Make sharp distinctions between things and principles, if you are rearing men. Your boy must be made of very poor stuff if you can not teach him to be truthful, upright, and loyal. Preach to him the gospel of affirmation, not negation. Get his confidence at all hazards, and keep it. Know all his follies, all his sins by his own willing disclosures; but do not confound the two. Teach him to require of you all knowledge; and get, that you may impart to him. All knowledge is safe from fathers' and mothers' lips. Fill his mind, his heart, his soul so full of good, and of all high and holy ambitions, that nothing evil can find a crevice to creep in at.

You may have years of doubt. It is not well. God does not make even a tree in a dozen years. Is not your boy of more value than many trees? Sow your seed in hope, and wait lovingly, as well as patiently, for both the early and the latter rain.

SCOTT'S EMULSION

Of Pure Cod Liver Oil with Hypophosphites Of Lime and Soda.

There are emulsions and emulsions, and there is still much skimmed milk which masquerades as cream. Try as they will many manufacturers cannot so disguise their cod liver oil as to make it palatable to sensitive stomachs. Scott's Emulsion of PURE NORWEGIAN COD LIVER OIL, combined with Hypophosphites is almost as palatable as milk. For this reason as well as for the fact of the stimulating qualities of the Hypophosphites, Physicians frequently prescribe it in cases of

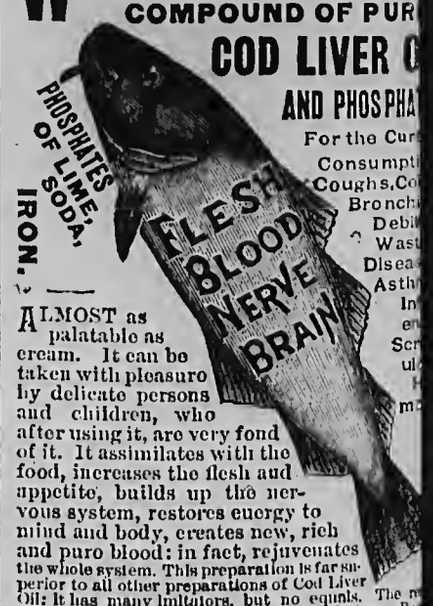
All Druggists sell it, but be sure you get the genuine, as there are poor imitations.

WILBOR'S COMPOUND OF PURE COD LIVER OIL AND PHOSPHATES

For the Cure of Consumption, Coughs, Colds, Bronchitis, Debility, Wasting Diseases, Asthma, Indigestion, Emaciation, Scrofula, Rickets, Marasmus, etc.



ALMOST as palatable as cream. It can be taken with pleasure by delicate persons and children, who after using it, are very fond of it. It assimilates with the food, increases the flesh and appetite, builds up the nervous system, restores energy to mind and body, creates new, rich and pure blood: in fact, rejuvenates the whole system. This preparation is far superior to all other preparations of Cod Liver Oil: it has many imitators, but no equals. The results following its use are its best recommendations. Be sure as you value your health, and get the genuine. Manufactured by DR. ALFRED WILBOR, CHEMIST, Boston, Mass.

Woman's Work in Meridian District.

Dear Sister Chatfield: When I took charge of this district, I found the following Woman's Missionary Auxiliary Societies existing, and at work:

Meridian, First Methodist Episcopal Church; Meridian, West End; Meridian, East Mississippi Female College; Enterprise, Waynesboro, Vossburg, Paulding, Hopewell (postoffice, Rose Hill); Quitman, Shubuta.

During the year now closing, the following have been organized:

Binnsville, Dalesville, Dalesville Juvenile (Clara Chrisman), DeSoto, Marion, Big Rock, New Hope, Vossburg Juvenile, Sandersville, Pachuta, Shiloh, Sagesville, Concord, Chunky, Suqualena, Hopewell, Manassas, Union, New Home, Energy, Meridian, Landerdale (reorganized) and Bethel. Total, 33 societies.

Lauderdale circuit, with 8 appointments, has 2 societies; DeKalb circuit, with 6 appointments, no societies; Binnsville circuit, with 5 appointments, has 1 society; Marion circuit, with 9 appointments, has 1 society; Enterprise and Heidelburg circuit, with 4 appointments, has 1 society; Meridian circuit, with 6 appointments, has 5 societies; Paulding circuit, with 5 appointments, has 2 societies; Shubuta circuit, with 4 appointments, has 3 societies; Union circuit, with 5 appointments, has 5 societies; Clark's circuit, with 6 appointments, no societies; Winchester circuit, with 8 appointments, has 2 societies; Waynesboro and State Line, with 2 appointments, has 1 society; Ellisville, with 5 appointments, has 1 sick society; Hopewell, with 4 appointments, no societies. On my district I have 78 places of worship and 34 Woman's Missionary Societies.

Your brother, T. L. MELLEN.

This I consider a model report, one that is encouraging to the president, and exceedingly helpful to our district secretary. I call the attention of Bros. I. W. Cooper, D. A. Little, John A. Ellis, C. McDonald, W. B. Lewis and P. A. Johnston, presiding elders in the Mississippi Conference, hoping they will "help those women" by sending a similar report of their districts at an early day. Your sister in Christ,

Livingstone, the Missionary.

I have recently read "The Life of Livingstone," by Miss Annie Barnes. It is, as another has said, "intensely missionary," and all who love missionary work, and those who delight to read of adventure and travel, will be delighted with this book. Not once does your interest flag; and when you have finished, you will want to turn back and read the book again. Such a book will live. Then it is written by such a noble missionary spirit, whose influence one is made to feel throughout the book. The story is told with such a child-like simplicity, that it is really touching; and both young and old will be charmed with it.

In speaking of the work so gloriously begun by Livingstone, and which, in her mind's eye, she sees finished, the author says: "O, to think of it! . . . a whole race conquered and engirtled by the chains of Christian brotherhood! Two hundred million swarthy faces upturned to catch the glory of Christ's love, . . . two hundred million once savage tongues repeating o'er and o'er the name of the King who has come, is gone, and will come again in the infinite power and splendor of his majesty! Could earth afford a grander or more soul-enkindling picture?"

M. L. J.

P. S.—"The Life of Livingstone" is handsomely and substantially bound, and sells for the small sum of $1. One will derive twenty times that much pleasure from the perusal of so good a book. Send to Miss A. B. Barnes, of Duluth, Georgia, for a copy. J.

Faith and Works.

"We must not use our prayer and physic both together; and so, no doubt, but our prayers will be available, and our physic take effect." Here, doubtless, lies the secret of the frequent failures of the "Faith Cure" practitioners, if that is the proper word. In the above quotation, which by the way, is from a very high authority, physic is used in a general sense. It means a remedy. Now, we beg you to read the following testimonials from those upon whom the "effect" has been most satisfactory. DRS. STARKEY & PALEN:—"I suffered from muscular rheumatism and nervous prostration. It seems to me that I used all the medicines ever compounded without finding relief. I abandoned the whole and commenced the use of your Compound Oxygen Treatment. And the result is perfect health." R. B. THOMAS, 90 Chambers St., New York City, N. Y. DRS. STARKEY & PALEN:—"For thirty-five years I have suffered every September from hay asthma. Last August I began the use of your Compound Oxygen Treatment and passed through September very comfortably, and I have been considerably invigorated by the remedy." REV. J. W. T. CAPERS, Camden, S. C.

But it is all written in our brochure, hundreds of testimonials, records of cases cured, a history of Compound Oxygen. It is an interesting book. It is sent free. Write for it. Address DRS. STARKEY & PALEN, 1529 Arch St., Philadelphia, Pa., or 120 Sutter street, San Francisco, California.

A Railroad around the World.

At a recent meeting of the International Railroad Congress in Brussels, Mr. Weissenbruch, engineer to the Belgian Ministry of Railroads, expressed the belief that before many years it would be possible to make a trip around the world in twenty-three days. To accomplish this feat a railroad would be built connecting New York with Paris. This scheme seems very visionary, but it is significant that it was broached in a scientific convention by an engineer of distinction, and in these days it is hardly worth while to laugh at railroad schemes, however visionary they may seem.

Mr. Weissenbruch, of course, meant the proposed railroad connecting our transcontinental lines with Behring Strait, crossing the strait on a bridge, and joining the trans-Siberian line now building. We have heard of this project from Colorado within a few weeks, where certain gentlemen are talking of it with apparent seriousness. In the opinion of the Belgian engineer, this road will some day be built. He says it will be no more difficult to run a railroad along our Pacific border to Behring Strait than to work the line in Sweden, now operating north of the Arctic circle, or the railroads which Russia has built far in the north.

The proposed line would skirt our Alaskan coast where the Arctic climate is modified by influences from the Pacific. At Cook's Inlet it would strike straight across that southwestern prolongation of Alaska which ends in the Aleutian chain. Behring Strait, shallow and narrow, with a large island midway in the channel, would, according to Mr. Weissenbruch, offer no serious obstacle to bridge building. After crossing the strait, the line would run southwest through Kamchatka to connect with the Siberian lines.

Of course, the possibilities of this glittering project are enormous. Before a great many years a railroad will probably connect Buenos Ayres with North America. When that great enterprise is carried out, and the proposed railway connection between the New and Old Worlds becomes an accomplished fact, it will be possible for a passenger to board a palace car in the capital of the Argentine Republic and remain in his luxurious traveling quarters until he lands in the depot at Paris. Another scheme is the extension of a railroad to the coast of Labrador, whence England may be reached by steamer in four days. This shortening of the ocean route is included in the calculation of the Belgian engineer for a round-the-world trip in twenty-three days.

Of course, with Europe within 3,000 miles of New York, we would never undertake to reach that continent by the westerly route. The importance of such a line, so far as we are concerned, would depend upon the stimulus it might give to the development of our extreme northwest, and to the advantage we might derive from rail connection with China and her millions of people; for there is no doubt that a branch of the Siberian railroad will in time run south to Peking or some other important point in the Chinese empire. Our northwestern possessions and eastern Asia are alike capable of large development. From a practical point of view, such a railway could be valuable only as a means of developing northeast Asia and northwest America, and in the great work which coming generations are to accomplish, it may be that this scheme, visionary as it appears, will be included. It is at least note-worthy that practical railroad builders and scientific men are talking of the project as something within the range of possibility.—New York Sun.

ARE MISSIONS A FAILURE?—At a recent missionary meeting in Bombay, Sir Charles Elliot, fearing they might be forgotten, restated the interesting facts presented two years ago, as to the numerical progress made by Christianity in Hindostan from 1870 to 1881, which showed that while the general population of India increased by eight per cent. during the ten years closing with the year 1881, there was an increase of thirty per cent. during the same period in the number of Christians. In some portions of India there was a still larger relative increase. In the province of Bengal, while the increase in the number of Hindoos in ten years was thirteen per cent., and that of the Mohammedans eleven per cent., that of native Christians was sixty-four per cent. In the province of Assam, in the extreme northeast of India, while during the decade already mentioned the general increase of population was eighteen per cent., there was an increase of one hundred and fifty per cent. in the number of Christians in the eight valley districts, and in the Khasia hills, where a devoted band of Welsh missionaries are doing a grand work, the increase had been at the rate of two hundred and fifty per cent.! What may have been the comparative results of missionary labors during the decade just closed, and according to the census recently taken, will be known in due time. It will undoubtedly present a greater relative percentage in the increase of native Christians in the sections now named, and also in others.—Evangelist.

Ringing noises in the ears are caused by catarrh. Loss of smell or hearing also result from catarrh. Hood's Sarsaparilla, the great blood purifier, is a peculiarly successful remedy for this disease, which it cures by purifying the blood.

Simplicity and purity are the two wings by which a man is lifted up above all earthly things. Simplicity is in the intention; purity in the affection. Simplicity tends to God; purity apprehends and tastes him.

Making Money Anywhere.

Having read Mr. Morehead's experience plating with gold, silver and nickel, I sent for a plater and have more work than I can do. It is surprising the spoons, castors and jewelry that people want plated. The first week I cleared $37.10, and in three weeks $119.85, and my wife has made about as I have. By addressing W. H. Griffith & Co., Zanesville, Ohio, you can get circulars. A Plater only costs $3. You can learn to use it in an hour. Can plate large or small articles, and can make money anywhere.

GRANT'S FURNITURE STORE

NEW STORE, AT 28 and 30 Camp Street, NEW ORLEANS

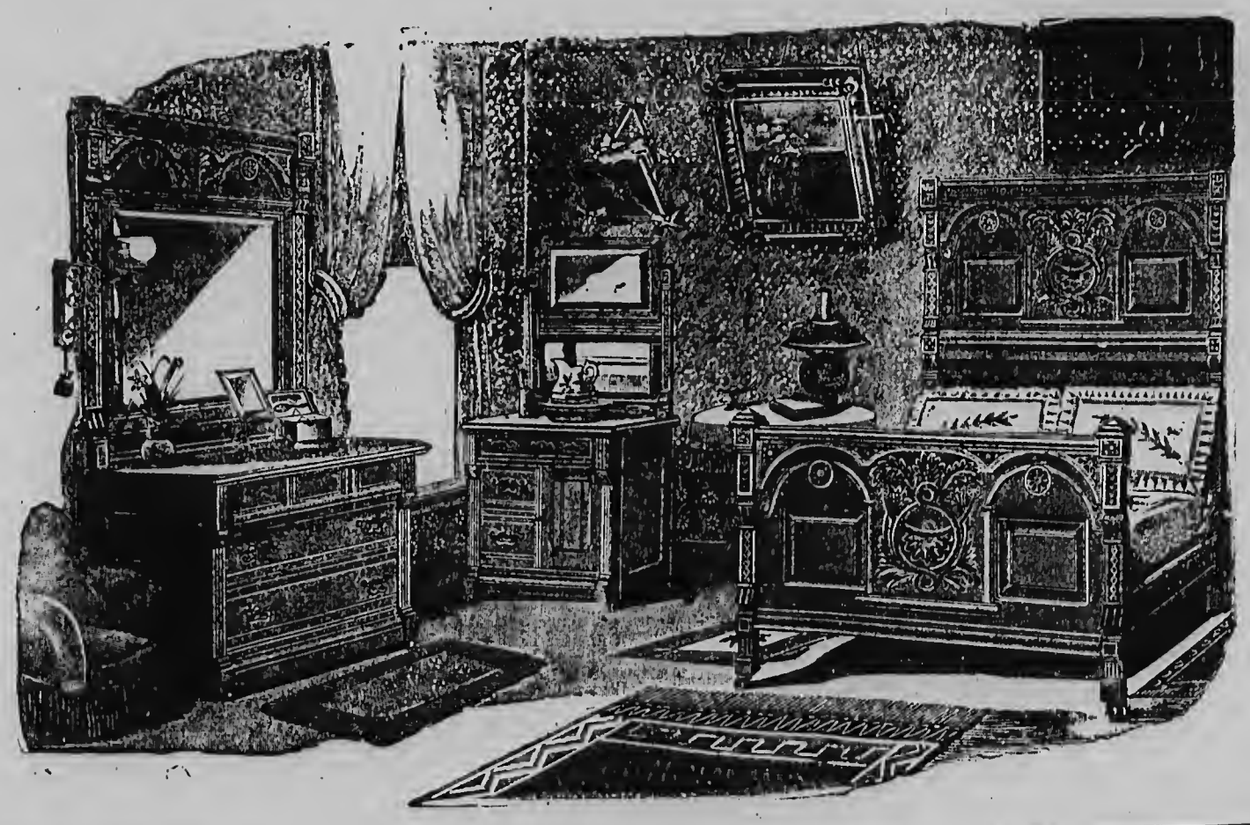
BEAUTIFUL PARLOR GOODS.
I have one entire floor devoted to the display of these goods alone, and have over sixty different varieties to select from. Complete Suits anywhere from $35 to $650, and odd pieces—such as Sofas, Divans, Easy Chairs, Patent Rockers, Window and Reception Chairs—at as low prices in proportion as the Complete Suits. I have these goods in Cherry, Mahogany and Walnut, and can give you your choice of any of the following coverings: Crushed, Embossed, Plain and Silk Plushes, Hair Cloth, Mohair, Raw and Spun Silks, Satins, English Tapestries, French Valours, Petit Point, Brocatelle or Damasks. I make a specialty of these goods, have many of the patterns made specially for my own trade, and can offer a greater variety at lower prices than any other house in the South.

NEW STOCK
In all departments, and every grade of goods, from the cheapest to the most expensive, in endless variety. I have all the latest and most fashionable designs, and, as I have only purchased from factories whose goods I have been selling for the past six years, can and do guarantee every piece of Furniture that leaves my establishment.



LOW PRICES
are the order of the day, and I propose to sell strictly reliable goods at a lower price than has ever before been quoted in the South. My store has long been known as "The Cheapest Furniture House in New Orleans," and this season I intend to add to the reputation it has gained in this respect. I only ask a chance to save you money.

HANDSOME BEDROOM SUITS.
A very extensive assortment of these goods in every style; and whether you wish to pay $40 for a Complete Suit of twelve pieces, or from that price anywhere up to $1,000, I can sell you what you require. I have these goods in Black Walnut, Natural and Dark Cherry, and Natural and Dark Mahogany, or in imitation of any of these woods, and can furnish the very latest, neatest and most artistic designs.
I have also a large and carefully selected stock of Hall, Library, Dining-room and Kitchen Furniture; Reed, Rattan and Wicker Chairs, Rockers, Lounges and Cribs; Brackets, What-nots, Easels, Music Stands and Fancy Top Tables; Carpets, Carpet Strips, Matting, Shades, Curtains, Curtain Poles, and everything necessary to furnish a house completely throughout.

LARGE SALES.
I have a large city trade, and am shipping goods extensively to every Southern State. My country trade has increased very rapidly during the past year, and the facilities which my new store affords me for carrying a larger and better stock will enable me to still further extend it, and to give complete satisfaction to my customers.

Centenary College

JACKSON, LA.

Jackson, La., is near Ethel, on the Valley R. R., 113 miles north of New Orleans. The location is beautiful and healthful, the buildings are elegant and ample, and the Faculty is complete and able. The sale of intoxicating drinks is forbidden by law within five miles of the College. Its endowment fund is being rapidly increased, and the college has entered upon a new career of prosperity.

Special attention will be given to the health, morals and biblical instruction of the students.

For terms, Catalogue, or other information apply to Prof. G. H. Wiley, Jackson, La., or to W. L. C. Hunnicutt, President.

Mansfield Female College

Conservatory of Music and Art.

MANSFIELD, LA.

One of the most popular and flourishing institutions of the South. The Sixty-seventh Session opens September 10, 1890, and the Spring Term begins January 28, 1891, with an able and experienced faculty. Curriculum comprehensive, instruction thorough. Advantages in Music unsurpassed, as in the best conservatories. The pianos are new and of the best make. The Technicon and the Technikphone are used to facilitate the work in the music department, placing this department beyond competition. Departments of Fine Arts and Industrial Arts under specialists.

The location is unsurpassed for beauty and attractiveness, and the school is celebrated for the remarkable record for good health maintained. The climate is the best in which to educate, and the place is the safest for girls. The main building is of brick, massive and commodious, with a large and well-shaded campus. Rooms large, well furnished, warmed and ventilated. Ample provision for the table of the best the market affords. All necessary comfort secured. Expenses very low and the school very economical. A new building with a large audience hall is in contemplation, and extensive improvements are in progress to make this the grandest institution in the State.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease, and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven Catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and, therefore, requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure in the market. It is taken internally in doses from ten drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address,

An Old Soldier.

HEAR HIS STORY.

NEW ORLEANS, Nov 22, 1890.

I, William A. Smith, member of Company 3, Thirtieth Louisiana Regiment, Army of Tennessee, was wounded in the left lung on the 16th day of December, 1864. As a result of that wound I have suffered since then with hemorrhages, and have tried everything in God's world in the shape of medicine to cure me, but everything failed that the doctors gave me. But I have found a cure at last. I have been taking Dr. King's Royal Garmetuer for five weeks, and I am now a well man. I have not had a hemorrhage since I commenced taking it. Anyone doubting this can call and see me at No. 5 Park avenue, sixth District, New Orleans.

WM. A. SMITH.

I refer to Judge J. U. Landry, who was my lieutenant during the war, and who is thoroughly acquainted with my case, and who will verify this statement. W. A. S.

The above testimony is but one out of many thousands which assert the matchless power of this wonderful preparation. The worst cases of fever—Swamp Fever, Typho-Malarial, Typhoid and Chagres Fever—yield every time to its proper use. Rheumatism, Neuralgia and Catarrh give way before it. As an appetizer and general tonic there is nothing like it. For sale by all druggists. Call at the Germetuer office, 202 Canal street, and investigate to your perfect satisfaction.

A consulting physician is on hand, who will make medical examinations and give consultation and advice free. Office hours: 9 a. m. to 2 p. m.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

DOMESTIC.

An application has been received in Washington for the establishment of a national bank in New Iberia, La., to be known as the People's National Bank, with a capital of $50,000.

The Board of Aldermen of New York City has granted the right to the New York and Long Island railroad, to construct a tunnel under Forty-second street, from river to river.

The steamboat City of Baton Rouge while making a landing at Hermitage Landing, three miles above Port Hudson, on December 14, struck a snag and sunk. All the crew and passengers were saved. Boat and cargo a total loss. The boat, which was valued at about $70,000, was not insured.

A writ of mandamus has been granted John A. Morris by Judge Buckner, of the seventeen judicial district of Baton Rouge, requiring the secretary of State, L. F. Mason, to promulgate the Lottery Amendment Act adopted at the last session of the Louisiana Legislature, or show cause to the contrary.

The inventor of the air ship now being built by a rich company at Mount Carmel, Ill., says that in three weeks' time the first ship will be tested. The ship, he says, will start from the place of its manufacture and travel to St. Louis, a distance of 185 miles. From St. Louis it will sail up to Chicago and thence to New York.

An attempt to arrest Sitting Bull, on December 15, brought about a fight between the Indian police and the hostile Indians who endeavored to protect their chief. The police were supported by United States troops. Several men were killed on either side. Sitting Bull, his son and Chief Crow Foot were among the slain.

There are indications that the Force bill will be shelved in the United States Senate. The strong sentiment shown in the Senate against the bill, and the desire of a number of the Republican members to shelve it, is attributed to the very strong pressure brought to bear by prominent business men of New York, Philadelphia and other commercial centres.

The third party movement, which originated at the recent Farmers' Alliance convention, has taken definite form, and a call for a national conference has been made. An invitation has been extended to all delegates from industrial unions and associations to meet in Cincinnati, February 23, 1891, for the purpose of forming a National Union party.

The United Christian Commission is the name of an organization whose aims and objects are the promotion of the intellectual, moral and religious welfare of the army and navy by suggesting needful national legislation, securing qualified chaplains for the observance of Sunday. Its first annual meeting was held in Washington (D. C.), last week, and was attended by a number of prominent divines.

In order to pass the $9,000 000 levee bill through the House it will be necessary for the representatives of the Mississippi Valley to work in harmony, and to press the matter until action shall have been taken. If the bill should be reported favorably, which is probable, then the next step will be to get a day assigned by the Committee on Rules for consideration of the measure. The States directly interested in the improvement of the Mississippi river have ninety-five or one hundred representatives in Congress, and including those penetrated by tributaries the number would be largely increased.

Hon. Thomas W. Palmer, president, and Hon. Benjamin Butterworth, secretary of the World's Fair Commission, waited on President Harrison, on the twelfth instant, and requested that he issue the formal proclamation inviting foreign governments to participate in the World's Fair. They submitted documents to prove that all the requisite conditions prescribed by the act of Congress had been fully complied with. These requirements are briefly that the grounds and buildings are provided for; that the Illinois coporation has secured the required $10,000.000, and that the necessary rules and regulations have been prepared.

The Cabinet meeting, on December 12, constdered the financial condition of the country, and, as a result, the President, it is understood, will send a message to Congress, suggesting as a measure of relief the enactment of legislation for the issue of additional currency based on the increased purchases of silver. Secretary Windom, who was in New York City conferring with bankers as to the best method of affording prompt relief, is said to favor the purchase of the present stock of silver, amounting to about 13,000,000 ounces, and the issuance also of an additional amount equal to the annual retirement of national bank notes, estimated at $20,000,000, thereby adding about $30,000,000 to the circulation.

FOREIGN.

The police of Vienna have dissolved the Democratic Association, one of the objects of which was to agitate in favor of universal suffrage. It was for these reasons it was broken up.

Lord Wolseley, as commander-in-chief of the military forces in Ireland, has concluded to withdraw the soldiers from small barracks in remote towns and concentrate them in a few large garrisons.

The rumors of M. Rouvier's intended resignation as French Minister of Finance are strengthened by the report that President Carnot required him to choose between resigning or prosecuting the journalists who accuse him of corruption.

In Hungary the Ministry is carrying on a war against the dictation of the Catholic Church authorities, and the strife is assuming an embittered form, which may result in the partial or complete withdrawal of State support from the clergy.

Did you notice that fine head of hair at church last Sunday? That was Mrs B——. She never permits herself to be out of Hall's Hair Renewer.

The American people ought to be proud of these four periodicals. It is no exaggeration to say that the steady influence exerted upon the life and thought of the nation from the publishing house in Franklin Square is at least equal to that of one of the great universities. . . . All four of the Harper periodicals are better now than they ever were before. How much that means, everybody knows who has been Harper bred.—N. Y. Sun, Feb. 10, 1890.

THE SENIOR QUARTERLY.

A thirty-six page pamphlet devoted to lesson-helps for scholars in advanced classes. Its value is enhanced by the introduction of appropriate forms of opening and closing exercises, hymns and tunes, maps, dictionary of proper names, etc.

Five or more, to 1 address, per annum, each, 15c. Five or more, to 1 address, per qr., each, 4c.

THE INTERMEDIATE QUARTERLY.

Similar to the above, but with such necessary changes as adapt it to the wants of scholars in the main school. It is marvelously cheap.

Five or more, to 1 address, per annum, each, 7½c. Five or more, to 1 address, per qr., each, 2c.

Those who have the preparation of these lessons in hand have already bestowed much labor on them, and will bestow much more, calling to their assistance the very best scholarship and literary ability they can command. We hope and believe the coming year will be one of unprecedented prosperity in our Sunday-school work. The circulation of our lessons already exceeds our Sunday-school population.

THE SUNDAY-SCHOOL MAGAZINE.

56 pages each month. Price, 50 cents.

Our Magazine is not only the best of our Sunday-school periodicals, but, by the consent of all who know it, one of the best of all the current commentaries on the International Lessons. We pledge ourselves that the Magazine will be better next year than ever before. Able writers for it have already been secured to contribute to it regularly, and special articles on special topics will be bought for it from time to time. Mechanically, the Magazine will appear in '91 in an entirely new dress, new type, colored maps, and in the best typographical form. It will do its best to command success, and will at least deserve it. We hope it will have hearty reception and a wide extension of its circulation, and to this end we ask all readers of this to lend a helping hand.

CHRISTMAS.

BY HENRY MORTON.

Why does the earth no tribute flower,
No incense-bearing blossom, bring
To celebrate the thrice-blessed hour
Which brought to her heaven's earth-born King?

Why do no roses wreathe her head?
Why do no lilies gleaming white,
With every rainbow blossom wed,
Weave odorous emblems of delight?

Those short-lived buds she dare not bring,
For though they fit her fleeting years,
They are not meet to deck the spring,
The dawning summer of the spheres.

This birthday of eternity
Finds fitter wreath in deathless pine,
The laurel and the hemlock tree,
Bound with the ivy's coiling vine.

That Prince of Heaven, that God earth-born,
'Twas not for mortal joy he came,
The holly, with its cruel thorn,
Suits well the day that bears his name;

And the white wrappings of the snow
Like swathings in the manger's gloom;
And drifts beneath the thick boughs glow
Like grave-clothes in the empty tomb.

The First Christmas.

About midnight some one on the roof cried out, "What light is that in the sky? Awake, brethren, awake and see!" The people, half asleep, sat up and looked; then they became wide awake, though wonderstruck. And the stir spread to the court below and into the lowens. Soon the entire tenantry of the house and court and inclosure were out gazing at the sky. And this was what they saw:

A ray of light, beginning at a height immeasurably beyond the nearest stars, and dropping obliquely to the earth, at its top a diminishing point, at its base, many furlongs in width, its sides blending softly with the darkness of the night, its core a roseate electrical splendor. The apparition seemed to rest on the nearest mountain southeast of the town, making a pale corona along the line of the summit. The khan was touched luminously, so that those upon the roof saw each other's faces all filled with wonder.

Steadily, through minutes, the ray lingered, and then the wonder changed to awe and fear; the timid trembled; the boldest spoke in whispers.

Suddenly the light became intolerably bright, and they covered their eyes, and dropped upon their knees. Then, as their souls shrank with fear, they fell upon their faces blind, and fainting, and would have died had not a voice said to them, "Fear not." And they listened. "Fear not, for behold, I bring you good tidings of great joy, which shall be to all people."

The voice, in sweetness and soothing more than human, and low and clear, penetrated all their being, and filled them with assurance. They rose upon their knees, and looking worshipfully, beheld in the center of a great glory the appearance of a man, clad in a robe intensely white; above its shoulders towered the tops of wings, shining and folded; a star over its forehead burned with steady luster, brilliant as Hesperus; its hands were stretched towards them in blessing. Its face was serene and divinely beautiful.

They had often heard, and in their simple way talked of angels; and they doubted not now, but said in their hearts, "The glory of God is about us, and this is he who of old came to the prophet by the river Ulai." Directly the angel continued, "For unto you is born this day, in the city of David, a Savior, which is Christ, the Lord." Again there was a rest, while the words sank in their minds. "And this shall be a sign unto you," the announciator said next. "Ye shall find the babe wrapped in swaddling clothes, lying in a manger."

The herald spoke not again, his good tidings were told, yet he stayed awhile. Suddenly the light of which he seemed the center, turned roseate and began to tremble; then up as far as the men could see there was flashing of white wings, and coming and going of radiant forms, and voices as of a multitude chanting in unison, "Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace, good-will towards men."

Then the herald raised his eyes as seeking approval of one far off; his wings stirred and spread slowly and majestically, on their upper side white as snow, in the shadow vari-tinted, like mother-of-pearl. When they were expanded many cubits beyond his stature, he arose lightly, and, without effort, floated out of view, taking the light up with him.

Long after he was gone, down from the sky fell the refrain in measure mellowed by distance, "Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace, good-will toward men."—Gen. Lew Wallace.

Letter to Mississippi Conference.

My Dear Bishop and Brethren of the Mississippi Conference:

Our annual meeting in Japan for the past year closed in September; Bishop Wilson presiding. The reports from every part of our work were most encouraging. Every member of the mission, and every worker, seemed full of faith and hope; and each, with a firm and fixed purpose, resolved to be more faithful. Especially during, and after, the most solemn and earnest exhortation from the Bishop, in his closing words to us, one and all were stimulated with new desires to press forward in the glorious work for the Master. He called to our minds the fact that multiplied thousands of Christians in our Southern Methodist Church were holding us up before God in earnest prayer. It seemed as if our dear Bishop felt he was delivering his last message to us in this distant land of darkness and death. When he said, "This, in all probability, will be the last time I shall ever meet with you as a mission," every heart was melted, and one and all prayed from the bottom of their hearts that he might again meet with us, if it should be the Lord's will. We did not know until the closing hour whether we would be organized into a Conference or not. It was the decision of the Bishop that we remain a while longer as a mission, and we all think now his decision was right. So, dear brethren of the Mississippi Conference, I still remain among you and one of you, a member of the Conference. This fall, thirty-seven years ago, I was received into your midst as a member of the Mississippi Conference, at Canton, where the Conference is to be held this year, and then and there I was appointed missionary to China.

My dear Bishop and brethren, I have never, for one moment, regretted the step I took then in giving myself up entirely to the work of a missionary in a heathen land. Had I my life to live over again, I would give myself, as I did then, to serve the Lord with all my heart. My companion with me in all my labors has never, for one moment, faltered; and had she to live these thirty-seven years over again, it would be with the same fixed purpose and determination to unite with me in working in the dark places of the earth for the Lord. God has led us in a way we knew not, and we have constantly felt his guiding hand directing us. He has never forsaken us; and, though we have, at times, been cast down and discouraged by seeing so little fruit of our labors, yet he has daily given us new strength. And we feel to-day that he is near to us, and day by day opening the way for us. It was by his guiding hand we were led to China, and it was by his mercy and loving care we were allowed to spend so many years in that dark land. To-day we bless his holy name that his church is firmly established in that land, never to be moved, and that about fifty thousand, or more, of precious souls have been gathered into the kingdom of Christ. In 1854, when we reached China, there were but three hundred native Christians in all the land. What a wonderful change God has wrought in that land! After thirty-two years of work there, the Lord opened the way and directed our steps to Japan, to work among these people. We have been here a little over four years; but during that short space of time our hands have been full of work, and many times we have praised God for the wonderful way in which he has led us. We landed in this city almost entire strangers, and with not a single native Christian or native helper; but, at our last meeting, our membership, since our arrival, has reached three hundred and eighteen. For this we praise the Lord and take fresh courage. We thank God that he has opened the way for our church in America to enter this field, and that so many have been influenced to come and help us. And now my heart is made glad by the earnest desire which God has kindled in your hearts to send more men from your midst to help us in this work. I would not plead for Japan alone, but for China, too. The church has a grand work before her in China and in Japan. Convert these two strongholds of idolatry, and bring them to a knowledge of Christ, and they will carry the gospel into all these Eastern lands. We have many openings we can not fill for the want of men and women. Brethren, we need your help. The heathen are perishing all around us without a knowledge of God. You have sent three missionaries to Japan; can you not send us another to cheer our hearts and to strengthen our hands? In all your work of labor and love we pray that the blessing of our God, the great Head of the church, may rest upon you. Pray for us, that we may hold out faithful, and, at last, may we all meet around the throne of God to praise "him that loved us, and washed us from our sins in his own blood, and who hath made us kings and priests unto God and his Father; to him be glory and dominion for ever and ever. Amen."

Ever your brother in Christ Jesus our Lord, J. W. LAMBUTH.

To Rev. R. Abbey, D. D.

Dear Brother: I clipped for my scrap-book, some months ago, an article from you, in which you make statement of the replies of several evolutionists to a question propounded by you, as to "whether persons of acknowledged scientific authority have specifically denied the divine origination of matter or of man, and placed such denial on logical grounds." No one of them answered in the affirmative. Dr. A. H. Lewis, one to whom the question was propounded, said: "Science has no means whatsoever of even instituting an inquiry as to the truth of these Bible statements." Prof. Cope, another one of the learned gentlemen inquired of, tells of Haeckel's writing of the "unthinkable dogma of creation." You assent to the unthinkableness of the dogma of creation, basing your assent to the declaration upon the fact that "it can not be proved or denied." I suppose, of course, that you use the term "denied" as the equivalent of disproved. The point I wish to submit for your consideration is this, which I will state in connection with an event that was, to me, of special interest: The editor of the Truth Seeker—Mr. Underwood—of Boston, was invited by parties in Bowling Green, Ky., to give lectures there, in advocacy of the Ingersoll view of revelation. I attended both of the lectures. The morning after the second lecture I called on Mr. Underwood, at his hotel, and was pleased to find the coterie of gentlemen, who had engaged him to lecture, present with him. I read to him in their hearing what I had written the night before in criticism of his main positions. I then asked him, categorically, as follows:

"Mr. Underwood, you affirm that creation is something that the human mind can not comprehend or apprehend, do you not?"

He replied, "Yes!"

"Is it anywhere declared that such an event—such a fact—ever occurred?"

"Certainly, sir; in the book of Genesis!"

"Then, if it is a fact unthinkable by the human mind; if the human mind is so constituted that it is powerless in all endeavor to understand it, does it not follow inevitably that the dogmatic statement, as we have it in Genesis, is revelation?"

He could make no reply. What is incomprehensible by the human mind could not, originally, by the human mind, be conceived; ergo, this fact of creation, which is thus above such conception, is obliged to have come to us as revelation.

Mr. Underwood affirmed, in his lectures, that there is no logical or philosophical necessity of an intelligent, personal cause for the phenomena of nature, as we are conscious and cognizant thereof; that matter and force, in reciprocal or co-ordinate relation, answer all the requirements of thought regarding the matter. I asked him if any cause could produce an effect superior to itself. He answered, "No!" It was then my pleasure somewhat to amplify—to elaborate—a statement of this wonderful scene wherein consciousness of individual personality, on the part of each human being, giving certitude of identity through all the changes from infancy to old age, and a corresponding certitude, by cognizance, of the individual personality of others; of our sense of obligation, morally, in the varied relations—domestic, social, commercial and political, etc. "Can all these wonderful phenomena, whereof we predicate terms of spiritual import, such as dignity, benevolence, modesty, chastity, fidelity, patience, politeness; wherein are known the names of father, mother, brother, sister, son, daughter, wife and husband, and whereof government manifold, and social affiliations, and franchises varied, have arisen—can all of this, as effect, transcending incalculably unintelligent matter and force, have had them as cause?"

Shortly after this I had the pleasure of a long talk with Dr. Broadus, Baptist, author and professor, and he approved of each of the arguments as demonstrative; the first, of revelation; the latter, as personal, intelligent cause of the phenomena of which we are conscious and cognizant.

Respectfully, and with highest esteem, JOSEPH B. COTTRELL.

East Tennessee Correspondence.

MR. EDITOR: The recent session of your Conference has awakened in me a lively interest in the affairs of our church in Louisiana. By a stroke of Providence I was transferred from the Mississippi floods to the mountains of East Tennessee. But nothing can extinguish the love I have for the people I left behind me—"though the more I love you, the less I be loved."

And, first, of the Lottery—the great question which so agitated your people after I left you. That you may know how others felt while this conflict was waging, I quote the following from a young lady, then in the North, dated in August: "If this were a country where it would do any good, I should turn our Reading Club into an Anti-Lottery League, and try to reform the immediate neighborhood, letting self-culture go where it might. I am very much interested in the state of affairs in Louisiana now. I do hope and pray that the efforts of so many right-minded citizens may not be lost. A moral tonic is what that beautiful State needs more than anything else. I have lain awake nights trying to think what I could do to help so noble a cause; but I have had to admit that I am not good for anything. I have always wanted to keep away from anything related to public life or politics; but now I would willingly do anything I could, whether I got out of my sphere or not. I could even endure criticism, I believe—the thing of all things most hateful to me." And there were hundreds away from the State who felt just as she did.

But to come more immediately to the affairs of the church. The ADVOCATE continues on its way prospering as never before. When you are told that I have been reading and writing for it from its initial number in 1852, you will appreciate my congratulations on its successful career under your hands. McTyeire, Gillespie, Koener, Parker, Galloway, and yourself have, from time to time, admitted my contributions to your columns along with those of abler writers, and thus I have made many friends whom I have never seen. I know this must be so, from the fact that now and then I am introduced to a man who immediately recognizes me as one whose name he has seen in the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE.

Bro. Carradine's letters have been a treat to me and to many others. He sees with our eyes and describes to our hearts. I trust his successor at Carondelet will be as welcome as Carradine has been at St. Louis.

The appointment of Dr. Walker to Moreau, I am sure, will be to the edification of both himself and the church. The rest of the appointments seem to me eminently fit and appropriate.

Our people have had a revival season during the past month, being favored by most delightful weather. Rev. John Boring, assisted by Gilreath as leader of the singing, have formed a combination to labor in the South as their services may be required. Bro. Boring is an old member of the Holston Conference, but for several years has been preaching as an evangelist. His labors have generally been successful; and, after hearing him for ten days, I can cordially recommend him to others needing his assistance. He is no striker, not given to filthy lucre; but is an able minister of the New Testament, bold and fearless, yet giving none offense, neither to the Jew, nor yet to the Gentile. His labors last year in the Mississippi Conference were commended by those who received them in the ADVOCATE, and he is open to all calls for the coming winter from Southern quarters. Letters to him may be addressed to Hiwassee College, or Johnson City, Tenn.

Rev. George Stewart, who assisted Sam Jones, is now our pastor in Chattanooga.

Dr. Rankin, who visited the Seashore last year, has been transferred to Kansas City. F. M. GRACE.

The Appointments—Some Reflections.

MR. EDITOR: Has it not occurred to you that many things, in connection with our itinerant system, are perfectly wonderful? To illustrate my meaning, take the average talent of any one of our Conferences, and compare it to the talent of a like number of men in any profession of life, and see how well our men average with other and more lucrative professions. Then apply our rules to other callings, and order this lawyer to that place, and this one to the other; this doctor here, and another one there; this teacher to that neighborhood, and another one across the country, to give the benefit of their respective gifts and experiences to those more needy people, with no other promise of support than the whims of the several communities may allot to each. Now, how many will go, and how will they succeed when they get there? I think it reasonable to assume that nine hundred out of a thousand so ordered would stubbornly refuse to go, and ninety-nine out of the hundred going out thus would tumble into broils and contentions, and ultimately be lost in the confusion, and perish in their heroism. Still, nine hundred and ninety-nine preachers sent out after this sort would go without a murmur, returning, at the end of the year, sleek and fat, and rejoicing in their successes!

Do you see the reason? "My kingdom is not of this world." This is it. These preachers have gone into those communities, not to seek the people's wealth, but to seek their souls; and if, at the end of a year of toil and privation, amidst perils and want, they come up, bearing spiritual sheaves, "they come rejoicing" in their labors, saying, "Here am I; send me" to other conflicts. They can afford this for, at least, two reasons. First, God has said, "Lo, I am with you." Second, these communities have sought no man. They have gone to God with prayer for a preacher; and the preachers feel that there is, in some sense, a providence in their going—each is going where he has been called.

This is the theology of our Methodist itinerancy. As long as we adhere to this principle, we are safe; the moment we drift away from it, we are gone. Let it once be understood that these appointments are made, either in whole or in part, by the coming together of human agencies, or the correlation of human plans, and the very foundation of the hope of the itinerant preacher is removed.

Is there a tendency to the source from which danger is apprehended? It is no idle question, nor does it matter whether the departure is among the preachers or the people; the effect will necessarily be the same. If the preachers run off in that direction, they destroy the confidence of the people; and if the people do it, they destroy the confidence of the preachers; so that in any event it is breaking the legs on which our itinerant system has run so long, so fast, and so gallantly.

Human nature is not more keenly sensitive to anything than to infringements. No matter by what party schemes are set on foot, which, to any extent, estops or forestalls the co-equal privileges of the other, it is an infringement of rights. Whenever a church concludes that there is something peculiar about its condition, and that a certain preacher has just the peculiarities which dove-tail into those of the church—whether this conclusion be by the church, as a whole, or by a few members who are the self-constituted representatives of that church—the effect is to crumble away the doctrinal foundation of our system, and lay, in its place, a foundation of human chicanery, upon which may be built an institution of preferment or intrigue.

There are some peculiarities which must not be overlooked, and the itinerant system makes ample provision for such. There are "diversities of gifts" among the churches as well as among the preachers. Not every preacher is suited to every work—or charge—in his Conference; but if God knows anything, he knows that; and if he has put any knowledge into the heads of the Bishops and presiding elders, this fact is known to them also, and influenced by that silent spirit which communicates from God to men. They are fully competent to meet the responsibilities of the case, unwarped by extraneous, and often ambitious, influences from churches or preachers.

It seems to me that we are not looking "to the rock whence we were hewn, nor to the hole of the pit whence we were digged;" but rather away from God, our real strength, to men with imaginary fitnesses or real qualifications, according to the human idea of the fitness of things.

The government of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, like all other governments, is in the nature of a covenant—an agreement. This covenant has been entered into by the two classes comprising the membership, viz: the lay and the clerical elements. The lay element in the church has agreed to surrender its right to choose men, while the clerical element has surrendered its right to choose places, each agreeing with the other that the Bishops, in consultation with the presiding elders, shall settle these questions. A violation of this covenant by either party to the agreements is flagrant and outrageous. The indignation of our lay brethren against a preacher who might nose around among the official Boards seeking "a call," would soon find an expression in very positive tones. The preacher are men "of like passions" as themselves, and this sort of disloyalty to government, and disregard for compacts, will be stubbornly met and [illegible]ly resisted.

This remark is not intended to [illegible] exclusively to what is called "transfer prerogative." That this "prerogative" is greatly abused in some instances goes without saying. But churches seek men, and men seek churches, without regard to transfer. If one of the Bishops, directing the appointments, is impressed that Bro. A. of Baltimore, would succeed better in San Francisco than Bro. B., and that Bro. B. would do more for the glory of the Master in Baltimore than Bro. A. could do, it seems "meet, right, and his bounden duty" to make these transfers, not from outside influences, but from the conviction which he may feel touching the case. The same principle applies to the local Conference work.

We must be directed in the selection of our work by the judgment of men, or by the grace of God. We can not have one rule for one class of preachers, and another rule for another class. This applies also to churches. If one church is permitted to go out and select a preacher, any other church may do so, too. If the departure from custom and law be permitted in one instance, it will likely be demanded in the other. This is a cross-cut saw, raking right across the body of our polity! Ambition is at one end, and policy at the other; a church, or a preacher, wanting the best; a Bishop, or a preacher, wanting to please. It is my humble opinion that these sawyers had better be knocked away, and the mangling of this poor body politic stopped.

We seem to be at the genesis of a period of innovations and usurpations. It may be all of a minor character; but no student of church history can fail to see in these things the well-formed bones of infant giants. Follow the church from the simple, conservative customs of "the fathers" to the arrogance and villainy of Rome, and behold the tendency.

CHRISTMAS CAROL.

Down the ages floats the echo
Of an anthem sweet and clear,
Chanted by a host of angels,
In the calm, Judean air.
O the glory and the rapture
Of that loud, triumphant strain;
Sweetest song e'er sent from heaven,
"Peace on earth, good will to men."

There's no minor in the carol,
Saddest notes belong to earth,
Naught but joy and peace and gladness
Blessing hearts that droop beneath
Crushing weights of gloom and darkness,
Tearless, sadness, voiceless care,
Merging sunshine into shadows,
Bringing hope to grim despair.

O that heavenly benediction!
Chanted on the natal day,
Of the King of earth and heaven,
Rang there ne'er so grand a lay,
Blessed peace! sent here from Eden!
Like a snow-flake, pure and white,
Calming life's great, stormy billows,
Lighting up earth's blackest night.

Holy hymn, forever ringing
"Through the corridors" of years,
Bringing peace to high and lowly,
Drying sorrow's bitter tears.
May the white-robed angel choir
Chant for aye that happy strain,
May the saints unite in singing,
"Peace on earth good will to men."

The Work of the Spirit.

BY J. B. WALKER, D. D.

"First, what is the characteristic work of the Holy Spirit in the New Testament Church? And, secondly, is our church as much a witness at present to this work as it has heretofore been?"

The offices of the Holy Spirit in the New Testament Church are various. The Holy Spirit is the Author of the humanity of Christ, for said the angel of the Lord to Joseph concerning Mary, "That which is conceived in her is of the Holy Ghost."...Christ was conseerated and inaugurated into his holy offices by the Holy Spirit.... Christ was endowed with excellent gifts, abundantly and beyond measure, by the Holy Spirit. It was also the office of the Spirit to endue the apostles with power for the demands of their work. He was to guide them into all truth. He was to convince men of sin, of righteousness, and of judgment. A grand exhibition of this great function was given on the day of Pentecost, when thousands were cut to the heart by the "sword of the Spirit," and cried out, realizing their ignorance, their guilt and helplessness, "Brethren, what shall we do?' So Stephen was filled with the Holy Ghost for bold and incisive preaching. The Spirit said to Philip, as the eunuch's chariot passed on, "Go join thyself to him," and Philip preached unto him Jesus; and Paul was filled with the Holy Ghost, and straightway preached Jesus, proving he was the Christ, and confounded the Jews that were at Damascus.

The Spirit not only aided the apostles and taught how to preach, but where to preach; restraining from one field, but prompting and guiding to another, where God had opened effectual doors. St. Luke narrates that when they had gone throughout Phrygia and the region of Galatia, they were forbidden of the Holy Ghost to preach the Word in Asia. After they were come to Mysia, they assayed to go into Bithynia; but the Spirit suffered them not. There "a man of Macedonia" appeared to Paul, saying, "Come over into Macedonia and help us," and so the missionary trend towards Asia was divinely turned towards Europe. We suppose this intervention of the Holy Spirit, in choosing the field for missionary labor, should be a lesson to us to ask that the Holy Spirit, like a pillar of cloud, may guide our aggressive missionary march to the fields where the greatest victories may be won for Christ.

It is the peculiar and gracious work of the Holy Spirit to call men to various offices in the government and general work of the church, and, by various gifts, fit them for their work. Says St. Paul: "There are diversities of gifts, but the same Spirit. And there are diversities of ministrations, and the same Lord. And there are diversities of workings, but the same God who worketh all in all. But to each one is given the manifestation of the Spirit to profit withal. For to one is given through the Spirit the word of wisdom, and to another the word of knowledge according to the same Spirit; to another faith in the same Spirit, and to another gifts of healing in the one Spirit, and to another the working of miracles, and to another prophecy, and to another discerning of spirits, and to another divers kinds of tongues; but all of these worketh the one and the same Spirit, dividing to each severally as he will." The Spirit is free to act as, in wisdom, he may deem best; and where the Spirit of the Lord is, there is liberty. These Scriptures certainly teach us to expect a large variety in the operations of the Spirit, and also teach us the duty of charity in our judgments of spiritual things.

The many wide and effectual doors that have been opened to missionary zeal to go in and possess these lands for Christ, is, no doubt, the outcome of the Spirit's movings and overrulings, and should lead the church to expect the Spirit more and more to clear her way and guide her steps.

If we consider the work of the Spirit, as held by the church, from a historical standpoint, we shall find, after the apostolic age, that the church gradually—and, perhaps, imperceptibly to itself—began more and more to rely upon ritualistic instrumentalities until the work of the Spirit, in all that appertains to salvation, was largely lost sight of.

After the Reformation "private judgment" was perverted into a proud rationalism, that undertook to explain all that was supernatural in Christianity by second causes and natural phenomena. The sermons of the Protestant divines of Germany, England and Scotland rose little above the ethics and maxims of the heathen philosophers of old. The atoning efficacy of Christ's death was little discussed or urged upon the attention of their hearers. "The being born of the Spirit"—born from above, "of God"—was, in a large measure, lost sight of. The necessity of "the washing of regeneration, and the renewing of the Holy Ghost," was not insisted on. The witness of the Spirit to our pardon and adoption was preached in so low and indistinct a form that it was a blessing expected by few, and not realized or enjoyed by many. Many thought, as the Wesleys and others, that they had been made "new creatures" by baptism; that the assumption of baptismal vows, the taking the Lord's Supper, and a moral life, was all that Christianity demanded, or that church members should expect. Mr. Wesley found, from his intercourse and conversations with the Moravians, that there was a spiritual experience and a spiritual life which he had never realized, and which he never understood until his heart was "strongly warmed" at the Fetter Lane evening service. From the period of this spiritual regeneration, and gracious witness of his pardon and adoption by the Holy Spirit, Mr. Wesley continually proclaimed the doctrine of a conscious pardon and adoption, by the witness of the Holy Spirit, in his sermons and writings. In this, so far as we are advised, the Methodist theologians in Great Britain and America have closely followed in the footsteps of Wesley.

In our Articles little is said as to our faith, as a church, about the offices and work of the Holy Spirit in the New Testament Church. The Fourth Article teaches that the Holy Ghost, proceeding from the Father and the Son, is of one substance, majesty and glory with the Father and the Son, and very and eternal God. The Eighth, on free will, states, "We have no power to do good works, pleasant and acceptable to God, without the grace of God by Christ preventing us." Unless we understand the "grace of God by Christ" to mean the gift of the Spirit and his gracious work, we have no mention of the Spirit in this Article. The Twelfth, "on sin after justification," assumes that believers have received the Holy Spirit, and that if they sin, it is not the unpardonable sin against the Holy Ghost.

These are all the statements made by the compilers of the Articles in relation to the Holy Ghost. Our church and our ministry hold, and have held from its organization, that we live under the dispensation of the Spirit, and that he attends the Word, written and spoken, with illuminating light and awakening power; that he helps us to pray and repent; that when we accept Christ, he "renews us in the spirit of our minds" by the renewing of the Holy Ghost, so that we are declared to be "new creatures; that old things have passed away, and all things have become new;" and we have been made partakers of the divine nature. The Holy Spirit makes his abode within us as our witness, our comforter, our monitor and our guide.

We do not know that our views are less pronounced and thorough on the imperative need of the Holy Spirit's agency in carrying forward all the various plans to bring the world to Christ than they were fifty or seventy-five years ago. In all our theological writings the Holy Spirit's agency is insisted on, and in all our worship the Spirit's gracious help is continually invoked.

We are aware that our growing numbers, our increasing wealth, our increased educational facilities, and the encroachments of the spirit of the world will be strong temptations to rely on "might and power" rather than on the Spirit's all-essential agency.

Practically—and we think this is our doctrine and our practice—we should greatly depend on the Spirit, in answer to our believing prayers, to do much for us that we can not do for ourselves. We should ask his suggestions as to our pulpit themes, and his illuminating help in their preparation. And we should expect the Spirit to go before us, to graciously incline men to receive in a teachable spirit our message of heavenly love; and we should constantly expect his gracious help to make the Word we preach "the power of God unto salvation." But we may remark, on this line of thought, that we should be very sure that our impressions are scriptural, and in harmony with the mind of the Spirit. It is quite certain somebody must be mistaken when one preacher thinks he is divinely moved to advocate and proclaim a doctrine which another preacher feels he is divinely moved to oppose.

All believers should ask and expect the Spirit's revealing light, in searching the Scriptures, to make them increasingly "wise unto salvation." On the Spirit's gracious help we must depend to increase our spirituality and heavenly-mindedness.

God's great gift to the New Testament Church was the gift of the Holy Spirit. "Now, on the last day, the great day of the feast, Jesus stood and cried, saying, If any man thirst, let him come unto me, and drink. He that believeth on me, as saith the Scriptures, out of his belly shall flow rivers of living water. But this he spake of the Spirit, which they that believed on him were to receive: for the Spirit was not given; because Jesus was not yet glorified." Jesus must be glorified of the Father before the Spirit could glorify him. Jesus declares the Spirit should come as a person, to abide forever with his people as the revealer of all his truth, and the indwelling guide of all believers. So we understand that the Holy Spirit, through himself God, should, in the New Testament Church, only glorify the Son by revealing his person, and expanding his doctrine, and administering his kingdom, for says the apostle, "We are the witnesses of Christ, and so is the Holy Ghost." As says Whedon: "The Spirit shall exhibit the Son, in all his Messianic glory, as the Head of the church and Judge of the world. Nay, he shall exhibit him as possessing all the fullness of the Godhead bodily."

Pope, in his Compendium of Christian Theology, says: "With the Pentecost begins the dispensation of the Spirit. His office has supreme reference to the administration of Christ and his redemption; and this under three aspects....He is the revealer of the Son generally, and of the Godhead as revealed in him....He is the Savior's agent in dispensing individual salvation, being a witness for him to the soul —his divine power in the soul; but both in one....He is the Lord's representative in his body—the church. Gathering it from the world, ruling in it, and dispensing the gifts of its Head. But while subordinate in the mediatorial economy, the Holy Ghost is a divine person, the Agent in the unity of the Father and the Son, of his own acts."

In view of the fact that we live in the New Testament Church, under the Holy Spirit's administration, and that he is the source of our light, our power, our sanctification and our comfort, it, no doubt, would be edifying and profitable to our people to dwell more than we do, in our devotions and public ministrations, upon the importance and graciousness of the Holy Spirit's work in the administration and application of the great redemptive scheme.

My Visit to North Louisiana.

Except the last two years, I have spent my ministry to date in the Shreveport district. Therefore, when removed from North Louisiana to South Louisiana, I felt quite lonely. But in a short while I felt at home with my charge, and did two hard, but pleasant and successful years' work. At the close of my second year, the Conference convened in Monroe, which gave me an opportunity to visit North Louisiana again. But, for want of time, I could not call on every circuit that I had served in that country; but as I passed through the South Bossier charge, where I had spent my last four years in that part of the Conference, I treated myself to the pleasure of stopping off at Doyline and Haughton, and preaching to large congregations on Sunday, November 30. Rev. Lewis A. Reed was my successor in this charge, and has continued as pastor in charge for the two years, and is appointed again to the same work. The people of that whole country will pardon me for saying in printer's ink that I love them very dearly. Several changes had taken place at Doyline, especially the death of our dear old brother, Capt. Doyle. When I left that country he was the steward and superintendent of his church and the district steward for the circuit. His home was the preacher's home (and is yet), and his heart—noble and large—was ever open to his pastor's wants. But he was not there on this visit to meet me at the door, and say, "Come in, Bro. Blockor," as in other days. He had finished his labors, and had gone home to God to rest with many dear ones in heaven. Yes, Bro. Doyle is in heaven. Precious fact!

At Doyline Church I was greeted by many persons from other places, among whom were my old friends, Bro. and Sister Wilkerson, of Pleasant Valley.

At Haughton, at the night service, the congregation was very large. When I looked over that crowded house I missed several, among whom was our dear Sister Laura Oneal, who used to entertain the preachers so nicely at their hotel in Haughton. She was a faithful and true member of that little church for four years, and had passed on to glory. Dear Bro. Doyle and Sister Oneal, and others, we are on our way to that blessed home where you now rest with Jesus. In company with my daughter, Lura, three very pleasant days were spent with great delight in these two communities.

But I am at home again in Acadia parish, and a hearty reception meets us every day. While these people were strangers to us two years ago, they are now among our warmest friends, and the mutual love and friendship is growing year by year. As my work is a little differently organized, I am again making out my appointments for another year's hard work. I had been at home about one hour when one of my new stewards, Bro. Green, called in and gave me his subscription for the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE.

Anti-Lottery Resolutions.

The Louisiana Annual Conference, at its recent session in Monroe, passed the following resolutions:

Whereas, The fight is upon us, and the powers of sin combined with vast sums of money are seeking to corrupt and debauch the public morals of the entire country; And whereas, it has been the established and well-sustained policy of the government of the United States of America to protect the life, health and morals of its citizens; therefore, be it

Resolved, By the Louisiana Conference, that we respectfully and earnestly memorialize our Representatives and Senators in Congress to secure the amendment of the Constitution of the United States, so as to prohibit the charter of lotteries by any State in our Union.

From the Work.

CLIO, LA.

We had a protracted meeting at the new church, called Huff's Chapel, two miles east of Clio, which began on Friday night, November 28, and lasted until Tuesday night, December 2. Bro. C. McDonald, P. E., held the fourth Quarterly Conference, but on account of sickness in his family was compelled to leave on Sunday evening. Rev. G. W. Huff, Rev. J. G. Sibley, of Gainsville, Miss.; Rev. J. S. Hodges, of East Feliciana, and Rev. T. R. Sibley, M. D., of Port Hudson, remained until the close of the meeting. Bro. J. G. Sibley, who was formerly a pupil of mine, and one of which I have cause to be proud, preached every sermon, except one, and we had the greatest revival that was ever known in this country. Forty-six united with the church, and near forty were happily converted. It seemed that from the time Bro. Sibley began to preach, the Spirit of God was there. Men who defied the church and preachers prostrated themselves at the foot of the Cross. Old case-hardened sinners came to the mourner's bench, and with penitential tears prayed for mercy; but it was a glorious sight to see those old men, whose temples were adorned with silvery hairs, who had spent their youthful and most of their manhood days in the service of Satan, arise shouting, "Glory be to God!" The house was crowded on Monday, and when Bro. Sibley called for mourners, nearly everyone in the house came forward, and while Bro. Hodges was praying for them, in his most earnest and enthusiastic manner, the groans and sobs of the penitents were mingled with the shouts of the new-born souls. At the close of the meeting nearly every member, who is the head of a family, declared their intention to set up a family altar and pray with their family, at least, once a day.

Those who take no interest in the welfare of their souls have been constrained to say, "Of a truth this is the works of God;" and others that, "It is impossible to hear J. G. Sibley preach without being convicted." And glory to God! the stronghold of Satan is broken up in this community, the voice of prayer is heard in many houses; and may the time soon come when there shall not be one left to advocate the cause of Satan, but all be enlisted under the blood-stained banner of King Emmanuel! is the prayer of W. W. FAUST, M. D.

COVINGTON CIRCUIT, MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

The Lord has abundantly blessed the Covington circuit during the Conference year that is now drawing to a close. He has blessed us with a "gathering in" of souls—fifty-three having united with the church, forty-eight infants and seven adults have been baptized, and the membership of the Sunday-school has increased forty-five per cent., and for the first time in the history of the circuit every assessment made by the Annual Conference has been paid in full. Money collected for all purposes during the year amounts to over three dollars and twenty-five cents per member, and this without a "church entertainment, fair, festival or theatre." While we all feel thankful to God for blessing us, numerically and financially, we are especially grateful to him for an abundant outpouring of his Spirit upon the people, and the spiritual condition of the circuit resulting therefrom. Ninety per cent. of the male members over seventeen years of age pray in public, and eighty-eight per cent. of the families in the church have a family altar. All praise be unto the Lord for the rich blessings wherewith he hath blessed his people. We are indebted to Bro. Crymes, Hays, Van Valkenburgh and Vickers for ministerial aid. Yours,

H. C. BROWN.

SUMMIT, MISS.

Brookhaven circuit is among sawmills; nine within its bounds. Thirty-two additions; infants baptized, fifteen; adults baptized, eleven. At one of my appointments I received $6 90 and a cat. This is ahead of Bro. A. B. Nicholson, preacher. He received two fox squirrel skins and a coon hide.

Speaking of a cat, reminds me of what I saw in the New York Tribune. A prominent clergyman gives this description of the life of a minister: "My experience with churches makes me think that ministers are like cats. When you go to a new place first, everybody says, 'Come, pussy; come, pussy; nice pussy,' and you come. Then they begin to rub your fur, and say, 'Poor pussy, poor pussy;' and then they say, 'Scat!'"

Hope to see you at Conference to represent "our ADVOCATE."

BOOKS.

SANCTIFICATION. By B. Carradine, D. D. Introduction by Rev. L. L. Pickett. L. L. Pickett, Columbia, S. C. Price, eighty cents.

A large part of this book has already appeared in our columns. Dr. Carradine writes with great ease, and is generally very clear; but on the subject treated of in this book he has failed to make clear to this writer several very important points. We think also that he has pushed the interpretation of some passages of Scripture beyond their proper sphere and made them mean what the Holy Spirit never meant when he indited them.

PERIODICALS.

—The TREASURY, for the current month, has a fine filling. Sermons, expository lectures, leading thoughts of sermons, questions of the day make up a bill of fare where everybody can find something suited to the taste. E. B. Treat, New York. Price, $2 50.

—The HOME MAKER, for Christmas, is splendid. This monthly is exactly what its name implies, and any home keeper will find a great benefit from a regular reading of the Home Maker. It is edited by Jennie June. Home Maker Company, New York. Price, $2.

—BEST THINGS is a new quarterly, published by D. Lothrop Company, Boston, at ten cents a number, or thirty cents a year. It contains many good and bright things, and is a fine illustration of the zeal and enterprise of the publishers. The size is, we think, a little unhandy.

—The GOSPEL IN ALL LANDS, for December, confines itself principally to mission work in the United States. It is a very interesting number. Hunt and Eaton, New York. Price, $1 50.

—The MISSIONARY REPORTER, our own monthly, has a full table of contents, and is so cheap that anybody can have it. Barbee and Smith, Nashville, Tenn. Price, fifty cents.

—The BOOK-BUYER, for December, is a special Christmas number, and will give you an inkling as to all new books, especially those suited for Christmas and New Year presents. Charles Scribner's Sons, New York. Price, $1.

—The ARENA, for December, has a table of contents of very important subjects discussed by able writers. Tolstoi, Savage, Abbott, Shaler, President Andrews and others are the contributors. Some of the subjects are, The Christian Doctrine of Non-Resistance, The Nature of the Negro, What is Christianity? Patriotism and the Public Schools, Electoral Reform Legislation, and some minor matters. Arena Publishing Company, Boston. Price, $5.

There is one phase of the religion of Christ that all the world can readily understand, and which they are compelled to respect. The Apostle John taught it in the simplest language, "Love one another; not love in word, neither in tongue, but in deed and in truth." And, says the apostle, this was God's commandment in the beginning. But all the apostles join in commending love. Indeed, St. Paul never wrote anything that has taken greater hold on the Christian conscience than the apotheosis of love in the first epistle to the Corinthians. But the church has never made that exhibition of love that the interests of the religion of Christ demands. What the world needs to make it feel the power of the religion of Christ is a real manifestation of Christian brotherhood. Society is growing apart from simple lack of love. There is no inspiration of fellowship which would lead to a community of interest if all were under the guidance of love. The time has come when past misconception of religion should give way to the simple, plain teaching of Christ and his apostles; that men who profess loyalty to Christ should prove it to the world by keeping his commandments and loving one another.—Central.

A HAPPY CHRISTMAS TO YOU.

BY FRANCES RIDLEY HAVERGAL.

A happy Christmas to you!
For the Light of Life is born,
And his coming is the sunshine
Of the dark and wintry morn.
The grandest Orient glow must pale,
The loveliest Western gleam must fail,
But his great light,
So full, so bright,
Ariseth for thy heart to-day,
His shadow-conquering beams shall never pass away.

A happy Christmas to you!
For the Prince of Peace is come,
And his reign is full of blessings,
Their very crown and sum.
No earthly calm can ever last,
'Tis but the lull before the blast;
But his great peace
Shall still increase
In mighty, all-rejoicing sway;
His kingdom in thy heart can never pass away.

Christ Is Born.

The coming of Christmas brings up afresh the story of the birth of Christ as narrated by the evangelists. It is indeed a marvelous story. It wins the love of the little child, and the aged grandsire reads it anew with an ever-deepening reverence. It is the story of the incarnation of the Son of God and the birth of the world's Redeemer. The skeptic may class it with the cunningly devised fables of the old pagan antiquity, but he can not avoid perceiving its beauty and its perfect harmony with the rest of the record of the life of Jesus of Nazareth. If it is true everything else recorded of him in the Gospels is what we might expect, and we are surprised at nothing that follows. No word that he utters, no miracle that he performs, not even his resurrection from the dead and ascension to heaven, nor the perfect sinlessness of his life and character, in the least surprise us. Is the story true? If it is not true, it ought to have been denied by somebody at the time of its publication. Luke's Gospel was written about the year 56, and Matthew's probably some six or eight years earlier. The events narrated were not done in a corner. There certainly were people then living who were able to contradict them if they were not true. And had they been contradicted, the enemies of Christianity and the church would have taken care that it should be published abroad wherever the gospel was preached, and the knowledge of it could not have perished from the earth.

Let us look at some of the things recorded. There was in one of the twenty-four courses of Jewish priests an aged, childless man, Zacharias by name, to whom in his week of service at the temple it one day fell by lot to serve at the altar of incense. His duty done, he saw an angel who addressed him, promising him the birth of a son, describing his character and work and giving him a name. The priest was astounded, as well he might be, considering the advanced age of both himself and his wife, and so improbable did it seem that he did not believe it, and demanded some proof. The proof was ready: "Thou shalt be dumb and not able to speak until the day that these things shall be performed." The crowd in the court without were waiting for his return and wondering at his delay, and when he came he tried to speak, but could not. When his week's duty was done he went away to his home among the hills, dumb. Time passed, and as Gabriel had said, a son was born, and the father was still dumb. It only remained to give the child a name. The neighbors and cousins gathered at the house, but they did not like the name the mother proposed for the boy. They appealed to the father by signs, for he was deaf as well as dumb, and he wrote, "His name is John," and immediately spoke for the first time in nine months. The result was a feeling of deep awe in the neighborhood and great notoriety in the whole hill country from Hebron to Jerusalem. Now if this story is not true, it could have easily been disputed, and the time to dispute it was when Luke published it. The records of the temple would show whether a priest some fifty-six years before had been struck dumb while in the discharge of his duty, and had it been false somebody would have said so. And why did nobody in the hill country come forward and say that the story of a dumb priest had never been heard of before in that region and was a fiction? Simply because the thing was true and they had all heard of it, while some beyond question had personally known the priest himself.

About six months after the birth of John an order was issued for the taking of a census throughout the Roman world. This made necessary a journey of Joseph and Mary from Nazareth to Bethlehem, some sixty miles away. While they were there one night some shepherds watching their flocks were startled at seeing an angel near them and a wonderful brightness shining around them. He told them of the birth that day in the town near by of a babe who was the long-expected Christ, and gave them the token by which they might identify him. And then a choir of angels burst forth in song of praise: "Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace." When the song had closed and the angels were gone the shepherds hastened to the city, and found "both Mary and Joseph, and the babe in the manger," as the angel has said. They told their story. They went into the city and told of the angel, the glory, the token, the song, and the new-born babe. It went from lip to lip, and all Bethlehem next day knew the wonderful thing that had come to pass. By and by Luke published the story—a story already well known among Christians. Surely then was the time for some survivor among those shepherds or some old resident of Bethlehem to step forward and say that it had never been heard of before. The strained relations between the Jews and Christians would impel the Jews to its denial if it could have been denied with truth, and if it had been denied, there would have been some record of the denial somewhere. It is too late for haters of Christ to deny it now.

Six weeks afterward Jesus was taken to Jerusalem to be presented before the Lord and legally redeemed. As he was brought into the temple he was met by aged Simeon. This holy man was living in expectation of the Christ, for the Lord had promised him that he should not die until he had seen him. And now, guided by the Holy Spirit, he met the parents with the child as they came in, and openly identified him as the Christ. Soon afterward came up Anna, aged widow and prophetess whose home was at the temple, and she gave God thanks and spoke of the child to all her friends who were looking with her for the redemption of Jerusalem, and they could not have been few. These scenes and conversations, if they really occurred, could not have been forgotten. They were talked about. They who were witnesses of them and they who heard of them at the time could not all have been dead when Luke wrote. If they were not real, if Simeon had never claimed to have seen the infant Messiah, if Anna had never been heard by her friends to talk of him as the promised Redeemer of his people, somebody was living who could have declared. Why was it not done? The answer is plain: they could not be denied. They were true. And it is easy to believe that when Luke's Gospel was published there were many who gave testimony to these wonderful things in the infancy of our Lord, either from personal knowledge or from having learned them long before from those who knew them.

We claim for Christianity that it is a supernatural religion; but we also claim that the evidence on which it rests submits itself to the common sense and honest judgment of mankind. Whether Luke tells the truth is an historical question to be tried and settled by historical methods of proof. One line of such proof is here presented. If his narrative could have been disputed when it was first made, it would most assuredly have been done, and it was not done. To dispute it now is folly. We come to this Christmas-time with joy, for we have a firm basis of truth on which to rest. It tells us once more of the infinite love which led the Son of God to become incarnate and come to earth as a little child that he might be the Savior of sinful men—D. A. Whedon, D. D.

We should as soon go without matches in the house, as Johnson's Anodyne Liniment, for croup.

Wise Giving.

The remarkable will of the late Daniel B. Fayerweather, of New York, is an instance of wise and liberal devising. The sum given to benevolence is large, while the bequests are of a comprehensive character. The philanthropist appears not only in leaving over $2,000,000 for educational purposes, but in doing so in a way to produce the widest beneficent results and to help institutions of learning over widely extended sections, with promising futures, and needing, in many instances, fostering care. The benefactions are as follows: Bowdoin College, $100,000; Amherst College, $100,000; Williams College, $100,000; Dartmouth College, $100,000; Wesleyan University, $100,000; Yale College, $300,000; Columbia College, $200,000; Union Theological Seminary, for the endowment of cadetship, $50,000; University of Rochester, $100,000; Hamilton College, $100,000; Cornell University, $200,000; Lafayette College, $50,000; University of Virginia, $100,000; Lincoln University, $100,000; Hampton University, $100,000; Maryville College, $100,000; Marietta College, $50,000; Adelbert College, $50,000; Wabash College, $50,000; Park College, $50,000. The following hospitals in New York City were remembered: Presbyterian Hospital, $25,000; St. Luke's Hospital, $25,000; Manhattan Eye and Ear Infirmary, $25,000; Woman's Hospital, $10,000; Mount Sinai Hospital, $10,000; We are especially pleased to note that Lafayette College, Hamilton College, Maryville College, Wabash College, Lincoln University and Park College are so kindly remembered. These are Presbyterian institutions, and their remembrance by one who did not belong to our denomination shows his disinterestedness in the distribution of his wealth. Though not a communicating member of any church, yet he attended the Central Congregational Church of New York City, and his sympathies were largely in that direction, as evidenced by his large gifts to the educational institutions of that body. In his disposition of his vast estate he frequently consulted his pastor, with whom he was on most intimate terms. His accumulations are estimated at over four millions. This immense fortune he amassed after he had reached middle life. He began business as a poor man, but after a series of years of hard struggle he within a short period sprang into the rank of the millionaires of the land. By his wise distribution of his gains he will exert a beneficent influence in coming times.—Presbyterian, N. Y.

It is the glory of Christ's preaching that he declared a personal gospel. The Decalogue declared principles, but it did not restore spiritual life to fallen man, because of the hopeless condition of man himself. And he was in just such a hopeless condition when Christ came to him. How the personal pronouns run through the Master's discourses! Even the magnificent fifth of Matthew, opening with the beatitudes, or seven blessings, returns at once to the personal method with the seventh beatitude, and continues it without interruption to the end of the chapter. The directness of preaching does not mean a Nathan-said-unto-David style, as some imagine in their confused thought; indeed, Christ seldom rebuked sin publicly. But it means that Christ's sermons were personal as opposed to the abstract. He did not say, "Happy the children of Repentance," but, "Repent—except ye repent, ye shall all likewise perish." This is the direct personal method as against the impersonal and abstract. It is the only method worth anything in the pulpit or that makes pew-renting profitable.—Christian at Work.

A Brotherhood of Man.

HOW SHALL WE DEVELOP IT?

This is the problem given to us to work out. Our vast territory; our great variations of climate, soil, and wealth, encouraging every form of industry, agriculture, mining, manufacture, commerce, domestic and international; our heterogeneous population, made up of every race, color, tribe, tongue, nationality, and religious opinion; our great social differences, nowhere greater—millionaires on the one side, masses of pauperism on the other; our perpetual intermixture of classes, facilitated by the modern ease of locomotion, by the universal circulation of the newspaper press, by a common-school system of education, by the absence of hereditary barriers and the easy passing of men from one class into the other; the rapid increase of our great cities and the consequent massing of populations in centers; the perpetual attrition of men of various classes, characters, avocations, temperaments, and faiths against each other; our political institutions throwing all together into one great debating society at every political campaign, and making the subject of yesterday the ruler of to-morrow, and the ruler of yesterday the subject of to-morrow; the problems of our national life—the slavery question, the secession question, the temperance question, the race question, the immigration question, the various forms of the industrial question—all these are elements entering into and constituting one great problem, the problem of human brotherhood.—Lyman Abbott, in Century.

Cheerfulness.

It is an index of good spiritual health when the soul basks continually in an atmosphere of peace and contentment. The Christian, of all men, should be free from melancholy and gloom. The disciples did not fast while the Bridegroom was with them, nor should we bind upon ourselves a habit of moroseness, and then, with inward complacence, think of ourselves as of the class of whom the world is not worthy.

Paul and Silas, even in the jail, were the most cheerful of the inmates. If we would be cheerful, we must abide in him whose words drew to him the publicans and sinners, and of whom it was said, "Never man spake like this man." The world is in a constant ferment, and there is a great deal of forced gaiety and unnatural merriment among those who know not God, but how great the need of that peace which the world can not give or take away. Like the inspiring tone of a bugle echoing along the hillside and glen peals the glad injunction, "Rejoice always, and again I say, rejoice." Not in our own success can we rejoice to any great extent, maybe; not in our usefulness to the world at large or at home, but in the deep and full sense of the abiding love of the Almighty, who is represented as joying over his children with singing.

In the knowledge of the love of that Elder Brother, whose eternal kingdom we are to share as joint-heirs, and in the perpetual and perfect comfort and consolation afforded by the Holy Spirit. "Let everything that hath breath praise the Lord." "Praise ye the Lord."—William K. Palmer.

We are all free American citizens, enjoying our personal liberty; but most of us are in physical slavery, suffering from scrofula, salt rheum or some other form of impure blood. Hood's Sarsaparilla is the great blood purifier which gives physical liberty.

The church can not afford to get away from the poor. It would be wicked if it were even good policy. The church was created for the poor, with all their cares and grievances, and it is our business to hear those grievances that have facts in them, and not to despise even the vagaries that are set toward a better life. The rich we do not always have in the church, but we do have the poor; one is a shifting factor, and the other is a constant quantity in the equation of life. And among the poor must ever be found the pillars of the church, while the poor are the rich in prospect. Time, that spoils and saves all things, says, "Turn about is fair play," and is ordering men down from the heads of their classes, and ordering up those at the foot. The ministry can allay this growing hatred of organized labor toward the church by joining with the laboring classes heartily in all their efforts toward temperance, all efforts toward the educational betterment of themselves and their children, by being ever ready to intervene for arbiters, to urge them to improve their condition by claiming their Sabbath. The church must turn these erring men toward herself, or they will be lost; and we must do it quickly. Both propitious time and blessed opportunity have been already lost.—Presbyterian.

Wonders

Are wrought by the use of Ayer's Hair Vigor in restoring gray hair to its original color, promoting a new growth, preventing the hair from falling, keeping it soft, silky, and abundant, and the scalp cool, healthy, and free from dandruff or humors. The universal testimony is that this preparation has no equal as a dressing, and is, therefore, indispensable to every well-furnished toilet.

"I have used Ayer's Hair Vigor for some time and it has worked wonders for me. I was troubled with dandruff and was rapidly becoming bald; but since using the Vigor my head is perfectly clear of dandruff, the hair has ceased coming out, and I now have a good growth, of the same color as when I was a young woman. I can heartily recommend any one suffering from dandruff or loss of hair to use Ayer's Hair Vigor as a dressing."—Mrs. Lydia O. Moody, East Pittston, Me.

"Some time ago my wife's hair began to come out quite freely.

Ayer's Hair Vigor

not only prevented my wife from becoming bald, but it also caused an entirely new growth of hair. I am ready to certify to this statement before a justice of the peace."—H. Hulsebus, Lewisburgh, Iowa.

"Some years ago, after a severe attack of brain fever, my hair all came out. I used such preparations for restoring it as my physicians ordered, but failed to produce a growth of hair. I then tried, successively, several articles recommended by druggists, and all alike fell short of accomplishing the desired result. The last remedy I applied was Ayer's Hair Vigor, which brought a growth of hair in a few weeks. I think I used eight bottles in two years; more than was necessary as a restorative, but I liked it as a dressing, and have continued to use it for that purpose. I believe Ayer's Hair Vigor possesses virtues far above those of any similar preparation now on the market."—Vincent Jones, Richmond, Ind.

What is Scrofula

It is that impurity in the blood, which, accumulating in the glands of the neck, produces unsightly lumps or swellings; which causes painful running sores on the arms, legs, or feet; which developes ulcers in the eyes, ears, or nose, often causing blindness or deafness; which is the origin of pimples, cancerous growths, or many other manifestations usually ascribed to "humors." It is no more formidable enemy than consumption or cancer alone, for scrofula combines the worst possible features of both. Being the most ancient, it is the most general of all diseases or affections, for very few persons are entirely free from it.

How can it be cured? By taking Hood's Sarsaparilla, which, by the cures it has accomplished, often when other medicines have failed, has proven itself to be a potent and peculiar medicine for this disease. For all affections of the blood Hood's Sarsaparilla is unequalled, and some of the cures it has effected are really wonderful. If you suffer from scrofula in any of its various forms, be sure to give Hood's Sarsaparilla a trial.

Christian Advocate.

Organ of the Louisiana, Mississippi and North Mississippi Conferences of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South.

Rev. O. W. CARTER, D. D., Editor.

THURSDAY, DECEMBER 25, 1890.

Mississippi Conference.

FIRST DAY.

The seventy-seventh session of the Mississippi Annual Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, met in Canton, Miss., December 17, 1890, at nine A. M.; Bishop C. B. Galloway, D. D., presiding. The Bishop opened the Conference by reading II. Corinthians, iv, giving out hymn 228, "And are we yet alive," and prayer. At roll-call nearly all the ministers answered to their names, and quite a large number of laymen. Rev. C. G. Andrews was elected secretary; Rev. J. A. B. Jones, J. W. Chambers, assistants. The hours of 9:30 A. M. to 1:30 P. M. were fixed as the hours of meeting and adjourning.

The following Standing Committees were appointed, viz: Public Worship, Bible Cause, State of Church, Sabbath Observance, Temperance.

A communication from the Publishing House of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, was then read, showing a net sale of $384,000 this year against $300,642 last.

A communication was received from Rev. W. G. E. Cunnyngham, editor of Sunday-school periodical literature, in which it was stated that one million periodicals were sent out monthly—quite an increase over last year. There are 793,472 Sunday-school scholars, showing that the church is alive to the Sunday-school work. The spirituality in the Sunday-school is increasing.

A communication from Dr. Morton, Secretary Church Extension, was read and referred to the Committee on Church Extension. Dr. Morrison, Secretary of Board of Missions, was introduced to the Conference; also T. B. Holt, Treasurer Board of Missions; Dr. W. T. J. Sullivan, P. E., of Columbus district, North Mississippi Conference; Rev. G. W. Bachman, colporteur, North Mississippi Conference.

Ques. 20. The names of the following preachers were called, and their characters passed: C. McDonald, I. W. Cooper, D. A. Little, P. A. Johnston, T. L. Mellen, W. B. Lewis, J. A. Ellis.

The following had their characters passed, and were referred to the Committee on Conference Relations for the superannuated relation: E. R. Strickland, D. Merchant, G. T. Vickers, L. Pearce, T. Price, J. M. Gann, A. B. Nicholson, T. Y. Armstrong.

The following had their characters passed, and were referred to the same committee for the supernumerary relation: R. Abbey, J. A. Vance, J. G. Sibley, E. A. Flowers and D. F. Guice.

Ques. 1. Who are admitted on trial?

H. W. Wallace, D. Trevellian, G. R. Ellis, from Woodville district; B. Vandenburg, George A. Guice, E. B. O'Quin, from Vicksburg district; J. W. Crisler, from Jackson district; Edwin L. Rawls, Kirby Smith Enochs, H. G. Hawkins, J. W. Tinnin, from Meridian district; W. J. Ferguson, W. J. Dawson, from Brookhaven district.

Mrs. E. E. Wiley, president of the Parsonage and Home Mission Society, was introduced to the Conference by the Bishop.

Ques. 20. The following persons were called, and their characters were passed: W. W. Simmons, C. D. Cecil, W. W. Hurst, T. W. Brown, W. L. C. Hunnicutt, B. Jones, P. Howard, J. H. Woodward, L. Carley, T. W. Adams, J. H. Hayes, J. H. Holland, M. H. Moore, N. B. Young.

Rev. E. Cottrell, Commissioner of Education for the Colored Methodist Episcopal Church in America, made a brief address to the Conference, and raised a collection of $50 for Paine and Lane Institutes.

Ques. 20. The following brethren were called, and characters passed: R. S. Woodward, J. J. Lovett, W. C. Black, B. F. Lewis, T. B. Holloman, J. T. Nicholson, D. G. W. Ellis, J. W. Lambuth, W. R. Sims, H. P. Lewis.

After notices, Conference adjourned with benediction.

SECOND DAY.

The Conference was opened with religious service conducted by B. Jones.

Rev. W. R. Sims was elected recording secretary upon nomination of C. G. Andrews.

The report from the Board of Trustees of Millsaps College was read by the financial agent, Rev. A. F. Watkins, and was referred to the Board of Education.

The reports of Edward McGehee College and Port Gibson Female College and Centenary College were referred to the Board of Education.

Ques. 1. Who are admitted on trial?

James T. Abney.

Ques. 2. Who remain on trial?

James R. Whitington, James T. Leggett, Martin L. White, Charles W. Crisler, James C. Ellis, Robert H. Barr, Matthew J. Miller, Patrick H. Howse, Henry C. Brown, Henry L. Norton, James J. Smiley, Hervie Mellard, William M. Stevens, William H. Lewis, George H. Thompson, Barney W. Lewis, W. W. Moore, E. T. Denson, Walton P. Meador and W. M. Sullivan were passed, and continued in the class of the third year.

The report of the Examining Committee on these brethren was discussed by several, and the rigidness of examination was approved.

At this point the Bishop introduced Mrs. E. E. Wiley, the president of the Parsonage and Home Mission Society, who addressed the Conference in a brief talk in regard to the work of the society of which she is the head. The impression made was good and favorable to the extension of the Lord's work on this line.

Dr. Morrison addressed the Conference in a few brief and eloquent words, and continued the collection of last night to raise funds to send missionaries to the foreign field. The collection resulted in raising $285. The collection last night was $1,230. This will send two missionaries and support them one year in the foreign field.

Question 8. What traveling preachers are elected deacons?

James G. Galloway, W. W. Drake, William G. Forsythe, Hicks M. Ellis, Lewis W. Wood, James M. Cowan, Nathan J. Roberts, William P. Jones, James G. Cammack were passed and elected deacons.

Ques. 7. Who are the deacons of one year?

F. M. Keen was passed and continued in the class of the third year. J. D. Crymes was passed and advanced to the class of the fourth year. R. W. Tucker was passed and continued in the class of the third year.

After notices, the Conference adjourned with doxology and benediction by Dr. Abbey.

THIRD DAY.

The Conference was opened with religious services conducted by Dr. C. K. Marshall. The minutes were read and approved.

Ques. 12. What traveling preachers are elected elders?

B. M. Drake, R. A. Breland, W. H. Huntley, M. L. Burton, G. H. Galloway were called and their characters passed, and they were elected.

A. C. Flowers and W. W. Morse were passed and continued in the class of the fourth year.

Question 7.

G. D. Anders and J. M. Ware were passed and continued in class of the third year.

Ques. 5. Who are re-admitted?

None.

J. R. Savage, of the Methodist Protestant Church, was received into the Conference by the recognition of his orders, he taking our vows without reimposition of hands.

Ques. 20. The following persons were called, and their characters passed:

R. J. Jones, W. D. Dominick, I. B. Robertson, J. A. B. Jones, V. D. Skipper, J. W. Brown, W. E. Ballard, R. Selby, N. B. Harmon, F. M. Williams, E. H. Mounger, R. Bradley, H. Bradford, C. A. Third Year: D. G. W. Ellis, H. W. Featherstun, L. S. Jones.

Fourth Year: W. C. Black, R. S. Woodward, J. W. Ellison.

A resolution by W. B. Lewis, and others, to publish the minutes in the form of a journal, was discussed by several brethren and was finally lost.

After notices, the Conference adjourned with the doxology and benediction by J. A. B. Jones.

FOURTH DAY.

The Conference was opened with religious services conducted by E. A. Flowers. The minutes of yesterday were read and approved.

A communication from Dr. W. P. Harrison, in relation to the assessment for the expenses for the Ecumenical Conference, was referred to the Joint Board of Finance.

Ques. 7. Who are the deacons of one year?

J. N. Ware was passed and advanced to the class of the fourth year.

The report of the Visiting Committee for Centenary College was referred to the Board of Education.

On motion, Rev. B. Jones was requested to deliver a semi-centennial sermon before the next Conference.

Ques. 10. What local preachers are elected deacons?

E. B. O'Quin, James A. Hobbs, R. C. Gavin, R. B. G. Bales.

On motion, the vote to refer J. G. Sibley to the Committee on Conference Relations was reconsidered.

The Committee on Conference Relations reported in favor of E. R. Strickland, D. Merchant, L. Pearce, Thomas Price, J. M. Gann, A. B. Nicholson, T. Y. Armstrong, G. T. Vickers being placed on the superannuated list, and that R. Abbey and J. A. Vance, E. A. Flowers and D. F. Guice be placed on the supernumerary list, and the report was adopted.

The Board of Colportage made its report through its chairman, T. L. Mellen, and the report was adopted. W. B. Dominick was appointed colporteur for the Conference.

Dr. Morton, Church Extension Secretary, was introduced and made a brief speech to the Conference.

Ques. 4. Who are admitted into full connection?

T. B. Reagan, B. H. Rawls, W. W. Drake, H. M. Ellis, James G. Cammack, N. J. Roberts, J. M. Cowan, L. W. Wood, W. P. Jones, W. G. Forsythe, and James G. Galloway were called to the chancel and, in a few forcible words, were addressed by the Bishop, and, by vote of the Conference, were admitted into full connection.

The Committee on Memoirs made their report. D. W. Dillehay and James A. Godfrey have died during the past year. Memorial papers on these brethren were read, and some tender remarks by several preachers were made, after which the report was adopted.

The report of the Committee on the State of the Church was read by Bro. Morse. It showed an increase of the work on all lines and an increase in spirituality. The report was adopted. Over three thousand members have been added to the church during the past year.

The report of the Committee on the Bible Cause was read by J. W. Brown, and after an address by J. W. McLaurin, agent of the American Bible Society, on the importance and necessity of a more general distribution of the Word of God, the report was adopted.

The statistical secretary read his report, as follows:

Local preachers, 166; members, 37,696; infants baptized, 1,642; adults, 1,411. Number of Sunday-schools, 404; teachers, 2,254; scholars, 17,302; number of churches, 411—value, $413,935; parsonages, 90—value, $84,575; collected for widows and orphans, $3,688; for Bishops, $1,536 60; foreign missions, $6,880 65; domestic missions, $2,807 75; church extension, $1,994.

After notices of appointments of the preachers for Sabbath services, the Conference adjourned with doxology, and benediction by D. A. Little.

FIFTH DAY.

The Conference was opened with religious services conducted by W. B. Lewis. The minutes were read and approved.

Ques. 9. What traveling preachers are ordained deacons?

J. G. Galloway, W. W. Drake, W. G. Forsythe, H. M. Ellis, L. W. Wood, J. M. Cowan, N. J. Roberts, W. P. Jones, J. G. Cammack.

Question 13. What traveling preachers are ordained elders?

B. M. Drake, R. A. Breland, M. L. Burton, G. H. Galloway, W. H. Huntley.

Ques. 15. What local preachers are ordained elders?

None.

By vote, the Conference resolved to hold its next session at Brookhaven.

The report of the Board of Missions was read by J. P. Drake, and was adopted by the Conference. The Board is doing good work in supplying the destitute and out-lying places with the gospel, and the outlook for the future progress of the work is brighter than heretofore.

The report of the president of East Mississippi Female College was read and referred to the Board of Education.

The Committee on Temperance reported through B. F. Jones, and the report was adopted.

On motion, the vote was reconsidered, by which the following brethren were continued in the class of the first year: H. Mellard, C. W. Crisler and H. C. Brown, and they were advanced to the class of the second year. H. Mellard was elected to deacon's orders in the local ranks.

The vote by which B. Vandenberg was admitted on trial was reconsidered.

On motion, W. W. Hopper was granted a location at his own request.

The report on Publishing Interests was read by T. W. Brown, and, after a short talk by the editor of the New Orleans Christian Advocate, was adopted by the Conference.

The report of the Board of Education was read by Dr. Andrews, and after speeches by Dr. Hunnicutt, H. W. Featherstun, L. T. Fitzhugh, Prof. Anderson, A. F. Watkins, E. H. Mounger and Bishop Galloway, was adopted.

The report of the Board of Church Extension was read by E. H. Mounger, and was adopted.

Miss Marshall, the secretary of the Parsonage and Home Mission Society, made report of the work of her society during the past year.

The report of the trustees of the Conference Endowment Fund was read by B. F. Jones, and was adopted, and the trustees were elected.

The report of the Sunday-school Board was read by J. T. Nicholson, and adopted.

On motion, A. C. Flowers was granted a location at his own request.

The Committee on Sabbath Observance reported through L. S. Jones, who read an interesting paper, which was adopted by the Conference.

Resolutions of thanks to the people of Canton for their hospitality, and to the railroads for facilities afforded were passed by a rising vote.

A motion to introduce the hymn book in every congregation was passed by a large vote.

The minutes were read. The Bishop made a short address and read the appointments, and adjourned the Conference sine die.

Mississippi Conference Notes.

Twenty-four years and seven months ago Bishop Galloway joined the Methedist Church in this place (Canton) under the pastorate of Dr. C. G. Andrews. Last Sunday both of them preached in the same church, the one being the honored secretary for many years of the Mississippi Conference, and the other a Bishop of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. Strange coincidences occur in this world!

In reporting the Brookhaven district, Rev. W. B. Lewis stated that in the bounds of the district local option prevails, and since it had gone into effect the spiritual and financial condition of the church had increased steadily and rapidly, and that the moral condition of the people generally was much improved. Rev. P. A. Johnston, in reporting Brandon district, made a similar statement. These statements show the good effect of prohibition.

One of the most charming things in this life is genuine Christian hospitality. We had a most beautiful illustration of it in Canton. Everybody's door was open, and the welcome was hearty and the comfort was abundant. Dr. Marshall and the writer were the recipients of much Christian attention under the roof-tree of Dr. Priestley and his delightful family, and both of them will carry pleasing memories of those happy days through all the coming future. May blessing abide at that place!

A venerable brother, who has attended many Conferences, and seen Bishops preside from Hedding and Soule down, told us that he thought Bishop Galloway was one of the best presiding officers he had ever seen handle a Conference. The quiet ease with which he brings forward the business and the easy rapidity with which he dispatches it commends his methods to everybody. He allows no intrusions or interruptions to break the movement of Conference work, and yet allows every one a fair opportunity to do or say what is proper to be said and done. Nothing is overlooked, nothing slighted, nothing performed with a slack hand. Everything is fitted in its proper niche, and when the final benediction is pronounced the general estimate of the Bishop's work is found in the universal encomium, "Well done, good and faithful servant!"

Bishop Galloway received eleven young men into full connection, and his address to them was replete with "sound wisdom and discretion." The Bishop believes in young preachers devoting themselves to the study of books, and by this means keeping their thoughts bright and fresh. He thinks that no man who studies as he ought will ever reach what is known as "the dead line." The address in all its parts was eminently pertinent to the occasion, and will do good, not only to those to whom it was addressed, but to all who heard.

Rev. Mr. Cottrell, Commissioner of Education of Colored Methodist Episcopal Church of America, in his address before the Conference said the great "race problem" could and would not be settled by political harshness and strife; that education was the only practical solution, and the Southern people, and especially the Southern Methodist Church, was the agent God had called and commissioned to do the work. He said if the negroes are educated, and bad white men and mean whisky are kept out of their reach, the problem will be forever solved. He did not favor emigration, and the negroes did not intend to emigrate. They are here, and it will cost much less to educate than to build pens to put them in, which will be an inevitable necessity if they are not educated.

A finer-looking body of men can not be found than those who compose the Mississippi Conference. From the magnificent Andrews and portly Black down to the trim B. F. Lewis and commanding figure of M. L. Burton, they can not be excelled. The old men, bending under the weight of years, and the middle-aged men, standing in the front of the fight, and the young men, whose hearts throb with high hope of success in the Master's cause, constitute a loyal legion in King Emmanuel's army, and are gaining victories which will be recounted with thrills of pleasure when the final peace is conquered. All honor to these heroes, "unknown to fortune or to fame;" but "their names are written in heaven," and when the completed history of redemption is published they will have honorable mention.

Several men of the past generation still linger on the shores of time, holding their connection with this Conference and keeping a warm place in the hearts of their brethren. The venerable Richard Ahhey, though long past fourscore, still goes out and comes in, watching with trained eye the movements of the Lord's army. Ben Jones, past threescore and ten, still wears the harness and does faithful work. The eloquent C. K. Marshall, though in the local ranks, is interested in all the Conference business as much as ever, and gives the brethren the benefit of his large experience and wise counsels. W. B. Hines, whom we knew as a faithful pastor in our school-boy days, still does with zealous earnestness the work committed to his hands. And there are others that might be mentioned, who, like the children of Issachar, "have understanding of the times, to know what Israel ought to do." "Their record is on high, and God is their judge."

Rev. Dr. Morrison, in his address on the night of the missionary anniversary, used as his text the first miracle wrought in Cana of Galilee, shewing the great transforming power of the Spirit of God. He said that God was using science as a great agency to help the spread of the gospel, and that religion and science are so far from being antagonistic that they are actually twin sisters, born of the same parentage at the same time; and the only person claiming to find no relationship, that distinguished personage "who says in his heart, There is no God." In illustrating the necessity of the work, and the importance of the church doing its duty before the desired result will be attained, he said that all the forces of heaven could not make a violet unless the earth would do its part. Neither can all the spiritual forces of heaven bring the world to Christ. God would not waste rain on the desert, neither will he waste grace on a dead church. Let the church wake up and march to the orders of the Captain of our salvation, and God will reinforce the army, and the windows of heaven will be opened and such a blessing poured out that there will not be room to contain it. That man who does not believe in foreign missions does not believe in the command of Christ, and the man who does not give has not the spirit of Christ.

Friday evening the anniversary of the Church Extension Board was held in the Methodist Church. W. C. Black presided, and E. H. Mounger, the secretary, read the report. Several churches have been assisted during the past year, and many applications for help during the coming year have already been received. The amount collected was about $1,994. Dr. Morton, the General Secretary of Church Extension, made an interesting address, showing the importance to the church of keeping up in church and parsonage building with the aggressive and progressive spirit of the age. Rich men must be shown their duty in the use of their money for the propagation of the gospel of the Son of God. After his speech the Doctor essayed a collection, but the brethren, having already been exhausted by the Missionary Secretary, did not respond very rapidly, and only about $60 were obtained.

Sunday morning Bishop Galloway preached in the Methodist Church, to a crowded audience, what was characterized by one brother as the best sermon he had ever preached, after which he ordained the deacons. In the afternoon Dr. Andrews preached, after which the elders were ordained. At night Dr. Sims, of the University of Mississippi, preached, after which the sacrament of the Lord's Supper was administered. The holy day began with a love-feast conducted by Bro. West, and it was a precious season of refreshment to many. At the Presbyterian Church the writer preached in the morning, and Dr. Black at night. At the Baptist Church Dr. Sullivan, of the North Mississippi Conference, preached in the morning, and Bro. Watkins preached at night. We had the pleasure of listening to a good sermon to the colored people by Bro. J. T. Nicholson.

"Thus the holy day
In holy duties passed away."

Woman's Parsonage and Home Mission Work.

In the early church, when murmuring arose against the ministers because of the neglect of widows in the daily ministrations, the disciples decided it would be poor policy to leave the work for which they were so well fitted to administer to physical necessities, when souls were ripe for the harvest; and, as the burden of saving souls and caring for the daily supplies of the disciples was greater than they could bear, they selected seven men of honest report, full of the Holy Spirit and wisdom, and appointed them over the minor business of administering the daily necessities. The disciples were then privileged to give themselves continually to prayer and to the ministry of the Word. The plan was so successful that the Word of God increased and the number of disciples multiplied greatly in Jerusalem.

Our Woman's Parsonage and Home Mission Societies are aiming to do the same kind of work; but, instead of seven, we have a large band of noble women who have consecrated their lives and fortunes to the work of holding up the hands of our ministers, like Joshua and Caleb did for Moses when he was weakened by his single effort to save Israel. It is only by union of effort, systematically directed and zealously prosecuted, that our best work can be done. We must make the best men and women we can, using our talents until they shine with such effulgent brightness that others, beholding their beauty, may be constrained to glorify God; and what better work can we do than to relieve our ministers from the burden and distress of hunting a home every time he has a new appointment, thus harrassing his mind and using vital energy that is needed in the noble work of saving souls? The soul can not take its highest flight nor the intellect do its best work when they are choked by the sordid cares of life. We need not fear that we are relieving him of too much burden, so that, like a possible inhabitant of one of the asteroids, he will be in such rare atmosphere that he will rise beyond our ken. True wisdom does not range beyond mortal vision, but is able to see the height and depth, the length and breadth, and to know the love of God, that it passeth all understanding.

We would supply our ministers with homes, that they may have more time to fully consecrate themselves to the work and better prepare themselves for preaching the gospel. Certainly there is no nobler work than that of saving souls, and the next best would be that of encouraging and helping those who are set apart and ordained for the work. MRS. E. B. J.

J. H. Brown, of the Louisiana Conference, was appointed to Lecompto and Evergreen—not J. W. Brown.

Thore is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease, and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven Catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and, therefore, requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure in the market. It is taken internally in doses from ten drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address,

LA GRIPPE!

LA GRIPPE!

Last year, when La Grippe was so prevalent all over this country, Dr. King's Royal Germetuer proved to be a certain cure, as hundreds then testified. Many of such testimonials, from the best people of this country, were then published.

The disease has again broken out. Nearly half the people in New Orleans are affected with it to a greater or less degree, and Royal Germetuer has again proven to be a specific in every case that has tried it. Many in this city certify to this.

Read the following statement from a gentleman widely known and highly respected in this city:

"NEW ORLEANS, Dec. 6, 1890.

"I have been using Dr. King's Royal Germetuer in my family for La Grippe, and find it to be a SPECIFIC FOR THIS PREVAILING EPIDEMIC. I cheerfully and heartily recommend it for that purpose. M. C. COLE,
"Pastor First Baptist Church,
"Residence, 183 Third Street."

Direction for using: One teaspoonful in half glass warm water, sweetened if preferred, every hour for twelve hours; then every three hours until cured. Keep bowels open with Dr. King's Royal Germetuer Pills.

This treatment is pleasant, safe and sure, and will cure La Grippe in twenty-four hours. A dose before and after each meal and at bed time is almost a certain preventive, and the best tonic known to medical science.

DONALD KENNEDY

Of Roxbury, Mass., says

I have kept a Scrap Book for a good many years of letters received from patients; some are long, too long to publish; some are short, short and good. Rainy days I sit down and read them and have learned a good deal about the human body from some poor, sickly woman or overstrained man. Here is one of them. I call it a good letter:

TRENTON, TEXAS, Sept. 28, 1886.

"To Kennedy of the Medical Discovery, Roxbury, Mass. I am so proud of my recovery as to express my feelings in thanks to you. The RHEUMATISM has made me four-legged for six years. At last I have traded off two of them to Bell—Druggist—for four bottles of Kennedy's Discovery. I am yours, gratefully and unsolicited, J. B. IVY."

THE TWO LITTLE STOCKINGS.

BY SARAH REABLES HUNT.

Two little stockings hung side by side,
Close to the firepla e, broad and wide.
"Two?" said Saint Nick, as down he came,
Loaded with toys and many a game.
"Ho! ho!" said he, with a laugh of fun,
"I'll have no cheating, my pretty one;
I know who dwells in this house, my dear;
There's only one little girl lives here."
So he crept up close to the chimney-p ace
And measured a sock with a sober face.
Just then a wee little note fell out
And fluttered low, like a bird about.
"Aha! what's this?" said he in surprise,
As he pushed his specs up close to his eyes
And read the address, in a child's rough plan,
"Dear Saint Nicholas," so it began,
"The other stocking you see on the wall
I have hung for a child named Clara Hall.
She's a poor little girl, but very good;
So I thought, perhaps, you kindly would
Fill up her stocking, too, t -night,
And help to make her Christmas bright.
If you've not enough for both stockings there,
Please put all in Clara's; I shall not care."
Saint Nicholas brushed a tear from his eye,
"God bless you, darling," he said with a sigh.
Then softly he blew through the chimney high
A note like a bird's when it soars on high.
When down came two of the funniest mortals
That ever were seen this side earth's portals.
"Hurry up!" said Saint Nick, 'and nicely prepare
All a little girl wants where money is rare."
Then, oh, what a scene there was in that room!
Away went the elves, but down from the gloom
Of the sooty old chimney comes tumbling low
A child's whole wardrobe from head to toe.
How Santa Claus laughed as he gathered them in
And fastened each one to the sock with a pin!
Right to the toe he hung a blue dress.
'She'll think it came from the sky, I guess,"
Said Saint Nicholas, smoothing the folds of blue
And tying the hood to the stocking, too.
When all the warm clothes were fastened on,
And both little socks were filled and done,
Then Santa Claus tucked a toy here an there
And hurried away to the frosty air,
Saying, 'God pity the poor and bless the dear child
Who pities them too on this night so wild!"
The wind caught the words and bore them on high
Till they died away in the midnight sky,
While Saint Nicholas flew through the icy air,
Bringing 'peace and good will" with him everywhere.

—Little People's Speaker.

One Christmas Night.

BY KATHERINE HULL.

This is what the stars saw one Christmas night: A stream of silvery light stealing far out into the windy street, throwing into bold relief each snow-covered object, and the figure of a small child crouching close up to the uncurtained window. The wind was catching at her scanty frock in rude playfulness, and somewhere in the air a voice sang pityingly, "A child of the people." And this is what Christine saw: Around a beautiful green tree, lighted by a hundred tiny lamps, a band of laughing fairies, dancing to the sound of glad, delicious music.

The cold, little face was pressed against the shining glass, and the blue eyes grew wide and wistful. The frolicsome wind threw back the scarlet hood and tossed the yellow ringlets wildly about.

One of the fairies turned a joyous face towards the window. Christine started. Surely it was Gertrude, the little girl who gave her the great piece of golden cake. Was the Christ-child pleased, she wondered, and is that why he sent her those lovely, spangled wings?

O, how happy the fairies were! The white, gauzy dresses, covered with stars of silver and gold, sparkled, and gleamed, and flashed in the colored light of the tiny lamps. One fairy stood upon a great, high table, spread her wings and fluttered down. One flew into a beautiful lady's lap, and the lady clasped her in her arms and kissed her.

Sleigh-bells jingled along the streets, and the fairies, hearing them, laughed and screamed and fell to giving good-byes at a wonderful rate. Then the stars saw another stream of silvery light, and little Christine drew back and shut her eyes, the fairies were so near.

The sleigh-bells tingled, and jingled, and grew faint, and died away. The stars looked down on Christine, and Christine looked up at the stars.

"O Christ-child," she murmured, "I gave my bread and butter to Fritz."

Would he give her a pair of wings? She was growing very, very sleepy.

"Christ-child," she called again, loudly, "I gave my bread and butter to Fritz."

Listen! A flutter of wings. O stars, what did you see there?

"I hear you, little Christine," said a voice sweeter than the sweetest music; "you will never be cold and hungry again."

And the Christ-child fastened a pair of spangled wings upon her shoulders, and together they flew up to the smiling stars.

A Born Lawyer.

A lawyer advertised for a clerk. The next morning his office was crowded with applicants—all bright, and many suitable. He bade them wait until all should arrive, and then ranged them in a row and said he would tell them a story, note their comments, and judge from that whom he would choose.

"A certain farmer," began the lawyer, "was troubled with a red squirrel that got in through a hole in his barn and stole his seed corn. He resolved to kill the squirrel at the first opportunity. Seeing him go in at the hole one noon, he took his shotgun and fired away; the first set the barn on fire."

"Did the barn burn?" said one of the boys.

The lawyer without answer continued: "And seeing the barn on fire, the farmer seized a pail of water and ran to put it out."

"Did he put it out?" said another.

"As he passed inside, the door shut to and the barn was soon in flames. When the hired girl rushed out with more water—"

"Did they all burn up?" said another boy.

The lawyer went on without answer:

"Then the old lady came out, and all was noise and confusion, and everybody was trying to put out the fire."

"Did any one burn up?" said another. The lawyer said: "There, that will do; you have all shown great interest in the story." But observing one little bright-eyed fellow in deep silence, he said: "Now, my little man, what have you to say?"

The little fellow blushed, grew uneasy, and stammered out:

"I want to know what became of that squirrel; that's what I want to know!"

"You'll do," said the lawyer; "you are my man; you have not been switched off by a confusion and a barn burning, and hired girls and water pails. You have kept your eye on the squirrel."—Tact in Court.

A BRIGHT HAWKEYE BOY.—The following is said to be a Sutherland school-boy's composition on Breathing. "Breath is made of air. We breathe with our lungs, our lights, our liver and our kidneys. If it wasn't for our breath we would die when we are asleep. Boys that stay in a room all day should not breathe. They should wait till they get out-doors. Boys make carbonicide. It is poisoner than mad-dogs. A heap of soldiers was in a black hole in India, and a carbonicide got in that there hole and nearly killed every one afore morning. Girls kill the breath with corsets that squeeze the diagram. Girls can't holler or run like boys because their diagrams is squeezed too much. If I was a girl I had rather be a boy, so I can run, holler and row and have a great big diagram.—Rock Rapids (Ia.) Review.

A smart Aroostook lassie of three summers lives at Maysville Center. She tripped and fell while at play the other day, but, picking herself up and rubbing the hurt, she exclaimed, "My sakes, 'f I wasn't tough, I'd been dead years ago."—Augusta (Me.) Journal.

Household.

Christmas—The Mother's Day.

The coming of Christmas-day is always a significant fact with the mother. It is the children's happiest day in life; the day they look forward to, and plan for, from Christmas to Christmas. What sacrifices the mother who has but little money makes to give her children some gifts to make the day memorable and enjoyable! But there are many mothers who will wake up in the early gray of the Christmas morning, only to remember the echoes of the sound of the little pattering feet that used to hurry over the nursery floor toward the chimney corner. O, what sweet recollections they are to think over! No wonder that tears fall on the pillow of such a mother, whose loneliness is more oppressive on that day than any other.

"It is all I can do to get through Christmas nowadays," a sorrowing mother said. "We used to have such good times before our home was broken up and the children scattered. It is only by forgetting myself, and doing all I can to make other children happy, that I can get through the day at all."

How many mothers feel just as this sorrowing mother does! It is so hard to have the children scatter. No gathering together about the old fireside, only reading the letters that come from distant places, and vainly wishing we could hear the voices and look into the faces of the ones so near and dear to us.

But some of the children have gone where letters can not be interchanged. Some of the little ones have been gathered into the good Shepherd's arms. We remember how happy they were over the coming of Santa Claus last Christmas-time. We can not see them, or know anything of their surroundings now, only as faith is enabled to follow them into the green pastures. But O, how we thank the Savior that the sweet story of "Suffer the children" has been handed down to the latest generation of sorrowing mothers! How often we read it over: "Of such is the kingdom of heaven"—precious words! We know that all the little children who came into our homes to love us and be loved, but who have been taken to the Savior's arms, are with him where he is; and where he is there is fullness of joy for evermore.

And the young men and maidens who stayed longer with us, and upon whose growing strength we had just begun to lean, how we think of them on Christmas-day! But how very near to the stricken mother's heart is the Comforter at such times. "I will not leave you comfortless." What a promise! Dr. Orville Dewey, in writing of the children, who had left the household, says: "Yet not with terror only, but with tenderness, does death touch the human heart—touches it with a gracious sympathy and sorrow. One may know the house where death has left his mark long after the time. Traces are left in the affections that are never worn out. Traces are left in memoriam, in poetry, in all human sentiment. Death is not the sundering, but the consecration, of love. It strengthens that holy bond. It makes the departed children dearer. It gives new power and sanctity to their lives when with us. It invests their virtues with a radiance of angel beauty. It canonizes them as patron saints and guardian angels of the household."

We may be assured that for the children who have gone to the Father, "it is well with them."

"As one whom this mother comforts,
He layeth the soul on this breast;
And he draweth the curtain closely
As it enters into rest—
That none may see it go
Away through the sunset's glow."

"No chronic tortures racked his aged limbs,
For luxury and sloth had nourished none for him."

In our land there is much luxury, and but little sloth. So we must find other causes for the "chronic tortures." It has been said that to have gout one must have ancestors, or, as they say in Philadelphia, "grandfathers." This disease, says Dr. Da Costa, in his great work on "Diagnosis," "is rare in this country," but not so Rheumatic Gout. He adds: "Nor will it yield to the remedies usually administered in acute Rheumatism, nor to colchicum and the alkalies, so beneficial in gout." However, remarkable cures have been effected by the Compound Oxygen Treatment of DRS. STARKEY & PALEN. If you wish to convince yourself of this, send for our Treatise on Compound Oxygen, a book of 200 carefully written pages, or write us, giving your symtoms, and we will give our opinion, free of charge. No other genuine than that of DRS. STARKEY & PALEN, 1529 Arch St., Philadelphia, Pa., or 120 Sutter St., San Francisco, Cal.

Weights and Measures.

The jewelers of the middle ages used in their delicate scales the hard brown seeds of the Moorish Carob-tree (Ceratonia siliqua), and the weight of diamonds is still reckoned by carats, each carat being equal to 3 1-6 grains troy. The earliest attempt to regulate British weights and measures appears to have been suggested by this example. In 1266 it was declared by statute that "an English penny, called a sterling, round and without any clipping, shall weigh 32 wheat corns in the midst of the ear; and twenty pence do make an ounce, and 112 ounces one pound; and 8 pounds do make a gallon of wine, and 8 gallons of wine do make a London bushel, which is an eighth part of a quarter." We have here the basis of the British system of reckoning as it survives to-day—the grain, pennyweight, ounce, pound, gallon, bushel and ton, and 240 silver pence equal to a pound sterling. The British gallon is still used for both dry and liquid measure; and the traditional relation between the pound and the gallon is set forth in the old rhyme, which declares that

"A pint's a pound
The world around."

In 1324 the measures of length were defined by a similar statute providing that "three barleycorns, round and dry, laid end to end," shall make 1 inch, 12 inches a foot, and three feet a yard.

The 32 wheat corns, adopted as a basis of the British system, appear to have weighed 22½ grains troy, so that the pound of 1266 was equal to 5,400 grains troy. This is the old Saxon pound. The pound troy (pound du roy) is the Roman pound, and was, doubtless, in use simultaneously with the Saxon pound for hundreds of years, but is first mentioned in the statutes in 1414, and was ordained as the standard weight for gold and silver in 1527. As 24 grains make a pennyweight troy, the new pound contained 5,760 grains, exceeding the old weight by 360 grains, or three-quarters of an ounce.

The strict pound of 12 ounces was used only in weighing the precious metals and, with different subdivisions, for the costly drugs and medicines dealt out by apothecaries. For heavy goods (aviors du poids) a more liberal measure was given, like the baker's dozen, and 15 ounces were called a pound. In the same way 28 pounds were called a quarter, and 112 pounds a hundred-weight, allowance being made for waste or wrappings. The increase of the pennyweight to 24 grains in 1520 raised the value of the ounce to 480 grains; and accordingly the pound of commerce, containing 15 ounces, was raised to 7,200 grains. As 250 grains of wine were reckoned equal to a cubic inch, the gallon, containing 8 of these pounds, or 57,600 grains, had a capacity of 230.4, or in even numbers 231 cubic inches. This is the wine gallon now in use in the United States. The ale or beer gallon of 282 cubic inches was originally a measure containing 8 pounds of wheat at 204 grains to the cubic inch.

The name avoirdupois was transferred at a very early date from the heavy goods, which it indicated, to the system by which they were weighed. It occurs first in the statutes of 1335 and 1353. The early pound of 15 ounces of 450 grains each (6,750 grains) was raised by law, as has been shown, to 7,200 grains, making 16 of the old ounces. In practice, however, the pound seems to have fallen below this standard to about 7,000 grains, and this weight was finally declared to be a pound avoirdupois, the avoirdupois ounce, or sixteenth of the pound, being thus reduced to 437½ grains.—H. W. Richardson, in Harper's.

The Clergy of America take kindly to Life Insurance, and have been its firmest champions. They fight for it and thoroughly believe in it. There are many splendid financiers in the church; that they are intelligent and thoughtful for their future goes without saying. All denominations seek the protection of Life insurance, and are careful to select the company offering the greatest security and the most advantageous terms to policy-holders.

The Episcopal Diocese, of New York, has an Insurance Fund for all of its members, and the Mutual Life, which is the largest and strongest company in the world, with over $122,000,000 assets, has been officially selected by that body to issue all the insurance to these worthy people.

A Southern Department of this Company has been opened in New Orleans under the management of Mr. T. H. Bowles, with offices in Louisiana National Bank Building.

ROBINSON—Bro. CHARLES DOMINICO ROBINSON, son of Mrs. Elizabeth J. and Rev. J. F. Robinson, died at Daleville, Miss., October 31, 1890. He was born July 3, 1872, in Kemper county, Miss., where he lived until brought by his parents to Rankin county, near Brandon, in January, 1885. When about ten years old he joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, under the ministry of Rev. L. S. Jones, a member of the Mississippi Conference.

In childhood he was a lover of the truth, and consequently his love for the same increased as he advanced in years. Although his opportunities for speaking falsehoods were on a par with many other children, yet his parents never knew him to speak one. Unlike many boys and young men, he sought the society of the sedate and avoided that of the giddy and the gay. If he fortuned to be at any place where there was any likelihood of having a dance, he would leave at once. He was devoted to his mother; so much so that whenever he promised her to be at home at an appointed time, he was certain to fulfill his promise unless he was contravened by unforseen and unavoidable circumstances. When absent from his parents they never felt any solicitude about him as respected his associations and his conduct, for they were confident that their boy was all right. He had a great fondness for books, and consequently while off at college he prosecuted his studies with unremitting zeal until he was taken sick. Although he was exceedingly anxious to become learned in the wisdom of this world, yet he did not forget or neglect the reading of his Bible.

He was much beloved by all who knew him, and will be greatly missed. It is no unfrequent occurrence to hear the highest praises of his character from his relatives and friends. He had not been at college long before he was seized by the dreadful typhoid fever, which in less than one month ended his earthly existence. May God greatly comfort his father and mother and brothers and sisters in this sad bereavement, and help them to keep in mind that the interval between the last and final meeting of him will be only a few fleeting moments, and then their parting from him will end forever if all in the last have been found true to God. ISAAC L. PEEBLES.

CURRIE—LORUHAMAH H. CURRIE, daughter of Mrs. Lou Currie, died August 9, at the home of her aunt, Mrs. M. E. Lynch, in Goldman, Ark., of swamp fever, after an illness of only thirty-six hours. She was nearly ten years old.

Although so young, she was a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, at Pecan Grove, East Carroll parish, La., her old home. From the first she was not afraid to die. Just after she was taken her mother came in, and she asked, "If it is swamp fever, do you reckon it will kill me?" Her mama said, "I hope not; but if it should, you are not afraid to die, are you?" She replied, "Oh, no." The doctor and loved ones did all that love and skill suggested, but she grew worse, and all too soon came to the dread river of death. She said, "It is so hard to stand up in this Jordan by myself." Her mama pointed her to Jesus, saying, "God will take care of baby." She laid back, and such a trusting, heavenly smile irradiated her countenance that although she lived twelve hours it never left her face." (So wrote her aunt). May God sustain her loved ones and may they meet again! is my prayer. S. R.

DECELL—HIRAM DECELL, infant son of W. A. and M. E. Decell, of Lincoln county, Miss., was born December 31, 1888, and died December 5, 1890, aged not quite two years. Little Hiram was a joy to the earthly home for a little while, and finished his brief course in suffering. The little body sleeps in the church graveyard. Though the sorrowing parents brood in silence over the gloom of the grave, New Hope Church will be dearer, and the music will be sweeter in the song of the faithful, who sing, "God's children are gathering home."

J. W. SANDELL, P. C.

GAY—Died in Slidell, La., November 3, 1890, Miss LUCINDA GAY, daughter of G. B. and Sallie Gay. She was born in St. Landry parish, June 13, 1873. Religiously inclined from early childhood, she united with the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, three years ago.

During the last twelve months of her life she was confined to her bed, and it was during this season of confinement that her deeply rooted piety and simple trust in God were made manifest. Though constantly racked with pain, not a murmur escaped her lips, and hers was not the endurance of a stoic, but that calm, sweet submission to the will of her heavenly Father that characterized the saints of old. When talking about her sufferings she would always say, "God is allowing me to suffer for some good purpose." Just before her death God revealed to her to some extent, at least, that purpose. Calling her father, who was not a Christian, to her bedside, she pleaded with him to give up sin and live right. Disease having destroyed her sense of hearing, her father wrote upon a piece of paper, "I will try to be a Christian and meet you in heaven." This seemed to satisfy her, and, gazing upon it, as a glow of heavenly light flashed upon her face, she exclaimed, "Peace!" and passed away.

She has gone from us. All who knew her will miss her. That her life on earth, though short, accomplished much good, the lives of many who were benefited by her bright, Christian life and happy death will be as standing witnesses. She is now resting on the peaceful shores of the New Jerusalem; but the waves of influence for good, set in motion by her, will continue to extend, until they finally will strike the shore of eternity, and at the last day will be a crown of rejoicing for her. May God comfort and bless the father, mother, sister and two little brothers she has left behind, and may they all meet her around the throne of God. HER PASTOR.

NORMAN—Mrs. MARY ELIZABETH NORMAN (nee Crawford) was born July 13, 1832, and died, after a short illness, at her residence in Copiah county, Miss., August 28, 1890.

Sister Norman was reared by Christian parents, who had the gratifying pleasure of seeing the fruit of their godly example and pious instruction deeply riveted in the mind and heart of their daughter Mary, who, upon the foundation thus laid, developed, by faith in her Savior, into a strong, consistent and useful Christian.

It was in the early days of her beautiful life that, under the ministry of the Rev. — Breckenridge, she gave her name to the Methodist Church, and consecrated her heart, mind, tongue, hands, feet and all her earthly capabilities to him who had loved her, and whom she loved so devotedly. The consecration was irrevocable; the sacrifice was never taken from the altar. Her consistent life was a beautiful exemplification of her profession of the indwelling Christ.

On December 24, 1851, she was married to Mr. M. G. Norman, with whom she lived happily. She had ten children, two of whom have passed over the river.

As Sister Norman lived like a Christian, so she died like a Christian. "I heard a voice from heaven saying unto me, Write, Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord from henceforth: yea, saith the Spirit, that they rest from their labors." B. F. JONES.

DUREN—On September 5, 1890, death again darkened the family circle of J. G. and Callie Duren, taking from them their precious little babe, BESSIE, aged four months and a few days.

Little Bessie remained with us but a short time, though long enough for our hearts to bind in perfect love to her. Her little, bright, smiling face will never be seen on earth again; but in heaven she is one of the brightest of angels, standing, waiting for mama, papa, sisters and brothers, who mourn her departure.

Grieve not, dear Sister Callie, you will soon meet sweet little Bessie in a world where she will be much brighter and sweeter than when you once clasped her in your arms and thought she could be no sweeter. 'Tis hard to part with the little ones; but God knows best, and we must submissively bow to his will. God giveth and taketh away. We know little Bessie was taken from us for some good purpose—perhaps, the gaining of many souls unto God. The dear little one, which has gone before us, perhaps, would have made as noble a woman as she is making an angel in heaven. Little blue-eyed Bessie was not only loved by her parents, but by all who knew her. How sad that such an attractive bud should be plucked from earth before it had time to expel its great fragrance and beauty!

HETTIE WALL.

LEE—Upon the night of November 28, the angel of death entered the home of W. E. and Mary A. Lee, and plucked the fragrant little flower, answering to the name of LOUIE DEWIT, and transplanted it in a purer and happier clime.

This little treasure was only lent to cheer the heart of its fond parents for the short space of sixteen months. Bereaved parents, it is Jesus who has called your little darling. He has said, 'Suffer little children to come unto me, and forbid them not; for of such is the kingdom of God." This little one has only gone before to beckon you heavenward. Let your hearts be comforted with the thought that this bereavement is only the forging of another link in that chain which binds you to the other world. Prepare to follow, and you will find your little angel watching and waiting at the beautiful gate. P. M. B.

Timothy Davis, postmaster at Pattersonville La., says: "Some years ago, while living in Algiers, I contracted a cough that everyone thought would cause my death. I was unable to sleep, had night-sweats, and soon became too weak to work. I had several doctors and tried many remedies, but with no improvement. An old friend hearing of my condition recommended Dr. Davis' Compound Syrup of Wild Cherry and Tar. It had cured him of a serious lung trouble, and he had great confidence in Davis' Wild Cherry and Tar. Before three bottles had been taken I was up and about, a well man. It saved my life. I always recommend it for consumption, asthma, bronchitis, any lung or throat trouble." One dollar bottles hold two and a half times as much as a 50c. bottle.

GRANT'S FURNITURE STORE

NEW STORE, AT 28 and 30 Camp Street, NEW ORLEANS

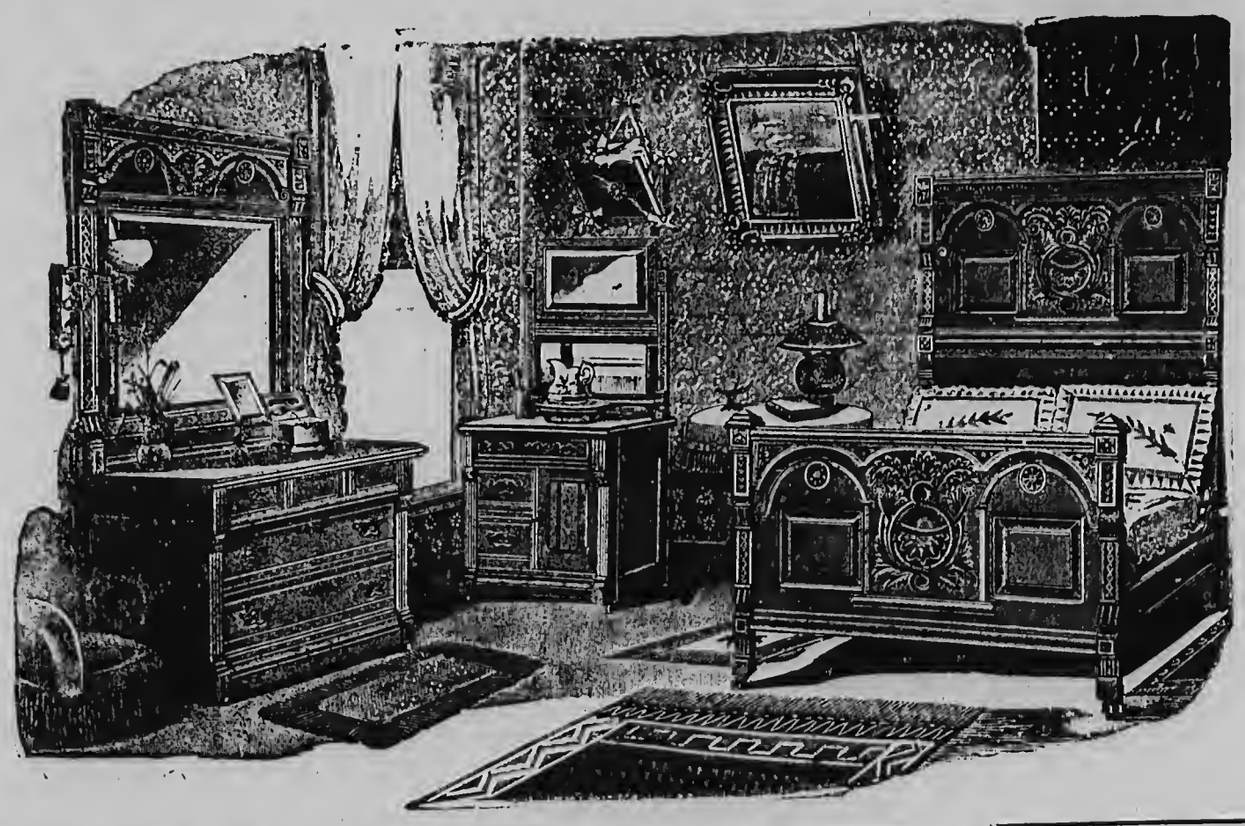
BEAUTIFUL PARLOR GOODS.

I have one entire floor devoted to the display of these goods alone, and have over sixty different varieties to select from. Complete Suits anywhere from $35 to $650, and odd pieces—such as Sofas, Divans, Easy Chairs, Patent Rockers, Window and Reception Chairs—at as low prices in proportion as the Complete Suits. I have these goods in Cherry, Mahogany and Walnut, and can give you your choice of any of the following coverings: Crushed, Embossed, Plain and Silk Plushes, Hair Cloth, Mohair, Raw and Spun Silks, Satins, English Tapestries, French Velours, Petit Point, Brocatelle or Damasks. I make a specialty of these goods, have many of the patterns made specially for my own trade, and can offer a greater variety at lower prices than any other house in the South.

NEW STOCK

In all departments, and every grade of goods, from the cheapest to the most expensive, in endless variety. I have all the latest and most fashionable designs, and, as I have only purchased from factories whose goods I have been selling for the past six years, can and do guarantee every piece of Furniture that leaves my establishment.



LOW PRICES

are the order of the day, and I propose to sell strictly reliable goods at a lower price than has ever before been quoted in the South. My store has long been known as "The Cheapest Furniture House in New Orleans," and this season I intend to add to the reputation it has gained in this respect. I only ask a chance to save you money.

HANDSOME BEDROOM SUITS.

A very extensive assortment of these goods in every style; and whether you wish to pay $40 for a Complete Suit of twelve pieces, or from that price anywhere up to $1,000, I can sell you what you require. I have these goods in Black Walnut, Natural and Dark Cherry, and Natural and Dark Mahogany, or in imitation of any of these woods, and can furnish the very latest, neatest and most artistic designs.

I have also a large and carefully selected stock of Hall, Library, Dining-room and Kitchen Furniture; Reed, Rattan and Wicker Chairs, Rockers, Lounges and Cribs; Brackets, What-nots, Easels, Music Stands and Fancy Top Tables; Carpets, Carpet Strips, Matting, Shades, Curtains, Curtain Poles, and everything necessary to furnish a house completely throughout.

LARGE SALES.

I have a large city trade, and am shipping goods extensively to every Southern State. My country trade has increased very rapidly during the past year, and the facilities which my new store affords me for carrying a larger and better stock will enable me to still further extend it, and to give complete satisfaction to my customers.

Every mother should have Johnson's Anodyne Liniment for cuts, burns, and bruises.

MISTAKE ABOUT DYNAMITE.—A good deal of misapprehension and misplaced confidence has been caused by the fact that small quantities of unconfined nitro-glycerine and explosives containing it as their chief constituent, will only burn quietly away when ignited by a direct conflict with a flame. Men have, therefore, thought that if this was the case, no ill effects could follow from simply heating it. The idea is a terribly mistaken one. If a cartridge of dynamite or its congeners is lighted or placed in a fire it will probably burn harmlessly away. But if the same cartridge is placed on the hob or in the oven and gradually heated up to its exploding point (350 degrees to 400 degrees Fahr.), a violent explosion will almost certainly result, and before that point is reached the explosive will become extremely sensitive to the slightest shock. —Iron.

If old people are forgetful, they always remember to use Johnson's Anodyne Liniment.

It is well known among successful merchants that liberal advertising is indispensable to the economical and successful working of their establishments.—Price Current.

WHAT CAN A GIRL OF SIXTEEN DO?

This question is not easily answered, but it will be attempted in the next volume of The Youth's Companion in a series of helpful papers by Amelia E. Barr, "Marion Harland," Mary A. Livermore and "Jenny June."

Advertising is a gear in the machine of a well-regulated store. It cannot sell the goods itself; it only delivers the customer, as it were.—Milford (Mass.) Journal.

NWS OF THE WEEK.

DOMESTIC.

John W. Young, eldest son of the late Brigham Young, is said to have closed a trade whereby the Mormons come into possession of 3,000,000 acres of land in Mexico, which were granted by the Mexican government to an individual some years ago. The land is located in the northern part of Mexico. The Mormons hope by this move to get away from the restrictions placed upon them by the United States, and where they can teach and practice polygamy without fear of being molested.

An impression prevails among the medical fraternity in the Army and Navy and National Health Boards that Parnell has inherited insanity and is losing his mental balance. Surgeon General Hamilton of the Marine Hospital service recalls numerous cases in which emotion or excitement in politics or other causes have developed latent hereditary tendencies toward a disturbed mental condition.

Mr. Platt has introduced in the United States Senate a joint resolution appropriating $100,000 to enable the President to take action to obtain from the German government a supply of the remedy discovered by Dr. Koch and the formula for the manufacture of the same.

The pay train of the Louisville, New Orleans and Texas railroad was wrecked near Woodville, Miss., on December 20, for the purpose of robbery. The wreck took place on a bridge, which is at the end of a curve, and the engineer saw a person tearing up the rails, but was too near on the broken rails to check up. The paymaster and three or four others were badly bruised. The wrecker was captured.

The nine patients who are being treated with Dr. Koch's lymph at Bellevue Hospital, New York, received their second inoculation on December 21. Up to the present time all of them are making progress under the treatment and great hopes are entertained of the recovery of, at least, a fair percentage of them.

The programme for the week in Congress is very indefinite. It is highly probable that no holiday recess will be had in the Senate except Christmas Day, and the discussion of the Elections bill will continue through the week. It is not known when the Financial bill will be taken up, as the Senate does not seem inclined to consider that measure. There is, however, a probability that it may come up during the week, but the prospects for its passage are not as bright as they were a few days ago, as the business outlook seems to be more satisfactory. In the other House things are in a still more indefinite and uncertain condition. There seems to be a feeling of antagonism to a recess, yet it is possible a resolution requesting the consent of the Senate to a recess of the House may be introduced, as a general feeling that it will find itself without a quorum seems to prevail.

At the conclusion of Mr. Spooner's address on the Federal Election bill, in the National Senate, on December 20, Senator George spoke briefly regarding allusions to suppression of the suffrage in Mississippi. Senator Ingalls replied, reading at length articles and editorials from the Clarion-Ledger, published at Jackson, Miss., giving in detail an account of the recent constitutional convention held in that State. He commented upon each paragraph as read, and declared the new Constitution of Mississippi to be a monstrous, a gigantic and despotic vice.

The Interstate Immigration Society met in Asheville, N. C., on December 18, and discussed means to tempt home seekers to come South. Among many resolutions passed, was one calling for "500,000 sturdy sons of toil and 500,000 manufacturers of the North and West to make their homes with us, and to join in the development of this land of ours."

Senator Stewart, of Nevada (Rep.), spoke against the Force bill on December 19, and appealed to the Senate to shelve it, until the Republican party is prepared to enforce it by military power. Republican defeat will be certain, he predicts, if the party leaders persist in pushing it on the people.

In the National House of Representatives, on December 19, Mr Morse, of Massachusetts, introduced for reference the following bill: "That no exhibition or exposition for which appropriation is made by Congress shall be opened on Sunday. Any violation of this act shall be punishable by a fine of not less than $100 or more than $1,000."

Miss Kate Drexel, who was received as a novitiate into the Roman Catholic Church in Pennsylvania, a year ago, will take her final vows in February, when she will give her fortune, estimated at $8,000,000, to the Order of the Most Holy Sacrament, recently founded by her.

The White River Methodist Conference has suspended Rev. N. B. Fizer, defeated candidate for governor of Arkansas in the late election, for a period of five months for leaving his holy calling to participate in a political contest.

A number of the wealthy Arabian residents of New York have decided to form a syndicate for the purchase of a large tract of land either in Pennsylvania or Arizona. Some of the wealthy natives of Syria are interested in the project and are advising their people to emigrate and take up some of the company's land.

FOREIGN.

Mr. Parnell, while in Ireland canvassing for a candidate, last week, had his sight severely affected by a bag of lime which was thrown in his face. He, however, still harangues his auditors, appearing with bandaged eyes.

Emin Pasha has been recalled from the interior of Africa, owing to his disregard of orders. Emin has impeded the operations being carried on under the direction of Mr. Stokes, and has refused to act in accordance with the plans of the imperial government.

Have You? Many Millions Have accepted James Pyle's invitation to try his wonderful discovery, Pyle's Pearline; for easy washing and cleaning. You couldn't count them in a lifetime. Some of the twelve million housekeepers in this land must have accepted very often. That's the way with Pearline. The wise woman who investigates, tries it; the woman who tries it continues to use it. A daily increasing sale proves it. The truth is, there's nothing so acceptable as Pearline. Once accept its help, and you'll decline the imitations—they don't help you. It washes clothes or cleans house. It saves labor and it saves wear. It hurts nothing, but it's suited to everything. Try it when it suits you, for it will suit you when you try it.

Beware Peddlers and some unscrupulous grocers will tell you, "this is as good as" or "the same as Pearline." IT'S FALSE—Pearline is never peddled, and if your grocer sends you something in place of Pearline, do the honest thing—send it back.

Mansfield Female College

Conservatory of Music and Art.

MANSFIELD, LA.

One of the most popular and flourishing institutions of the South. The Sixty-seventh Session opens September 10, 1890, and the Spring Term begins January 28, 1891, with an able and experienced faculty. Curriculum comprehensive, instruction thorough. Advantages in Music unsurpassed, as in the best conservatories. The pianos are new and of the best make. The Technicon and the Techniphone are used to facilitate the work in the music department, placing this department beyond competition. Departments of Fine Arts and Industrial Arts under specialists.

The location is unsurpassed for beauty and attractiveness, and the school is celebrated for the remarkable record for good health maintained. The climate is the best in which to educate, and the place is the safest for girls. The main building is of brick, massive and commodious, with a large and well-shaded campus. Rooms large, well furnished, warmed and ventilated. Ample provision for the table of the best the market affords. All necessary comfort secured. Expenses very low and the school very economical. A new building with a large audience hall is in contemplation, and extensive improvements are in progress to make this the grandest institution in the State.
